U. S. STANDS PAT ON POLICIES IN LATIN AMERICA

Coolidge Instructs Havana Delegates.

Coolidge Nears Havana

Key West, Fla., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—President Coolidge arrived here tonight, 28 minutes ahead of time, on his way to the Pan-American conference at Havana. The President and his party are sleeping tonight aboard the special train that brought them from Washington.

The train is on a sidetrack, guarded by marines.

At every stop along the line today, the populace turned out to greet the President.

At Miami there was a stop for an hour during which the presidential party was taken on an auto ride through the city and through Miami Beach.

The President will sail for Havana tomorrow. If the weather is good he will go on the battleship Texas. If there is a rough sea he will go on the cruiser Memphis.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Aboard President's Special Train, Fort Pierce, Fla., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The United States intends to stand pat in the sixth Pan-American conference at Havana on its traditional policies in dealing with the Latin American republics.

Under the instructions given by President Coolidge to the American delegation, headed by Charles Evans Hughes, the United States will preserve intact its complete liberty of action in protecting its rights and interests, by forcible measures if necessary, in the western hemisphere and particularly in the Caribbean region.

Monroe Doctrine Stands.

Although willing to accept partnership with other American nations in the enforcement of the Monroe Doctrine, the United States will accept no interpretation of that principle impairing in any degree our independent responsibility to maintain the integrity of our century old declaration against non-American interference in the affairs of the American continents.

To be specific, the American government is determined to preserve full liberty to police the Caribbean region, whenever necessary, for the protection of our rights and interests, particularly those created by the existence of the Panama canal as the most important link of our national defense.

We are determined to retain full liberty to intervene by force, if necessary, in any of the Caribbean countries to quell disorder or put down revolutions fomented for purposes antagonistic to the interest of the United States as the Nicaraguan revolution was fomented and financed a year ago by the Mexican government.

Republics Must Be Stable.

In line with the declarations of President Coolidge explanatory of his intervention in Nicaragua, the American delegation at the forthcoming Havana conference will shape its course in harmony with unimpaired development of what has come to be called our isthmian policy since President Hayes with prophetic vision in 1879 observed that the construction of an isthmian canal would necessarily operate to extend our shore line to all intents and purposes to the isthmus of Panama. Within the region so described the United States is determined to see to it that stable governments are maintained and American rights and interests respected.

To accomplish these purposes the American delegation will resist any attempt by Latin American countries to put through the Havana conference any declaration forbidding or limiting the right of intervention by one country in another country, as always has been recognized by international law. This matter is to come before the conference in the form of a recommendation by the international commission of jurists that the American republics make it a rule of their international law that "no state may intervene in the internal affairs of another."

Cites U. S. Precedents.

Under such a rule the United States would not have intervened to free Cuba from Spain, to put down anarchy in Haiti and establish and maintain there stable government, to protect the secession of Panama from Colombia by virtue of which the Panama canal was constructed, to restore order in Santo Domingo, to enforce rights in Mexico as done by Woodrow Wilson, and bring order out of chaos repeatedly in Nicaragua.

Adoption of such a rule would put a

REVEAL TESTS DRY SNOOPERS FAILED TO PASS

1,500 Out of 2,000 Are Eliminated.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Officials of the civil service commission today made public the list of questions which proved so baffling to Uncle Sam's prohibition agents, investigators, and inspector that 1,500 of the 2,000 taking the examination fell hopelessly by the wayside.

The commission made the list public to prove their contention that the questions were not "too difficult," as alleged by prohibition authorities, and that the failure of the agents to pass was due to their unfitness rather than to the inability of the civil service authorities to prepare adequate practical examinations.

Officials of the commission refused today to state whether they will grant the request of Prohibition Commissioner Doran that the agents who failed in the first examination be given a new and more practical examination. Prohibition officials' asserted today that telegraphed reports from various parts of the country indicate a virtual breakdown of the service within the next few weeks unless the commission relents and prepares an examination which the prohibition personnel can pass.

60 Per Cent Passing Grade.

The problems which "stumped" many of the prohibition agents ranged from such queries as to why private citizens are of little use in aiding prohibition agents, to what agents should do if they found that a fellow agent was crooked. Officials refused to give out the correct answers to questions but in view of the fact that 75 per cent of the applicants failed to answer 60 per cent of them right it appears that all the questions proved puzzlers to the nation's present dry force.

The tests disclosed today were "actual questions and problems" put to the agents on the first day of the examinations held several weeks ago. The questions given on the following days were similar in character. The first two sheets of the examination contained three "practical questions" which the agents were allowed two hours to answer. The third sheet contained forty questions which had to be answered in two hours. The total time limit for the examination was four hours and the passing grade 60 per cent.

The first three problems were termed "practical mental tests."

"Practical" Problem.

The first of the practical questions asked each applicant to assume that "as a prohibition agent, you and Agent Richard Roe have together purchased a pint of whisky from Polis, a bootlegger.

"At the time of this transaction," the question continues, "Polis made a promise to meet both of you later for the purpose of placing you in touch with a wholesale dealer who can supply you with larger quantities at lower prices. At the time appointed for resumption of negotiations, Polis meets you and Roe and informs you that he has been told, but is somewhat inclined to disbelieve, that the two of you are planning to trap him.

"Assume such facts as you may desire, not inconsistent with those given here, and state, in approximately 150 words, what, in your opinion, you and Roe should do under the circumstances."

The second question put the agent up against the question of what he would do if he found during an important investigation that one of the agents was crooked.

Test Writing Ability.

"Assume," it stated, "that you are a prohibition officer working occasionally with agents Jenkins and Thompson, both of whom you have known for about six months. During the progress of an important investigation, upon which all three of you are engaged, Agent Jenkins approaches you with the statement that Thompson is 'crooked' and is negotiating regularly with violators of the national prohibition act. Assume such facts as you may desire, not inconsistent with those given here, and state, in approximately 150 words, what, in your opinion, you should do under the circumstances."

The third question, which took up all of sheet two and which the applicant was allowed one hour to answer, was simply a test of the agent's ability to write out a good report. They were told to write a report of a case which they have investigated and which in-

SYNOPSIS.

Paul Rayburn, scientist with the Grannett company, makes a discovery he is convinced will startle the world. Eleanor Grannett, daughter of the company owner, visits Rayburn's laboratory and immediately suspects that he is keeping something from the firm because he answers evasively when she questions him about a mysterious machine. When Eleanor mentions this to her father he tells her to invite Rayburn to their home for dinner; then he instructs his confidential man to inspect Rayburn's laboratory while he is absent.

Grannett discharges Rayburn, as he is convinced the experiments are the work of an unbalanced mind. Rayburn keeps on and perfects a device for recording the cosmic rays which penetrate the earth's atmosphere. He receives signals that he converts into sounds and discovers that the Martians, aware of our infancy in scientific knowledge, are giving instructions on how to create a sending device sufficiently powerful to reach Mars. An X-ray tube under millions of volts potentials instead of our present maximum of thousands would produce the intense beam necessary for communication.

By establishing this communication with Mars Rayburn was to enter an open door of knowledge hundreds of thousands of years in advance of that possessed by any other man on earth. For the present he resolves to keep his discovery a secret.

Rayburn's joy is interrupted, however, by the arrival at his door of a lawyer and the man who had made the machine for him. They have come to collect money Rayburn had promised or, failing to do so, take back the instrument.

Theodora Downs, Eleanor's cousin, who Rayburn had met when he dined with the Grannetts, anonymously sends the young man a sum of money to aid him in his work, but Rayburn, pressed by Foxstone, the lawyer, knows nothing of this as yet and, in despair, is about to sign a paper agreeing to split his profits, if any, on a fifty-fifty basis.

CHAPTER XI.

As Rayburn took the pen he was conscious of a thousand instinctive warnings not to sign, while Foxstone's hypnotic eyes urged him almost irresistibly to do so.

Rayburn was between two fires. Unless he received money he would lose his machine, the keystone of his hopes. Where else could he turn for money without disclosing the astounding progress of his experiments?

On the other hand, he distrusted Foxstone. He felt that somehow the man had sensed the value of his work and that if allowed to get his fingers into it he might speedily maneuver himself into a position of dominance.

In an agony of indecision Rayburn made a few test scratches with the lawyer's pen and shook his head.

"I'm used to my own," he muttered, and began searching under the pile of mail on his desk—the usual unimportant circulars and ads and appeals. He had recognized their nature so well that he had not opened them when he picked them up at the door.

Now as he rummaged his eye lit on a different envelope, a heavy linen one with no stamps on it. It had been addressed and evidently delivered by hand. His attention was instantly arrested. He picked it up, gazed at the handwriting, and then, with contracted brows, slit it open, welcoming the respite it gave him.

Foxstone watched him narrowly, with a glint of exultation in his eyes.

"Hurry up with your signature, Rayburn," he said sharply, "you can read your mail later."

Then both men stared in amazement as Rayburn drew forth a sheaf of bank notes of large denominations.

Rising quickly, Rayburn read the accompanying note. His thoughts were whirling. What could it mean, this eleventh hour deliverance? It was as though a good fairy had chosen this moment to intervene and save him.

Foxstone was the first to recover his poise.

"Well," he said, smiling ingratiatingly, "a bit of good fortune, eh?" The remark plainly invited confidence, but, after re-reading the inclosed note, Rayburn only said—and his voice trembled:

"Call in Mr. Rathman. I'll pay his whole bill!"

"Just a minute!" exclaimed Foxstone in a tense whisper, but Rayburn had already reached the door and thrown it open.

"Come in!" Rathman entered, followed by the collector and the husky helper, who ranged themselves stolidly against the door.

"I've decided to pay your entire bill," said Rayburn in a businesslike voice as he pulled out the impressive sheaf of bank notes. "Please write me a receipt in full."

Foxstone seized Rathman's arm and tried to draw him away, whispering urgently, but Rathman, his eyes on the bank notes, impatiently pushed him aside.

"Nonsense!" he said, "of course I'll give him a receipt. What did we come here for?" And forthwith he seated himself heavily and wrote out a receipt in full for $400. Rayburn handed him four crisp bills, whereupon Mr. Rathman at once became excessively friendly.

"You see, Mr. Rayburn, I hated to embarrass you, but I was desperately in need of money to meet my pay roll. If you want anything else I'll be glad to do it for you."

Foxstone's face was a study. He was angry and mystified. Where did all this money come from? Had Rayburn found a wealthy backer? Or was he selling stock in his enterprise? More than ever Foxstone was impressed that Rayburn had stumbled upon something big and he determined to use every artifice to get in on it.

As they departed and Rayburn caught a last sinister glimpse of the lawyer he shuddered to think how narrowly he had escaped falling into those clutches. But he did not know that resourceful and keen witted man whose avarice and cupidity were now on fire.

Rayburn sank into his chair. The nervous strain had been severe. Again he took out the letter and studied it carefully. Who could have sent this generous expression of faith? But there was no clew.

However, a heavy load was lifted from his mind. The precious machine was his own, and there were still sufficient funds to assemble the more essential equipment necessary to construct the sending device to answer the messages from Mars.

To this work he now applied himself so earnestly that within a week he was elated to find his labors approaching a point where a test could be made.

It was then that he noted with decided uneasiness that a new tenant, a small, dark, sharp-faced man, had rented the adjoining room and was establishing a desk and chair.

Moans Reveal $50,000 Loop Jewel Robbery

Faint moans overheard by patients of Dr. F. A. Karst in the Capitol building, 59 North State street, last night led to the finding of Leopold Milner, wholesale diamond merchant, nearly stifled in Room 1019 from a tape gag wound about his face by two jewelry bandits. He told police they escaped with $50,000 loot.

For some time persistent knocks had been heard from Milner's room. Finally two of the patients listened at his door and then summoned Claude C. Rowden, proprietor of a neighboring banjo shop, who broke in with the night building superintendent, Arthur Carter. Milner was found kicking at the door. He was bound and gagged. They released him and called the police.

Milner Is Hysterical.

Nearly unconscious from lack of air and in a hysterical condition, Milner was worked over for an hour by Dr. John A. Elliot before he was revived sufficiently to give a coherent account of what had happened. During the excitement a woman fainted in the corridor.

"I was alone in the shop," Milner told Sergt. Lawrence McCarthy of the central detail, "when two men entered the iron cage leading into my office. One drew a gun while the other fellow kicked in the cage door.

"Once inside they tied my hands, wrapped yards of tape about my nose and mouth, and ransacked the place. My loss will be about $50,000, including a pouch of unset stones besides a quantity of finished jewelry.

Find Money in His Pockets.

Police found the office disordered, chairs overturned, and other evidence of hasty looting. A few wristwatches had been left scattered on the floor. On the table was a revolver which Milner said he had no chance to use. In his pockets were bills and a string of pearls which he said the bandits overlooked.

WORK OR GO TO JAIL, HE TOLD WIFE, AND SHE FELL FOR IT

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Mrs. Marie Mumm, mother of four children, called on District Judge L. B. Day Saturday to inquire if a law requiring all married women to work or go to jail was still in effect.

"A year ago my husband, Adolph, told me that there was a state law making all married women work, and that I had better get busy," explained Mrs. Mumm. "Since then I've been working in a laundry, while Adolph lies around at home."

Judge Day called Mr. Mumm into court and ordered him to go to work. After the couple left the court Judge Day said: "As a matter of fact, I believe that man is the champion husband of Omaha."

COLD AND MAYBE SNOW FORECAST FOR CITY TODAY

A cold wave was pushing southward and eastward from the frozen plains of Canada last night and the official weather forecast was for a sharp fall in temperature and possibly snow in Chicago today.

Tonight a further descent of the mercury was expected and the weather bureau set 10 above zero as the minimum tomorrow. In Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota sub-zero temperatures were anticipated.

Yesterday was the warmest Jan. 14 in the fifty-seven years records have been kept here. The maximum at 3 p. m. was 60 degrees and the minimum was 36. Normal mean temperature for the day was 23 degrees, twenty-five degrees lower than yesterday's which was 48.

It was indicated that the extreme cold would not last long, as a reaction to warmer was expected in the northwestern states near the Canadian border tomorrow.

BALLAGHADEREEN, County Mayo, Ireland, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Mrs. Catharine Golden, better known by her maiden name, Kitty Lee, died today, aged 109. Kitty Lee went to the United States in a sailing vessel 77 years ago and lived in New York for many years. Then she returned to Ireland and lived here since 1871.

Ford's, Where Lincoln Fell, to Be Shrine

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Another Lincoln shrine is to rise in Washington. Old Ford's theater, where on the night of April 14, 1865, John Wilkes Booth fired the shot that killed Abraham Lincoln, is to be restored by the government at a cost of $100,000 and made a Lincoln and war museum and national headquarters for the Grand Army of the Republic.

The three story structure in Tenth street has long been owned by the federal government. It is now used by the war department for the storage of blank forms and not half a dozen persons work in it. As a consequence of intense feeling throughout the nation it was determined soon after the assassination of Mr. Lincoln that the building, then one of the most celebrated and richly appointed theaters in America, should never again be used as a playhouse.

Purchased by Government.

Purchase by the government and obliteration of the interior aspect of Ford's followed. Since then the building has been a mute and inutile reminder of the supreme individual tragedy in the annals of the republic.

That is shall no longer be inutile is the purpose of Representative Henry R. Rathbone's bill which the District of Columbia committee of the house of representatives has reported not only favorably but also with no dissenting voice.

National Lincoln Shrine.

Hence Mr. Rathbone's bill provides that the structure shall (1) house documents, books and relics illuminating Lincoln's public and private life; (2) shall be a repository for distinguished relics of the civil war; (3) and shall be dedicated forever as a national Lincoln shrine and national headquarters for the Grand Army of the Republic and other veterans' organizations.

The work of restoration will be carried on by the federal government's director of buildings and grounds, Col. Ulysses S. Grant, grandson of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, who was to have gone to the theater with Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln on the night of April 14, and whom also Booth had hoped to slay.

Another coincidence is that the bill creating the new memorial was introduced by the son of the Maj. Rathbone who with his affianced, was that night with the Lincolns.

Little Change in Theater.

Outwardly the old playhouse is about the same as it was sixty-three years ago and the configuration of the courts and alleys through which Booth made his escape from the theater is unchanged. Certain key passageways within the building which the assassin used can and will be restored.

In the center of the memorial hall, for which a large part of the old auditorium will be used, will rise a model of the playhouse as it looked in Lincoln's time. A vivid part of the restoration will be the display of the American flag which hung below the President's box and which tripped Booth as he leaped from the box to the stage sixteen feet below, shouting the while "Sic semper tyrannis!"

Booth's spur caught in the flag and the consequent fall broke the fibula of one leg. That injury resulted in his capture days later.

Has a Noble Start.

The Lincoln museum to be installed in the theater will have a noble start, for it will comprise the already extensive Oldroyd collections of Lincoln documents, books, and relics which now are inadequately and unsafely displayed in the nonfireproof Peterson boarding house in which Mr. Lincoln died on the morning of the 15th. This house is also owned by the government.

When the collections are moved from it to the restored theater the house will be refurnished in the style of 1865.

She Opened the Door to the office . . . and Theodora knew in a minute of the feeling between her husband and his charming secretary. An absorbing story of the eternal triangle—with an unexpected climax.

U. S. MARINES' PLANES BOMB SANDINO NEST

Yanks Make Nonstop Hop to Managua.

BULLETIN.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Marine headquarters was informed tonight that American warships bearing Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, Brig. Gen. Logan Feland, and about 600 marine corps reinforcements were entering the port of Corinto. They had not been expected until Monday.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 14.—While three American marines in a giant Fokker transport plane were winging their way to Managua in a successful non-stop flight from Miami today, a marine airplane squadron bombed El Chipote, base of the insurgent Gen. Augustino Sandino, and killed forty rebels.

MAJ. ROSS E. ROWELL.
[P. & A. Photo.]

To add to the excitement in the Nicaraguan capital there came a report that Adolfo Diaz is expected by his friends to present his resignation as president to the Nicaraguan congress within the next few days.

Bombers Off to Battle.

The marine bombing squadron, commanded by Maj. Ross Rowell, left here for El Chipote early this morning. El Chipote, a mountain stronghold 5,000 feet above the sea, is twenty miles northeast of Quilali, which ercently was captured by American and Nicaraguan national guard forces after fighting in which several marines were killed.

When the marine aviators neared the scene of operations they soared over the cloud banks, 5,000 feet above the mountain tops, then swooped down and cut loose with machine gun fire and bombs. Sometimes they even threw hand grenades. This is the first time hand grenades ever have been thrown from airplanes.

Several times the aviators followed the tactics of swooping down until the rebel positions were in clear view, raining upon the insurgents a murderous machine gun fire and bombs. As they dipped even lower they hurled the hand grenades. Sometimes the planes were almost at the doors of bandits' huts.

Rebel Shots Strikes Planes.

But the rebels were far from inactive while the strafing from the air was going on. The Sandino forces' two machine guns kept up a fierce rat-a-tat-tat against the American planes and a severe rifle fire as well. The rebels made three direct hits on the airplanes, none of which did any damage. One bullet narrowly missed a pilot, however.

Maj. Rowell's plane almost made a forced landing in the midst of the bandits, due to engine trouble, but the engine picked up.

The marines are concentrating all their forces for a final drive against Gen. Sandino.

Make Hop in 13 Hours 50 Minutes.

The marines who made the first nonstop flight from the United States to Nicaragua were: Maj. Louis Bourne of Asheville, N. C.; Lieut. Plachta of Pittsburgh, and Sergt. B. F. Belcher of Elberton, Ga. They landed on the aviation field at 5:33 p. m. Their flying time from Miami, Fla., was 13 hours 50 minutes and the distance approximately 1,150 miles.

The course was straight across the Caribbean to Honduras. They passed over Tela, Honduras at 1:25 p. m. Though the plane fought head winds, rain and squalls, it functioned perfectly and had enough gas left for three hours of flying.

Maj. Rowell, just back from the battle, greeted the airmen on their arrival.

Their plane will transport supplies and men to the war area and evacuate the wounded. It is equipped with a radio with a radius of 300 miles. While in the air over the rebel area it will keep in touch with the marine base at Managua.

Complains Against U. S.

While the exact status of President Diaz's reported move to resign is still somewhat of a mystery, he said today that he did not feel the United States had given him the support he expected.

"I am only a figurehead," he said. "Everything is in the hands of the Americans; both military and civil control. The expected full coöperation of the United States is not yet a fact, despite the optimistic predictions as a result of the Stimson peace pact with Gen. Mondada, Liberal leader.

"Fighting still continues, and apparently peace is a long way off. A loan is needed to pay the claims resulting from the revolution and build an Atlantic coast railway, which is vital both to the political and economic life of the country, but apparently this is a long way off. Until the railway is constructed to the east coast no unity will exist between the east and west coast factions and the perturbed state will continue."

Seek to Weaken Election Law.

The new election law is being discussed at great length in congress. Considerable opposition is expected if the election reforms fail to pass. Brig. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, American election supervisor, lacks the necessary power to supervise the election efficiently, and the promises made by Col. Henry L. Stimson to the Nicaraguan government are difficult for the American authorities to fulfill. The house of deputies has proposed amendments to the new law which would defeat its aims. The final debate is expected next Tuesday.

DRY AGENTS RAID HIGH SCHOOL FETE AT CLUB BAGDAD

Acting upon information given by the mother of a high school student who said she feared her son was attending a "wild drinking party," Deputy Prohibition Administrator Alexander Jamie early this morning led fifteen agents in a raid upon the Club Bagdad, a popular night club located in the Pershing hotel, 64th and Cottage Grove avenue.

Although about twenty youths were temporarily detained for questioning, there were no arrests. A close scrutiny of tables and of the floor beneath them, however, revealed about thirty bottles of intoxicants which were seized by the raiding party. They will be used as evidence, it was said, in contemplated injunction proceedings to close up the resort.

About 500 persons were present in the place, dining and dancing, when the government agents swooped through the crowd. Among those present were said to be 100 couples representing the graduating class of the Joseph Medill High school.

Several of the students were among the men questioned by the raiders. All of those questioned were said to have had liquor in their party. Chief Investigator F. D. Silloway accompanied Jamie in staging the raid.

BOARDER SLAYS WOMAN AND SELF; ROW OVER WATCH

Paul Ross, a boarder in the home of Mrs. Mary Serna, 40, 2935 West 38th place, early this morning shot and killed the woman, then, apparently becoming panicstricken at what he had done, fired a bullet into his own breast and died within a few minutes. Police believe Ross accidentally killed the woman while shooting at James Gibson, 6235 Kenwood avenue, his friend, following a quarrel over a wrist watch he believed Gibson had stolen from Mrs. Serna.

According to the dead woman's husband, Stanislaw, and her 12 year old son, Thomas, who fled from the house following the shooting, Gibson had visited Ross last night and produced a wrist watch. "It's mine," Mrs. Serna is reported to have told Gibson, and demanded its return.

Angered at what he believed was the treachery of his friend Ross began to upbraid Gibson for taking the watch. Hot words followed and Ross ran to his room, procured a revolver, and began shooting at Gibson, according to Serna. Police believe the woman accidentally got in the way of a bullet fired at Gibson. The latter escaped and police are searching for him.

AUTO RUNS 59 MILES ON GALLON OF GAS.

Automobile engineers who worked for years in an effort to reduce gasoline consumption have found the solution in a marvelous invention that fits all cars. An actual test made by one of the engineers showed 59 miles on a gallon of gas. Thousands of car owners have already installed this new invention. They not only report amazing gas savings but are also surprised to find quicker pick-up, instant starting, smoother running motors, and disappearance of carbon. E. Oliver, 999, 190 E. Third St., Milwaukee, Wis., for a limited time is offering a free device to those who will help introduce it. He also needs men everywhere to make over $100 weekly in their own territory taking care of local business. Write him at once for free sample and big money making offer.—Adv.

LINDY HUNTS IN PANAMA'S HILLS; KILLS A TAPIR

Lull in Receptions Gives Flyer a Rest.

The First Glass

PANAMA, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A story is related today of how, at a municipal reception yesterday, Col. Charles Lindbergh was prevailed upon to drink a glass of champagne in response to a toast. At first he attempted to get by with merely sipping the champagne, but finally complied when he was urged to drink the entire glass. Previously, on his visits to lands where prohibition is a name rather than a condition, Col. Lindbergh has merely touched his lips to the glasses of wine.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DAVID, Panama, Jan. 14.—"Far from the madding crowd," Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is almost roughing it today. With officers of the 24th pursuit squadron from France field, some of them his former Kelly field buddies, the king of the air is up here in Panama's hills, hunting and enjoying a respite from official receptions.

Col. Lindbergh arrived from France field at noon today, landing at the army field here, amid the cheers of the soldiers and entire native population. After greetings by the mayor and other civic officials, he lunched at a camp, later resting. Then, with Lieut. Douglas and Lieut. James E. Parker, he tracked game in the jungle.

Lindy Kills a Tapir.

The bag included a "mountain cow," or tapir, weighing 530 pounds, which fell before Col. Lindbergh's gun, and which was carried back to camp with a deer and some wild ducks. These were prepared for the banquet this evening. Col. Lindbergh was happy as a schoolboy on a holiday over getting the tapir. He had to fire two shots through the beast's tough hide before it succumbed.

Almost all of the France field flyers, with Col. A. G. Fisher, will join the party tomorrow, and it is possible that Col. Lindbergh will stay longer than was first expected, as he has cabled to Caracas, Venezuela, that he expects to.

Numerous American coffee planters in the Boquete highlands have invited the colonel to visit them, but it is expected he will not accept, even informally, as he wants a complete rest before making the hazardous trip to Caracas.

FETE FRENCH FLYERS

BY GERALD MARTIN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BALBOA, Jan. 14.—The French trans-Atlantic flyers, Dieudonne Costes and Lieut. Joseph Lebrix, are being entertained by officials here. They do not anticipate visiting Central America, with the exception of Guatemala. From Guatemala they will head for Mexico City, New Orleans, Washington, and New York. They will not attempt to cross the Atlantic from New York to Paris. Their plans are indefinite after they reach New York. They would like to visit the French section of Canada, but are afraid the weather would be unfavorable.

Pay Tribute to Heroes.

The flyers placed wreaths at the monuments to Count de Lesseps, the canal builder; Bolivar, the South American liberator; Balboa and the Panaman fire heroes this morning, took lunch with the acting governor general, Col. Harry Burgess, at the Hotel Tivoli, and received an enthusiastic reception this evening. Their hosts were members of the Franco-Amerique society. The aviators dined aboard the French training ship Jeanne d'Arc at the Balboa docks this evening, which passed through the canal from Cristobal on its way to Peru, from France.

At the ship's reception, Lieut. Lebrix wore his midshipman's uniform in honor of the Jeanne d'Arc, on which he formerly served as a middy.

Tomorrow the Frenchmen will fly over the city, visiting France field, and will attend a reception given by Brig. Gen. William S. Graves at Quarry Heights in the evening.

DESPONDENT, KILLS HIMSELF.

REDS PROTEST U. S. NICARAGUA POLICY IN PARADE

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Police broke up a demonstration outside the gates of the Brooklyn navy yard today, when 400 men and women paraded in protest against American intervention in Nicaragua. The marchers described themselves with placards and leaflet as members of the Young Workers' league and the Workers' (communist) party.

S. William Gerson, whom police described as a leader in the demonstration, was arrested, charged with disorderly conduct and attempting to incite a riot.

The paraders were dispersed by mounted police three times before the demonstration ended. In their final effort police used their clubs on those who refused to move on.

10,000 MEXICAN SOLDIERS BEGIN JALISCO SWEEP

Will Battle Rebels in Hill Strongholds.

BY JOHN CORNYN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 14.—More than 10,000 soldiers of the federal army will take part in the campaign against the rebels in the state of Jalisco and the adjoining states, under direct command of Minister of War Amaro, it was announced today.

Plans for the campaign have been carefully prepared by the war department. President Calles has taken the greatest interest in the plan of campaign, which he went over step by step with Gen. Amaro, who has gone to the front. Gen. Jose Alvarez, President Calles' friend on the staff, is with the war minister.

10,000 Under Arms.

The number of rebels in arms is estimated variously at from 5,000 to 10,000. The rebels, under numerous guerrilla leaders, are spread over at least 300 miles of rugged mountainous territory, in which it is difficult to follow them.

Within the last three days the rebels have retreated from at least half a dozen small towns and villages in the state of Jalisco before the advance of federal forces. For nearly a month the rebels held mountain villages practically unmolested in Jalisco. They have staged several train holdups and seized important railway points like La Barca, on the railway line from Mexico City to Guadalajara, cutting telephone and telegraph wires and blowing up important railway bridges on the Southern Pacific railway.

Force Rebels Into Uplands.

During the drive of the federal army in the last four days the rebels were forced to abandon the villages seized within the last two weeks. They have retreated to the rugged uplands of the states of Jalisco, Colima, Queretaro, and Guanajuato. The war department is organizing cavalry raiding parties to follow the rebels into the hills and fight them on their own ground. The department reports that there were more than half a dozen fights with rebel bands during the last week, in all of which the rebels were defeated with comparatively heavy losses.

Bear Wanders Into City; Killed at Senator's Home

Sheridan, Wyo., Jan. 14.—(AP)—A big black bear wandered into the city today and was killed just below "Trail End," the home of United States Senator John B. Kendrick.

NEGRO SCHOOLS FUND DRIVE TO OPEN HERE TODAY

A city-wide campaign to raise $35,000 as Chicago's share in a $600,000 national building fund for the American Church Institute for Negroes opens today, according to the Rev. Herbert W. Prince of Lake Forest, chairman.

Bishop Charles P. Anderson and the Chicago Episcopal Diocesan council have given approval of the local drive, the funds from which will be used in the construction of a Chicago building at St. Paul's school, Lawrenceville, Va. Also in connection with the campaign comes the announcement that Julius Rosenwald, Chicago philanthropist, has added another $10,000 to his original gift of $10,000 following investigation of the project and the approval of the educational board of the Rockefeller Foundation, which has voted to contribute $200,000 toward the program.

The Chicago committee on the campaign in addition to the Rev. Mr. Prince, chairman, are R. Isham Randolph, Curtis B. Camp, Frederic F. Norcross, W. S. Powers, George A. Mason, the Rev. George H. Thomas, and Dr. Duncan H. Browne.

MAKER OF DANCE FLOOR WAX TO HAVE DANCING STATUES OVER GRAVE

Denver, Colo., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Under the will of Frank C. Cook, wax manufacturer, a granite monument of a ca of wax surmounted by bronze figu of a dancing couple will mark his grave.

His success in business and his fortune in life accumulated from the production of wax for dance floors.

Mr. Cook, who died here December 31, left an estate estimated at about $50,000.

New Yorker Buys Famous Rembrandt in Germany

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—"Christ and the Samaritan," the famous Rembrandt painted in 1655, has been sold to a private collector in New York. Art experts tried to save the painting for Germany by placing it on a list of "national works of art," which cannot be exported, but by paying a fine the German dealer sold the painting to the New Yorker.

LEGION OFFICIAL SAYS HE RESENTS MAYOR'S APPEAL

Criticizes Thompson for McAndrew Outburst.

Mayor Thompson's move to enlist the American Legion in his maneuvering to win the votes of the minority school trustees against Superintendent William McAndrew, on trial before the board, met with disfavor last night on the part of Edward Clamage, commander of the Cook county council.

In a letter addressed to commanders of all Legion posts in Illinois, Mayor Thompson reviewed the history of the McAndrew trial and suggested that "you, as an individual, and your post, as a body, take such action as you may decide in this matter, to the end that the school trustees now on the anti-American side may be persuaded to cast their votes at the close of the McAndrew trial for our flag and American institutions and for McAndrew's dismissal."

Resents Mayor's Appeal.

"As commander of the Cook county council, the executive body of the American Legion in Chicago," Mr. Clamage replied, "I resent the mayor's action."

"A few weeks ago one of the mayor's agents requested a mailing list of the post commanders in Illinois. This I refused to igve him when I learned the mayor's intentions.

"In the first place, if this is a legitimate appeal to the Legion, which I doubt, it should have been made to the Cook county council. Then, if that executive body should have decided that it was a proper matter for their consideration, the McAndrew side would have been heard as well as that of his opponents.

"Furthermore, the stand for America First is one that should be taken over by the American Legion and not by politicians who exploit it as a campaign slogan for selfish interests. The American Legion is not interested in this political battle and does not feel called upon to attack Mr. McAndrew.

"Then, too, Legion men will ask what right the mayor has to seek favors from them. He has done nothing for the Legion and has never given them recognition. We owe nothing to William Hale Thompson."

Trustee Also Criticizes Action.

Walter J. Raymer, one of the McAndrew trustees, whom Thompson is attempting to swing to the other side, also had some comments to make on the mayor's move.

"The American Legion owes nothing to Thompson," he said. "The patriotism of the minority group of the school trustees will match Thompson's any day. The public will recall the handbills that were dropped from German planes containing extracts from his speeches in Chicago to take 'the edge from the spirit of the allied troops.'"

Francis X. Busch, one of the McAndrew attorneys, charged that Mayor Thompson is attempting to secure the votes of the five minority trustees because he would fear to face the public with the slim victory that would result should McAndrew be ousted by only the vote of the majority bloc of six trustees.

Dr. Otto L. Schmidt, another member of the minority group, complained that the mayor's tactics, in attempting to influence the jurors while the trial is in progress, are improper.

"My position as a patriotic American citizen," he added, "needs no defense."

When J. Lewis Coath, president of the school board, was informed of these criticisms of the mayor's move, he replied: "I won't permit personalities to be injected into this matter. So far the trial has gone along smoothly without personal feeling."

The Mayor's Letter.

The mayor's letter follows in part: "Knowing the purpose of your organization and having read the inspiring preamble of the constitution of the American Legion, I feel certain that you and your post stand as a unit against what has been going on in the Chicago public schools and the schools of other cities.

"In the now internationally known trial of Supt. William McAndrew, it has been proved that he has countenanced the teaching that George Washington was a rebel and traitor; that school histories sponsored and supported by McAndrew are filled with pro-British, anti-American propaganda; that McAndrew denied the Chicago public school children the privilege of contributing their pennies to the fund for the restoration of the frigate Constitution; that he is an active defender of that school of historians who defame our national heroes and assail American ideals and institutions."

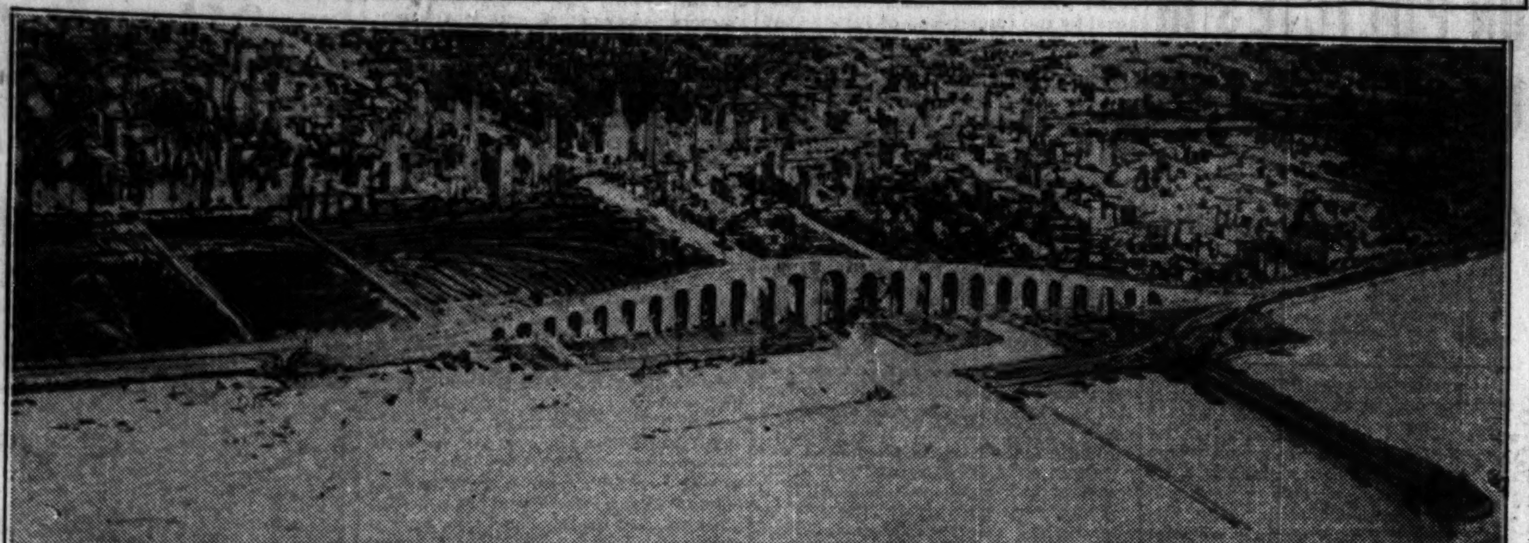
RAINBOW BRIDGE SUGGESTED FOR OUTER DRIVE



Location of proposed Rainbow bridge for the outer drive, as suggested by D. H. Burnham & Co., would be from Lake Shore drive, crossing the river somewhere near its mouth, to Randolph street extended. Bands of colored terra cotta would give it a rainbow effect. Above is a sketch of the proposed bridge.

OFFERS RAINBOW SPAN OF TOWERS TO UNITE PARKS

Artist for Bridge Pier Skyscrapers.

BY AL CHASE.

Rainbow bridge, a huge arched army of skyscrapers in a single row, bending in a sweeping band of color from Lake Shore drive to Randolph street, is the suggested method of linking north and south sides near the mouth of the river, made by Charles Morgan, Chicago artist and architect. The location and application of the project to the city's development is being made by D. H. Burnham & Co.

Would Be Full of Color.

The name of the great proposed structice, Rainboy bridge, is given because of the sweeping bands of color suggested by Mr. Morgan which would result in a rainbow effect when seen from the lake or viewed from Michigan avenue.

The startling novelty in Mr. Morgan's project is the utilization of the great piers as office building skyscrapers of twenty-five or more stories. Still more novel would be the entrance into these unique structures—from the top. The tenants would whiz over the bridge to the pier which contained their respective building, park their cars in the proposed garage in the upper floors, and drop down in an elevator to their offices.

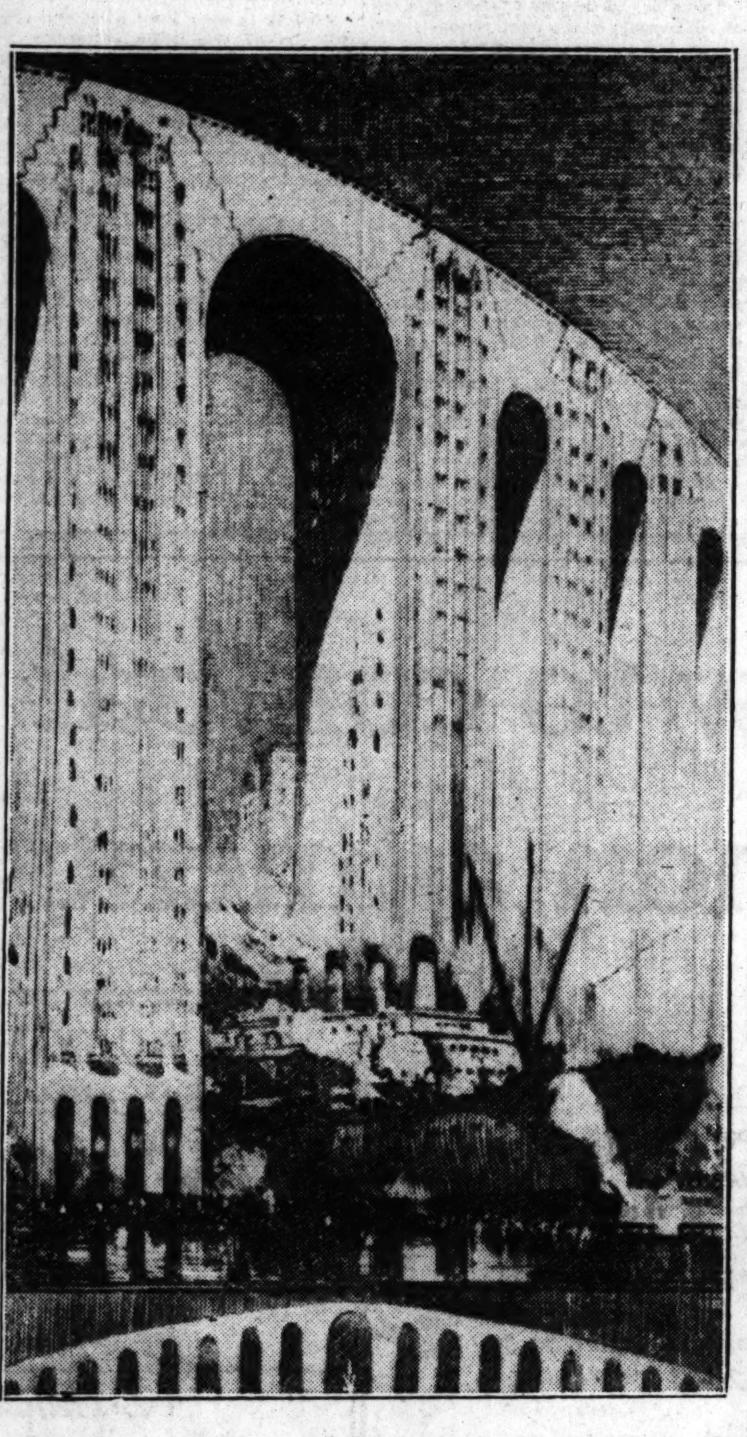
A width of approximately 150 feet is suggested for the bridge by the architects. The grade would be about 8 per cent.

Offers World Feature.

"Rainbow bridge, if carried out on the scale suggested, would make one of the world's most imposing structures," said Herbert Burnham of D. H. Burnham & Co.

"It would give Chicago's water front one of the most novel and interesting developments of any great metropolis," said Mr. Morgan. "It would mean the linking the north and south side boulevard systems with a monumental rainbow hued causeway, unlike anything to be found in the world, I believe."

The project will be submitted to James Simpson, head of the Chicago plan commission, and to the heads of the Lincoln and south park boards.



Photograph of etching made by Charles L. Morgan, showing his suggested used of Rainbow bridge piers as skyscrapers. The widest opening is over the Chicago river, with boat passing under bridge.

BEN FRANKLIN HAILED AS MAN SELF-EDUCATED

Benjamin Franklin, with only two years of grammar school education, achieved a doctor's degree from an American university, was made a member of the French Academy of Sciences, wrote a book that remains a best seller up to the present time, mastered four languages and conversed fluently in Latin, and is remarkable in history for the diversity and number of his accomplishments and inventions, Old Time Printers of Chicago were told last night by Benjamin Franklin Bills at their annual banquet at the Stevens hotel.

Several hundred printers attended the dinner, commemorating the 222d birthday anniversary of Franklin. Speakers for the occasion, the forty-third annual banquet, included Charles H. Dennis, editor of the Chicago Daily News, and Thomas Knapp, who read a message from President Coolidge's secretary. John H. Quadland, president of the printers' association, welcomed the guests, and Homer J. Buckley presided as toastmaster.

HALLSTHAMMAR WOOD CARVINGS DISPLAYED AT ART INSTITUTE

BY ELEANOR JEWITT.

In the children's museum at the Art institute there is a fascinating exhibition of wood carving by Carl Hallsthammar. The figures are comparatively small but filled to the brim with kindly humor. They are whimsical, pathetic, amusing. Color has been used in many cases and that plus the skill of the whittling makes an art of a boy's great pastime.

So far as I know there are few men now who attempt much in wood. Robert Laurent, it is true, at the Arts club shows work in wood, but the wood is an after thought, the work is sculpture. Mr. Hallsthammar uses wood more lovingly. He breathes into it and it comes to life as scenes and episodes of everyday experience. His work is truly remarkable.

At the Chicago Galleries association there will open next Wednesday an exhibition of paintings by Adolph Heinze. These are chiefly the result of a trip of the artist to Glacier National park last summer.

The Arts club announces a tea next Thursday for M. Maurice Ravel, a French musician, thus leaving for a moment the arts of painting and sculpture for the sister art of melody.

ANOTHER JURY DISAGREES OVER WILLIE DRUGGAN

Court Tomorrow to Set Second Retrial.

After having deliberated for five and one-half hours last night without arriving at a verdict, Municipal Judge Daniel P. Trude dismissed a jury in the trial of Willie Druggan, charged with assault with intent to kill Martin Mahoney, a city license inspector.

The jury, divided six to six, reported to the judge at 11 o'clock last night that there was no hope of breaking the deadlock. Judge Trude said the date for a new trial would be set tomorrow.

Long Delays on Case.

The trial came after Willie had been granted fourteen continuances and a previous mistrial. Before the case came to trial this time James J. McDermott, defense attorney, asked for still another continuance on the grounds that one of the jurors had read a newspaper story of the case contrary to the court's orders. The motion was dismissed when the juror explained that he had read only the headlines.

Mahoney, the first state's witness, told of the assault which he said confined him to St. Anthony's hospital.

He was in that hospital for eight weeks. He testified that he approached an automobile at Ogden avenue and Roosevelt road last July 14 and questioned the driver about his license.

The car drove away but returned in a few minutes, when Druggan, the driver, he said, slugged him with a baseball bat.

Police Lieutenant John M. Kelly testified that he was present at the hospital when Mahoney identified Druggan as his assailant shortly after the occurrence.

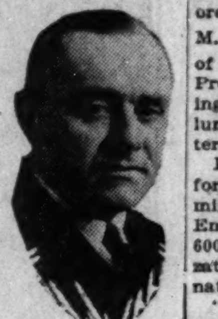
State's Witness Missing.

Frank Giovanitti, license inspector, who was with Mahoney at the time of the assault and who testified at the first trial, has disappeared. Efforts of detectives to find him during the last week have been futile.

Druggan's defense was an alibi. A junk dealer, George Steiner, 5028 North Lawndale avenue, testified that he was occupied with Druggan at the time of the alleged assault in hauling debris from the grounds of White City amusement park.

Willie took the stand and said that everything Steiner said was true, because they were together on that day. His automobile, so far as he knew, Willie testified, was in a garage on the day of the assault. Willie is a brother of Terry Druggan. Assistant State's Attorney Robert Klenha prosecuted the case.

O'TOOLE, HONORED AT DINNER, HAILED AS HOME SAVIOR



ALD. W. R. O'TOOLE.

Ald. William R. O'Toole, chairman of the council committee on buildings and zoning, was hailed as the savior of the small homes in Chicago at a dinner given in his honor at the Hotel Sherman last night. More than 1,500 friends of the alderman attended.

It was Ald. O'Toole who sponsored the present zoning ordinance, which was passed in 1923. One of the speakers at the dinner, Joseph K. Brittain, former president of the Chicago Real Estate board, said that this ordinance has done more to make possible a beautiful city than any other legislation ever passed in the city.

Wharton Clay, secretary of the Associated Metal Lathers, declared that through Ald. O'Toole's efforts space had been saved for the building of small homes.

CHURCH WOMEN GIVEN REPORT ON JOB SERVICE

"Never in the last ten years have there been so many persons seeking employment, unequipped for even the ordinary kinds of work," Mrs. Minnie M. Champan, general superintendent of the Women's Church Federation Protectorate, told 700 women attending the organization's tenth annual luncheon in the Hotel Sherman yesterday.

During 1927 the protectorate cared for 2,956 persons, including 1,346 immigrants, according to Mrs. Chapman. Employment was furnished to nearly 600 through the efforts of the organization, which represents 19 denominations.

"The budget asked for the first year was $1,000 and hope was cherished that some day $1,000 would be contributed by each of the four largest denominations, and $1,000 by all other denominations combined," Mrs. Chapman said. "Our disbursements for 1927 were nearly $13,000, which is considered about half enough to employ a staff to do scientific service for the rapidly growing number of persons coming for aid."

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes of the Methodist Episcopal church spoke on the part of the church in welfare work.

MONROE EDICT MUST BE KEPT, MACHADO SAYS

Havana Meet Can't Judge U. S., He Tells Latins.

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Gen. Gerardo Machado, president of Cuba, declared today that it was not within the province of the Pan-American conference to assume the rôle of a tribunal to judge the Nicaraguan problem or the general policy of the United States with respect to intervention in small states, as the congress has no such rights. It would be dangerous, he said, to establish such a precedent.

"Resolutions of an international congress are without efficacy," he continued, "if they lack the support of all the members. These are my opinions, and they are based on the instructions the Cuban delegation has received.

Defends Monroe Doctrine.

"I desire to regard the Monroe Doctrine as representing the noble action of a President of the United States who prevented the reconquest of America at the time of the holly alliance. The Monroe Doctrine was, and ought to remain, the common defensive policy for the territorial integrity of America; the Monroe Doctrine is not only compatible with the sovereignty of America below the Rio Grande but is a document giving the greatest force to that right."

Cuba's membership in the league of nations, the president said, does not influence Cuba's adherence to Pan-American union. He believed that the conference would be able to accomplish a better understanding between the countries of America, in the way of reciprocal aid, making such union a material and moral benefit for true Pan-Americanism.

Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director of the Pan-American union, has taken charge of union headquarters here and has conferred with some of the American delegates, including the American ambassadors, Judah and Morrow, and Oscar Underwood. Dr. Rowe said he believed the sessions would be very peaceful and that cooperation among the delegates of the various nations would be the keynote of the conference.

Look to Coolidge.

Without exception conference delegates who have been interviewed look to President Coolidge to make vital pronouncements in his address to the conference.

Mexico has no intention of presenting any new issues to the conference, Julio Garcia, president of the Mexican delegation, said today on his arrival here from Mexico City. Señor Garcia said that he saw no new issues to be brought into the Pan-American meeting. He was accompanied by six members of the delegation, giving Mexico the largest number of delegates at the conference.

Beautify City for Guests.

President Machado was officially notified by Carlos M. de Cespedes, in charge of construction work, that the three centers of special work in preparation for the conference are now complete. Preparations included extensive additions and changes at the University of Havana, where the conference will be held, opening of the new and beautiful Avenue de Los Misiones, and the beautification of Maine park. All unsightly structures in the vicinity of the university have been demolished and the principal street leading to it has been graded to conform with the incline of a grand stairway up the hill to the university building.

Colombia Not Neutral.

BOGOTA, Colombia, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Denial that the Colombian delegates at the Pan-American conference at Havana have received instructions to remain neutral in the event of the question of the United States activities in Nicaragua is brought up was made by the chancellor today.

U. S. STANDS PAT ON POLICIES IN LATIN AMERICA

Coolidge Instructs Our Havana Delegates.

crimp in that isthmian policy of the United States and was invented for that purpose, it has been charged, by those elements in Latin American countries which are jealous of the "colossus of the north" and are continually denouncing our policies as imperialistic and annexationist in intent.

When this matter comes up the American delegation will rest its case on the contention that international law never has prohibited intervention by one state in another and that the international commission of jurists which sat at Rio de Janeiro last spring exceeded in the formulation of this rule its instructions by a former Pan-American conference to codify existing international law.

Recognition of Governments.

Another proposal of the commission of jurists that will be resisted relates to the recognition of governments, many of the details of which would impair the freedom of the United States to enforce respect for its rights and interests through the medium of official recognition.

One provision of the proposed rule is that "recognition is unconditional and irrevocable." If our recognition of the present Mexican government were irrevocable there would have been no force in the implied threat of Secretary of State Kellogg in his last note on the confiscatory oil and alien land laws in 1926 to the effect that recognition might be withdrawn if the Calles government should persist in confiscating American properties. Such a rule would impair considerably the vigor and effectiveness of our Isthmian policy.

The American delegation also will resist some of the details of the proposal by the commission of jurists that would transmute the Pan-American union of 21 republics into a sort of league of nations of the western hemisphere. One provision would make the governing board of the union a body analagous in some important respects to the council of the league of nations, with powers to engage in the settlement of disputes between the member countries.

U. S. in Minority.

It is obvious that in such a body the United States with only one vote would be a minority of one if all the members representing the Latin republics were to combine against us and equally obvious that erection of such an institution might be productive of results nugatory of our Caribbean policies.

While the American delegation will maintain an unyielding attitude in defense of our traditional policies it is not going to Havana in any aggressive mood. On the contrary, former Secretary of State Hughes and his fellow delegates will enter the conference with the object of joining whole heartedly with the delegations of the other republics in promoting the common interests of the countries of the western hemisphere.

There is a multitude of such matters on the agenda of the conference—relating to the encouragement of commercial aviation, to the improvement of communications by means of railroads, highways, ship lines, the telegraph, telephone and radio, to intellectual cooperation and to economic and social problems.

To Create Good Will.

Moreover, the American delegation is going to Havana to support to the full the splendid gesture President Coolidge is to make by his good will journey to Cuba to dispel suspicions and create a better understanding between the United States and the other American nations.

It will proceed on the assumption that despite all that has been said to the contrary there are in a conference of the American republics no real grounds for misunderstanding and controversy. The disposition of the American delegation will be to defer to the Latin countries in the matter of what subjects are and what are not to be discussed.

It goes to Havana with no thought of dictating or dominating the proceedings. It will consider itself only one of twenty-one delegations with no more power or influence in the conference than any other. It will be ready to discuss any matter the others desire to bring up and to conciliate differences wherever possible without yielding fundamentals of our traditional foreign policies.

No Clash Expected.

Members of the American delegation do not anticipate any serious clash with the Latin countries at Havana. They are disposed to impute to irresponsible sources many of the utterances in South and Central America demanding action at Havana to circumscribe the policies and influence of the United States.

It is doubted that our aims and purposes are really misunderstood among intelligent people in any of our sister republics, for our actions have spoken more loudly than our words in our relations with Latin America. Against the assertion that we are bent on annexing Latin countries in the Caribbean region, we place the evidence that after intervening in Cuba, Mexico, Santo Domingo and repeatedly in Nicaragua we have withdrawn as eventually we intend to do from Haiti and Nicaragua.

Deaf Ear to Annexation.

Also it is well known in the chancelleries of the Latin countries that in the last decade and particularly within the last six years the American government has turned a deaf ear to numerous proposals from Latin American sources that the United States establish protectorates over and eventually annex several Caribbean countries.

Also it is realized in Latin American capitals that the United States desires nothing more than the existence of strong neighbor countries able to maintain stable governments and to discharge their international obligations.

For these reasons it is conceived that the responsible Latin opinion that will be represented at Havana will not look with favor upon any action that would be likely to impair our ability to maintain order in the Caribbean region for the benefit not only of American interests but of all law abiding elements in the countries concerned.

How to combat the 7 most common ailments of mankind

IT may seem strange that one preparation can be so efficacious for so many ailments, but if you stop to consider the reason, it is as simple as a-b-c—

Sal Hepatica is the great natural way to relieve the common ills of life because it corrects stoppage, relieves acidity and flushes away the insidious poisons of waste.

These poisons are set up when the food we eat is not properly digested and promptly eliminated. They affect different people in different ways—and they are the real cause of most of the ills so prevalent today.

Sal Hepatica flushes away systemic poisons by stimulating the release of the natural secretions of water in the intestines.

Sal Hepatica is the Practical Equivalent of the Spas Abroad

Sal Hepatica is a delicate blend of the same health-giving salines for which the waters of the European spas are known throughout the world. Dissolved in a large glass of water, it makes a sparkling, effervescent drink.

Dissolved in water, Sal Hepatica foams up into a sparkling, refreshing drink.

Sal Hepatica is refreshing to the palate—prompt in action. The best time to take it is upon arising—or half an hour before any meal.

Keep Sal Hepatica always on hand—and use it at the first sign of digestive disorders or of sluggish elimination. It will help keep you physically fit—internally clean—and free of the disease-producing poisons of waste.

Send for our booklet that tells you more fully how Sal Hepatica helps to relieve the common ills of life described here.

Check (✓) in this list the ailment from which you frequently suffer—then read how Sal Hepatica helps to relieve it by correcting the cause.

Check your ailment here (✓)	The 7 Most Prevalent Ailments
☐	1·Constipation	The bane of our existence. 9 out of 10 people suffer from it.
☐	2·Headaches	Few people can say they never have a headache.
☐	3·Auto-Intoxication	Nearly every victim of constipation is affected by this enervating condition of self-poisoning.
☐	4·Bad Complexion	Glance around you and see how few people have a blemish-free complexion.
☐	5·Rheumatism	6 out of every 100 people will have this painful ailment this winter.
☐	6·Indigestion	27 people out of 100 suffer frequent attacks of indigestion—many more have so-called bilious attacks.
☐	7·Colds	This ailment causes Americans to lose on the average 23.3 days a year.

Take Sal Hepatica—a standby in millions of homes

Here is what the use of Sal Hepatica can do for your health, your happiness and your appearance

1·CONSTIPATION

The lack of sufficient fluidity in the intestines is one of the most common causes of stagnation of the intestinal contents. Sal Hepatica dissolved in water serves to flush away waste products by causing a greater amount of fluid to be drawn into the intestines. Whenever you wake up in the morning with a thick, coated tongue—with a headache or any of the other enervating symptoms of constipation, clear away the stoppage by taking two teaspoonfuls of Sal Hepatica in a large glass of water. For most prompt results use hot water.

2·HEADACHES

To relieve congestion which causes so many headaches, take 1 teaspoonful of Sal Hepatica dissolved in a large glassful of hot water and repeat in 15 minutes if not relieved. For chronic headaches take a teaspoonful in water daily one half to one hour before breakfast.

3·AUTO-INTOXICATION

This is the popular term applied to the self-poisoning which arises when food wastes ferment and set up poisons. These poisons are spread through the body by the blood, bringing about a general lowering of physical vitality. To correct this prevalent trouble take one teaspoonful of Sal Hepatica in a glass of water before breakfast. Do this daily until elimination has become regular.

4·BAD COMPLEXION

On arising take a teaspoonful of Sal Hepatica in a glassful of water. Do this for a week or as long as necessary to clear the complexion.

5·RHEUMATISM

As an eliminant in rheumatism flush out the system at once with a laxative dose of Sal Hepatica—2 to 4 teaspoonfuls in a large glassful of water. And then keep free of systemic poisons and acidity by taking 1 to 2 teaspoonfuls of Sal Hepatica in a glassful of water half to one hour before each meal and at night just before retiring.

6·INDIGESTION

For indigestion take a teaspoonful of Sal Hepatica in a glass of hot water and repeat in 15 minutes if not relieved. If you are subject to frequent attacks of indigestion try taking a teaspoonful of Sal Hepatica in a glass of water every morning on arising.

7·COLDS

The first step in clearing a cold is to flush out the body with two to four teaspoonfuls of Sal Hepatica in a glassful of water. Continue the use of Sal Hepatica each morning one half to one hour before breakfast until every sign of your cold has gone.

TAPE ON SLAIN WOMAN'S FACE GIVES NEW CLEW

Police Are Told Chambers Had Bought Some.

CRIMINAL COURT.

William Klotz, manslaughter, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary; Sumner Hamilton, manslaughter, sentenced to 1 to 14 years in the penitentiary; Lucy Hagenow, murder by abortion, sentenced to 14 years in the penitentiary, by Judge Michael Feinberg.

Samuel Gross, embezzlement, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in the penitentiary by Judge Emanuel Eller.

Michael Kowalski, assault to murder, sentenced to 1 to 14 years in the penitentiary by Judge Harry B. Lewis.

Information considered highly important was given the police yesterday concerning the murder of Mrs. Betty Chambers. The police were told that J. Gordon Chambers, who posed as the young woman's husband, had purchased fifteen yards of adhesive tape.

Mrs. Chambers was found dead Thursday night in her room at the Fontenelle hotel, 511 Melrose street. There were finger marks on her throat, a lamp cord had been drawn tightly about her neck, and nine yards of adhesive tape wound around the head so as to cover the nose and mouth. The police were informed that the slain woman had been the associate of thieves, racketeers and members of a vice syndicate and indications were she had been killed to prevent her telling what she knew.

Offer to Surrender Chambers.

Chambers had been missing since the body was discovered, but yesterday, through Attorneys Michael Romano and Louis Blumenthal, he offered to surrender. The lawyers wanted assurance from Coroner Oscar Wolff that Chambers and Joe Miller, whom they also represented and offered to surrender, would not be held in custody over Sunday. This assurance was refused and the lawyers then said they would bring their clients to the inquest tomorrow afternoon in the County building.

The police, under the leadership of Deputy Commissioner William O'Connor, were seeking Mrs. Marion Kirk, who lived at the Burbank hotel, 1232 North La Salle street, for questioning regarding the murder. They had a theory that a woman had taken part in the crime and they also had evidence that some girl named Marion had been in the Chambers' room at about the time of the murder.

Roy Miller, known as the Russian, who had frequently acted as chauffeur for Mrs. Chambers, gave the police what they considered the first tangible bit of evidence. It was he who said he had seen Gordon Chambers buy the adhesive tape. He also told Assistant State's Attorneys George S. Lavin and Samuel Hoffman he had seen Mrs. Chambers shoot at Chambers a few weeks ago.

Says Girl Was Jealous.

Miller said Chambers had been paying attention to Marion Kirk and that Betty was jealous. He declared he had heard Chambers threaten "to get" Betty. Then, he testified, he had driven Mrs. Chambers to 3417 Roosevelt road where they met Chambers and the Kirk woman. He said Betty had then fired several shots at the man who posed as her husband.

Among the men named as having visited the Chambers' room at the Fontenelle hotel, besides Chambers, were Joe Miller, Lazar Goldman, and Al Bloom, known as Boozems.

Lavin said he was not certain whether the Joe Miller named is the same person as Joe Kirk, presumed husband of Marion Kirk, whose identity was discovered when Deputy Commissioner William E. O'Connor raided the rooms at the Burbank hotel yesterday.

A picture of Betty and a coat identified as one she had worn were found in the Kirks' room. An opium pipe was there, too, but no opium.

Whether the slain girl had any jewels or a large amount of money in a safe deposit vault was not definitely known.

HOUSTON PLANS NEW AUDITORIUM FOR DEMOCRATS

Temporary Edifice Will Seat 25,000.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Construction of a temporary auditorium seating 25,000 to accommodate the Democratic national convention at Houston, Tex., in June was promised today by Jesse H. Jones, multimillionaire resident of that city, who is chairman of the arrangements committee of the Democratic national committee.

Mr. Jones will consult tomorrow with New York architects with a view to drawing up plans. He estimated that the auditorium, even though of a temporary character, would cost $100,000. Mr. Jones said that this would be furnished by Houston without being charged against the $200,000 promised to the Democratic committee on behalf of that city.

City Auditorium Inadequate.

Members of the arrangements committee, Mr. Jones said, believed that the present municipal auditorium seating 6,500 will be inadequate. Mr. Jones said the mayor of Houston had authorized the use of the centrally located civic center as the auditorium site.

It has been estimated, Mr. Jones said, that about 25,000 visitors will be in Houston during the convention. About 4,000 of these will be persons actually connected in one way or another with the convention, such as delegates, alternates, officials, and newspaper writers, while the others will be outsiders attracted by the affair.

Hotel reservations are now being accepted by hotels in Houston, Mr. Jones said, but allotments will not be made until later. Hotels in Galveston, he said, have promised to furnish at least 1,000 choice rooms. It is planned to maintain an interurban express service which will furnish an hour and fifteen minute schedule between the two cities.

Mr. Jones said he is confident that visitors to Houston during the convention will find weather conditions more favorable than they would have been in Cleveland, St. Louis, or Kansas City.

It was disclosed by Mr. Jones that he extended the invitations to the committee on behalf of Houston without consulting any one in that city and without any campaign. Not a single member of the committee, he said, was asked in advance to vote for Houston, and he was surprised when sentiment crystallized for that city.

The arrangements committee will meet in Houston in April, at which time attention will be given to the selection of a temporary chairman and other officers of the convention.

Mr. Jones said that he had received assurances from wealthy members of the Democratic party of enough contributions to pay off the $220,000 debt hanging over from the 1924 campaign.

Diana Manners' Husband Gets British Cabinet Post

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 14.—New ministry appointments announced today include that of A. Duff Cooper, member of parliament, as financial secretary of the war office, succeeding Commodore H. Douglas King. Mr. Cooper is the husband of Lady Diana Manners, who was famous in America for her acting in "The Miracle."

GRACE KLEIST, A TRIBUNE PEACH, TO BE MARRIED

Miss Grace Kleist, winner of the second prize in the Chicago district of THE TRIBUNE's Peaches contest, will be married on Wednesday to Harry Juneau King, it was learned yesterday. Miss Kleist is the daughter of Mrs. Follett Kleist of 1428 Thorndale avenue and is a member of Kappa chapter of Tau Epsilon sorority.

Mr. King is a member of one of the oldest and best known families in Wisconsin, being a great-grandson of Solomon Juneau, one of the founders of Milwaukee. He is president of the King-Fuller company, olive importers.

Following the wedding ceremony, which is to be held at the home of Dr. Preston Bradley, a wedding dinner will be served at the Edgewater Beach hotel. The bridal couple will make an extended wedding journey to New York and to Central and South America. On their return trip they will spend some time in California, reaching Chicago about the first of April.

3 GIRLS HURT AS TRAIN HIT AUTO.

Rhinelander, Wis. Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Three Eagle River High school girls, Garnet Benson, 15; Esther Kilpi, 17, and Lillian Ferguson, 18, are in a hospital as the result of injuries suffered when their automobile was struck by a Soo line locomotive on a crossing here.

BEATRICE BURNET BECOMES BRIDE OF E. L. HERSEY

Miss Beatrice Burnet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Sidney Burnet, 1438 Dearborn parkway, wore ivory satin, embroidered with pearls for her wedding at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at St. Chrysostom's, to Edward L. Hersey Jr., son of Mrs. Edward L. Hersey of St. Paul, Minn. Her tulle bridal veil fell from a rosepoint cap which had been worn by her mother and grandmother at their weddings, and she carried gardenias and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaids, Miss Emily Otis, Miss Winifred Smith, Miss Anne Croftan, Miss Edith Fairbanks, Miss Isabel Scott, Miss Jean Stevens, Miss Jane Schuttler, and Miss Ruth Elting, were in peach colored chiffon with matching picture hats of horsehair. Their bouquets were of Pernet roses and lavender sweet peas. Mrs. Burnet wore beige lace and chiffon, with a beige felt hat and a silver fox scarf, and Mrs. Hersey's costume was of brown lace over metal cloth with a matching hat and a small bouquet of orchids.

St. Chrysostom's was decorated with candles, ferns, alabaster urns and calla lillies for the service, which was followed by a reception at the Burnet residence. Uernet roses and calla lilies decorated the house.

IRISH PRESIDENT WILL ARRIVE IN U.S. ON THURSDAY

Cosgrave Scheduled to Reach Chicago Friday.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The itinerary of the Irish president's American visit will take Mr. Cosgrave as far west as Chicago, as far south as Washington, and as far north as Ottawa. Throughout the tour he will be accompanied by Prof. Timothy Smiddy, the Irish Free State's minister to the United States.

The president disembarks at New York on Thursday, proceeding within a few hours to Chicago.

In Washington Jan. 22.

In Chicago he will remain until Sunday, Jan. 22. The next day he is due in Washington, where he will remain until Friday, Jan. 27. Philadelphia will entertain him on Jan. 28 and 29. Ottawa will welcome him on Monday, Jan. 30, and he will remain there until 5 p. m. of the following day. From Wednesday, Feb. 1, until sailing hour on the night of Feb. 3, there will be a round of festivities and speeches in his honor in New York City.

LONG DISTANCE WALKER.

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ABOARD THE S. S. HOMERIC, Jan. 14.—The Homeric, with the Irish president and his party aboard, has been delayed by the strong head winds and heavy seas, and will not arrive in New York before next Thursday. The party, therefore, is not due in Chicago before Friday.

President William Cosgrave has established a reputation as the ship's champion long distance walker of the Atlantic. Every morning he does about 10 miles on deck, wearing down one after another of the party. He spends the afternoon in the gymnasium throwing the medicine ball and riding the mechanical horses and weight lifting.

Joseph Walsh, secretary of the department of external affairs, and Diarmuid O'Hegarty, secretary of the executive council, are hard at work preparing material for the chief executive's speeches in America. I understand he intends to emphasize the close relations between the two countries since the colonization of America, the services of Irish soldiers in the revolutionary and civil wars, and the part free and independent Ireland may play as a link in the union between Europe and the American continents.

Finance Its Own Party.

He will also thank the Irish Americans for their generous help in the past in the Irish freedom movement, while indicating that now Ireland is free, it is able and willing to finance its own party politics, while national development will be financed on a business basis by loans such as the one recently oversubscribed both in America and Ireland.

PLAN FOR CHICAGO VISIT.

Michael J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements, will head a committee representing the Irish Fellowship club and the city of Chicago who will welcome President William T. Cosgrave of the Irish Free State when he lands at New York and escort him to Chicago.

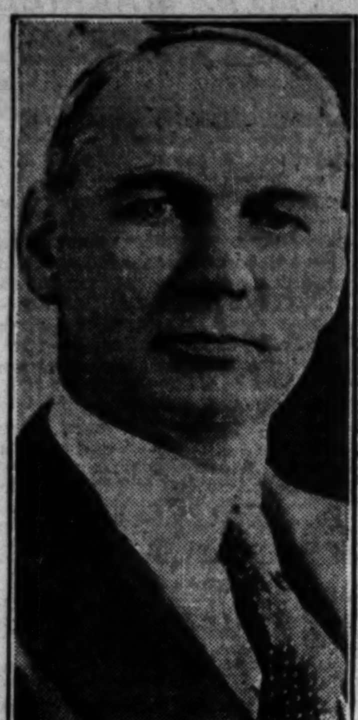
In New York a brief reception will be given for the Irish president at the Battery when he lands. After that the party will be hurried to the private car of Patrick Crowley, president of the New York Central railroad.

The car will be coupled on to the Century, and President Cosgrave will come to Chicago.

As announced by Roger Faherty, president of the Irish Fellowship club, and Kevin Kelly, the program prepared for President Cosgrave will be featured by the dinner to be given on Saturday night at the Stevens hotel by the Irish Fellowship club, at which 4,500 are expected.

Mayor Thompson will be host for a luncheon at the Drake hotel with prominent officials, business men, and others present, and Edward N. Hurley will be host for an affair at the Chicago club.

TO SPEAK HERE



DR. GEORGE J. FISCHER.

Dr. George J. Fischer of New York, deputy chief executive of the Boy Scouts of America, will arrive in Chicago tomorrow. Dr. Fischer will address the annual meeting of Chicago scout leaders at the Hotel La Salle tomorrow. He is also scheduled to address the regional scout conference at the Edgewater Beach hotel Tuesday and Wednesday The region comprises Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, and Michigan.

OLD FRANCHISES BALK EXPANSION OF TRANSIT LINES

Expired Nearly Year Ago; No More in Sight.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

A year will soon have elapsed since the surface lines franchises expired on Jan. 31, 1927. No new franchise has been prepared. No negotiations on the form or substance of a franchise are pending.

While these conditions exist no substantial improvements can be obtained. New cars are needed, but they cannot be bought. Sundry extensions have been requested, but no cash is available to build them.

Transportation is being denied the public because no franchise is in operation. The city council—mayor and aldermen—is the agency which grants a franchise.

Claim New Laws Needed.

The present operating companies claim that a workable franchise cannot be granted under the present law, and the city council apparently coincides with that view. The companies presented to the last legislature the enabling legislation they thought necessary. There were so many objections to it that the companies abandoned their effort. The aldermen immediately—before the generally assembly adjourned—appealed to Gov. Small to call a special session to consider Chicago local transportation alone. The governor replied that if he were shown what the people wanted, he would call a special session, provided the city and the companies agreed upon it.

The city is supposed to have been preparing its bills ever since, but they are not yet ready for publication in pamphlet form so that the public may read and criticize them. Technically, these proposed city bills are in the hands of the city and company lawyers who are supposed to be improving them. Instead of the aldermen themselves negotiating with the companies they have delegated that highly important task to the city's lawyers.

Ready for Aldermen.

It was said yesterday at the city law department that the bills are ready for aldermanic consideration.

Ald. Joseph B. McDonough, chairman of the council local transportation committee, announced a week ago that he would call a meeting of the committee for tomorrow to consider the obtaining of a petition from 100,000 residents of Chicago to the governor for a special legislative session. Several members of the committee said yesterday they have not received a notice of such a meeting.

All of which indicates the present status of local transportation on the surface lines. On the surface, however, there is every indication of an effort to get results—but none worth recital has been accomplished. The preceding sentence is a city hall definition for "stalling."

Dr. Lucy Hagenow, Denied New Trial, Gets 14 Years

Dr. Lucy Hagenow, 82 years old, with a police record for illegal operations dating back thirty years, yesterday was denied a new trial and was sentenced to fourteen years in the penitentiary by Judge Michael Feinberg. She was found guilty by a jury last November on a charge of murder by abortion. Her victim was an unmarried stenographer, 25 years old.

MRS. CHANNON'S PARIS TROUBLES STIR CHICAGOANS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 14.—Mrs. James H. Channon of Chicago was amazed today by a flood of cables received from Chicago, in which friends and relatives demanded anxiously news of her "kidnaping activities" reported by the French papers.

The Chicago woman is at a loss to understand, since her part in the drama, which the Parisian press dubs the "mysterious kidnaping of the daughter of the Boston coal king," was merely that of befriending Miss Allison Hartwell, daughter of Swan Hartwell of Boston. Her efforts were made to have the sick girl transported to the American hospital at Neuilly, but were interpreted by the girl's French guardian as an attempt to kidnap her.

THE TRIBUNE correspondent visited Miss Hartwell at the American hospital today and found her better, though she is slightly nervous.

Police Captain and Wife Married 50 Years Today

Capt. Michael P. Evans, one of the oldest veterans on the Chicago police force, and Mrs. Evans last night celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding with a dinner at 140 Austin avenue. Their marriage took place in Chicago at St. James' church, 29th and Wabash avenue. Capt. Evans has been a member of the police department for more than half a century, and for 45 years has been in charge of the bureau of identification. Two sons, William and Edward, are connected with the same bureau where Capt. Evans puts in an appearance every day for a regular shift of eight to ten hours, although he is more than 80 years old. Their home is at 7951 South Sangamon street.

Wouldn't you rather have a Steinway

"700,000" Say Balaban & Katz
"Heard the Steinway Piano in B & K Theaters
Christmas Week"

A FITTING finale, surely, for a year that has been noteworthy for its Steinway successes. In the numerous theaters of Balaban & Katz, the Steinway has appealed to the discriminating management as the one Piano best to bear out their well known policy of only the best is good enough. The Steinway is heard in every Balaban & Katz performance, in practically every number on every week's bill. In a month or two, any Steinway on a Balaban & Katz stage receives the equivalent of years of average home use. Yet a Steinway one hears in one of these favorite temples of amusement sounds always as only a Steinway can.

The inimitable PAUL ASH, himself, has, of course, his own Steinway, with Duo-Art reproducing action. There is but one Piano in the minds and hearts of the huge majority of the outstanding musicians—Steinway, of course! Really, every Piano lover's wish is to own a Steinway.

The lovely little black Steinway at $1425, on easiest of terms is an ideal home Steinway. It is a glorious little affair, precisely the same Steinway musically, as that which sells for $1525 in other woods. A very modest down payment will send it home. Comfortable monthly payments can be arranged to take care of the balance. An old Piano to trade in will make Steinway ownership easier still. Let us show you the lovely little black Steinway; no obligation, of course.

MOB THREATENS 2 COPS AS THEY SLAY FUGITIVE

Three Wounded in Gun Battle at Factory.

SLAIN BY POLICE

HERMAN HILIGER.

One man was shot and killed, two policemen of the Kensington station were wounded and a passerby was shot in the head at noon yesterday when the two policemen, in plain clothes, tried to arrest a Pullman company employé for displaying a revolver at the Kensington shops of the company.

Hundreds of workers at the Pullman shops, believing the policemen were bandits, threatened them after the shooting and the officers were saved only by the cool headed efforts of a clerk, who quieted the mob.

The dead man was identified as Herman Hiliger, a Pullman company painter, who lived at 38 East 103d street. He was shot and killed after a running battle with the policemen.

Cops Slightly Hurt.

The wounded policemen are Patrolmen Michael Shannon and Patrick Devine of the Kensington station. Shannon was grazed on the side by a bullet. Devine was shot in the right arm and after first aid was administered both reported back to the police station.

Tony Kalwalis, 10645 Lafayette avenue, a Pullman company employé, was shot in the head as he was leaving his shop when the shooting began. He was taken to Roseland hospital.

Yesterday morning Capt. John Prendergast of the Kensington station was informed by John Steck, 9941 Wentworth avenue, that Hiliger carried a revolver with while at work.

Capt. Prendergast sent Policemen Shannon and Devine to the shops during the noon hour to take Hiliger into custody. The policemen had arrested Hiliger and were returning with him when, just outside the gates of the Pullman car shops, he pulled a .25 caliber revolver from his pocket and fired at Devine, hitting him.

Workers Join in Chase.

Policeman Shannon then drew his revolver and fired at Hiliger, who retreated into the shops. Approximately 1,500 Pullman shop employés were leaving various department workshops when Hiliger tried to escape. He ran through the car shop buildings, turning and firing at the pursuing policemen. Some of Hiliger's associates believed he was the victim of stickup men and joined in the chase, threatening Shannon.

This added to the confusion, and Hiliger had time to barricade himself in the brass foundry. Here he began to shoot it out with Shannon, who was soon rejoined by Devine.

After an exchange of twenty or thirty shots Hiliger was killed. He was found to have been shot eight times. When the two policemen walked out of the brass foundry an angry mob of 1,500 workers were waiting for them.

Many of the workers cannot understand English, and Shannon and Devine were having difficulty convincing the mob that they were policemen.

Saved by Clerk.

Their efforts had but little effect on the workers, who began to close in on the pair when Alexander De Lucak, chief clerk in the shops, climbed up on one of the loading platforms in front of the mob and shouted for order.

He succeded in quieting the mob and both policement were taken to the Pullman hospital.

When Sergt. James McCarthy of the Kensington station went to the Hiliger home he found a combination rifle and shotgun and about 500 cartridges. He questioned Mrs. Anna Hiliger, mother of the slain man, who said her son had been quarrelsome and abusive of late and for the last month had been continually taking medicine.

Chamberlin Fails to Equal Flight Record by 30 Minutes

Mitchell Field, L. I., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Clarence D. Chamberlin and Roger Q. Williams failed today by only 30 minutes and 7 seconds to equal the world's duration record. Their plane was in the air 51 hours, 52 minutes, and 24 seconds. Tonight, after examining their plane, they set a squad of mechanics to work on it with the hope that they may be able to take off again on Monday for the third attempt within a week.

Today's defeat when victory was so near came after a struggle against a series of mishaps that piled one on another for two days and nights. Most serious of all was a gasoline leak on Thursday night less than twelve hours after they took off.

Lose 60 Gallons of Gas.

Chamberlin leaned from his window to signal with a flash light and discovered the leak. How long it had been flowing the flyers could not say, but they believe that they lost sixty or more gallons before they discovered it. Quickly they closed the intake valve of the leaking tank and drained off as much as they could into the fuel lines. Then they used the right wing tank for the rest of the flight.

"Two and a half gallons more would have let us equal the record," Chamberlin said, "and even seven gallons would have given us the world's record again for the United States."

According to the rules of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale a record changes hands only when it is beaten by one hour. Thus, although Chamberlin and Williams surpassed in sustained flight by more than 40 minutes the record established last April by Chamberlin and Bert Acosta they have not even won a new American record. The world record of 52 hours, 22 minutes and 31 seconds is held in Germany.

Fight to Conserve Fuel.

This morning, about 7:30, the flyers noticed that the overflow from the gravity tank had ceased. This meant that only forty gallons were left. At once they began a desperate campaign of conservation. Everything that was not nailed down went over the side.

They kept the plane at almost a stalling angle and flew at 45 miles an hour, just fast enough to sustain altitude. At 8:30 they dropped the following note telling of their plight:

"Can't tell gas consumption with wing tank gauge gone. Only sure of staying up till noon. Have thrown everything overboard to reduce weight. Looks like we might possibly just make it."

A second note, cheery and facetious, was dropped at 10:45, telling more of the situation.

This note was addressed to A. R. Martine, sponsor of the flight and owner of the plane. Some time later they came down.

Arthur H. Gunther Elected Monarch of Aryan Grotto

Arthur H. Gunther was chosen monarch of the Aryan Grotto, it was announced yesterday following an election of officers. Frank Nieukirk was elected chief justice; R. G. Perkins, master of ceremonies; James Dodge, mokana; Thomas E. Davies, treasurer; Otto W. Hebel, secretary; and Arthur Clayson and Samuel Zorach Pincus, trustees. The new administration will take office at a party in the drill hall in the Capitol building, Jan. 18.

STUDY, TRAVEL FOR ALDERMEN; COST $260,000

Big Variety of Things to Be Surveyed.

Junkets, surveys, and investigations by committees of the city council will cost the tax payers an extra quarter of a million dollars this year under the appropriations voted by the aldermen in the new 1928 city budget.

Notwithstanding the lack of an increase for the police and fire forces, the councilmen boosted their own committee allotments from $601,000 in 1927 to $861,000 in 1928, an increase of $260,000, the largest on record. The committee items are in addition to $290,000 set aside for the council as a whole.

A comparative summary of the appropriations follows:

Committee.	1927.	1928.	Increase.
Finance	$ 98,456,	$148,632	$ 50,176
Local transit....	217,040	217,160	120
Streets and alleys	31,500	43,000	11,500
Railway term....	59,750	165,000	105,250
Gas, oil, elect...	43,500	65,000	21,500
Bldgs. and zoning	72,030	92,735	20,700
Judiciary	2,500	13,200	10,700
Schools	1,000	2,500	1,500
Harbors	58,000	33,000	*25,000
Health	300	300	....
Track elevation..	5,000	19,980	14,980
Police	300	300	....
Efficiency	1,600	20,000	18,400
Parks, playgds. ..	15,300	15,300	....
Traffic	New	30,000	30,000

*Decrease.

Virtually all of the extra sums listed in column three of the table will go for special activities, semi-administrative in nature.

To Study Truck Overloads.

The committee on efficiency, economy, and rehabilitation, for example, will spend $18,000 to investigate the problem of overloaded trucks and their wear and tear on pavements, a job seemingly belonging in the street bureau. Again, the judiciary committee has $10,000 for city planning, although that is the function of the Chicago plan commission.

Distribution of the moneys largely was a matter of trading in the finance committee, which drafted the budget. Twelve out of the fifteen committee chairmen are members of that committee.

One Instance of Trading.

For instance, Ald. O. F. Nelson [46th], chairman of the judiciary committee, secured the transfer of city planning [$10,000] to his committee from the parks and playgrounds committee, headed by Ald. Dorsey Crowe [41st]. Crowe protested and to placate him, the finance group boosted from $5,000 to $15,000 his committee's appropriation "for expenses incident to the conduct of athletic meets on city playgrounds." It may be noted that the city has an administrative department on parks and playgrounds.

Among the other committee tasks, sponsored by the various chairmen, and appropriated for are:

A survey of the school platoon system by Ald. John J. Hoellen's schools committee, $1,500.

A study of railway terminals by Ald. E. J. Kaindl's committee, $75,000.

A survey of fire and police signal systems by Ald. Jacob Arvey's gas, oil, and electricity committee, $55,000.

Revision of the building code by Ald. W. R. O'Toole's building and zoning committee, $10,000.

A survey of railroad street subways by Ald. John Toman's track elevation committee, $10,000.

In addition to these special new surveys for 1928 are those continuing from year to year, such as that of the finance committee on tax valuation, $50,000 and the transportation committee for transit studies, $200,000.

The entire finance committee went to Washington last fall to interview the war department on water meters. Shortly afterward the gas-oil committee studied police and fire alarms in New York. This committee now is in Washington to interview Postmaster General New on a pneumatic tube mail system for Chicago.

After an eastern trip, costing the city $200 to $500 for each of them, the committeemen frequently spend a few holidays in Montreal or Quebec, refreshing themselves after their labors.

The committee appropriations, unlike those of other departments of the municipal government, seldom are scrutinized by the finance committee's staff of experts.

All of the appropriations for this year now are complete and final, unless changed by the veto of Mayor Thompson. He has until today's meeting of the council to recommend any changes he sees fit.

Second $9,000 Check

In less than two weeks $18,000 has been paid to holders of two of THE TRIBUNE's accident insurance policies. on Jan. 6 Mrs. Mary Harrison of Hinsdale was given a $9,000 check for the death of her son, Samuel, who was killed Nov. 16, 1927, in a railroad accident.

Yesterday Mrs. Eva Grave Wicklander of Highwood was likewise given a $9,000 check for the death of her husband, Harry, who was killed on Nov. 30, 1927, in an accident on the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee railway at Highwood.

Harry Wicklander was known for twenty years among his fellow workers on the North Shore line as a motorman with a record of few accidents. Three years ago he paid $1 for one of THE TRIBUNE's $7,500 accident insurance policies. Twice he renewed the policy and when his wife collected the insurance check yesterday she received $9,000, representing the original face of the policy and the two ten per cent additions accrued with the two renewals.

EARLY DAYS OF 1928 INCREASE BUILDING PACE

There is no evident decline in Chicago's building progress, according to the report of the Illinois Federation corporation. Building permits issued for the first twelve days of 1928 show a marked increase over the volume of construction for the same period of 1927. They total $9,815,400, as compared with $7,656,500 for the twelve days last year.

This winter to date has been an unusually good one for building—weather conditions have been favorable for construction of large projects, it is stated. Practically all wage agreements of Chicago building trades were signed for a three year period and contracts do not expire until 1929. This insures peaceful relations between the trades and contractors, according to the report.

Insull Tells Main Street Opera's Plans to Help It

Singers and singers' managers, amateur musicians and professional critics, orchestra conductors and laymen, some six hundred altogether, gathered in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel yesterday for the Civic Music association's luncheon, which closed the three-day convention of that organization in Chicago. The associations are composed of concert managers of 120 cities in the middle west and south, who meet here annually to discuss their programs.

On the speakers' program at the luncheon were Dr. Charles Mayo of Rochester, Minn., and Samuel Insull.

"The function of the physician," said Dr. Mayo, "is to make people healthy; that of the musician, to make them happy. And hearing really is happiness. Deaf people are almost always morose and unhappy. The blind, on the other hand, develop a sixth sense and are never miserable.

Pictures Unhappy Retired Men.

"There is a pathetic unhappiness, too," Dr. Mayo continued, "in the picture of retired men at their leisure in places like Florida. Most of them have spent themselves on their vocations, have developed no avocations and so can do nothing but sit idly in the sun."

Mr. Insull spoke on "The Relation of Big Business to Music," which, he said, is largely that of financing musical undertakings.

"We as a nation have grown rich beyond the dreams of avarice," he stated, "and now it is up to us to develop the finer side of life. Nothing can do that for us better than an interest in music.

"The purpose of the Chicago Civic Opera organization is to give the public the best in opera at a nominal cost. We have popular performances, and we have private performances, of which the public knows nothing.

Tickets Sold to Employés.

"Individual corporations take over the whole Auditorium, sell the tickets to their employés for 25 cents to $2 and I assure you the house is always packed, and with audiences that are not only enthusiastic, but appreciative.

"Each year we send the Civic Opera organization to smaller cities throughout the country, at great expense, and with little return. What we want to do is to take opera to more of the small towns, to take the best artists, but cut down on orchestra, scenery and personnel expense so that the whole enterprise will be less costly but equally good.

"We also are trying to create a fund to help students, so that young people of promise without means for instruction may be given aid."

Hearing on Rail Wage Award Set for Jan. 20

United States Judge George A. Carpenter yesterday set Jan. 20 as the date for hearing of arguments on a motion to make final award in the granting of a wage increase to firemen and engineers on all western railroads. The men were granted an increase on Dec. 17 by the members of the arbitration board in Denver. The railroads are contesting the award on the ground that their representatives were not present when it was made.

Judge Normoyle Heads Chicago Law Institute

Circuit Judge Denis J. Normoyle yesterday was elected president of the Chicago Law institute. Other officers chosen are: Ambrose A. Worsley, first vice president; John D. FROM all parts of the North and East, farmers have moved South to Greater Prosperity and Happiness

THE GREAT Central South served by this Railroad beckons you to join the other successful farmers from the North and East who have abandoned the high-priced lands and congested conditions in their old neighborhood to move to a country where living conditions are ideal, where there are no housing problems, no congested schools, where labor is plentiful, roads are good and churches of every denomination abundant. Read on this page the actual experiences of men who have done the things possible for you to do.

Mr. E. A. Beeler, for twenty years stockman in Montana, located in Montgomery County, Alabama, and found the South most favorable for breeding and keeping of sheep for wool, and for the production of spring lambs. Mr. Beeler states that on May 15 he marketed 81-pound lambs. It is very common for lambs raised there to average 70 to 75 pounds. Mr. Beeler also said he had found native grasses, such as Bermuda paspalum and carpet grass, which were good for sheep growing.

Mr. J. H. Sellers, a former resident of Kansas, located in Central Alabama, and Mr. C. W. Rittenour, formerly of Ohio, also located in the same section, are breeders of beef cattle and have found the southern country especially favorable for producing beef at a low figure.

Dairy farming is growing by leaps and bounds in the South. Many Northern farmers now located there have fine herds. Mr. T. S. Smith, of Massachusetts, who located at Brewton, Ala., many years ago, starting on a small scale, today has a large, pure-bred Jersey herd which brings fine profits. The long pasturage season, the pure water, and the good demand for dairy products are advantageous for Southern dairy farming.

Soy beans is one of the many profitable legume crops of the South. Elmer Kuhn, R. V. Coesens, and other Northern farmers located in Baldwin County, Ala., made two tons of soy-bean hay to the acre. E. L. Curtis, Irvington, Ala., another Northern man, in 1927 made two tons of soy-bean hay, and two and one-half tons of Mong-bean hay to the acre. A. J. Sermon, Baldwin County, Ala., made in 1927, 325 bushels of sweet potatoes to the acre. In the Gulf Coast section sweet potatoes usually run 200 or more bushels to the acre, and is one of the many cash crops of the South.

Mr. C. E. Pleas, Chipley, Fla., formerly from the North, started on January 1, 1926, with 105 Barred Rock hens. His invoice at the end of the year showed he had made $913.70 from his flock; and then had 131 layers, 136 chicks, and other birds.

A new fruit for the Gulf Coast region is the blueberry. Probably 2,000 acres of blueberry orchards are now in bearing or growing. Older orchards have given owners profits as high as $600.00 an acre. Mr. Harry Kitt, a Northern man, is one of the successful blueberry growers in Northwest Florida. He is located at Crestview.

Read the above statements again. Are you prospering in the North as these folks have prospered and are prospering in the South?

Write today to Mr. G. A. Park, General Immigration and Industrial Agent, Dept. C. T.-2, Louisville & Nashville Railroad, Louisville, Ky., telling him your experience in farming, poultry or cattle raising and just what sort of lands you are interested in. You will receive a prompt reply.

AUTO MISHAPS TAKE TOLL OF 9 MORE LIVES

Crane College Girl Killed in After Party Crash.

Two girls, two boys and five men died yesterday of injuries received in automobile accidents. The fatalities increased the Cook county motor toll to 34 for the first fourteen days of 1928.

One of the girl victims was Helen Martin, 18 years old, 3110 Belle Plaine avenue, a student at Crane Junior college. She was killed early in the day while on the way home from a cabaret party.

The automobile in which she was riding collided with a car driven by Edward Frank, 32, of 1313 South Troy street, at Madison street and Sacramento boulevard. A friend, Miss Helen Silver, 17, of 2006 Howe street was cut by flying glass. The girls' escorts, Arthur Frank and Erwin Kaplan, both 18, escaped injury.

Another Girl Is Victim.

Injuries received Friday night caused the death of Florence Danno, 17, of 815 South Irving avenue. She was struck at Ogden avenue and Jackson boulevard by an automobile operated by I. J. Reses, 1642 South Lawndale avenue.

Bernard Brinks, 14, of 3820 West Ohio street, a helper on a truck owned by Louis Pupo, 522 North Hamlin avenue, was fatally hurt when the truck skidded in front of 5521 West Van Buren street and he was jolted off. He died at Austin hospital.

Thomas Slater, 7, of 430 North State street, died of injuries received when he was run over by a coal truck.

Edward Lundy, 50, of 6351 South Hamilton avenue, who was knocked down by an automobile Friday at Hamilton avenue and 63d street, died at Englewood hospital. He had been a fireman in the city hall for the last twenty years. Carl Olson, 6545 South Troy street, driver of the car, was charged with manslaughter.

Pedestrian of 74 Dies.

James Drobny, 74, of 5643 South Laflin street, died of injuries suffered Thursday when he was hit at 55th street and Ashland avenue by a car driven by George Ladash, 5806 South Elizabeth street.

Injuries received Thursday when he ran into the path of an automobile at 19th street and Ashland avenue caused the death of Leo Lebarski, 37, of 2612 West 47th street.

Thomas Wallace, 25, colored, 4147 Indiana avenue, died last night at the Wilson hospital from injuries caused when he was struck an hour earlier by the automobile of W. J. Dailey, 1128 Farwell avenue, at 42d street and South Park way.

E. H. Siebel, 647 Junior terrace, was fatally injured early today when the automobile which he was driving was struck by a taxicab at Clarendon and Montrose avenues. He died at the Lakeview hospital.

Judge Michael Feinberg yesterday denied a new trial to William Klotz, 37, of 2706 South Karlov avenue and imposed a sentence of one year to life in the penitentiary. Klotz was convicted by a jury last November on a charge of manslaughter after his automobile had caused the death of Burr Buffum, 6, of 2215 West 23d street.

MOVE TO SHOOT ALL STRAY DOGS MEETS A CHECK

Fail to Find Authority in Chicago Law.

There will be no wholesale extermination of stray dogs by the police—at least not in the near future.

That was indicated yesterday in an official report from the office of Corporation Counsel Ettleson, whose assistants for several days have searched their law books to find legal grounds for the action, recommended by Health Commissioner Kegel to curb the prevailing epidemic of rabies. No such grounds were found, it was said.

Meanwhile several more persons were bitten by vicious dogs yesterday. Evanston police killed a dog after it had attacked three children and a woman. Another dog was killed on the south side after biting a man.

Dog Runs Wild in Evanston.

Mrs. W. J. Hermeman, 718 Dobson street, was the first victim of the dog which ran wild in Evanston. Running down the street, the frenzied animal then bit Chester Legg, 10, of 2706 Hartzell street, William Cook, 10, and his brother, John, 12, of 2220 Hartzell street. It bit a dozen other dogs in the neighborhood before being shot.

Martin Dykema, 26 years old, an automobile repairman, was attacked by a stray white mongrel while working on his car in front of his home at 1435 South Ashland avenue. He killed it with a hammer after it had bitten him three times.

The heads of both animals were sent to the Chicago health department for examination while the victims were given the Pasteur treatment.

Two Paths to "Shoot" Order.

Two ways are open to make legal the "shoot stray dogs on sight" order to the Chicago police, the corporation counsel's attorneys found. The city council may pass a new dog ordinance or the board of health may declare that an emergency exists and arbitrarily order the shootings as a temporary measure. Should either course be pursued, all dogs loose on the streets would be immediately shot, officials said.

Informed of the corporation counsel's findings, Dr. Kegel declined to announce his plan until the ruling is formally delivered.

"The public should understand, however," he said, "that the law as it now stands authorizes the police to pick up all unmuzzled or unleashed dogs and take them to the dog pound, where, after being held for three days, they may be destroyed. So if a person wants to protect his dog, he had better keep it shut up or on a leash."

Ask Aid of Dog Owners.

Health commissioners of all north shore suburbs during the day urged citizens to coöperate with them in the prevention of rabies by keeping their dogs muzzled or otherwise under restraint. Their action followed a report from the state laboratories that the head of a dog which bit Willis O. Erne of Schiller avenuee and Ridge road, Winnetka, showed a positive case of rabies.

The dog was Erne's. He said it had acted queerly and after several days suddenly turned on him and bit his arm. He had been under treatment with anti-rabies serum for several days when the laboratories report was made yesterday.

PLAN TO RESUME FLORIDA FIGHT IN HARRINGTON CASE

The four year old fight to obtain from Mrs. Harriette Harrington, $100,000 worth of property in Palm Beach, Fla., to apply on claims of $1,600,000 against her husband, Leslie Harrington, in the bankruptcy court here, will be resumed next month in Palm Beach, it was announced there yesterday by Albert B. Fordham, one of the attorneys for the creditors.

Harrington was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment several years ago after he had fled Chicago leaving behind him hundreds of foreign born investors in his get rich quick land schemes from whom he was alleged to have obtained about $6,000,000.

Properties which Fred E. Hummel, trustee in bankruptcy, is trying to wrest from Mrs. Harrington include a Palm Beach apartment and three parcels of land there. It is alleged Mrs. Harrington acquired them with money given her by her husband.

RUN OVER BY STREET CAR, DIES.

Injuries inflicted at noon yesterday when he was run over by a street car at Monroe street and Wabash avenue caused the death last night in St. Luke's hospital of Robert Chisholm, 74, of 1418 Van Buren street.

THE WILKES PRECEDENT BACK OF SMITH.

Smith of Illinois and Vare of Pennsylvania, after a holiday rest, went back to Washington to learn what the senate proposes to do with them and their certificates of election and, if that action is contemplated as they think it is, to prevent it. They want the seats to which the people of their states elected them and persons who like a heavyweight fight in the constitutional ring are at the ring side.

In Vare's case there is an attempt to prove that corruption of the electorate entered into the processes of his getting a certificate of election, in the primaries if not in the election. The real reason is that he spent a large sum of money in defeating a sitting senator who spent more. In Smith's case there were public acts not affecting his election but discrediting his public character. It is not alleged that the election or even the nomination were corruptly influenced. When the people elected Smith they knew all the facts the senate knows.

In the argument for the seating of the two senators elect there has been much reference to John Wilkes. There is a town of considerable importance in Vare's state named for Wilkes and for another British parliamentarian, Isaac Barre, but Pennsylvanians did not name it. Connecticut Yankees did when they were claiming, invading and settling the Wyoming valley of the Susquehanna valley in Penn's colony. Maj. John Durkee of the Susquehanna Land Company of Connecticut named the settlement Wilkes-Barre in the summer of 1769, when he planted it in an agricultural region over unknown anthracite beds.

Wilkes was expelled from parliament in February of that year and when the Americans learned of his fight with the ministry and its consequences Durkee named a town for him, adding the name of one of his supporters, Barre, the man who also had termed the Americans "Sons of Freedom," a name they adopted for their revolutionary organizations.

Wilkes was expelled because six years before, as a Whig publisher, he had intimated that George III. and his ministers were liars. The king's speech to parliament had praised the peace just realized with France and its allies as a good and advantageous peace. Wilkes in the North Briton, which he published, said that the king had given the "sanction of his sacred name to the most odious measure and to the most unjustifiable public declaration from a throne ever renowned for truth, honor, and unsullied virtue."

Wilkes' town is in Vare's state, but his case resembles Smith's in that the ministerial majority at the king's wish declared that a constituency could not elect a man of his character. The constituency, that of Middlesex, said it could and it did. The Whig publisher was a rare character, even for his day. He could be dignified. He was witty. He was also profane and obscene, and if that distinguished him in the Georgian period it was notable. He was ugly and fascinating. Dr. Johnson said he could attract any woman from any handsome man in fifteen minutes. He was traveled, educated abroad, a publisher of classics, and a declared friend of freedom, which he admitted was a pose.

He not only offended by the original publication of his remarks on the king's speech, but by reprinting it and at the same time he reprinted it he printed thirteen copies of an "Essay on Women," an obscene parody of Pope's "Essay on Man," written by a friend. The king had still another grudge. When Wilkes and his Whig friends wanted to be merry at Tory expense they made use of a petticoat and a Scotch bonnet in allusion to the scandal rumor that Lord Bute, Scotchman and prime minister, was the paramour of the princess dowager, George's mother.

Wilkes had been tried and sentenced for both publications and had gone to France. For that he had been declared an outlaw. The house of commons had voted him guilty of seditious libel and had expelled him. After several years in France he returned and asked for pardon, which was refused. He submitted himself to the Middlesex electorate for parliament and was elected. The house of commons expelled him in February, 1769, declaring that a constituency could not elect a man of his character. He was reëlected two weeks later and the election was annulled in parliament. He was reëlected in March and again in April, when he was given 1,143 votes and Col. Luttrell, the ministerial candidate put up against him, had only 296. Nevertheless, the house voted that Col. Luttrell "ought to have been returned." It was not until 1782 that parliament passed an annually renewed motion expunging from the journal the resolution of 1769 declaring Wilkes incapable of election.

The contest covered many years, involved many people and more than one issue. The ministry had been rash enough to use a general warrant in making the original arrests and took in upwards of forty suspects, many of whom later got substantial judgments in court. Parliament passed an act forbidding the use of the general warrant as a drag net.

The parliamentary question was the right of a constituency versus the right of the legislative body to decide as to the character of a representative and in this British precedent the constituency eventually won.

TEMPERANCE AND PROHIBITION.

London Punch began the new year by dropping liquor advertisements from its columns. Punch is the social commentator for the nicest caste in England, for the nearly perfect type of Englishman of the high tradition who wins with a deprecatory shrug and dies with a smile. We doubt that he quite exists, but tradition is the better for having him. He is not dry. One cannot conceive of him being dry or, if he happened to be an abstainer, ever dreaming of suggesting that any one else should be. Nevertheless Punch drops the provocative liquor advertisements.

THE TRIBUNE adopted the same policy years ago when national prohibition was the least plausible prospect in legislation and when the Anti-Saloon league, which THE TRIBUNE was supporting, had as its chief ambition in Illinois legislation which would enable the people by counties to decide whether they would have saloons or not. The liquor traffic was regarded in this office as something which, in good public policy, did not require stimulation and should not have it in these columns. If men would drink that was their business unless their habits resulted in injuries to others. For that situation Illinois had a good set of laws, intended to restrain the drunkard and to protect his family and the community.

If those laws had been enforced nothing more would have been necessary. Temperance and abstinence were being preached constantly and a heavy drinker, even if otherwise reputable, had an uncertain place in society and even felt the reproach of most of his friends. In a civilization in which the adult is supposed to be mature, reasoning, and intelligent, it was a much more wholesome condition than now prevails. The good laws were not enforced or were not well enforced, nor is prohibition now, and it, denying that people are mature, reasoning, and intelligent, has produced its own great and peculiar evils.

We revert to this older period to recall that when the object was to attack the abuses of the liquor traffic, the vices of the saloon, and the evils of intemperance, when the effort was consistent with other and larger principles of American government and of individual rights and responsibilities, the wet TRIBUNE was dry. In this respect the wet TRIBUNE is dry now. It merely refuses to degrade its ideas of proper government, of decent citizenship, of individual rights, of American tolerance, of honest administration, and of public morality to the present prohibition level.

THE ARMY AND NAVY CRITICS.

Arthur Sears Henning writes from Washington that for the first time in the memory of living men the army and the navy are completely gagged. Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall was reported to have made certain statements—a report he later denied—concerning the army housing situation. Despite the fact that army housing is known to be disgraceful, he was recalled from a tour of inspection and, despite his explanation of having been misquoted, he was not permitted to resume his tour. Rear Admiral Thomas P. Magruder wrote an article criticizing the navy for extravagance, particularly in the matter of maintaining unnecessary navy yards. He was summarily deprived of his command of the Philadelphia navy yard and haled to Washington to be kept in the corner as an example.

It means that no army or navy officer will dare to speak anything but praise of his service for fear of similar punishment. Such a situation cannot but hurt the national defense. It means that the services will be officered by timid men afraid of their jobs, and the public will lose confidence in a national establishment criticism of which can come only from censored or interested sources.

In the interest of ordinary efficiency as well as of military discipline it is of course clear that every malcontent cannot be permitted to mount a soap box and give voice to his troubles. But if generals and admirals are not qualified to talk, then who are to be the services' diagnosticians? The American people are interested in freedom of speech and, just now unless we are mistaken, they are particularly interested in maintaining an efficient and adequate national defense. Extreme gag rule, such as Mr. Henning describes, will call out no enthusiastic approval from the public.

Editorial of the Day

THE DOLLAR GOES ABROAD.

[New York World.]

According to tentative estimates of the department of commerce, the foreign loans floated in the United States during 1927 reached the record total of $1,574,960,000. Only the loans publicly offered are included in this tabulation, but it also contains a certain amount of refunding issues which do not represent new advances of capital. With these issues deducted, the net amount of new public offerings of foreign securities during the year was $1,376,592,000.

This does not tell quite the whole story. Dr. Max Winkler, a close student of the foreign credit situation, estimates that the net public offerings, along with private loans, acquisitions of foreign properties not involving the sale of securities and extensions of credit running for a year or more, reached a grand total last year of at least $2,000,000,000. Dr. Winkler estimates the total value of American investments in foreign countries at $14,500,000,000. The department of commerce puts the figure at $13,000,000,000. Either sum is sufficiently impressive, and there is no indication as yet of any diminution of the outward flow of American capital. In the last quarter of 1927 the public flotations of foreign issues were 23 per cent greater than in the corresponding period of 1926.

It seems reasonable, therefore, to expect further expansion during the coming year. Obviously, as the quantity of flotations increases the need of rigid scrutiny of their quality becomes constantly more important. During the past year there were occasions when the attractive interest rates or the large underwriting profits incident to foreign issues tended to outweigh considerations of the investment quality of the security. It is clearly incumbent upon bankers and others who influence the investment market to exert their influence against the repetition of any such tendencies in 1928.

LETTERS OF A BISHOP TO HIS FLOCK

BY HIS EMINENCE GEORGE CARDINAL MUNDELEIN

Archbishop of the Catholic diocese of Chicago.

(Composed of extracts from the book His Eminence recently published with the above title, printed by permission of His Eminence and the publishers, Benziger Bros.)

CATHOLIC CHARITIES. "I once heard an old philosopher say to his boy: 'Son, the only things a dead man holds in his hands are the things he has given away.' No truer word was ever spoken, and no wiser counsel could possibly be given to the faithful of Chicago, now that they stand at the start of their campaign for the support of their many charities. Many who hear or read these words will have passed into the hereafter before another twelvemonth will have ended. It may be the bishop who writes them, the priest who reads them, or the youth who listens to them; and the only things they will bring with them will be 'the things they have given away.' The sacrifices we have brought, the services we have rendered, the blessings we have shared, the money we have given to Christ, to His cause, to the poor, the sick, the orphan, the destitute, the ignorant even, His wards, those whom He bequeathed to us when He said: 'Amen, I say to you, as long as you did it to one of these, my least brethren, you did it to me' (Matt. xxv., 40)—these are the things, and these alone, that will count. For then neither faith alone, nor even a belated appeal, 'Lord, Lord!' will help us any, for without the good works to show, the one is dead and the other will fall on dead ears.

"Perhaps the greatest gainer of our organized Catholic charities has been the city of Chicago. We Catholics are proud of that contribution we have made to its citizenship, which we have recruited and built up from the orphan waifs of a big city. We feel that we may have added to the contentment of this community. And because of the laymen's share in this annual appeal for funds and their closer knowledge of our charitable work we have helped to increase the confidence of our Catholic people and the respect of our neighbors for the church and her benevolent work in our city. And while it is true that the Savior did promise the reward to the charitable even when their charity did not always reach the most worthy, yet there is a human satisfaction in knowing that one's charity reaches recipients that are worthy and is economically administered."

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS. "The instructions will make clear to us how these Ten Commandments, sometimes called the Decalogue, were first given by God to Moses on Mount Sinai, and later when Christ came, these same commandments were retained by Him. He did not add to their number, nor did He detract therefrom, but He did broaden their scope so as to add an interior observance, as we can readily see from the reading of the Gospels (Matt. v.). We shall see how in the old law the first three commandments regulated man's relations with his Creator, the other seven his relations with his neighbor; but in the new law the Divine Lawgiver included in them the curb He has placed on our thoughts and desires, the restraint He has put on our irregular appetites. In this way He has perfected the law.

"The experience of many centuries has shown us that the better a people are instructed in the laws and commandments of God, the more observant they are of them; the oftener and the more carefully the laws of God are explained to them, first in school and later from time to time from the altar and the pulpit, the deeper and more lasting are these engraved on their hearts and the more vividly do they rise before their consciences.

"In the present disturbed condition in which the civilized world is plunged there are offered to us cures and nostrums and untried theories of every kind. How simple is the real remedy! If the commandments of God as taught by Christ and interpreted by His church were observed by rulers and their subjects, how complete and how salutary would be the change! Again would sanity and moderation return and peace and tranquillity reign everywhere in the world. For who can deny that it is the violation of God's commandments, the lust of possession of lands and territories of others, that has created the vast standing armies; that the stealing away of another's life or property has built up the strong prison walls; that the spirit of hate and strife and discord crowds our courtrooms with disputants and their litigations?"

DIVINE REVELATION. "It is indeed necessary that we dwell repeatedly on divine revelation, for revelation is the very keystone of the arch; on it rests the entire structure of our faith; without it the whole structure crumbles. We may know that there is a God from the creatures about us, but we can learn but little further of Him from that same source. And if we cannot know Him, we surely will not love Him. Nor can we serve Him unless He tells us how, what He wants us to do in order to please Him. And He alone can reveal these things; so that revelation is necessary if we look forward to happiness hereafter. Otherwise we sink to the very level of the brute creation and all would be over after a few years here below. In like manner, if God revealed His truths and laws, these must remain unchanged, not become the playthings of men or vary with different races or changing times or different climes. There can be no question that we sorely need more preaching and teaching of a supernatural religion.

"Professing Christians are willing indeed to accept a Christ, the healer, or the multiplier of the loaves and fishes, but are not so ready to listen to Christ the lawgiver. A revealed religion is repugnant to the masses because it entails self-denial here, a strict accounting at the end, and eternal retribution in an after life. And yet, for the general well being of the community in which we live, not to speak of eternal salvation of the individual, we ought to dwell often on the subject of a revealed religion. A prominent lawyer recently said: 'You cannot expect to raise a boy properly unless you teach him that there is a hell, and that unless he watches himself very carefully he is sure to land in it.' We have had quite a few samples of juvenile viciousness in this city recently where boys and girls had neither the instruction nor the restraint of real religion to hold them. While we are naturally concerned with the well being of our community, yet we are even more concerned with the eternal salvation of the faithful under our care, and we know only too well that where the moral tone of the former is lowered we can hardly expect that the latter escape contamination. There is just the one thing to do—to apply the antidote of repeated instruction for growing children, and adults as well, in supernatural religion, which brings with it the restraint of moral obligation."

WAR AND PEACE. "The great war is over; it has made a terrific gap in the world. We must now busy ourselves to fill in and bridge over that gap. It has caused a deep wound in the human race. We must help that wound to heal. It has made enemies of millions who before were friends. We must now bring about a reconciliation. It will be an impossible task for you or me to do that alone; but if each one of us does his share in this work, if we show ourselves constantly in earnest, then our example is going to be infectious, and others will help it along. They, too, will impress and convince others, and soon results will show.

"Peace, as we understand it, means forgetting past injuries, resumption of former friendly relations between nations, even as between individuals. Peace means the splicing of the break in the cable, the bridging of the chasm, the rebuilding of the road torn up by the war; otherwise the wound remains open, and an open wound will fester and grow worse, the world will suffer because there is no healthy circulation in the human race, and mankind will deteriorate instead of becoming better. It will take courage sometimes, for the unthinking will perhaps cast suspicion on your loyalty. Yet why need you care? Has not your loyalty in the war stood the test? Has not your devotion been proven? After all, is that not real reconstruction to restore to their accustomed places the many interests that have been jangled out of place?"

How to Keep Well By Dr. W. A. Evans

To the limit of space questions pertinent to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

WASHINGTON AND BRATIANO.

THERE was considerable resemblance between the cases of Bratiano, the recently deceased Roumanian prime minister, and that of George Washington. The parallel carries beyond the immediate domain of disease.

The Roumanian and his family were largely responsible for the position and security of Roumania, just as Washington played his part in the same phases of American life. The diagnosis of the disease, in both instances, provoked considerable disagreement among physicians not in attendance, and led to controversy in the papers at the time and afterwards.

The official diagnosis in Washington's case was cynanche. It was contended by some he died from diphtheria; by others from pneumonia; while some said his doctors killed him. The disputation as to the cause of death of Bratiano follows almost the same lines. There should be no doubt as to what was the nature of Washington's fatal disorder, and the probability is that the Roumanian chief had the same disease.

Cynanche was the name for the time of a disease the nature of which was recognized before Washington's day. Under another name it persists. The name came from Edinburgh, the physicians of which school dominated the American medicine of the period. However, the name can be found in the reports of vital statistics of Chicago practically one hundred years after the death of Washington. It was a form of streptococcus sore throat, of which there are several. In the ordinary sore throat, the kind that causes white spots on the tonsils, streptococci are found. They are in these white patches, just as diphtheria bacilli are in the white membranes which characterize diphtheria.

In quinsy the streptococci are deeper in the tissues. They cause abscesses in the tonsils, rather than patches on them. Sometimes these abscesses are so deep that they get into sheaths of muscles, whereupon they bore their way up or down, deep in the tissues of the neck.

Then there is a septic sore throat, also a disease due to streptococci, but one which is chronically quite different from either of the other two. Cynanche, Washington's disease, was a form of streptococci sore throat. It probably was nearer the quinsy type than it was the follicular tonsillitis, or patch on the tonsils, type on the one hand or the septic sore throat type on the other.

The newspaper evidence indicates that the Roumanian prime minister had a septic sore throat which, in Washington's time, would have been called cynanche. Some said he had diphtheria, but there was no bacteriologic proof. Some even said his doctors were negligent. Until we get a fuller equipment of antitoxins or something of that order for the streptococci disorders, the doctors in attendance must occasionally come in for blame which they do not deserve.

ROOT OF HALITOSIS.

Mrs. E. W. S. writes: What is the cause of halitosis, or unpleasant breath? What will correct it?

Could the cutting of wisdom teeth cause this?

REPLY.

Among the causes are nose, tonsil and tooth troubles, and digestive fermentations, or something similar thereto.

If the trouble is in the nose, nasal sinuses, tonsils or teeth, these should be cared for.

If the digestive tract is at fault the diet should be changed. Sour milk preparations of various sorts, including acidophilus milk and dextro lactose are of great service.

UNBOILED WATER SAFE.

Mrs. H. S. writes: My mother says my baby, who is just 1 year old, should not have plain sink water, and that I should boil it before giving it to him. I have been giving it to him for the last two months without my mother's knowledge. He seems to enjoy it better than boiled water.

REPLY:

It is safe to give your baby unboiled water.

SOUNDS REASONABLE.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I occupy an apartment in a fifty-three flat building. The lease I signed is a stock form wherein it is mentioned that baby buggies are not allowed in the front vestibule. No other provision is made for baby buggies and the landlord expects us to keep them in the laundry. For the welfare of a three months' old baby can the owner compel me to insert and remove a child from the buggy in the open air at this season? Three buggies can be placed in the vestibule without obstructing the passageway.
A. A. B.

We consider the landlord's requirement a reasonable one.

SUE FOR RIP IN PANTS.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A neighbor of mine, presumably to protect the parkway in front of his premises, has wood stakes about a foot apart, with wire stretched between. The job was done so that the wire projected from the end of the stakes. As I was passing my trousers were caught by the wire, causing me to receive a severe tumble and destroying my trousers. Can I make the neighbor pay for the damage to me?
J. H. B.

Yes. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NOT ON FACTS STATED.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Is a license necessary for a party desiring to engage in the business of loaning small sums of money [$50 to $100], where the interest rate will be six per cent per annum, payments to be made weekly or monthly? In addition to the interest charge there probably will be a charge of one to two per cent as insurance to provide for the canceling of the note in the event of the death of the borrower.
H. P. S.

No license would necessarily be required on the bare facts stated.

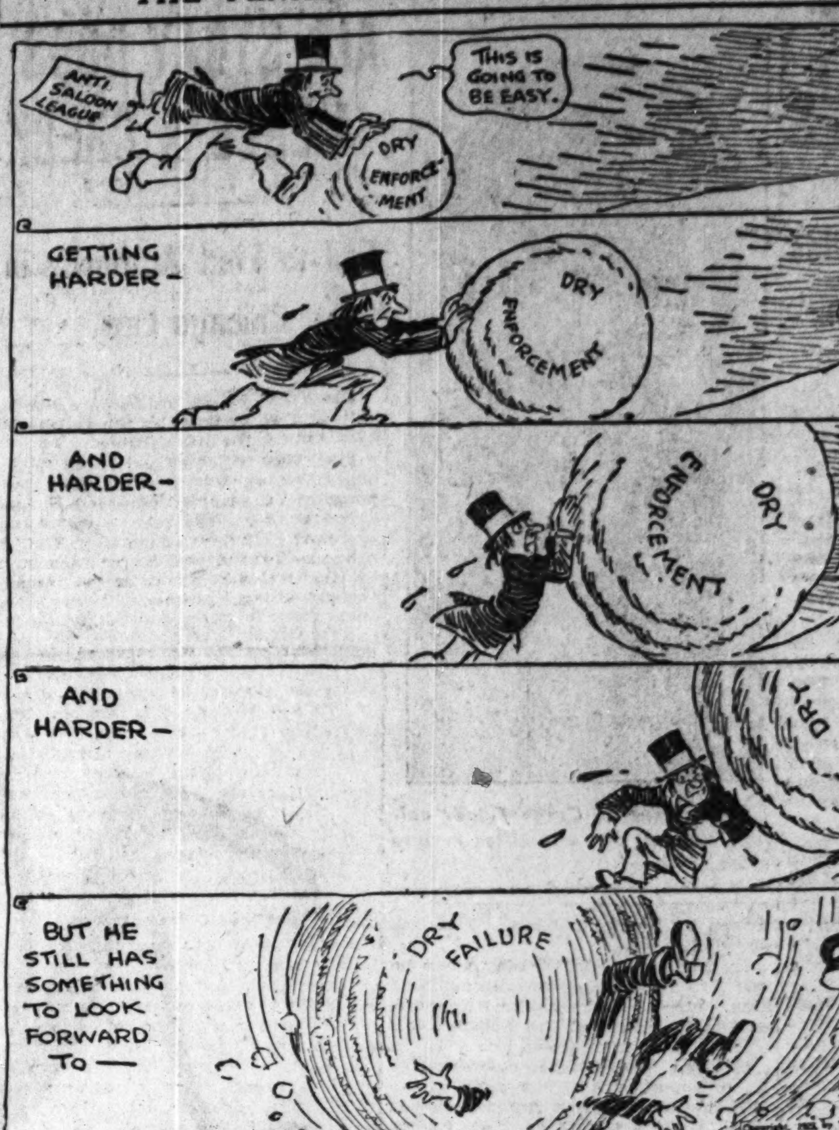
THE PENALTY OF NOT KNOWING WHEN TO STOP



FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 15, 1863.

HEADQUARTERS, Army of the Cumberland.—The army is gradually extending its lines in the direction of the rebels, though no movement of importance will likely be made for some days. The rebels are scouting around in every direction. Gen. Wheeler and his rebel command passed up on our left with 2,500 cavalry and three guns, within 48 hours. His avowed object is to capture our wagon trains.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Cyrus W. Field of New York, now here, has presented to the government an offer from Glass, Elliott & Co. of London to manufacture and submerge cables connecting all points between Washington and New Orleans. The committee on naval affairs is studying the proposition.

CAIRO.—Gen. McClernand has assumed command of the entire force formerly under Gen. Sherman, the latter having charge of the First division. An expedition of Gen. McClernand and Admiral Porter has started up the Arkansas river to break up the rebel positions along that stream.

NASHVILLE.—Morgan, with 3,000 rebels, again is in Kentucky, and further damage to the railroads is apprehended.

CHICAGO.—The Chicago Gas Light and Coke company elected the following directors: Hugh T. Dickey, S. B. Cobb, B. W. Raymond, E. I. Tinkham, J. Beecher, Solomon A. Smith, P. L. Yoe, B. S. Morris, and Henry Young, the latter of New York.

CHICAGO.—The "Tribune Almanac" for 1863 is on sale at McNally & Co.'s, 81 Dearborn street.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 15, 1903.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—A company of the Illinois National Guard stopped a scheduled prize fight between Ole Oleson of Chicago and "Kid" Williams of Philadelphia before the Olympic Athletic club. The managers defied the mayor's order that the fight should not take place and ignored Gov. Yates' warning that he would enforce the mayor's order with troops if necessary. Three hundred men, including some legislators, were in the hall when the soldiers marched in with fixed bayonets.

WASHINGTON.—One of the most radical propositions yet made to settle the coal problem was offered in the house by Representative Jenkins of Wisconsin, chairman of the judiciary committee. His resolution provides that the government shall both seize and operate not only the coal mines but the transportation companies which carry the product, and in this way distribute coal to the people.

CHICAGO.—Miss Pauline Lyon and Calvin Fentress were married, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Lyon, 72 Astor street, by the Rev. W. R. Notman.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 15, 1918.

CHICAGO.—While 150,000 or more men employed in steel mills and other great plants in towns around Chicago were idle yesterday, due to the storm and shortage of fuel, three Chicago packing plants temporarily suspended work. Drastic measures, including the holding up of coal contracts, were taken by the coal authorities. By these steps ample fuel is promised for homes. More snow and colder weather was the prediction.

LONDON.—A successful daylight air raid was made on Karlsruhe, according to a British official report. Despite heavy anti-aircraft fire, the British airmen dropped one and a quarter tons of bombs with excellent results.

CHICAGO.—John J. O'Connor, associate manager of the central division of the American Red Cross, and Mrs. Louise Flower, who has been superintendent of the lower north side district for the United Charities, were married at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. W. W. McFarland, 220 North Parkside avenue.

CHICAGO.—Lieut. Howard H. Logan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan, 1150 Lake Shore drive, is back from Serbia, where he was a member of the Red Cross commission, to be married this week to Miss Helen Hart Brosius, daughter of the late Silas Brosius, 5492 Cornell avenue.

THE UNIVERSAL TONGUE.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—You conclude your recent editorial, "The Borrowing of Words," with the lamentable words that "the world is still a long way from having a universal language. . . ."

It does not require a philologist nor historian to know the power and extent of the Latin language which once ruled the world. Every schoolboy knows its extent when Rome was in its glory and when Cæsar ruled, and even later. Latin is taught today in every corner of the globe—in every school from grammar to university—and wherever it is thus taught it is also spoken, however indifferently, by pupil and also teacher. It cannot be taught at all without also being spoken. It is not dead, as we are taught to believe, or as the teachers would like to have it be. It is the fault of the instructors that it is not used as a vehicle of speech to express thought either in the classroom or in the street. It is a case of the cartage man who has all sorts of trucks at his command but hires some one else to do his hauling.

I contend that if the grammatical method, as originated by the Germans, were supplemented, if not superseded, with the conversational—the unconscious or intuitive method—as the Romans taught and learned themselves, we would then, instanter, have a universal or international language again, and every one who studied Latin would have the ability to speak a second tongue, which he could use in his intercourse with men in his travels. The graduate from such a course would become an amatist instead of an apathist, as is the case now.

In a short day I shall have my domicile placarded, as also all teachers of Latin should, "Hic Latine Loquimur."
JACOB SCHUG.

A ROBIN IN BLUE ISLAND, TOO.

Blue Island, Ill., Jan. 3.—In this morning's TRIBUNE we read on page 1 how Mr. William S. Miller reported that he had fed a robin in his yard in Winnetka yesterday. Mr. Miller was not the only person near Chicago who fed a robin on Jan. 2. Yesterday there appeared about fifty English sparrows at the scene of the feast and the guest of honor was our friend Mr. Robin Redbreast, who shared sumptuously the bread and meat scraps we put out. Just where he came from yesterday we do not know, neither could we discover his hiding place. It was about 10 degrees below zero and we have been wondering whether he survived the cold night.
MRS. H. C. HEINZELMAN.

JOBS FOR THE UNEMPLOYED NEGRO.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—Owing to lack of employment destitution is rife amid our colored population. Why not put a few thousand of them to work wrecking the old shacks that are sprinkled around the town? The colored man has proved singularly adept at that class of work; "he leaves no leavin's." The building department is apparently lax in condemning the old structures. Unfit for human habitation, a menace by fire or collapse, a harbor for rodents and vermin, breeding spots for disease and pestilence, they stand. Why not give the old things the razz?
BIFFIN SNOOT.

WARM BATHS FOR BIRDS.

Oak Park, Ill., Jan. 6.—I wonder how many people have seen the snowbirds indulge in a morning plunge when water was given them, or how many ever think of giving the feathered creatures a drink of warm water these wintry mornings?

Since winter set in my father has seen to it every day that the birds are fed, and he also sees to it that their water dish or bath is filled with very warm water. No sooner does he leave the yard when dozens of birds fly to the dish, all trying to get in at one time. We have watched them with great pleasure and amusement. After the bath they line up in a row on the roof of the garage, drying and pruning their feathers, showing their appreciation for our thoughtfulness. There are many people who have bird baths and who turn them upside down for the winter, but I ask you to try this formula out yourself and your reward will be much pleasure and many faithful little visitors, whose presence enhances an otherwise bleak and dull looking garden.
AGNES DEVENNY DURHAM.

STOP LIGHTS.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—I was particularly gratified to read your editorial this morning on the tendency of automobile drivers to ignore stop lights. It is something I have noticed repeatedly, and wondered when some one would take it up.

When I observed the lack of consideration for others which some automobile drivers show when they sit at the steering wheel [who in view of the eighteenth amendment are supposed to be sober] I sometimes wonder how much more danger we might be in if liquor could be purchased at any corner saloon.

I hope you keep up this fight until the situation is corrected—or at least improved.
WARREN GORRELL.

BABY'S HEALTH.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—I wish to protest against the Chicago board of health for their neglect of late in sending out the monthly booklets for babies. I have not received any for the last two months and am wondering if our new health commissioner is going to discontinue them.

As a young and inexperienced mother I have found these booklets to be a great aid in raising my daughter. I have a baby doctor come to my house every month, but have found the booklets to be just as important as his visit.
YOUNG MOTHER.

EXPLAINING IT.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—Your correspondent, E. O. L., asks: "What is that inherent and intimate thing in people which makes the whole world smile with Lindbergh, laugh at Will Rogers, and cry with a movie star, and, having laughed and cried, renders them more amenable to persuasion?"

The answer is simple—lack of brains. The mass are not logical but emotional; are fond of being made to laugh and cry. Fortunately for the business and progress of the world, after the entertainers are gone the workers come out and perform the dull tasks that make the wheels go 'round.

BAR ON FRENCH BUSINESS LOANS IS LIFTED BY U. S.

State Department Silent on Change in Policy.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The blanket rule against the flotation of French industrial securities in this country, which has been in force for more than three years as a result of the failure of France to fund her wartime indebtedness to the Unitel States, has been lifted by the state department.

Notification of the change in policy was communicated to American bankers in letters which went out from the state department last night. Beyond the bare admission that the action had been taken, the department declined to discuss the matter today, but it is understood that the step was taken as earnest indication of America's friendship for France.

Whether it will be followed by a lifting of the bar against French government loans at an early date could not be established. In official circles silence prevailed on this point, with the inference that the step was unrelated to other considerations and that any further step would be taken, if at all, without regard to other questions and in the light of conditions as they develop.

Last night's action follows the recent notification to France that the state department would place no obstacle in the way of France's plans to refund her 8 per cent government bonds in this country so as to permit a lower interest rate on the investment.

FIRE HOLDS UP LOOP TRAFFIC.

Fire in a building at 173 West Madison street during the noon rush hour held up traffic for forty-five minutes yesterday while firemen worked with hose to quench the flames.

Flies Into Chicago

YUSUKI TSURUMI.

Yusuki Tsurumi, son-in-law of ex-premier Baron Goto and himself a political power in Japan, flew into Chicago last night from Cleveland, in a cross country dash to get to San Francisco in time to board the S. S. Siberia, sailing Monday from that city for Japan. Mr. Tsurumi has been touring the United States as a lecturer. He was speaking in New York Friday evening when a cable from Tokio arrived summoning him to Japan to head a new liberal group, which its was said, would be an important element in the political fight which is expected to come soon in Japan when the next general election is held. Immediately after the lecture, Mr. Tsurumi boarded a train for Cleveland, flew to Chicago and will fly from here to San Francisco.

RUTH'S ATTORNEY ADMITS PLOT TO RESTORE HER LIFE

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—A plot to save the life of Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder, even after she had been taken from the electric chair, was revealed today by Joseph Lonardo, one of her lawyers.

It was hoped to obtain possession of the body and to restore life by an injection of adrenalin, according to Lonardo, who served a last minute document on Warden Lewis E. Lawes, commanding him not to permit an autopsy. This was signed by Mrs. Josephine Brown, the mother of Mrs. Snyder. It was issued by no court and had no legal sanction.

Autopsy Is Held.

Warden Lawes referred the document to his legal advisers about two hours before the execution and was advised by them that the law did call for an autopsy and that such autopsy should be held. It was actually held.

Had the paper effected its object, Mr. Lonardo said that it was his intention to remove the body, with the consent of the family, to a private sanitarium, where, he said, a doctor was in waiting to inject adrenalin into the heart.

Ruth Incredulous.

This plan was originally formed by the attorney, he said, on Jan. 7, when he read in the newspaper an account of the seeming resurrection of John H. Scott, county clerk of Montclair, N. J., who was brought back to life by a heart injection of this powerful drug after seven hours of apparent death.

"Mrs. Snyder was aware of the plan," said the lawyer. "When I told her of it she smiled and said: 'O yes, but that chair kills you, all right.'"

Lonardo said that Mrs. Josephine Brown and Andrew Brown, mother and brother of the woman, did not know of the plan. He refused to name the physician who was a party to the conspiracy, saying that it would be a violation of ethics.

EXAGGERATION

Extraordinary things or occasions are rare. Exaggeration on ordinary things shows narrowness, not to speak of bad taste. In business, undue praise arouses curiosity—begets desire. If afterwards the value does not correspond to the price, expectation revolts against the deception. The article itself is then likely to be under-estimated in the owner's mind.

Prudent men prefer to err by omission than by commission. Exaggeration is a branch of lying. By it one loses the credit of good taste and of good sense. Reputation is damaged and then character is questioned.

Query: May we not all profit by avoiding enterprises where a tendency to exaggerate is obvious?

ANDREW M'LEISH, ILL FOR A WEEK, DIES; NEARLY 90

Partner in Carson, Pirie, Scott; Born Abroad.

Andrew MacLeish, a pioneer Chicago merchant and one of the owners of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., died yesterday at his home in Glencoe.

Death was directly due to cerebral thrombosis. His physician, Dr. Fred P. Patton of Glencoe, said advanced age, however, was the underlying cause. Mr. MacLeish would have been 90 years old had he lived until next June. He was a friend of Marvin Hughitt, formerly president of the Chicago and North Western railroad, who died only a week ago at the age of 90.

In spite of his age Mr. MacLeish refused until a week ago to give up business contacts entirely. His career had parallelled the history of business in Chicago in its steady rise. Friends said he was loath to surrender his place even in his last year of life.

Born in Scotland.

Born in Glasgow, Scotland, on June 28, 1838, Mr. MacLeish was educated in a high school there, and then went to London to finish his preparation for a business career.

When he grew up, his sweetheart, Lillias Young, had gone to Chicago, and Mr. MacLeish followed, arriving in 1856. Two years later he married Miss Young.

Looking about for a job, the young Scotsman journeyed up and down Lake street, then the principal business street, and finally he landed with the firm of J. D. Sherman, 130 Lake street.

Soon Tires of Kewanee.

He was sent a short time later to Kewanee, Ill., to open up a store of his own, and given a stock of goods, but he didn't like the life he found there, and so he returned to Chicago. Then in 1863 he joined the firm of J. B. Shay, a dry goods house, at 112 to 114 Lake street.

Before long his diligence rewarded him with a membership in the firm, and he conducted its affairs until 1866, when he went with Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. It was then a wholesale house at 136 Lake street in which the partners were Samuel Carson, John T. Pirie, George and Robert Scott.

Mr. MacLeish was commissioned to start a retail store for that firm and he did. That store was destroyed during the great fire of 1871. Mr. MacLeish personally directed the transfer of goods to safety zones, employing trucks and vans wherever he could, paying any prices they demanded.

Opens in Two Branches.

After the fire the store was divided into two branches which opened, one in West 22d street, and the other on Madison street at Peoria. After sixteen years the firm purchased the State street store of Charles Gossage. Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. later had the southwest corner of State and Washington streets, and later moved to its present location with both State street and Wabash avenue frontage, and most of the block between Madison and Monroe streets.

One of U. of C. Founders.

Mr. MacLeish had for decades been connected with the University of Chicago. He was a trustee of the old institution and was one of the incorporators of the present institution in 1890. For years thereafter he was vice president of the board of trustees. At the time of his death he was still a trustee.

He was a charter member of the Union league club and a member of the Quadrangle, City and Skokie Country club. He was prominent in religious work, having been one of the founders of the Northern Baptist convention. He had been president of the Baptist Social union and the Baptist Education society. For some time he conducted a Bible class at the Union Park Baptist church that attracted attendants from all parts of the city.

Married Three Times.

Mr. MacLeish was married three times. His second wife was M. Louise Little of Chicago. His third wife, Mrs. Martha Hilliard MacLeish, survives. He is also survived by three daughters, Mrs. Lily MacLeish Day of Chicago, Mrs. C. K. G. Billings of Santa Barbara, Cal.; Miss Ishbel MacLeish of Glencoe, and three sons, Bruce MacLeish of Glencoe, Norman MacLeish of Philadelphia, and Archibald MacLeish, who lives in Europe. Another son, Lieut. Kenneth MacLeish, a naval aviator, was killed during the world war.

In memory of Mr. MacLeish, the retail and wholesale stores of Carson Pirie Scott & Co. will be closed all day Monday.

The funeral services will be Monday at 2:30 p. m. at the MacLeish residence in Glencoe. Dr. James Madison Stifler, pastor of the First Baptist church of Evanston will conduct them, with Dr. Douglas H. Cornell of the Union church of Glencoe assisting. Burial will be private at Graceland cemetery.

Miss Royden to Speak in Chicago on Feb. 19

Miss Maude Royden, Englishwoman preacher whose speaking engagement in Chicago was canceled by the Woman's Home Missionary society of the Methodist church, is to speak on Sunday afternoon, Feb. 19, at Orchestra hall under the auspices of the Chicago Y. W. C. A., it was announced yesterday. Her talk on "Old Truths and the Younger Generation," which has been arranged through the nineteen young women comprising the Metropolitan council, including all the various residences and branches of the organization in this city, will mark her second appearance here under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A. She talked at Orchestra hall in December of 1922.

FRANCIS H. STEAD, NOTED BRITISH EDITOR, IS DEAD

LONDON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Francis Herbert Stead, noted editor and social worker, died at his home at Blackheath today.

Francis Herbert Stead was the brother of William T. Stead, editor of the London Review of Reviews, who was drowned when the steamship Titanic sank in mid-ocean after a collision with an iceberg in April, 1912. Among William T. Stead's writings was one which caused a stir in the United States in the early 90's, "If Christ Came to Chicago."

Francis Stead, born in 1857, was warden of the Robert Browning settlement, Walworth, from 1894 to 1921. He was assistant editor of the Review of Reviews and editor of the Independent and Non-Conformist. With others he was instrumental in initiating a series of conferences from which sprung the national committee on old age pension in 1898.

G. A. OSINGA, 62, RETIRED SCHOOL PRINCIPAL, DEAD

Gerbrandus A. Osinga of 901 North Taylor avenue, Oak Park, for thirty-seven years a teacher and principal in the Chicago public schools, was found dead in bed in his home yesterday morning by Mrs. Osinga. He was 62 years old. It was stated that Mr. Osinga was a victim of heart disease and that while he had not been entirely well recently he had not been ill enough to be attended by a physician.

When he retired two years ago Mr. Osinga was principal of the Delano school at Wilcox street and Crawford avenue. Besides his widow, a son and daughter survive him.

HOLD IMPRESSIVE RITES TOMORROW FOR THOS. HARDY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 14—The funeral of Thomas Hardy in Westminster Abbey Monday afternoon promises to be one of the most impressive in the history of the great church. It was announced today that the pall bearers will be Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, Ramsay MacDonald, Rudyard Kipling, Bernard Shaw, Sir James Barrie, Sir Edmund Gosse, as well as the masters of Magdalene college, Cambridge, and the proctor of Queen's college, Oxford.

Thousands already have expressed a desire to attend, but the Poets' corner, where the ashes of the writer will rest, next to the remains of Charles Dickens, will be reserved for a most select group, although the rest of the church will be open.

The body was quietly carried from the Hardy home to Woking at dawn today, where it was cremated. The simple oaken casket was carried along the country roads, accompanied by one private car containing Sir James Barrie and a friend, who later handed over the casket containing the ashes to the Westminster Abbey authorities. Mr. Hardy's heart is be buried in his first wife's grave in Stinsford, Wessex, in a simple village ceremony, attended by natives of the community, who figured in his novels.

FUNERAL RITES FOR MRS. GOODE TO BE TOMORROW

Funeral services for Mrs. Katherine Hancock Goode, state representative for the Fifth [Hyde Park] district, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Hyde Park Baptist church, 56th street and Woodlawn avenue. Burial will be at Lake City, Minn.

Mrs. Goode died on Friday night at her home, 6227 Kimbark avenue. She was serving her second term as a member of the Illinois legislature. She was the eighth member of the general assembly to die since the last election.

Mrs. Goode was 55 years old and the wife of Prof. J. Paul Goode, professor of geography at the University of Chicago.

Funeral Services Tomorrow for Mrs. Emma Salisbury

Funeral services for Mrs. Emma E. Salisbury, who died Friday night at Lake View hospital after an illness of three months, will be held tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. in the chapel at 2701 North Clark street. Burial will be in Forest Home cemetery. Mrs. Salisbury was 64 years old. She was born in a house at State and Adams streets and lived there with her parents until the great fire of 1871 wiped out their home. She is survived by her husband, Charles W. Salisbury, and three sons, William, Earl and Robert.

Funeral of Breath Battle Baby Will Be Tomorrow

Funeral services for Baby George Louis Smith, who died Friday night after firemen had fought for more than 57 hours with inhalator and oxygen to save his life, will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smith, 9422 Calumet avenue. Burial will be in Mount Olivet cemetery. Dr. Isaac A. Abt, who made two transfusions of the mother's blood into the baby, performed the autopsy yesterday and stated that the 13 day old child had died of pulmonary collapse.

Funerals at "Hursen's" Instead of at Home

A great many families in Chicago have preferred to have funerals conducted at one of "Hursen's" palatial establishments, instead of at home. There are many reasons for this:

No matter how large or how small a funeral may be, there is available an exclusive chapel, appointed in the utmost elegance, quietness and comfort.

This eliminates crowding and confusion. It assures complete seclusion. There are also many spacious rooms set apart for the private and exclusive use of families. These have the rich furnishings, the consoling comforts and the dignified environment of "home" itself.

Yet there is no extra charge for these unusual facilities, which are found nowhere else in America in an establishment of this nature.

Such broadness of service, such extraordinary elegance, all at lower cost than has ever been available anywhere else—have established the fame of Hursen all over America. He is today the acknowledged authority on the technique of funeral direction. Call Hursen, of course!

RIOT BARES U. S. PROBE OF GRAFT IN JAIL FEEDING

De Kalb Deputies Told to Turn In Stars.

Federal investigators for the last week have been checking the food supplied to government prisoners serving sentences in the various county jails in the northern district of Illinois, it was learned yesterday.

Simultaneously came the demand from Mrs. Helena Dolder, recently appointed sheriff of De Kalb county, that the stars of every deputy sheriff in the county must be returned not later than Feb. 1. The Sycamore shakeup follows a food riot in the jail there Thursday, which was quelled by the woman sheriff.

C. J. Weaver, federal prison inspector, had visited the De Kalb county jail at Sycamore a few hours prior to the riot. County authorities consequently attributed the demonstration by the prisoners as one planned to arouse Inspector Weaver.

75 Cents Daily for Food.

Of the 92 inmates at the De Kalb county jail 80 are federal prisoners. The highest rate allowed on government contract for feeding prisoners, 75 cents a day for each prisoner, is given to the De Kalb officials, it was stated. Cook county receives the minimum of 55 cents.

Reports of poor food and hunger have been received in Washington from the inmates released from the various jails. Tales of favoritism in food and exercise privileges have also been told. Separate tables are reported set for the inmates able to pay a premium of $35 a week. Pies were reported to sell at 75 cents a cut, a sandwich at $1, a package of cigarets from $1 to $2, and corresponding other prices for other dainties.

Sargent Orders Probe.

United States Attorney General John G. Sargent, upon hearing of this, ordered Weaver to make the special investigation and report to him his findings.

The thirteen jails that will be visited by Inspector Weaver during his tour are the jails at Sycamore, Waukegan, Wheaton, Rockford, Woodstock, Joliet, Freeport, Dixon, Yorkville, Geneva, Morris, and Cook county, and also the house of correction in Chicago.

With quiet restored at the Sycamore jail Sheriff Dolder, who succeeded her husband in office after his death recently, read the riot act to the inmates. Any more attempts at an uprising would be met by severe treatment, she told the prisoners.

Names New Deputy.

To stress her warning, she appointed Edward Crawford, former sheriff of De Kalb county, as her chief deputy. His duty will be to rule the Sycamore jail, she said, with a strong hand. The physical work required of the sheriff's office will fall upon Crawford, she said, as she realized her need of impressive support. She also told the prisoners that hereafter she will supervise the preparing of meals for them personally.

Three drug law violators are reported to have incited the trouble. Apologies were made by the three prisoners and promises made to act as model prisoners.

Announcement that the stars of all the deputy sheriffs must be returned not later than Feb. 1, conveyed the message from Mrs. Dolder that she would make the De Kalk county jail a model of prison behavior.

A thorough cleanup of De Kalb county will be made, Mrs. Dolder said yesterday, and all vice resorts and other criminal centers will be raided.

WOMAN SHERIFF CALLS IN DEPUTIES' STARS

CASHIER IS SENT TO PRISON FOR $35,000 THEFT

A plea for sympathy for Samuel Gross, 30 years old, 807 South Springfield avenue, who admitted taking approximately $35,000 from his employer to gamble on horse races and speculate on the stock market, failed to meet a response from Judge Emanuel Eller in Criminal court yesterday. The judge sentenced Gross to the penitentiary for an indeterminate term of from 1 to 10 years.

Gross was cashier for Alfred L. Baker & Co., La Salle street brokers. During two and one-half years he took approximately $35,000 by juggling the accounts, it was charged. He admitted his troubles were caused mostly by gambling.

Samuel L. Blumert, 26, of 3129 Washington boulevard, a clerk for the same company, was exonerated by Gross, who said that Blumert was an unwilling aid and received no benefits from his thefts.

ILLINOIS CALLED LAGGARD IN FUND FOR EDUCATION

Illinois was pictured yesterday as one of the most backward states, judged by the amount it spends on education. Mrs. Fannie S. Merwin, president of the Illinois State Teachers' association, speaking before the League of Women Voters at the Congress hotel, said the teachers were justified in asking for the expenditure of an additional $20,000,000 on the schools since Illinois is at present far behind other states.

Carlton W. Washburne, superintendent of the Winnetka schools, spoke on educational methods in Germany and Russia.

The meeting yesterday was dedicated as a memorial to Mrs. Katherine Hancock Goode, state representative and a leader in the League of Women Voters, who died Friday night.

VICTORY CLAIMS IN WAR ON CRIME ARE CHALLENGED

Hanna and Court Doubt Statistical Report.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Crime conditions in Chicago and the state generally are to come in for various overhaulings and surveys during the next few weeks.

The report of Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director of the Chicago Crime commission, giving an optimistic outlook on the crime war and declaring flatly that crime has decreased generally in Chicago, is to be followed next Wednesday night by a meeting of about 500 representative citizens at the Hotel La Salle, called by Silas Strawn, president of the American Bar association, to hear reports and consider this subject.

Hunt Discrepancies.

Within a few weeks the crime commission is to have a complete check on crime reports, as made at the police stations, in comparison with those issued officially by the secretary of police. There is admittedly a great discrepancy here, and Commissioner of Police Hughes has determined to have the facts known, on the theory that crime cannot be suppressed by suppressing facts.

A report on the parole administration in the state, together with a comparative study of sentences imposed by trial judges and juries, and of the practice of accepting pleas of guilty for lesser crimes than were committed, is to be made during the week by a special committee representing the University of Chicago, the University of Illinois, and Northwestern university.

Study Covers 18 Months.

This report will be made at the request of Hinton G. Clabaugh, chairman of the state pardon and parole boards, and is the result of 18 months study. Judge Andrew Bruce of Northwestern university law school, former president of the American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology; Albert J. Harno, dean of the college of law of the University of Illinois, and Prof. Ernest W. Burgess of the University of Chicago are members of this committee.

The meeting called by Mr. Strawn will be held at the Hotel La Salle and is being arranged by a committee which includes William R. Abbott, George W. Dixon, T. E. Donnelley, John Hertz, Edward N. Hurley, Marshall E. Keig, E. F. Mansure, James A. Patten, Alexander Revell, Edwin W. Sims, E. M. Skinner, Elmer T. Stevens, Melvin A. Traylor, Thomas Wilson and William Wrigley Jr.

Renews War on Crime.

"Chicago has been given an evil name in other cities because of the crimes of organized gangs here," said Mr. Strawn. "Our crimes have been exaggerated in the out of town press. While we know our city is being traduced we know that the best way to clear the city's name and to make conditions better for ourselves is to reduce crime as much as possible. We must arouse the citizens and we must win the fullest coöperation of public officials by showing them that the people will back their efforts."

State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, Commissioner Hughes, Judge William V. Brothers and various citizens connected with law enforcing agencies will talk.

Arouses "I Will" Spirit.

Mr. Clabaugh, in addressing the Chicago Bar association yesterday on the Illinois parole law, touched on this subject, saying:

"I do not believe that crime in Chicago, per capita ratio to population, is any greater than it is in any other large city in America. Indeed, it is less than it is in some cities.

"The so-called Chicago crime wave is in my judgment unjustly exaggerated in the outside press and is but a passing incident, so far as Chicago is concerned. While Chicago realizes that the crime and the attention it has received is unfortunate and even unjust, it also realizes that such publicity can but arouse the interest and the attention of its civic pride, its 'I Will' spirit, to the end that such actual abuses and excesses as exist may be minimized."

Reduction in 1927.

Mr. Clabaugh said that he was compiling statistics for 1927 and that the year will show "a very material reduction in crime."

Commissioner Hughes gives the following figures for comparison, taking the period from April 15, 1926, to April 15, 1927. For 1926 he lists 132 murders, 1,803 robberies, 12,661 burglaries, 49 rape cases, 12,023 larcenies, 476 assaults, 362 assaults with gun. For 1927 he lists 132 murders, 2,667 robberies, 5,136 burglaries, 26 rape cases, 4,940 larcenies, 218 assaults and 306 assaults with gun.

Mr. Chamberlin's report on crime was criticized yesterday by Francis D. Hanna, former assistant director of the commission. He declared that the Chamberlin report could not be supported by facts.

Charges Overoptimism.

"I think the police department under Commissioner Hughes is showing improvement, but I am convinced that Col. Chamberlin in his desire to give value received for a report made by the commission and paid for by the personal check of the police commissioner, has become unreasonably optimistic," he said.

"Also I believe that some of his conclusions are influenced by the fact that the commission has been receiving compensation from State's Attorney Crowe and Crowe's parole supervisor, Hinton G. Clabaugh, for reports made concerning their particular activities."

Mr. Clabaugh said that the report referred to was one made to the university committee at his request, from records compiled by the commission, that it was paid for by the state to the commission, and that the amount was around $300.

Judge Attacks Report.

Judge Daniel P. Trude of the Municipal court declared yesterday that the figures and statement of Mr. Chamberlin on the crime situation gave an entirely false impression. Referring to Mr. Chamberlin as "the assistant state's attorney," he said:

"On Dec. 9, last, I personally made application to Mr. Chamberlin for the figures on crime. He listed the following: 366 murders in 1926; murders to Dec. 9, last year, 346; burglaries for 1926 at 897; for 1927 at 1,933; robberies for 1926 at 1,298; for 1927 at 2,251. I believe these figures reflect the true situation."

Chamberlin Retorts.

Mr. Chamberlin said of the Hanna charges:

"I will not engage in controversy with a former disgruntled employé. I have read a statement purporting to be by him which I am advised is criminally libelous. The facts in relation to the subjects mentioned are that the Chicago police department, the state's attorney's office, the Illinois parole board, and the Illinois Association for Criminal Justice have all paid for certain time of employés assigned by this office to assist these agencies in tabulating data. None of this was for profit but to serve the public welfare at the bare cost of the service. In each case it was authorized and ordered by the executive committee of the Chicago Crime association. There is in the possession of the Chicago Crime commission ample supporting data for every statement of fact and for every conclusion contained in the annual report of the operating director."

Indict Three for Midnight Rifle Attack Upon Home

Decatur, Ill., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Eight true bills were returned by the Piatt county grand jury in Monticello today against W. G. Treaver, Earl Weatherby, and his brother, Don Weatherby, all of Decatur, charging attempt to murder Ezra Hall and his brother, William Hall, near Pierson, Dec. 2, 1927. The indictments are a result of a midnight attack on the Hall home with rifles.

CLUB WOMEN HIT PLAN TO EXAMINE VICE RAID VICTIMS

Committee Calls Act Illegal and Futile.

Health Commissioner Arnold Kegel's announced plan to examine all men brought into the Morals court and quarantine those suffering with social diseases is opposed by a committee of clubwomen and social workers.

In a formal statement yesterday they asserted the plan was not only illegal but futile as a health measure. Instead they suggested that the most effective way to combat these diseases would be to close all vice resorts.

Signers of Petition.

Those who signed the statement were Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, president of the Juvenile Protective association; Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, president of the Woman's City club; Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, former president of the same organization; Miss Bertha Bidwell, president of the Illinois League of Women Voters; Mrs. George R. Dean, president of the Illinois Republican Women's clubs; Miss Edith Abbott, dean of administration at the University of Chicago; Miss Jessie Binford, Joel Hunter, Fred A. Moore, Dr. Rachelle S. Yarros, Wilfred S. Reynolds, and Mrs. Kenneth F. Rich.

Most of these are members of the social hygiene council. They asserted that they had always protested against the injustice and futility of physical examinations for women brought into the court. Such methods, they stated, "amounted to a 1 per cent quarantine of the known cases of venereal disease."

Cites Legal Opinion.

"Even if the numbers were doubled by the incarceration of the men arrested and brought to the Morals court and if thereby as much as a 2 per cent quarantine were achieved, its soundness as a public health measure would still be open to grave doubt," the committee added.

The statement repeated a corporation counsel's opinion on the matter, in which it was held that such rules, if strictly enforced by the health authorities, would be tantamount to depriving men of their liberty without due process of law, and also of his right to bail, in defiance of the constitution.

The health commissioner's plan, it was pointed out, was rather a step toward the regulation of commercial vice than toward its abolition.

Regulation Condemned.

"Regulation is an old attempt at making prostitution safe, and as a public policy has been condemned time and again by health and civic agencies," was another point made by the committee.

A well rounded program, it was suggested, would include the education of the public to the dangers of disease and of prostitution and the maintenance of the Lawndale hospital as a place where persons suffering such diseases might go voluntarily for free treatment.

Arrest Coal Officials for Fraud in Weights

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 14.—[U.P.]—Six employés of the Berry Berge Coal company here, including Vice President James M. Whalen, are under arrest charged with short weight delivery of coal to public institutions. William O. Soell, president of the firm, also is sought in connection with an alleged conspiracy said by St. Louis detectives to have resulted in defrauding city, state and federal institutions of more than $200,000.

Committee Report on Smith Delayed; Expected Tomorrow

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Action in the case of Frank L. Smith, senator elect from Illinois, is now expected in the senate early next week.

The special campaign committee headed by Senator James A. Reed [Dem., Mo.] expected to present its report today, but failed to do so. Senator Reed now plans to submit the report on Monday, and debate will start either that day or on Tuesday. The leaders anticipate that the discussion will not require more than a day or two.

Want Seat Declared Vacant.

The committee report will recite the facts regarding the expenditures of Mr. Smith in his primary campaign and his acceptance of contributions from public utility magnates. It also will include Mr. Smith's statement of a week ago challenging the constitutionality of the procedure of the senate in denying him the oath and refusing to present any evidence before the special committee.

On the basis of the facts in the case the members of the committee will recommend the adoption of a resolution declaring the seat vacant. The resolution will be offered in the senate by Senator Reed.

Adverse Action Deemed Certain.

Both friends and opponents of Mr. Smith regard it as a certainty that the action of the senate will be adverse to the Illinois man. While a majority vote is regarded as sufficient for the adoption of the resolution, the expectation is a two-thirds majority will be obtained.

Mr. Smith is in Illinois and intends to remain there while the senate considers his case. He was informed by long distance telephone that the senate is all ready to take up the case and said that he did not desire to be present.

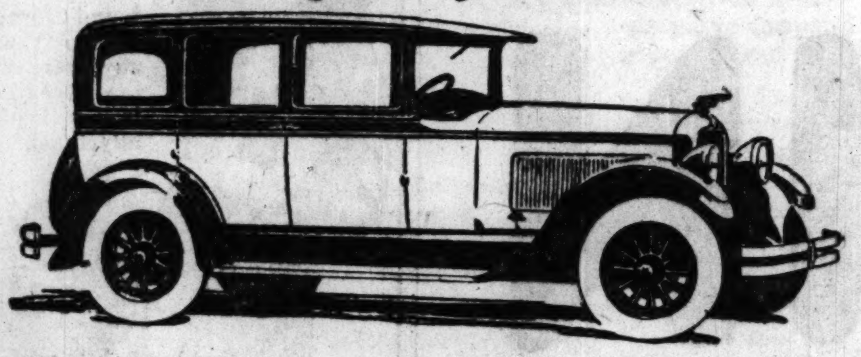
The New Dictator
Champion of Its Class



IN this new and more powerful Dictator at $1195 f. o. b. factory, Studebaker engineers present the champion of its price class. Under supervision of the American Automobile Association, a Dictator sedan recently traveled 24 hours at better than mile-a-minute speed with no repairs and no stops except for gas and oil.

This new Dictator is designed and finished in custom-built taste and luxury. It carries many items of extra equipment without extra charge, including shock absorbers.

A remarkable value due to Studebaker's One-Profit manufacturing facilities which reduce profits of outside parts-makers to a minimum. Savings thus made allow for extra quality and added refinements without corresponding increase in price.

BAVARIANS SIGN DEMAND TO HALT BERLINIZATION

Charge Prussia Grabs Power and Funds.

[Copyright: 1928: By the New York Times.]

MUNICH, Jan. 14.—A manifesto protesting against the "Berlinization" of Germany and signed by numerous prominent Bavarians was issued today in this Bavarian capital.

Among the signatories best known outside of this country is Siegfried Wagner, son of the world renowned composer, Richard Wagner. Others include Prof. Von Mueller, director of the Munich university, and Baron Von Cramer-Klett, president of the Munich Academy of Music.

Special significance attaches to the manifesto because it appears on the eve of next week's meeting here of the heads of various local governments to discuss plans for the further centralization of the German administration machinery.

See Ghost of Bismarck.

Bavaria has always been the main stronghold of anti-centralistic feeling in Germany and the appearance of this protest, signed by many distinguished Bavarians, just before the meeting of local authorities, is proof of a widespread fear in Bavaria that a triumph for the centralization champions next week will mean placing more power in the hands of Prussia and its capital, Berlin, with a corresponding weakening of the rest of Germany.

The Bavarians only too evidently foresee that such a result will simply mean a continuance of the work of Bismarck, who, when he formed the German empire in 1871, created a uniform Germany by depriving the lesser of the German states of most of their local autonomy, while at the same time enormously increasing the power and importance of Prussia and her capital, Berlin.

Cite Undue Favors to Prussia.

Today's manifesto shows Bavarian restiveness at what Bavarians deem to be the undue favor shown to Prussia by the present German government. The complaint is made, for instance, that Bavaria, which has always been a cultural center, is handicapped in its cultural development because of funds being wrongfully deflected to Berlin which should be spent on the furtherance of Bavarian science, music, art and business. Berlin university, it is pointed out, is superior to Munich university because the latter is unable to employ a sufficient number of professors and instructors.

Another complaint is that recently the German government at Berlin issued a guide book for the purpose of attracting foreign tourists to Germany without even mentioning Bavaria and other south German regions, including Wurttemberg, Bavaria's next door neighbor.

Berlin Getting Business.

In business also the manifesto declares all sorts of favors are shown to Prussia and Berlin, to the detriment of south Germany and especially Bavaria. Banking and general business is becoming constantly more centralized in Berlin, it is alleged, owing to a growing Prussian bias in the present German government and the same is declared to be true of all governmental administration. In conclusion, the manifesto says:

"We Bavarians wish to be citizens of a state within the German union and not a province controlled by the Berlin centralistic government. Only through such a conception of the idea of a German unitary state can there be genuine German solidarity and national unity."

CALL HEARING ON POLLUTION OF THORN CREEK

Officials of Chicago Heights and the villages of South Holland, Thornton, and Glenwood, and thirty individuals from Chicago and surrounding suburbs were given notice to appear in Room 1510 of the Consumers building at 220 South State street at 10 a. m. next Friday.

There a public hearing will be held to determine whether or not the city of Chicago Heights is polluting the waters of Thorn creek, through the discharge of noxious effluents into it from its garbage disposal plant and storm sewers.

The order comes from William F. Mulvihill, supervisor of the Illinois waterway construction, who says that the disposal going into the creek is rendering it injurious to fish life and offensive to the public. He states that evidence will be taken at the hearing.

Mellon Warns Excessive Tax Cut Will Damage Business

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Secretary Mellon, addressing the Women's National Republican club here this afternoon, declared that if congress reduced taxes beyond the treasury recommendation a detrimental effect on business would be probable.

The treasury schedule, already before the house of representatives, advocates a tax reduction of $225,000,000. If this figure is exceeded, the secretary said, higher rates might have to be voted in order to meet government expenses.

"It might be good business to lower taxes," Mr. Mellon continued, "but it most assuredly would not help matters to raise them.

Results of Prosperity.

"It must be remembered that our present revenues are due to the high level of prosperity which has obtained for several years, and any reduction in taxes will be made on the assumption that this prosperity will continue without abatement.

"While at present the general trend is reassuring, nevertheless, if there should be a falling off in business, with a consequent and immediate reduction in the yield of the corporation and individual income taxes, it may be necessary for congress to levy additional taxes in order to provide for the revenue needs of the government.

Business Would Suffer.

"Once the excise taxes have been eliminated they will not be restored. The first move will be to increase the rates of individual and corporation income taxes, and the very persons now urging an excessive reduction will be the first to pay the penalty, in any increased taxes which might be necessary for the production of needed revenue.

"From the point of view of the taxpayers this is undesirable. But it has a greater significance than this. If productive business should again find itself burdened with disproportionately high taxes not only business itself but the whole country would lose the benefits now beginning to be felt as the result of getting back to a more balanced system of taxation.

COURT ENTERS A DECREE IN LEITER ESTATE FIGHT

Superior Judge Denis E. Sullivan yesterday entered his decree in litigation over administration of the $30,000,000 estate of the late Levi Z. Leiter. The order follows the court's opinion in the case handed down on Sept. 24. The decree denies the petition of Lady Marguerite Hyde, countess of Suffolk and Berks, to remove her brother, Joseph Leiter, as trustee of his father's estate but grants her prayer for an accounting in certain projects undertaken by the estate. There was no indication as to whether the decision will be appealed.

Bigger and Better

Chevrolet Electrifies America with a Great New Motor Car

A new automobile so sensational as to electrify the nation! With marvelous new Fisher bodies offering all the distinction, beauty and luxury for which Fisher craftsmen are famous! With performance that is a revelation to owners of even higher priced cars! With 107-inch wheelbase—four inches longer than before! With four-wheel brakes—and many additional mechanical achievements!

And . . . prices that demonstrate again, Chevrolet's ability to provide the utmost in modern motoring luxury at the lowest possible cost!

Everywhere, this Bigger and Better Chevrolet is being hailed as the most notable achievement in the history of the Chevrolet Motor Company. In advanced design as in brilliant styling, it marks an important epoch in automotive progress.

The engine is of improved valve-in-head design. Among the notable new engineering features it incorporates are alloy "invar strut" pistons . . . a distinctive feature on some of America's highest priced cars; specially designed hydrolaminated camshaft gears; mushroom type valve tappets; a crankcase breathing system; and a complete new steel motor enclosure!

The net result of these impressive engine advancements is a type of motor operation so thrilling that it must be experienced to be appreciated . . . marvelous smoothness . . . click-of-the-heel acceleration . . . and the ability to maintain 50, 55 and 60 miles an hour without the slightest sense of forcing or fatigue!

Coupled with this amazing engine performance is a type of riding and driving comfort almost unbelievable in a low-priced car. Four inches longer than the previous Chevrolet chassis . . . swung low to the road . . . and with four semi-elliptic shock absorber springs—84% of the wheelbase—the Bigger and Better Chevrolet holds the road with a surety that is simply amazing, and rides in perfect comfort at high speeds over the roughest stretches of highways.

And never before was a low-priced car so easy to drive—for the worm and gear steering mechanism is fitted with ball bearings throughout . . . even at the front axle knuckles.

All these spectacular new mechanical advancements are, of course, in addition to the notable features that Chevrolet has previously pioneered in the low-price field—such as banjo-type rear axle housing . . . modern semi-elliptic springs, set parallel to frame . . . water and oil pumps . . . Alemite pressure chassis lubrication . . . "VV" one-piece windshield . . . combination stop and tail light . . . theft-proof steering and ignition lock . . . safety gasoline tank in rear, with Steward-Warner vacuum fuel feed . . . and the many others that comprise Chevrolet's famous list of quality features.

Come in and see this latest and greatest General Motors achievement, Study the grace and symmetry of the beautiful Fisher bodies—finished in alluring colors of genuine Duco. Inspect the entire chassis—and note the advanced modern engineering in every unit—the completeness of detail demanded in the world's finest motor cars. Go for a drive—as long as you like, and over roads of your own selection.

Then you'll know why this great new car is everywhere the subject of enthusiastic comment—why everywhere it is hailed as the world's most luxurious low-priced car.

QUALITY AT LOW COST

REVEAL TESTS WHICH FLOORED 1,500 DRY AGENTS

Three-Fourths Fail to Make 60%.

dicates that the officials of a certain county are conspiring with bootleggers to violate the prohibition law.

Told to Avoid Generalities.

The agents are asked to assume their own facts and to write the report in 300 words. They are told to avoid meaningless generalities and write clear and concrete statements. Examples of the other questions follow with the five best replies given:

QUESTION.

A number of pint bottles of whisky were found in the automobile of a man arrested for driving while in a state of intoxication. Which is the best indication that the man intended to distribute them?

REPLIES.

1. Friends call frequently at his residence.
2. The bottles were wrapped separately and addressed to different persons at an athletic club.
3. Liquor of the same brand and label is possessed by another man in the same neighborhood.
4. The man owns stock in a soft drink manufacturing company which operates near his home.
5. He attempted to conceal the liquor.

QUESTION.

The prohibition bureau is authorized to permit certain bonded distilleries to continue to manufacture intoxicating liquor. What is the "main" reason that the prohibition bureau is given this authority?

REPLIES.

1. To avoid throwing large numbers of workers out of employment suddenly.
2. To help do away with the poisonous liquors offered by bootleggers.
3. To have pure liquor available for medicinal purposes.
4. To provide a way for farmers to dispose of surplus grain at a fair price.
5. To increase government revenue.

QUESTION.

A federal prohibition officer secures a warrant to search the office of a man charged with illegal possession and sale of liquor. As the officer enters the room, he finds the accused in the act of locking a large safe, which, in spite of the officer's requests, he refuses to open. What action is it "most important" for the officer to take?

REPLIES.

1. Report the action as sufficient legal evidence that liquor is concealed in the safe.
2. Take charge of the safe until it can be forced open.
3. Promise the man that he will be let off with a fine if he promptly opens the safe.
4. Regard the action as intended to mislead him and pay no attention to the safe.
5. Ask the man his reasons for locking the safe.

QUESTION.

During the course of one investigation, officers frequently uncover leads on another case, which, because of lack of time, they are unable to follow up. It has come to the notice of the commisisoner that certain officers neglect, in such cases, to bring the leads to the attention of other officers. As a result, the same leads must be uncovered by these other officers and much valuable time is lost. According to the above statement, for which of the following are certain officers to be criticized?

REPLIES.

1. Waste of their time in making investigations.
2. Failure to report a case when it is complete.
3. Meddling with cases other than their own.
4. Lack of coöperation with other officers.
5. Wilful attempts to hinder other officers.
6. The word "uncover," as used in this question, means most nearly [1] follow, [2] report, [3] abandon, [4] disclose, [5] establish.

QUESTION.

You are a federal prohibition agent making an investigation in a community where an organized gang is known to be distributing liquor. Reports from citizens make you suspect that a certain man, who has supposedly been aiding you in your investigations by furnishing you confidential information, is connected with the gang and has been giving you incorrect information. Which of the following actions should you take first?

REPLIES.

1. Tell the man frankly that you know of his connection with the liquor traffic, and offer to let him off if he will give evidence against the gang.
2. Continue to accept the man's information, but independently seek for evidence against him and the gang.
3. Search the man's home to see whether he has liquor stored there.
4. Arrest the man for attempting to obstruct law enforcement, and hold him, pending developments in your investigation.
5. Try to stop the man's illegal actions by letting him know that you suspect him.

QUESTION.

Assume that you are a federal prohibition agent and that you have reason to believe that a certain near beer brewery is selling a drink that contains more than one-half of one per cent of alcohol. You go to the brewery, secure a sealed bottle of the near beer, and take it to a chemist who certifies that the liquid contains four tenths of one per cent of alcohol. On the following day you watch one of the brewery trucks deliver several open cases of this beverage at a disreputable soft drink parlor. You enter the place immediately and buy a bottle taken from one of the cases just brought in. The same chemist analyzes this liquid and certifies that it contains 7 per cent of alcohol. What is the "most reasonable" explanation of the great difference in the amount of alcohol in the two bottles?

REPLIES.

1. The contents of the first bottle were diluted after seizure.
2. The proprietor of the soft drink parlor adds alcohol to each bottle of near beer before he sells it.
3. The person who analyzed the contents of the second bottle lied in order to convict the brewer.
4. The brewer paid the chemist to certify that the beverage was non-intoxicating.
5. The brewer is attempting to conceal illegal liquor manufacture by making a small quantity of non-intoxicating beverage.

QUESTION.

X, who runs a soft drink establishment, has recently made large purchases of fresh fruit juices. A prohibition officer discovers that some of these juices have later fermented, and that X has distilled from the fermented juices a large quantity of intoxicating liquor. Which of the following actions should the prohibition agent take first?

REPLIES.

1. Require X to obtain a permit to manufacture intoxicating liquor.
2. Prosecute the persons who have sold fruit juices to X.
3. Destroy the entire stock of beverages.
4. Arrest X for manufacturing intoxicating liquor.
5. Warn X concerning the law, and report the case.

QUESTION.

Establishments which illegally sell intoxicating liquor to the public often attempt to buy, from photographers, pictures of prohibition agents. Which of the following is their "chief" purpose for doing this?

REPLIES.

1. To make raids by false officers impossible.
2. To guard against selling liquor to agents who may try to buy it.
3. To gain information from photographers, if possible, concerning agents' "methods and plans."
4. To convince timid customers that the place is protected and therefore is safe from raids.
5. To aid customers in avoiding the officers.

QUESTION.

Two federal prohibition agents raid a still, but find that those who operate it are away at the time. It appears likely that the operators will return very soon. Under the circumstances, what is the most important action for the agents to take?

REPLIES.

1. Remove the still immediately.
2. Write a report of the raid.
3. Go immediately to a chemist with a sample of the liquor.
4. Pour out all the liquor before the operators return.
5. Hide in the place and await the return of the operators in order to arrest them.

QUESTION.

Few private citizens can be depended upon to furnish information against bootleggers and operators of stills in their neighborhood. Although officers frequently receive from private citizens letters which refer to violations of the prohibition law, the writers are so fearful of personal injury or violence at the hands of the bootlegger that they don't often give any significant information. A majority of the writers insist that they must not, under any circumstances, be mentioned as having furnished information. What is the chief reason why private citizens are of little aid in furnishing information about bootleggers?

REPLIES.

1. They often have inaccurate information.
2. They are not in sympathy with prohibition agents.
3. They do not realize that their assistance is needed.
4. They are afraid that the bootlegger would discover that they had reported him.
5. They seldom know definitely of the bootlegging carried on in their neighborhood.

QUESTION.

Which of the following is the chief reason why smugglers used airplanes in bringing liquor from Canada into the United States?

REPLIES.

1. They are not likely to be suspected of carrying liquor in airplanes.
2. Airplanes can carry a large amount on one trip.
3. Airplanes can cross international boundary lines without interference.
4. The use of airplanes decreases the cost of transporting the liquor.
5. Airplanes are capable of a very high speed.

QUESTION.

Blaine and his clerk, Harris, are suspected of violating the prohibition act. Harris denies any connection with the manufacture, sale or disposal of liquor. Which of the following is the strongest indication that Harris' claim is false?

REPLIES.

1. Finding of orders for liquor in Harris' possession.
2. Discovery of a pint of whisky in Harris' home.
3. Possession of a large amount of whisky by Blaine.
4. The proved guilt of Blaine, and the great friendship existing between Harris and Blaine.
5. Fact that Harris has on three different occasions been seen carrying a traveling bag to Blaine's club.

QUESTION.

You, a federal prohibition agent stationed in a large city, are told that a certain young physician makes a practice of issuing a prescription for a pint of liquor to any applicant who will pay a five dollar fee. He attempts to make the transaction appear regular by certifying that the applicant is ill. Which of the following should you do in order to find out whether the charge is true?

REPLIES.

1. Try to buy a prescription from the doctor.
2. Require some of the "patients" to visit the city board of health.
3. Question other doctors as to the physician's honesty.
4. Talk with the physician and threaten to revoke his permit if the offense is repeated.
5. Ask all druggists for evidence which might tend to show that the physician has illegally used his right to prescribe liquor.

QUESTION.

Which of the following is the strongest indication that a manufacturer of toilet goods is making illegal use of the alcohol which his permit authorizes him to secure? (1) He states that he does not advertise his products because his old customers use all that he can manufacture. (2) The amount of other material which he uses is only one-third as great as would be necessary in manufacturing toilet products with the alcohol he secures. (3) Two years ago he went into bankruptcy, although he was in the same kind of business and dealing with the same customers as at present. (4) All of the customers whom he names are located in a distant city. (5) He always orders the maximum amount of alcohol allowed by his permit.

Reply to be given by number.

QUESTION.

A physician who has his office above a drug store is in and about the drug store frequently. A federal prohibition agent has proof that illegal sales of whisky have been made in the drug store. Which of the following is the BEST indication that the physician is connected with the illegal sale of liquor: (1) Fact that the physician is known to be a member of a "fast" social set; (2) Effort of the agent to purchase whisky at the drug store without presenting a prescription; (3) Discovery of a small amount of whisky in the physician's office; (4) Fact that the physician issued seven prescriptions for whisky within a week; (5) Discovery in the drug store of twenty-five unfilled prescriptions for whisky (they are signed by the physician and bear several different dates)?

Reply to be given by number.

The Black Hills offer thousands of acres of irrigated land and miles of virgin prairie rich in soil; a fine climate, thriving towns, cities, neighborly communities, splendid schools—in fact everything to make you happy, contented and independent for the rest of your life.

A New Industry—Beet Sugar

Within a short span of a few years, the Black Hills country has become one of the big producers of sugar beets. The beet is not only valuable for its high sugar content, but is a soil builder as well. Its by-products, such as tops, pulp and molasses are also valuable as stock feed. It is not uncommon for beets to yield a net return of $75.00 to $100.00 per acre. And this is but one of many sources for profit to the industrious.

Stock Raising is Highly Developed

The breeding of high grade cattle, such as the short horns and more particularly the Herefords, has in later years received much attention and today farmers of this region are keeping pace with the best developments of the industry. Both sheep and hog raising has shown marked increase and interest the last few years.

Many Industries for Profitable Income

Among the many industries that are being rapidly developed in the Black Hills region are poultry raising, bee keeping, the growing of cucumbers, head lettuce, potatoes and apples all of which have nearby available markets. Dairying also gives promise of great development in the near future. Many thousand cans of cream are being produced yearly in the Belle Fourche district alone.

New Opportunities in Agriculture

The valleys leading out of the Black Hills, lend themselves admirably to irrigation and the water thus artificially supplied has had much to do to insure good crop returns. In addition to this, both soil and climate are ideally suited to the raising of alfalfa, wheat, oats, barley and corn with average high yields per acre. The farmer's returns in this region are much more certain than in regions of greater humidity.

A Vacation Paradise for the Millions

As President Coolidge said in his speech of last June, "I have never seen anything which excels it," sums up in a few words the beauty and grandeur of this nearest of all Western playgrounds. Health-recuperating climate and exhilarating waters, virgin forests of cool and fragrant pines, streams alive with trout, pike, pickerel and shad, strangely beautiful rock formations, winding motor roads, large easy riding busses, comfortable hotels and lodges—a vacation land for the millions. The new metropolitan Hotel Alex Johnson at Rapid City will be ready for business about June 1st, 1928.

MOTORIZED ARMY BASED ON TANK, EXPERTS SHOW

New War Machine Proves Worth in Tests.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Radical changes in the mobility, organization and striking power of the combat units of the American army are expected to follow extensive experiments with motorized equipment scheduled for the next two years by the army high command.

Tests already conducted indicate that automotive and mechanical material will shortly be adopted by the United States army on a scale unthought of a few years ago. Officials believe that only failure of congress to appropriate funds for experimental purposes, or "apathy" on the part of the using services, can long delay the replacement with motors of a large part of the present animal drawn equipment in the army.

An unmistakable trend toward the motorization and mechanization of all arms in the American army by the introduction of more and improved tanks, motor cargo carriers, tractors, six wheel cross country trucks and other material is strikingly noticeable throughout all war department plans for tests and maneuvers during the coming year.

Cross Country Travel.

One reason for this activity is that recent experiments disclosed that cavalry, artillery, tractors and infantrymen can be transported much more rapidly and apparently just as surely over roads by trucks than with animal drawn equipment or by marchings. Exponents of motorization visualize the next war as a combat between armies on wheels. They foresee the day when the infantry will not only be carried over the roads but across country by motors, trucks, cross country cars, tanks, and one man motor vehicles.

The army has reason to hope that more funds will be expended on tanks, tractors, trucks, cross country cars, and experiments on other motored equipment in the next two years than has been expended during the entire period since the war. For the first time, the budget carries funds for purchasing motorized equipment on a scale that will permit the complete motorization of a regiment and eventually, it is hoped, of a division.

Tank Most Important.

Realization on the part of Secretary of War Davis that the modern army will fight the next war largely on wheels is one of the reasons for the awakening of the American army to the need of motorized equipment. Another and perhaps a greater spur to activity is the belated discovery that the army is largely struggling along with the antiquated equipment issued during the world war despite the rapid strides that have been made in developing new material.

Of all automotive ground weapons now being developed throughout the world American army officials consider the tank the most important. Although lagging in its development for years because of lack of funds, the ordnance department has made what is considered at least one unusually important advance during the last year. The secret of this development in connection with the perfection of a new light tank has been guarded closely, but it has just been learned that the new tank is considered the best of its type in the world.

Invent New Machine.

Examination of its qualities discloses it has a speed of from eighteen to twenty-two miles an hour, with a cruising radius of eighty miles. It mounts both a 37 millimeter gun and a capital .30 caliber machine gun. It has ample power to go over virtually any terrain and its speed over rough ground is said to be limited only to the ability of the crew to withstand punishment.

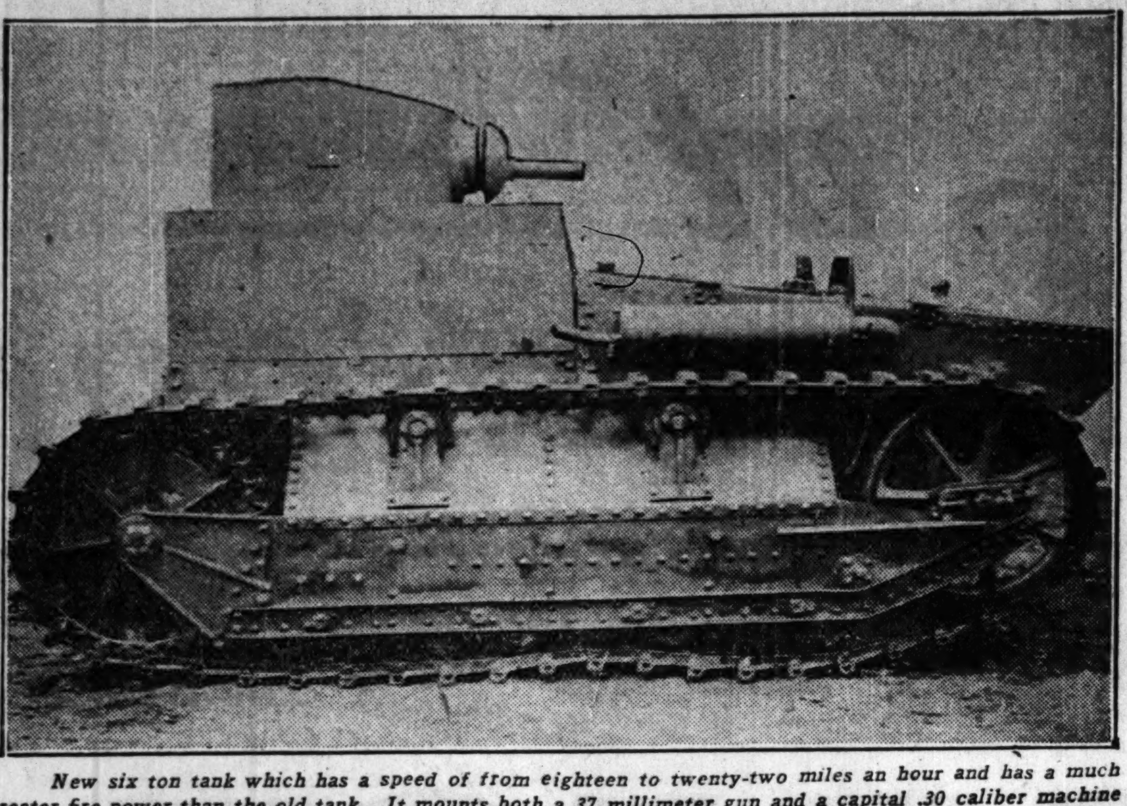
An important quality of the new tank that should be mentioned is that it is built on a recently developed basic all purpose chassis. This chassis may be likened to an automobile chassis, on which can be mounted several different kinds of bodies. Ordnance officials say the chassis can be utilized as a cargo carrier for virtually all services which need cross country transportation. It is expected to be particularly valuable in acting as a fuel and spare parts tender for the light and medium tank, of which the army has developed what is considered a good model.

In utilizing this tank, the ordnance department now has in mind a platform body for mounting large wire reels for the signal corps, a similar body to carry a balloon winch for the air corps and a light armored car for carrying personnel.

Gen. Allen is unusually enthusiastic about the qualities of the new light two man tank which was developed with his coöperation.

"I rode in this chassis," he said recently, "across country at the rate of 16 miles per hour in intermediate gear, and on the road at 22 miles per hour in high gear, and when you get that you are coming pretty near the maximum speed of a tractor tread vehicle. At that time the tank had run 420 miles with the only trouble a broken link, caused by defective steel. We have apparently reached what we shot at.

New Tanks to Be Backbone of Motorized Army



New six ton tank which has a speed of from eighteen to twenty-two miles an hour and has a much greater fire power than the old tank. It mounts both a 37 millimeter gun and a capital .30 caliber machine gun and has ample power to go over any terrain.

BRITISH EXPERTS PLAN TO MOUNT CAVALRY SERVICE "ON WHEELS"

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Cavalry "on wheels" is the next step in the wholesale reorganization of the British army. The army council is contemplating an entirely new adaption of the six wheel type of armored car to take over the work of the cavalry arm, causing as big a revolution in that branch as the mechanized machine gun battalion promises to bring about in the infantry.

The new machines are capable of carrying half a section of cavalry machine gunners, as well as machine gun rifles and 5,000 rounds of .303 ammunition, according to plans just outlined by Capt. C. H. Kuhne, deputy assistant director of mechanization. The cars are low and open, capable of passing under a six foot arch.

The six wheels are equipped with pneumatic tires. The only objection to this is their vulnerability to bullets, but this is expected to be overcome by bulletproof covering.

ROBBERS GET $1,780 IN HOLDUP.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 14.—[United Press.]—Two masked men robbed B. J. Hunt, a restaurant owner, of $1,780 shortly after he opened his establishment here today.

LIFE SAVERS ON SHORE DESCRIBE SINKING OF S-4

Crash Minute After They Saw Periscope.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Two men who had watched from shore the collision between the coast guard destroyer Paulding and the submarine S-4 off Provincetown harbor on Dec. 17 described the scene today before the naval court of inquiry investigating the S-4 disaster.

Boatswain E. F. Gracie, in charge of Wood End coast guard life saving station, told of seeing the periscopes and part of the conning tower of the submarine as she drove forward toward the destroyer.

"My God, Frank, there's going to be a collision," he shouted to Surfman Frank E. Simmons, who was on lookout in the tower of the coast guard station. A few seconds later the two vessels met. Simmons also told the story on the witness stand.

Supports Other Witness.

The graphic story told by Gracie bore out version by previous witnesses to to the relative positions and course of the Paulding and the S-4 before they met 200 yards from the outer buoy off Wood End.

Under examination by Commander Leslie E. Bratton, judge advocate, Gracie said the collision occurred one minute from the time he saw the submarine. When part of the conning tower emerged from the water the Paulding was half a ship's length away. After that the collision was a matter of seconds.

Admiral Takes Responsibility.

Admiral Frank H. Brumby testified that everything possible had been done in the weather conditions prevailing to rescue the six men imprisoned in the torpedo room of the S-4 in 105 feet of water. He said that each rescue attempt had been taken after full discussion of a group of competent salvage and submarine officers and that he himself assumed full responsibility for all decisions taken.

NAVY COMMITTEE DEMANDS REAL, NOT PAPER SHIPS

Rejects Coolidge's Plan to Delay Building.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The house naval affairs committee today placed itself squarely on record as in favor of an ironclad five year naval strengthening bill providing definite time limits for the beginning and completion of all ships authorized.

In executive session the committee asserted its lack of confidence in naval limitation conferences by turning thumbs down on a clause in the $740,000,000 naval bill advanced by Secretary of the Navy Wilbur which would permit the President to suspend all or part of the building program in case of a successful conference.

Oppose Paper Program.

The members of the committee ignored the suggestions of President Coolidge and Secretary of the Navy Wilbur that the navy's $740,000,000 warship program be approved by congress without any definite time limit.

This action was taken, committee members asserted, because they were determined to vote for an actual construction bill which would give the nation ships rather than a "paper program," which might or might not be translated into cruisers, submarines, destroyers and aircraft carriers.

Committee members asserted also that the action of the committee disclosed that it has determined to abandon all thought of future naval limitation conferences and devote its attention to building ships for America.

No definite number of ships was agreed upon by the committee, but members said it undoubtedly would simply rewrite and then approve the present bill of the committee, which provides $740,000 000 for the construction of twenty-five cruisers, nine destroyer leaders, thirty-five submarines and five aircraft carriers.

Construction of the ships, they said, would follow the lines laid down by the navy general board, which would provide $55,200,000 for beginning work in 1929 and appropriate amounts in the following years, so the ships will all be started in five and completed in nine years.

Will President Approve It?

The difference between this and the present bill as submitted by Secretary Wilbur would be that a time limit for building ships would be set and the clause allowing the President to suspend construction at his discretion deleted.

Naval officers are expected to support any program which will give them ships, but doubt is expressed as to whether the President will be willing to sign a bill which makes it obligatory that the ships be built on certain dates or not at all.

"This is a positive agreement by the naval affairs committee," Chairman Butler said when the meeting adjourned, "as to the character of the bill which it will report to congress. It is the committee's intention that what we lay down as a program should be carried and the ships actually built. What we need is ships. If we only authorize construction of ships we may find ourselves in the position resulting from the authorization of eight cruisers in 1924. Six of these cruisers are still to be built. Since our purpose is to build ships, I can see no reason why we should not specify in the law the number of ships and the amount of money that is to be expended each year."

WINS DIVORCE

MRS. VIRGINIA STARK.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mrs. Virginia O. Stark of Atlanta, Ga., a 21 year old, dark eyed southerner, won a divorce yesterday before Superior Judge John J. Sullivan from Ike Stark, a native Chicagoan and a traveling salesman, whom she described as a cool blooded Yankee with thoughts concentrated on business. Mrs. Stark, testifying with a Dixie drawl, said she was married June 21, last, after meeting her husband on a coastwise passenger ship while she was en route home from New York. After the wedding, they moved to Chicago. They separated Sept. 30. Through her attorney, Nicholas Socrates, Mrs. Stark waived alimony and the court indicated she will be granted a decree.

MERCHANTS FIND LOSS AND GAIN IN PARKING BAN TEST

After a five day test of the no parking rule in the loop, State street merchants yesterday were undecided whether a continuance of strict enforcement would constitute a detriment to business. They suggested that the time for making surveys would have to be extended to two weeks or more in order for them to formulate accurate data.

"My opinion," said D. F. Kelly, president of The Fair, "is that prohibition of parking is detrimental to business downtown. But I think it will be possible to get on a sound basis only with a longer test. In one case accounting records show that an establishment which had a 15 per cent increase during the first business week of the year fell off to 7 per cent increase during the five days of no parking. The weather has been fine and the falling off apparently is directly due to the new auto rule. Perhaps tangible data can be obtained in another week."

Elmer Stevens of Charles A. Stevens & Bros. said that his firm's experience tended to show that business was better since parking was stopped. He, too, said he felt it would take longer to get the true effects of the ban. The police reported little trouble in carrying out their orders.

BURGLARY SUSPECT TO GRAND JURY.

Judge Phillip Finnegan in the Fillmore street court yesterday held Morris Levin, 37, of 1128 South Sacramento boulevard, to the grand jury for burglary in bonds of $20,000.

BANDIT IS KILLED BY POLICE AS HE TRIES TO ESCAPE

Arthur Bailey, Negro bandit, was shot and killed early last night by Sergt. Andrew Aitken of the detective bureau after the latter, with his squad, had chased Bailey to 228 North Oakley boulevard after he had attempted to hold up a poolroom at 2303 West Lake street.

Bailey had entered the poolroom and ordered a half dozen patrons to hold up their hands. As he did so, Joseph Turner, 26, of 2015 Maypole avenue, made a move for a telephone. Bailey fired at Turner, striking him in the arm. Then the bandit walked out. Sergt. Aitken and his squad saw him fleeing, followed, and shot him. Turner was taken to the county hospital.

GOVERNOR TAKES CHARGE OF HUNT FOR GIRL'S SLAYER

Posts $1,000 Personal Reward for Kidnaper.

Flint, Mich., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Gov. Fred W. Green arrived here tonight and after reviewing the efforts so far of Chief of Police C. J. Scavarda of Flint and Sheriff Frank Green of Genesee county to find the slayer of 5 year old Dorothy Schneider, kidnaped and killed last Thursday, ordered Oscar Olander, state commissioner of public safety, to assume direction of the man hunt. Olander, it was said, will arrive here tomorrow.

The governor also posted $1,000 personal reward for apprehension of the slayer.

Stain on State.

"This crime is so atrocious, so terrible, that for its perpetrator to remain at large not only would be a stain on the name of law enforcement and decency in the state, but would represent a menace to every citizen, father and mother or child," Gov. Green said.

The governor proposed to stay overnight and personally supervise the inauguration of the new order of things.

Meanwhile police continued to run down every possible clew to the slaying.

Detroit Police Hold Man.

A suspect, whose description, police said, tallied in many respects with that of the slayer, was taken into custody by Detroit police. The man, who gave his age as 57, could give no coherent account of his whereabouts on the day of the slaying.

Another clew, which was said to have involved a Bay City resident, was investigated tonight, but, according to sheriff's officials here, was without result. The suspect was said to have been cleared of suspicion when Archie Bacon, the Mount Morris farmer who unwittingly assisted the slayer to remove his car from a mud hole, was unable to identify him.

Two Die, Eighty Flee in New York Tenement Fire

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—A young woman leaped to her death and a 13 year old girl was suffocated in a fire which swept through five floors of a tenement house in Harlem early today. More than eighty others escaped. Police suspect the fire may have been of incendiary origin.

KING AMANULLAH AND QUEEN MAY VISIT COOLIDGE

Afghanistan Ruler Plans Week's Trip to U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Jan. 14.—King Amanullah of Afghanistan, whose state tour of the capitals of Europe is causing a considerable stir in political and economic circles, may make a week's visit to the United States in April, it was learned today.

The amir, who is in Rome, may cut his European itinerary three weeks in order to make a flying trip to America, which will include a state visit to the White House, marking the first visit of an oriental potentate.

Queen to Accompany Him.

It is believed the king, who is one of the most picturesque figures of the old world, due to his vigorous occidental reforms in his country, will be accompanied by his beautiful consort, Queen Badsha, who is visiting Europe with him.

The monarch's European visit is closely bound up with questions of great economic importance, due to Afghanistan's plans for industrial expansion through the investment of foreign capital. His visit to America would be for the purpose of inviting economic participation in his country's development, it was stated.

King George to Be Host.

The king and queen are due in London March 13. They will be guests of King George and Queen Mary for three days and afterward guests of the government for ten to fourteen days. The elaborate ceremonies will include a royal reception upon their arrival on British soil, probably by the Prince of Wales, followed by a state reception given by the king and queen at Victoria station in London, and a state banquet during their first evening in Buckingham palace.

REMUS' FORTUNE NOT ALL LOST; GIRL SAVED IT FOR HIM

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—George Remus, once millionaire bootleg king, although no longer a bootlegger, is still wealthy, if not a millionaire. While Remus was in the federal prison, Blanche Watson, who has earned for herself the title "the master mind of the Remus case," was busy managing Remus' fortune. And she handled his affairs so ably that if Remus comes back from the asylum where he was sent for killing his wife he may find himself richer than when he first went to jail.

A southern girl, born and reared in Kentucky, Blanche Watson is a romantic figure. For the last twenty-five years she has been in the whisky business and is considered an authority on its intricacies. Men from all over the country have come to her for advice on questions concerning it. Remus, when he went to jail, gave to her his power of attorney.

Bandits Rob Cop of Gun and $29 in Saloon Holdup

Three youthful shotgun bandits early this morning held up the saloon of Eugene Phillips, 4431 South Wells street, and robbed Policeman Charles Abt of the Chicago Lawn station of $29 and his revolver. Phillips lost $18. Abt was off duty and visiting Phillips when the youths entered the saloon.

RADIO BOARD AT CRISIS WITH ONE LEGAL MEMBER

Fate of Broadcasting Lies in Early Senate Action.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—On the federal radio commission today, although it alone stands between 30,000,000 broadcast listeners and the crazy wireless chaos of a year ago, there is only one lone member confirmed by the senate. This man is Eugene O. Sykes, former justice of the Supreme court of Mississippi, a man well versed in law.

The federal radio commission authorized by congress about a year ago under the pressure of an indignant public was to consist of five members. President Coolidge appointed five men. The President is said to have aimed at a well balanced commission. The chairman, the late Rear Admiral Bullard, bore an international reputation as a technician and administrator. Three others were skilled in electrical science. Another, Mr. Sykes, supplied the legal weight.

Bullard's Place Vacant.

Two of the commissioners have died—Rear Admiral Bullard and John F. Dillon. They and Mr. Sykes were the only appointees who were confirmed by the senate. The senate refused to confirm O. H. Caldwell, an electrical engineer of Bronxville, N. Y., and H. A. Bellows, director of radio station WCCO at Minneapolis. Although lack of confirmation compelled them to serve without any pay, radio broadcasting was in such a mess that they served out of a sense of public duty. After some order had been instituted in the broadcasting field, Mr. Bellows found it necessary to resign last October in order to earn a living.

The President named Sam Pickard, the then secretary of the radio commission, to replace Mr. Bellows, and also appointed Harold A. La Fount to the place left vacant by the death of Mr. Dillon. The President has not named an appointee for the chairmanship vacated by the death of Rear Admiral Bullard.

Shy at Hoover's Shadow.

At the present time Messrs. Caldwell, Pike and La Fount are serving on the federal radio commission without pay. The senate committee has refused to recommend approval of their appointments. Certain senators allege Mr. Caldwell is a "tool of the radio trust," that Mr. Pickard has no legal residence in Kansas which he claims as his home, but no reason seems to be set up for the case of Mr. La Fount.

The real objection to Messrs. Caldwell and Pickard is alleged to be that they are said to be recommended by Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover. Has the secretary of commerce dark designs on a monopoly of the radio broadcasting stations of the United States in behalf of his candidacy for the presidency in this year? Some of the senators on the confirming committee mutter darkly among themselves, but keep their secrets.

Board in Danger.

Meanwhile, just outside the wabbly gates, which so handicapped a commission has been able to set up, there is gathering a crowd of would-be broadcasters, chiefly advertisers of products who want to stampede in on the allotted wave lengths. Are the commission and its acts legal? High paid attorneys are ready to question it. Moreover, the law under the authority of which the commission operates expires in a few weeks.

There is considerable speculation among both political and technical observers in Washington as to the probable status of radio broadcasting in the United States in another month unless the senate consummates the radio act with confirmations and renewals of the existing law.

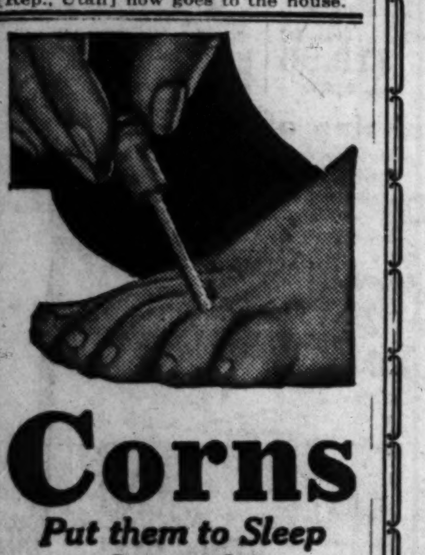
Moscow Sends $2,250,000 in Gold to the Germans

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Jan. 14.—Escorted by an armored car from Moscow, a specially fortified car containing 270 poods—almost four tons—of gold, worth 4,500,000 rubles ($2,250,000), arrived at the Latvian frontier, where a special military guard brought it to Riga. The gold is en route to Germany. The shipment is to cover credits now falling due.

Senate Votes to Change Name of Utah National Park

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—(AP)—The senate today passed a bill to change the name of Utah national park to Bryce Canyon national park. The measure, introduced by Senator Smoot [Rep., Utah] now goes to the house.



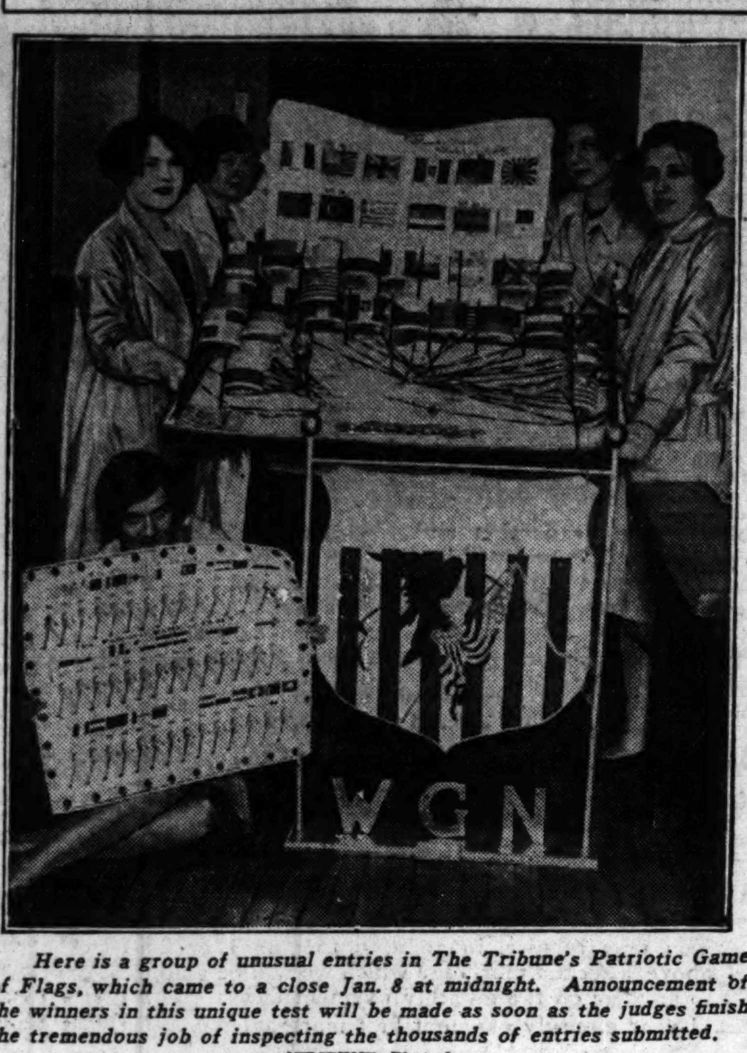
Corns

Put them to Sleep Instantly, then Lift them Off!

Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers.

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, and the foot callouses, without soreness or irritation.

More Entries in Patriotic Game of Flags



Here is a group of unusual entries in The Tribune's Patriotic Game of Flags, which came to a close Jan. 8 at midnight. Announcement of the winners in this unique test will be made as soon as the judges finish the tremendous job of inspecting the thousands of entries submitted.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

A Big Task

IT is no small task which confronts the judges in deciding the winners in THE TRIBUNE'S Patriotic Game of Flags, now that the entries are all in, for the game has excited such wide interest and so many players have taken part. The receiving room in Tribune Tower is filled to overflowing with elaborate designs that give evidence of painstaking and artistic skill. Many other contestants strove for neatness and accuracy only.

The elaborate and original settings for some of the flags have been worth the work put into them. Teachers write that their pupils have been stirred to keener patriotism by their efforts and that a greater pleasure in the study of history has been inspired.

One of the entries has on its cover a beautiful picture in colors, showing Betsy Ross making the American flag. One entrant writes that he worked his tapestry background with his "only hand." Some have pasted stamps of the various countries beside the flags. Others, possessing artistic skill, have drawn scenes characteristic of the various lands.

In the group of designs photographed above, one has the bronze statue of an American doughboy standing on the map of the United States while ribbons connect each flag with the country it represents. In the one with the U. S. A. emblem the eagle has been embroidered in frieze effect. Another entrant has embroidered all of the flags as an accompaniment to her cutout book.

Mistakes in putting the flags together properly have been made, however, in some of the most elaborate of the entries. Until the judges have picked and chosen and deliberated, no one will know who will share the $10,000 in cash prizes.

JACKSON FACES TRIAL ON FEB. 7 IN BRIBERY PLOT

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 14.—[U. P.]—Ed Jackson, governor of Indiana, will go to trial with two co-defendants Tuesday, Feb. 7, on charges of conspiracy to commit a felony in attempting to bribe former Gov. Warren T. McCray.

Agreement to proceed with the trial was reached between attorneys for the state and defendants at a conference today with Judges C. M. McCabe and James A. Collins.

ALLEGED CHICAGO SLAYER WILL BE TRIED IN ITALY

Matteo Ambrosini, 42 years old, an Italian subject, will be tried in his own country for a murder committed in Chicago more than three years ago, it was announced yesterday by Assistant State's Attorney Joseph A. Nicolai as he made preparations to sail for Genoa on Jan. 28.

Since Sept. 20, 1924, Ambrosini, who is charged with the murder of Mrs. Francesca Greco, 40, 1109 Vernon Park place, had not been heard from. Prosecutor Nicolai, at the behest of the relatives of the dead woman, had kept up the hunt for him, now and then sending a cable to the Italian authorities. The continued search finally ended on Dec. 28, 1927, when Ambrosini landed in his native country. He was arrested the following day.

Law Prohibits Extradition.

Under the Italian law one of its subjects cannot be extradited to another country for trial. The man can, however, be tried in Italy under its laws for the crime.

Documentary evidence is admissible against one charged with crime in another country. Prosecutor Nicolai with the assistance of A. Ferme, acting Italian consul general, has taken depositions of all the state witnesses, which have been translated into Italian for use in the trial. He also will take with him the cap which the slayer dropped as he shot his victim in front of 710 South Aberdeen street.

"They have no capital punishment in Italy," said Prosecutor Nicolai. "They have a life sentence with hard labor in the mines and it is that penalty which I will ask for Ambrosini.

Follow Different Procedure.

"The procedure is different than in our country. In Italy the prosecutor makes the formal charge and presents his evidence and then it is up to the defendant to prove his innocence. I feel confident that we will obtain a conviction without any difficulty."

Ambrosini is said to have shot Mrs. Greco because she served him with a five day notice to vacate a building she owned. She wanted the apartment for a daughter who was about to be married. The defendant deserted his wife and four children when he fled.

"I Could Have Sold Any Number of Dogs—If I Had Them—Through This One Ad"

IT WAS with a feeling of intense regret that Mrs. John Cummings of 5140 South Turner avenue called The Tribune Adtaker and directed her to place a for sale ad describing her police dog in the Want Ad Section. She hated to think of it, but she had to sell this dog . . . he never could be accommodated in the new apartment she was moving into. And now the very qualities that had endeared him to her . . . his perfect training . . . his enviable pedigree, complicated the sale. His purchase price would have to be unusually high . . . and, "No!" She would not sell him for any amount of money if she could not be certain that his home would be happy.

But her regret turned to joy when the results from her Tribune Ad came in. For a whole week an average of five people a day called on her, each intent on buying the dog. And Mrs. Cummings was able to get the price she wanted from a prospect who impressed her as being able to give her dog the best home.

"I could have sold any number of dogs for topnotch prices," she testified in her delight. This experience is another proof that Tribune Want Ads are the register through which Chicago pet fanciers buy! If you have any pets for sale list them here, where response is quickest and surest. Call—

"I had 5 or more calls a day for a week after my ad advertising a fine police dog I wanted to sell was published. From this great number of people I was able to pick one that would pay the highest price and offer my dog the best home. Just think! I could have sold any number of dogs at top-notch prices, if I had had them,—so many people came with the purpose of buying."

ITALY'S UTOPIAN LABOR SCHEME STRIKES SNAGS

Fascisti Attack "Heart" of Mussolini State.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, Jan. 14.—Italy's Utopian labor charter, promulgated last spring with much gusto as the bulwark of the corporative Fascist state and the nostrum for strikes and labor troubles, is not panning out to suit the wishes of its adherents, according to unpleasant facts presented by the Fascist authorities today.

Sig. Farinacci, former general secretary of the Fascist party, utters a cry of alarm in his newspaper, Il Regime Fascista, and the newspaper Il Labora D'Italia, chief organ of the so called Fascist labor movement, echoes Sig. Farinacci's discouragement with the following statement:

"The labor charter obtained by the Fascist revolution is constantly violated. Thousands of violations of signed contracts between labor and capital have occurred. Certain contracts between laborers and employers in the metallurgical trades never were put in effect."

In order to soothe the unrest, Under Secretary Bottai of the ministry of corporations [Premier Mussolini holds the portfolio] today explained the delays in enforcing the labor charter in the Duce's paper, Popolo D'Italia. He said the labor charter makes strikes illegal, provides state operated employment bureaus, and incorporates both labor unions and employers' associations under one organization, which has become a government ministry, with the idea of establishing the principle that the efforts of both capital and labor belong primarily to the state.

Sig. Bottai said the failure of the charter yet to function is because the task of practically working it out is stupendous. He declared laborers themselves in many instances asked for a renewal of the old contracts.

REED'S ATTORNEYS PETITION COURT TO RULE OUT CONFESSION

Ottawa, Ill., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Attorneys for Hiram Reed, alleged bomber of the Pleasant Valley school house, today filed a motion in Circuit court to set aside his confession, in which attorneys for the state claim he admitted that he planted the bomb in an effort to kill his fiancée, Miss Iola Bradford, because she was about to become a mother.

Reed's attorneys claim coercion and say the confession was falsely obtained.

He was kept sitting on a chair without food or water during the questioning, his lawyers charge, and was constantly harassed.

The following day, they charge, he was taken to the school house and made to go over the scene of the bombing in the presence of witnesses, who were then called to testify against him before the grand jury.

Reed, who is at the home of his parents near Mossville, will go on trial for the school house bombing at the close of the Harry Hill trial.

U. S. MAY HALT POLLUTION OF CHICAGO WATER

Jadwin Orders Inquiry in Calumet District.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Federal action to halt the pollution of Chicago's water supply by Calumet region industries may be the result of an investigation ordered today by Maj. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, chief of army engineers.

The investigation, which will be undertaken at once by Col. Edward H. Schulz, resident army engineer at Chicago, is Gen. Jadwin's answer to a complaint lodged yesterday by Congressman at Large Henry B. Rathbone.

Ohio river cities, faced with a similar situation, are demanding the passage of legislation to specifically prohibit the contamination of drinking water sources by industries and to provide imprisonment as well as heavy fines for violators.

Chicago members of the house hesitate to support the Ohio proposal sponsored by Representative Tatgenhorst [Rep., O.] on the ground that it is much too drastic. In addition, they point out, that under the 1899 rivers and harbors act, the war department is empowered to prohibit the dumping of any sort of material into navigable water other than that which reaches the water from streets or through sewers in a liquid state.

"I am informed," declared Representative Rathbone in his letter which moved Gen. Jadwin to order an investigation, "that the pollution of the waters of Lake Michigan adjacent to the city of Chicago has recently become much worse and now constitutes a grave menace to the health of upwards of 3,000,000 people.

"I am further informed that this pollution is largely due to the dumping of waste from and by certain industries located at the southern extremity of Lake Michigan in the state of Indiana and adjacent to the Indiana Harbor ship canal.

"As this canal and the waters of the great lakes are navigable it would seem that the war department has jurisdiction.

"Will you inform me at your earliest convenience whether the war department does have such jurisdiction? I hereby respectfully request and urge you, if it is in your power to do so, to investigate this pollution and its cause and to take such action as will prevent its recurrence."

SUPREME COURT GETS COOK COUNTY APPEAL IN PRIMARY RULING

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 14.—[U.P.]—Appeal from the decision of the Cook county Circuit court, holding the primary election act unconstitutional, was filed in the Supreme court here today.

Circuit Judge Fisher of Cook county entered his injunction order yesterday restraining Secretary of State Emmerson and county clerks from printing the ballots for the primary.

Records in the case immediately were shipped from Chicago to be here when the Supreme court meets in February or should the court decide to render a recess opinion.

QUIZ WITNESSES IN DISMISSAL OF TWO AS ROBBERS

Indictments for conspiracy to obstruct justice were predicted yesterday by Assistant State's Attorney Lee R. LaRochelle as he started his investigation into the dismissal of robbery charges against Daniel Mangan, 7135 South Morgan street, and Daniel Minihan, 518 West 47th street. Both have recent murder acquittals to their credit.

The arresting policemen told the prosecutor they seized Mangan and Minihan in the act of robbing employés of the East Auburn garage, 436 West 75th street, on Dec. 26. When the case was called before Judge William R. Fetzer in the Municipal court on Friday all the witnesses denied that a robbery was taking place, although in the original police statements they gave the details of the crime.

William Sheehy, one of the witnesses, admitted to Prosecutor La Rochelle yesterday, it was said, that he had wilfully changed his story because of fear of the defendants. He gave information which the prosecutor said indicated that another man had asked the witnesses to say the affair was not a robbery.

"The men were intoxicated a little, but it is true that it was a real stick-up," said Sheehy. "One of them was armed with a revolver and they searched all of us and took money from some of the victims."

Sheehy said the hearing before Judge Fetzer was brief. He was the first witness called and he testified that the affair was an argument, not a robbery. The other witnesses were asked if their stories were the same and when they replied in the affirmative the dismissal order was entered. The money taken from the victims was returned by the police and the gun used by the men was confiscated by the judge.

The four other victims of the robbery could not be found yesterday, but the police have orders to continue the search for them.

BEYER PLEADS NOT GUILTY OF RUM MURDER

Rockford, Ill., Jan. 14.—(AP)—John Beyer Jr., of Janesville, Wis., pleaded not guilty to the murder of William Petroff, South Beloit, Ill., when arraigned in Circuit court here today.

Beyer's trial was set by Judge Arthur E. Fisher for Jan. 23.

Beyer killed Petroff during what the former claimed was a liquor raid on Petroff's soft drink stand. He claimed self defense.

The youth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Beyer, of Janesville, were in court with him today. B. J. Knight is his attorney. The alleged murderer is held without bail.

FARM PRICES 10 POINTS HIGHER THAN A YEAR AGO

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—(AP)—The general average of farm prices on Dec. 15 at 137 was the same as on Nov. 15, and ten points higher than a year ago, the department of agriculture reported today in its monthly summary of farm prices and business conditions. Most of the commodities included in the index showed moderate price increases, but were offset by a decline in the prices of cotton and hogs, the report said.

With the exception of wheat, hay, potatoes, hogs, eggs and chickens, it said, most of the commodities are above last year's prices.

Although stating that business conditions in general during December appeared to have shown no material change from those of November, the report said production and freight distribution ended the year at levels considerably below last year. Factory employment and total wage payments also ended the year at lower levels and tended towards a lower purchasing power of industrial consumers at the beginning of this year.

The prospects for improvement on this factor of domestic demand depend upon the improvement of the automobile and iron and steel industries, which were largely responsible for the 1927 recession in industrial activity.

STATE FARMERS CALL NEIGHBORS TO CONVENTION

GOV. ADAM McMULLEN.
[Fotograms, N. Y.]

Over on the banks of the Mississippi river Illinois farmers are going to hold their thirteenth annual pow wow this week and talk about pigs, politics, and presidents. Members of farm bureaus in surrounding states have been called in to meet with the 5,000 members of the Illinois Agricultural association, giving a general midwest flavor to the convention, which is to be held at Rock Island, Ill., next Thursday and Friday.

Gov. Adam McMullen of Nebraska will address the convention at a final banquet in the Rock Island arsenal Friday night. He is an advocate of the equalization fee, the chief issue of the McNary-Haugen bill now pending in congress.

Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, will be there as an Ogle county farm bureau member.

This is the finest construction known—available heretofore only in the most expensive furniture. Nachman spring unit with 62 springs individually sewed in burlap used in all spring cushions.

Reinforced Webbing

The foundation of this new furniture is based on 3½-inch, red-striped webbing, reinforced, of usually heavy grade. The webbing is the finest money can buy, and we use as much of it as can be put on.

Smart, Up-to-Date, Beautiful Styles

Each suite is a masterpiece of the upholsterer's art. The suites come in any of the newest fabrics, such as linen velours, cut silk velvets, multi-colored Jacquard velours, tapestries, damasks, in all the newest colors. Particular attention is given to matching the color of the covering with gimps, welting, and fringe. We have many suites ready for immediate delivery. Or we will make up any suite in your choice of covering, to suit your taste and your other furnishings.

GUARANTEE: We absolutely guarantee that, irrespective of price, every Hartman living-room suite will be built exactly to our rigid specifications. This is possible only by the concentration of our buying power — the world's greatest furniture buying power — in our exclusive factory and in a few other selected, nationally known factories manufacturing upholstered goods. And you get all this without paying any increase in price.

Read Every Word Below for "Name" Suggestions and Ideas!

Hartman's present to the world something that will revolutionize the merchandising of upholstered furniture, something so new and epoch-making that we don't even know what to call it. We need YOUR HELP in finding a name, and we'll pay $1,000 in cold cash for the best suggestions.

Naturally you'll want to know what it's all about, and we'll tell you. We'll help you all we can to win one of the prizes.

Here's the Plan—

Heretofore upholstered furniture has been a mystery. By looking at a davenport or chair you couldn't tell anything about the merits of its construction, how well it would wear or how long it would retain its comfort and strength. All you could see was its outside; quality and beauty may have been only skin-deep. From now on it'll be different. We have standardized the construction of our upholstered furniture. Hereafter, when you buy a living-room suite or chair at Hartman's, you will know you are buying something that was built to our own specifications—specifications which reflect years of careful study of the public's wishes and needs, and expert knowledge of what stands up under hard usage. Whether you pay $99 or $1,000 for a suite you will get the same interior construction. The $1,000 suite won't be any better inside because the interior of the $99 suite is the finest money can buy.

Read Carefully:

This is our plan in a nutshell. You can see from its magnitude why we have trouble finding a name for our new furniture. This is such an enormous stride forward in giving better service and quality at lower prices, that we've decided to let the public find the name. And that means YOU!

Perhaps you'll want to know how we're able to carry out this great plan. Here's how:

First—Hartman's are the World's Largest Furniture Dealers.

Second—We took over a tremendous furniture manufacturing plant, where upholstered furniture is made under our own specifications. These same specifications must also be followed by other factories that work on Hartman orders.

Third, and most important—We will double and treble our business in upholstered goods through this new plan. Our exclusive plant will produce $1,500,000 worth of furniture in a year. Other factories, getting more business from us than from any other furniture firm, are glad to work to our specifications and under our rigid inspection. Through this quantity production we'll be able to offer custom-built pieces at prices no higher than you've paid for the mystery furniture of the past.

That's the story to keep in mind while hunting for the name that means money to you. In addition, read every word on this page—the specifications, methods of construction, quality of materials, etc. Also remember that our new upholstered furniture is second to none in quality, yet low in price. Your name must embody all these points.

Get Started at Once!

Get busy now and see what you can do! If you want any more information, look at the furniture at your nearest Hartman store. It's there on display. And be sure to have your suggestion in by midnight, January 31, 1928. Send in as many names as you want, accompanied by a letter of not more than 50 words telling why you selected your names. We won't keep you any longer. GET BUSY. A few hours of serious thought may mean a great big cash prize for you!

BECKMAN AND DEBAETS WIN BIKE RACE

MICHIGAN UPSETS INDIANA, 42-41; WISCONSIN WINS

BADGERS' UPHILL FIGHT WHIPS GOPHERS, 35-26

Iowa Is Victor Over Illinois, 36-30.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—All the fire and ballyhoo of an undefeated Indiana basketball team could not cope with the attack of an inspired Michigan quintet here tonight and the Wolverines, fighting for their first Big Ten victory, cut down a five point lead in the closing three minutes of play to win from the Hoosiers, 42 to 41.

Working an offensive which the Hoosiers could not stop, even by resorting to stalling tactics, the Michigan team led, 25 to 19, at the half. Indiana retaliated at the start of the second period by knotting the count while Michigan was held scoreless. Then, after vieing for the lead with only a point separating the teams, the Hoosiers managed to gain a 30 to 28 advantage and opened what appeared to be a perfect stalling game.

This was cut short, however, when Oosterbaan dropped in a short shot, after which Indiana's flashes, Beckner and Wells, managed to score six points against one for the Wolverines. Chapman, Michigan sophomore center, dropped two long shots, and Oosterbaan gave Michigan the lead by making his sixth basket. The home team then answered Indiana's game with a stalling defensive of its own, and despite a flashy drive the Hoosiers were unable to tie the score again. Lineup:

IOWA, 36; ILLINOIS, 30

Iowa City, Ia., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Doyle Plunkitt, sophomore forward, from Frankfort, Ind., gave the Illinois basketball team an entertaining twelve minutes here tonight and sent them back to Champaign as victims of Iowa's first conference victory of the season, a 36 to 30 triumph.

With Capt. Twogood hobbling about the floor obviously handicapped by a tightly bandaged ankle, things looked bad for the Hawks as Illinois got away to a five point lead. The game was ten minutes old before the Iowans could score from the field, Wilcox caging the first goal from the battle zone. For a few minutes the home boys held a 12 to 8 advantage, but Illinois passed them and held a 15 to 13 lead at half time.

Illinois drew away from the old gold team rapidly at the start of the second half and held a 25 to 18 advantage when Plunkitt and David, both sophomores, replaced Lawson and Harrison for Iowa. Plunkitt accounted for four field goals in the twelve minutes he was in the game, dropping in four of his seven long heaves for the hoop.

Lindsay, Illinois center, was the star of the visitors with five field goals and two free throws for high scoring honors. Capt. Olson played a flashy floor game, giving the fans an exhibition of expert dribbling and passing. Mills, Illini guard, had poor luck with his long range guns, scoring only one of fifteen attempts. Lineup:

BADGERS BEAT GOPHERS

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Making a whirlwind comeback in the second half after trailing in the first period, the Wisconsin basketball team won its third straight game in the western conference race here tonight from Minnesota. The score was 35 to 26.

The Badgers swept the Gophers and a record crowd of 7,000 off their feet in the second half. Meanwell's men left the floor at the rest period with the count 17 to 12 against them. Then the Wisconsin teamwork came into prominence for the first time in the game. The Badgers, led by Foster and Andrews, caged goal after goal until they had gained a commanding lead at 25 to 20. They kept this margin over Minnesota from then on.

The first half found Minnesota continuing its surprising play under Dave MacMillan, with the result that the home team overcome a Wisconsin lead of 8 to 7 early in the period to romp out in front at 17 to 12 when the half ended. The Badgers' team play was ragged in the first half. Andrews and Foster were the chief cogs in Wisconsin's comeback. Foster shot four baskets and one free throw in this session, while Andrews caged four field goals.

Long Beach, Cal., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Shooting a scorching 138 in the 36 hole qualifying round, Bill Mehlhorn of Wilkinsburg, Pa., today led by two strokes in the $2,500 Long Beach open.

GEORGE VON ELM.

Mehlhorn's card for today's 18 holes was 68, three below par for the Long Beach municipal course He took a 70 yesterday.

George Von Elm of Los Angeles, former amateur champion, finished the qualifying play as runner-up. His card of 71 today gave him an aggregate of 140 to carry into the 36 hole championship flight tomorrow.

Cooper Shoots 141.

One stroke behind Von Elm was Harry Cooper of Los Angeles, with a one stroke under par card of 70 for the day's play, which added to yesterday's round gave him 141.

Leo Diegel of New York shattered par by two strokes in his round today, turning in a card of 69 for an aggregate of 142. Charles Seaver, 16 year old Los Angeles sensation, continued his consistent play, taking a 71, one stroke less than yesterday, for a total of 143.

Willard Hutchinson of Pasadena, who led at the close of yesterday's play with a 67, reversed the figures today to 76. Five others finished with 143—Joe Turnesa, New York, 72—71; John Black, Oakland, 70—73; Leonard Schmutte, Lima, O., 70—73; Al Espinosa, Chicago, 72—71, and Larry Nabholtz, Cleveland, O., 73—70.

Smith in 144 Class.

Macdonald Smith, Long Island, N. Y., stylist, winner of the recent Palos Verdes and Los Angeles open tournaments, finished his qualifying play with 144 strokes in a tie with four others. His rounds for the two days were 72—72. The others were Billy Burke, New York, 71—73; Tommy Armour, Washington, national open champion, 73—71; Dick Linares, Long Beach, 71—73, and Horton Smith, Joplin, Mo., 71—73.

Five other well known golfers occupied positions in the 145 division. Al Watrous, Grand Rapids, Mich., pro, had 74—71; Willie Hunter of Los Angeles, 72—73; Frank Walsh, Appleton, Wis., 72—73; G. D. Paulson, Fort Wayne, Ind., 76—69, and Eric Bannister, Winnipeg, 73—72. Bobby Cruickshank had a total of 148.

In the Wake of the News

SILVER FOOTBALL.

KENNETH ROUSE of the University of Chicago will be presented tomorrow night between halves of the Indiana-Chicago basketball game with THE TRIBUNE's fourth annual football trophy for the Big Ten player of greatest value to his team in 1927. It is the first time this sterling silver football, actual size, ever has gone to the Midway, and Rouse achieved this honor for himself and his alma mater by the largest margin over his closest competitor in the history of the competition.

Precautions taken to insure fairness and impartiality in the award, perhaps the greatest tribute in middle western football, and Rouse's qualities which earned it, have been previously explained. Several Helpers, however, wish to take a final shot at the subject.

From "Duke E." we have: "Apropos the traits of Ken Rouse, I think few people know that he did not look at a sport page all during the football season. Ken says: 'I thought it might handicap me in leading the team.' This is a quality few football players possess and is further evidence that the right man was picked."

Here is another: "A great deal has been said concerning the strength of character, seriousness of purpose, and courage of Ken Rouse. These qualities I know, but there is another and that is his sense of humor. He enjoys a practical joke just as much as any of his fellow collegians. When a man's hat was seen sailing over the seats of the Frolic theater and landing on a woman's head, thereby causing much laughter and confusion, none present, I believe, knew the hat had been propelled by the famous captain and winner of THE TRIBUNE Trophy." The communication is signed "Owner of the Hat."

And here's from Helper "R. G.," to whom we ought to ask "Aincha got no sentiment?": "Now that Ken Rouse has won his silver football, what's he supposed to do with the damthing?"

Dunlap Named Head of Lake Yacht Group

Kenneth Dunlap of Milwaukee was elected commodore to succeed Kenneth Lockett as head of the Lake Michigan association at the annual meeting held at the Hotel Sherman yesterday. Fred Porter and Bayard Holmes were reëlected secretary and treasurer respectively.

Other officers elected are: Ralph Green, vice commodore of the motor squadron; George Orr, vice commodore of the sailing squadron; A. E. Gundelach, director representing power boats, and Kenneth Lockett, director representing sail boats.

Power boats officially were recognized by the organization when four clubs were admitted. At a meeting last year the association voted to admit power boat clubs. The clubs admitted are: Waukegan Yachting club, Mackinaw Bay Yachting club, South Shore Power Boat club and the Chicago Motor Boat club.

The association voted to hold its annual regatta on July 4 at Jackson park.

CHICAGO LANDS FOUR MORE BIG GOLF TOURNEYS

Western Open Goes to North Shore.

Four championship golf tournaments have been added to the list to be held in Chicago next summer along with the national open and the Walker cup competition, making a dozen title events for this city.

BOBBY JONES.

The western amateur championship yesterday was assigned to Bob O' Link club for Aug. 20-25, while the western open was set for July 25-28 at North Shore club. The women's western was awarded at the same time to Indian Hill club, but selection of the date was deferred. Also, the western junior was credited to Chicago, with time and links to be announced later.

Stein Amateur Champion.

The western amateur title is now held by Bob Stein of Seattle, who defeated Eddie Held of St. Louis in the finals at the Seattle Golf club last year, the second time the event had been played on the Pacific coast. The women's western crown also rests on the western seaboard, Mrs. Harry Pressler of Los Angeles having won it at Lake Geneva last year by defeating Bernice Wall of Oshkosh in the last round.

The western open title now has its home in Rochester, N. Y., Walter Hagen having won it for the second consecutive time at Olympia Fields, scoring 281 for 72 holes over two difficult links.

Outside Chicago there will be only four national meets—the national amateur at Brae Burn, Boston, Sept. 10-15; women's national, Hot Springs, Va., Sept. 24-29; national public links, Philadelphia, Pa., July 31-Aug. 4, and the professional golfers' championship, as yet unplaced.

National Open Stars June 21.

Chicago, with so many tourneys and more than 200 golf clubs, will start the season with the regional qualifying rounds for the national open on June 11, and 10 days later will watch Tommy Armour of Washington defend his national open title over the No. 3 course at Olympia Fields, the largest golf club in the world, with four 18 hole links and a clubhouse containing 14 acres of floor space. Bobby Jones of Atlanta, having forsworn defense of the British open crown, which he won last year for the second consecutive time with a record score of 285, plans to recover the American open title if possible.

Then will come the western open with virtually the same field as the national open struggling over the links of the North Shore club, which has been groomed into championship condition with every promise of making Sir Walter fight his best to obtain the title for the third year in a row.

Less than a month later the western amateur will hold forth at Bob O' Link, on the north shore also, and one of the few golf clubs to bar women. For several years, since the fair sex was excluded Bob O' Link has spent all its money on making a golf course that will resist most of the attacks on par.

International Match Here.

After a 10 day respite the international team matches between Britain and the United States will be played at the Chicago Golf club, on the far west side, Aug. 30-Sept. 1. This course, now brought up to latest requirements, has staged since 1897 four national amateur, three national open, and one women's national championship, and over its fairways there has been one British victory, Harry Vardon winning the open in 1900. Americans have retained possession of the Walker cup from the start of the competition.

The women's western likely will be wedged in between two of these events. The Chicago club also will hold half a dozen regional events to which some of the players from all over the country will be eligible.

OLD ALECK HEADS SOUTH; EXPECTS TO WIN 20 GAMES

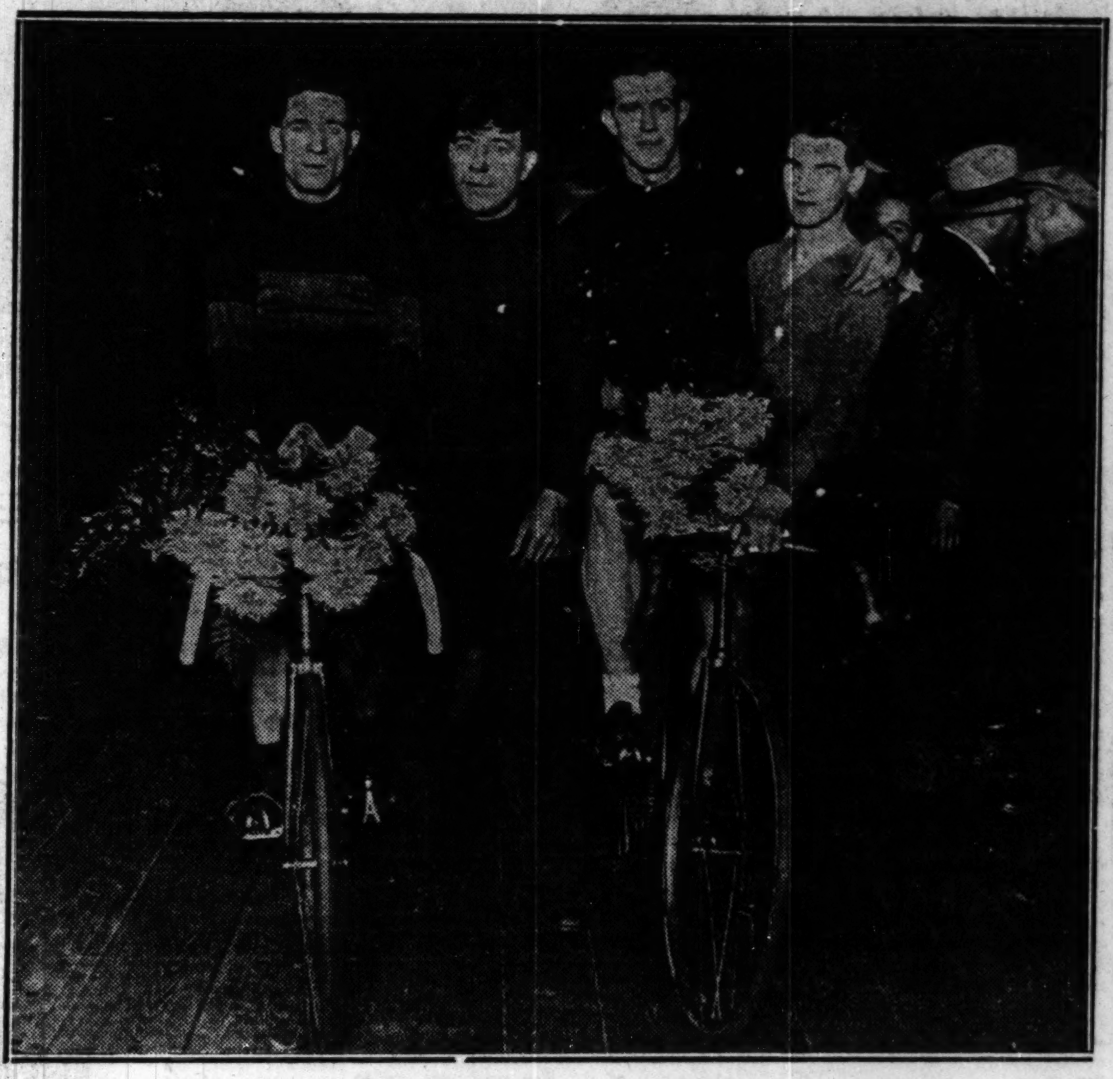
St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Grover Cleveland Alexander, forty year old pitching star of the St. Louis Cardinals, was a visitor here today on his way south to get into training early for next season. Old Pete and Mrs. Alexander were motoring to Florida.

"I'll get an early start at getting the old arm in shape," Alexander said. "We'll make our headquarters at Avon Park and tour the state until the Cards arrive. Yes, I expect to win at least twenty games this year if I don't break my neck."

Alexander said he was in good physical condition after spending the winter months hunting in Nebraska.

REACH NOWHERE 2 LAPS IN FRONT



Gerard Debaets (left) and Tony Beckman won the six day bike race, which finished at 11 o'clock last night at the Coliseum. The start was made last Sunday night at 10 o'clock. Debaets and Beckman won the race by a margin of two laps over Bobby Walthour and Freddie Spencer. Immediately after the race finished the winning pair circled the track decked with flowers while the crowd cheered.

All Is Chaos in Rickard's Hunt for Tunney Rival

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 14.—Instead of developing a logical party of the second part for a fight with Gene Tunney next summer the slovenly prize fight between Jack Sharkey and Tom Heeney in the new Garden Friday evening only made both of these ambitious young men look worse than the customers had thought them. In view of the fact that they are conceded to be the best of the new aspirants, this complicates the confusion.

JACK DEMPSEY.

Mr. Tex Rickard is earnestly seeking a prize fighter with a good left hand punch to the head because Jack Dempsey told him not long ago that the only one who will be able to beat Tunney is some one who can maintain a harassing program with a left hand in the region of the face.

Dempsey demonstrated a theory that this sort of punch, although it would not knock Tunney down or weaken him much, certainly would constitute a menace to his attractive profile and therefore would keep Tunney's right hand constantly a-flutter parrying the leads.

Going further, he developed the idea that Tunney's right hand is the one he uses for punishing purposes, and finally he arrived at the conclusion that a left lead, constantly maintained, would preoccupy Gene's only offensive weapon and, to state the matter bluntly, lick him.

In this there would seem to be an implied admission on Mr. Dempsey's part that he is not the one to lick Mr. Tunney, because his left hand is not a fancy affair, but just a punching hand. It would seem to imply also that Mr. Dempsey assumes everything would be strictly honest, which would be a naive assumption for one of Mr. Dempsey's experience.

However, Mr. Rickard is looking for somebody with a left hand of the sort that Dempsey prescribes, and he did think that Mr. Sharkey was the proprietor of such a left hand. He had seen Sharkey use this left on Jimmy Maloney's chin to prepare him for the right cross to the chin which knocked him out, and he had even seen Sharkey prod Dempsey himself square on his beeswax nose with the left in the first couple of rounds at the Yankee stadium last summer.

So naturally Mr. Rickard's best wishes were with Sharkey's left hand in the bout with Heeney, and naturally he was severely disappointed to see Sharkey try a few pokes at Heeney's face, miss most of them, and then abandon this sort of work almost entirely to drive the left into Heeney's body. It is a very hard, sharp penetrating left to the body, and the arm is so strong that Sharkey drove his punches in even when Heeney was trying with all his robust strength to hold it clamped.

But Mr. Rickard realizes that left hooks to the body do not bring the customers up shouting, and he knows that if this left hook of Sharkey's couldn't stop or even discourage Tom Heeney it wouldn't amount to much in the advertising matter for a championship prize fight with Tunney.

Jack Trains Only Three Days.

So the business prospects just now are not so good but that they might be several hundred per cent better.

On Sharkey's behalf it was explained that he trained but three days for the prize fight with Heeney, and the soft roll of slack flesh that hung over the rim of his belt testified for this alibi.

But this only goes to show how little the heavyweight prize fighters have to give for what they get. Sharkey and Heeney were fighting for generous shares of $161,000, and Mr. Sharkey, but a few years removed from toil at piece work wages at the work bench in a shoe factory, considered that he was giving the customers their due and earning his money by engaging in three days of mild calisthenics, a few round of mug-thumping in the practice ring, and 36 minutes of rough work, relieved by thirty or forty clinches of from five to ten seconds each.

SCHAEFER WINS BILLIARD MATCH

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Jake Schaefer vanquished Welker Cochran in their 3,600 point balkline billiard match here tonight by 3,600 to 2,864. Schaefer was victor in the afternoon block today by 300 to 57, but Cochran came back in the night play to win the final block by 375 to 300. The highest run for the match was established by Schaefer last night, 222.

GIRL TYPISTS TO ATTEMPT STRAITS SWIM FROM SPAIN

TANGIER, Morocco, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Balked in the attempt to swim the Strait of Gibraltar from Morocco, Miss Mercedes Gleitz and Miss Millie Hudson, London typists, have gone to Tarifa, Spain. From there they will try the 27 mile swim in the reverse direction.

Miss Gleitz said that experts told her that by starting from Spain she would be in a better position to overcome the treacherous currents which frustrated her last attempt.

Hahn Wins in Fast Time at Fordham Meet

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Lloyd Hahn, America's crack middle distance runner, tonight outraced a fast field to win the invitation half mile run at the Fordham games in the 22d Regiment armory, but failed by nearly two seconds to break the world's record for the distance.

Leo Lermond of the Boston A. A. captured the two mile special invitation race in 9:23 2-5. Edward Kirby of the Newark A. C. was second and William Goodwin of the New York A. C. and the joint favorite with Lermond, third, far behind Kirby.

Hahn was extended to win by Pincus Sober of the Holy Name club, who finished four yards behind the flying Boston runner. Edward Swinburne of the New York A. C. was third. Hahn's time was 1:56 2-5, compared with the twenty-four year old mark set by Eli B. Parsons of Yale of 1:54 3-5.

Next to last as the field of six swung around the first turn, Hahn quickly passed his rivals one by one and by the time the first lap had been completed he had pulled away to an eight yard lead over Sober, who was second.

Al Reach, Pioneer of Baseball, Dies at Atlantic City

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Alfred J. Reach, one of baseball's pioneers and among the organizers of professional baseball in this city, died today at the Marlborough-Blenheim hotel, Atlantic City. Mr. Reach was 87. He was president of S. A. Reach company, nationally known sporting goods manufacturers, with factories here.

ALFRED J. REACH.

Mr. Reach's death occurred on the sixth anniversary of the death of his partner, Benjamin F. Shibe, who died on Jan. 14, 1922, at the age of 84. Mr. Reach's death was attributed to a complication of ailments due to advanced age. He had been ill for some time and had been living in Atlantic City in recent years. Members of his family were at the bedside at the end.

Mr. Reach was the first great second baseman in baseball. His career was largely with the old Philadelphia Athletics during the sixties and seventies, just as baseball was emerging from a purely amateur sports into the professional field. In fact, Reach was Philadelphia's first professional ball player. He remained with the Athletics until after the organization of the National league in 1876, retiring to found the sporting goods firm which has manufactured the official American league baseball ever since.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Making one of the greatest uphill struggles in the history of the game in Chicago, the reconstructed team of Anthony Beckman, Secaucus, N. J., and Gerard Debaets of Belgium last night won the six day bicycle race at the Coliseum. The winning combination covered 2,288 miles and nine laps.

BOBBY WALTHOUR.

Second place went to the American combination of Bobby Walthour and Freddie Spencer, who finished two laps behind. The Holland-American pair, Dave Lands and Klass Van Nek, were third, three laps back, while the Chicago team of Hy Kockler and Eddie Merkner was fourth, four laps back of the leaders. Other combinations were strung out until Carl Stockholm and Alfred Grenda brought up the rear, eleven laps back.

Start Seven Laps Back.

Beckman and Debaets came into the race last Friday at 3 o'clock. Goossens was forced out of the race early Friday morning and his partner, Debaets, had to secure another mate. It was decided to break up the Beckman-Madden entry and team Tony with Debaets. They took the score of the lowest combination, which was seven laps back.

The new team made its presence felt immediately. Friday afternoon the pair gained two laps and kept plugging until they went into the lead shortly after 7 o'clock last night. They maintained their advantage for a time, and in another jam just before the final hour, they added another lap to their margin.

Just to show they had speed and endurance. Beckman started a jam during the twenty-fifth sprint. Spencer and Walthour followed, and the two combinations lapped the field.

Victory Pleases Fans.

It was a popular victory with the crowd, which favored the new team since the riders lost their original partners. Beckman was especially good in holding any advantage which Debaets gave him. This team won the recent Detroit race by three laps.

The final hour of racing was comparatively quiet. There was little jamming and most of it was done by the trailing teams, with the leading combinations not showing any inclinations to chase. In this hour of racing, during which every mile was a sprint, the team of Wynsdau and Vermeerbergen gained two laps. Stockholm and Grenda and Petri and Hill lapped the field and so did Croley and Gaffney.

McNamara Forced Out.

During the twentieth lap, Debaets fell when Lands and Van Nek were well on their way for a lap. Lands took a spill during the twenty-fourth dash when Walthour and Spencer appeared certain winners of an extra lap.

The race lost one of its favorites when Reggie McNamara was forced out early yesterday morning with a broken collarbone. Reggie bumped Gaffney on the north turn and the two fell to the track. An examination showed that Reggie's left collarbone, which was injured last Wednesday night, had been broken.

Charley Winter, his partner, was unable to secure another mate and the team was withdrawn from the race at 6 o'clock yesterday morning. At 1 o'clock yesterday morning the teams of Hanley and Rodak, Coles and Fenn, and Taylor and Willie Spencer were taken out of the race because they were hopelessly behind.

The jamming started shortly before 7 o'clock last night and kept up until the final hour of racing at 10 o'clock. This hard riding left the contestants tired, and when the final test came they did not feel like cutting loose with the speed which had featured their riding all week. In one of these jams Beckman caught the field sound asleep. Some of the riders were downstairs in the dressing room eating dinner, while others were being rubbed and prepared. Beckman and Debaets won their tying lap without much effort.

During the race 308 laps were stolen, which is a record for six day bike racing in Chicago. The next long grind will be held in the Coliseum next October. Most of the riders will leave for home today.

Following are the results of the sprints during the final hour:

FIRST—Won by Croley; second, Stockholm; third, Zucchetti; fourth, Benezatto.

SECOND—Won by Benezatto; second, Petri; third, Gaffney; fourth, Lands.

Want Angling Thrill? Try 'Tiger of Sea'

BY BOB BECKER.

There are land tigers noted for their killing prowess, and middle western sportsmen know of the fresh water "tigers," as the fame of the fighting muskellonge is widespread. But one of the most interesting "tigers" is the barracuda, the salt water fish which has received the name of "tiger of the sea."

At this time of the year, when thousands of northern anglers are on their way south to unlimber their tackle against salt water game fish, the savage barracuda is slated for more than ordinary attention. This species is found in large numbers in Florida waters (east coast), and every gulf stream fisherman who flings a lure overboard while trolling 'round the keys is going to encounter the roving salt water tigers.

By all means, catch a few barracuda on light tackle if you fish in southern waters this winter. Not that they are the world's greatest lightweight fighters. They're not. The inclination is there, but the barracuda is a long, slim, handsome fish, built for speed. He can't get a "purchase" on the water and pull like the amberjack, grouper, or other salt water species of deep bodied type. But don't get the idea that the slim tigers do not give a fight. They yank, pull, and thresh around in savage desperation, and should you be lucky enough to snag a 20, 25, or 30 pounder on light tackle you'll have fun galore.

We know of no game fish of the barracuda's size that totes around such an armament of long teeth as does this ruthless killer of the south. Woe to the angler who carelessly sticks his hand near a barracuda. Its mouth is studded with long "fangs," with which it can rip and tear with the speed and thoroughness of a hungry wolf.

On all our Florida fishing trips we have noticed that our guides removed hooks and lures from the barracuda's mouth in a curious fashion. And there's a reason. The guide would gaff the fish, bring it aboard, drop it in the fish box so as to leave the head protruding, and then slam! Down would come the cover of the box to hold the head of the fish like a vise. Then the guide would pick up a long pair of pliers to pull the hook from the barracuda's mouth.

Two winters ago we saw a large barracuda attack a five pound mackerel on our line and bite it in two as neatly as if some one had wielded a meat cleaver on it. On other trips we have had king fish and groupers attacked by the tigers before we could land them. Yes, sir, the barracuda is a tough customer. If you try southern fishing this winter be sure and get acquainted with him via the hook and line system.

KREMS DEFEATS KARTHEISER IN BOWLING MATCH

Rolls an Average of 221 for Eight Games.

Eddie Krems rolled eight games for an average of 221 in the All Star individual bowling league series at the Randolph alleys last night and easily defeated Frank Kartheiser. Krems was at his best, starting out with a count of 275 and was never headed. Kartheiser had to shoot 210 to get his initial victory in the fifth game and had to knock over 245 pins in the seventh to score his second and last triumph.

During the eight games Krems had but one count lower than 200. That came in the seventh when he sent 191 pins spinning. The score:

Krems, 275 213 208 229 203 229 191 227—Total 1,775. Average 221.

Kartheiser, 194 182 196 170 210 173 245 176—Total 1,546. Average 193.

Brothers—150 pair of them—started play yesterday for the annual brothers' bowling championship of Chicago on the Randolph alleys. Thirty-seven teams were firing at the pins during the day. The play will be resumed at 1 o'clock this afternoon and continue until midnight. The Dolan brothers had high count in yesterday's competition, knocking over 1,204 pins. The Reading boys were second with 1,190. It is expected that several higher marks will be turned in during today's bowling.

The Babe Ruths of the Harding league turned in a count of 3,301 for a season's record in Chicago in their series last week. Barney Krauss, the anchor man, got 776 pins, which included a perfect 300 game, when he piled up twelve strikes in a row in his second game. He had opened with a count of 209 and finished with the fine score of 267. The Ruths are in front by three games in the Harding league in one of the most interesting fights of the season. The Fergusons are in second place.

Hank Marino is hitting the pins at a terrific clip in the North End Traveling league and is well out in front for the individual honors with an average of 212 for 54 games. Joe Fliger is tied for second place with Eddie Krems, each averaging 208 for 54 games.

The Mayer Furniture company team has pulled away into nearly a four game lead and seems headed for the championship unless considerable bad luck is encountered. The league standing follows:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Mayer Furniture Co	37	17	.685

Big Ben Bernicchi was the big gun in the Windy City league play of last week, when he counted 725 for a new individual record for the circuit. He started with 226, got 253 in his second, and 246 in his third game.

The annual bowling tournament of the Catholic Order of Foresters will be held Feb. 4, 5, 11, and 12. The competition is open to all members and the secretary is receiving the entries at 428 Stock Exchange.

The Medora No. 1 team with M. H. Carr and F. Novak doing the heavy pin smashing has a two game margin over Michael Reese in the Royal Arcanum Bowling league. F. Walck of Michael Reese has averaged 194 for 27 games and is far in front of all rivals for individual honors. The standing follows:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Medora No. 1	26	13	.667
Michael Reese	24	15	.615
Medora No. 2	21	18	.538

The Anchors and Triangles are staging a hard fight for the leadership in the Morton Salt league. At the end of last week's series the Anchors were on top by only one game. Askelof's average of 180 has put him on top in the individual scoring race.

KNOX CONQUERS RIPON; PLAY 2 EXTRA PERIODS

Ripon, Wis., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Knox conquered Ripon college, 50 to 49, in a basketball battle featured by two overtime periods here tonight. Dick Jones, Ripon forward, missed a free throw at the final pistol crack which would have tied the game for a third time. The first overtime followed a 44-44 tie during which Knox and Ripon each scored a basket. In the second overtime Knox scored four points to total 50 and Ripon three, Jones making one free throw to bring the score to 50-49, and missing the second. The first half ended 36 to 30, in Ripon's favor. Lineup:

New Orleans, La., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Justice F, running in the silks of William Daniel of Chicago, won the Dade Memorial handicap carrying $2,500 in added money at the Fair Grounds this afternoon.

The race was at a mile and was decided during a rainstorm. Only five of an original field of 14 accepted the issue and during the early stages it looked like Senator Johnson N. Camden's Oh Susanna would make a runaway of it. She was well out in front for three-quarters of a mile, but Justice F came up on the turn into the stretch, challenged Oh Susanna and soon jumped into the lead.

It was easy for Jockey Pascuma to rate him along and win under wraps by three lengths. Oh Susanna was quitting rapidly and gave up second money in the final strides to Edward B. McLean's War Eagle.

Justice F was an odds on favorite, paying $3.46 in the $2 mutuels. It was the most decisive victory he has scored here this winter, and as he picked up 122 pounds and gave away weight to every other horse in the race, the performance stamps him as one of the best horses of this winter's racing.

Roy Gibson, the royally bred 2 year old which races for old John Troxler of Kentucky, hung up his second victory today in the opening race for juveniles. He was in front most of the way, with Bud Fisher's Pick Up second, and Alto, a previous winner here, third. Roy Gibson was bet on all over the country and paid $5.42 in the mutuels. He looks like the best 2 year old of the season here. He was ridden by Jockey George Ellis.

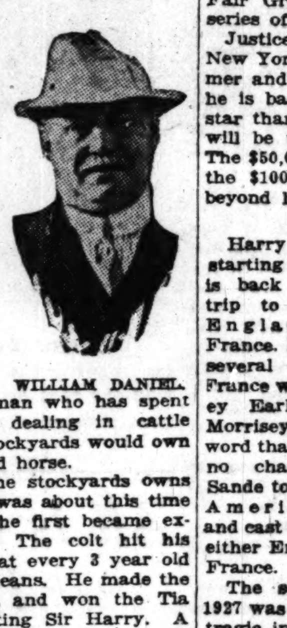
Daniel Believes Justice F. Will Win $50,000 Purse

BY FRENCH LANE.

William Daniel of Chicago believes his 4 year old, Justice F., will win the $50,000 New Orleans handicap to be run on Feb. 3. All the dope also points to a victory for the Chicago horse.



WILLIAM DANIEL.

A thoroughbred which comes down from the mighty Isinglass on one side of the house and the famous Tracery on the other should be a winter track champion. But it would hardly be suspected that a man who has spent most of his life dealing in cattle and hogs at the stockyards would own such a royally bred horse.

Mr. Daniel of the stockyards owns Justice F., and it was about this time a year ago when he first became excited about him. The colt hit his stride then and beat every 3 year old of note at New Orleans. He made the trip to Tia Juana and won the Tia Juana Derby, beating Sir Harry. A week later Sir Harry won the Coffroth handicap, and not long afterwards was third in the Preakness. But after this flash of greatness Justice F. settled back, became ordinary, and watched other champions develop during the spring, summer, and fall at the big tracks in Illinois, New York, and Kentucky.

Justice F. is an Englishman and was bred by the late Ben Irish. He was foaled in England in 1924. On his Tracery side of the house he perhaps gets the ruggedness that makes it possible for him to hold his own with our rough and ready American horses. For Tracery was one of the few horses ever imported from this country to England for stud duty. In his breeding Tracery is also English.

Justice F. is a brown horse sixteen hands high, a fine made and almost perfect lined individual. He is by Abbot's Trace-Icemond. Abbot's Trace raced for Lord Dewar in England and was a horse of tremendous speed, but his staying qualities at times were questioned. Abbot's Trace was by Tracery and Tracery was by Rock Sand, an English Derby and a triple crown winner in England.

So Justice F. comes by his class naturally. Not only on his sire's side of the house, for his dam, Icemond, was by Desmond, which was another English Derby winner. Desmond was by Strathglass and this sire was by Isinglass, rated by some as the greatest horse of all times on the English turf. Thus you have the Isinglass-Tracery cross or as some would prefer to put it the Isinglass-Rock Sand cross.

Justice F. came to America as a yearling and was purchased by Mr. Daniel. Another English colt, Master Charley, just had won the 2 year old championship for the Chicagoan who deals in hogs and steers. Strong for this English blood, the Chicagoan went to a high figure to get Justice F.

As a 2 year old Justice F. was sick throughout the summer. He opened his 3 year old form at New Orleans a maiden, but soon jumped into prominence as the best 3 year old at the Fair Grounds. Then came his long series of triumphs.

Justice F. failed in Maryland and New York during the spring and summer and was given a long rest. Now he is back as a 4 year old a greater star than he was as a 3 year old. He will be the horse to beat all winter. The $50,000 New Orleans handicap and the $100,000 Coffroth stakes are not beyond his fast flying legs.

Harry Morrisey, who officiates at the starting gate at most Chicago tracks, is back from a trip to Ireland, England, and France. He spent several days in France with Jockey Earl Sande. Morrisey brings word that there is no chance for Sande to quit the American turf and cast his lot in either England or France.

EARL SANDE.

The season of 1927 was the most tragic in Sande's life. His wife died in August at the height of the Saratoga meeting. Then came his suspension late in the fall in the Pimlico Futurity, one of the most drastic rulings during the year.

Joseph E. Widener arranged the trip to France for Sande. He believed it would help the little idol of the United States turf to forget the sad incidents of 1927. But Sande couldn't keep away from the race tracks and horses, according to Morrisey. The jockey spent much of his time with Frankie Keogh and other American riders in their training quarters at the Paris race tracks. As a result Sande is coming back to America in about ten days lighter than he has been at this time of the year in several seasons. He learned enough about European racing that it has no appeal to him unless it would be for an engagement in the Paris Grand Prix or the English Derby.

Sande told Morrisey he will make another appeal for his reinstatement to the Maryland racing commission in March. He hopes to have the ban against him lifted then. But even if he doesn't get his license he will not go to England or France to ride.

From Jake Lowenstein, the Chicago trainer and owner, comes word that the horse he is preparing to carry the silks of Morris Vehon of Chicago in the $50,000 New Orleans handicap is the 4 year old Laddie and not the 7 year old Ladkin. The horses are full brothers, both by Fair Play-Lading, and Mr. Vehon purchased Laddie from Joseph E. Widener. Laddie started thirteen times last year, won three races, was second three times, third three times, and only four times out of the money. He raced with the best 3 year olds in the east and Trainer Lowenstein believes he will develop into a handicap star as a 4 year old.

They will endeavor to get him ready for the New Orleans handicap, but his big campaign will come on Illinois tracks during the summer.

K. OF C.'S WIND UP FIRST ROUND OF CAGE RACE TODAY

O'Connor Meets De Soto in North Side Feature.

Concluding games in the first round of the Knights of Columbus basketball league today will bring out plenty of spirited competition in the five divisions, the schedule of twenty games bringing together most of the leaders.

West Presents Unique Card.

Ketteler and St. Francis, two of the leading quintets in the southwest division, will meet in the headliner at Morton High school. Santa Maria, which met its first defeat at the hands of Ketteler last Sunday, will meet the strong Cardinal quintet.

The west division presents a unique card with the four teams tied for second place being paired up. In the north division O'Connor, the newcomer that has been setting a fast pace, meets De Soto, one of the leading contenders.

Auburn Park vs. McHale.

The south division also offers an interesting card. Auburn Park and Aquinas and McHale and Dowling, who share the first four places, will go up against each other. The schedule:

The Canadian club soccer team will meet the Tablers of St. Louis in the first round of the national cup competition at De Paul field, Sheffield and Webster avenues, at 2:30 p. m. today.

Two other Chicago clubs also are involved in national title matches today, the Bricklayers playing the Gar Woods at Detroit and the Buda A. A. meeting the Morgan Haulers at St. Louis.

Sparta and the Swedish-Americans meet at 22d street and Kostner avenue at 10:30 a. m., and the Olympians and Vienna will clash at 47th avenue and 19th street at 10 a. m.

WHEATON WINS PAIR.

Wheaton took two games from Naperville last night at Wheaton. The heavies won, 25 to 15, and the lights 28 to 8.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Maxwell Chalmers, 1536 South Millard avenue, was awarded $5.

The Question.

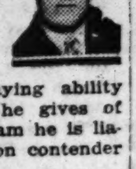
What do you think of the Giants' baseball trade which sent Rogers Hornsby to Boston?

Where Asked.

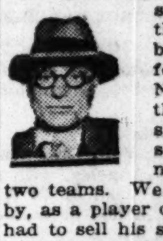
Washington at La Salle.

The Answers.

Guy W. Cooke, 33 South Clark street, advertising—That is a difficult question to comment upon. It looks to me as though the question of management between Mr. McGraw and the president of the New York club had induced the trade. It may that the deal was due to the notoriety that Hornsby received in connection with his race track activities. However, this is one of those questions that cannot be answered without a knowledge of the facts.



David Simpson, 1211 Columbia avenue, circulation cashier, Chicago Daily News—I believe the trade that sent Hornsby to Boston was done for the good of the game. Perhaps the main reason for his transfer was his gambling. Anyhow, his playing ability has not slipped and if he gives of his best to the Boston team he is liable to make it a champion contender this year.



F. R. Thompson, 6601 Peoria street, salesman—Considering the deals which have been put over the last few years between the New York Giants and the Boston Braves, I suspect there must be some ownership connection between the two teams. We all know that Hornsby, as a player on the St. Louis team, had to sell his stock to that team before he was allowed to become a player on the New York team. Now the New York Giants must have some hold on the Boston team, because of the many trades between them. I cannot figure it out otherwise.

Alfred Hoffman, 9433 South Hamilton avenue, poultry producer—I'll tell you that I was surprised at the change. It came so suddenly, and so unexpectedly. I am not familiar with the technicalities of the deal, so I can't discuss it from that angle. There must be some political or financial connection between those teams. As a result of the trade Boston may be a ranking team this year.

David C. Goldfine, 5426 South Harper avenue, advertising—Personally I like Rogers Hornsby. I think there was more of a personal feeling between Stoneham and Hornsby than there was between McGraw and Hornsby. McGraw has to go out some time and Hornsby should have been his logical successor. Maybe in a couple of years he will be bought back by the Giants to replace McGraw—that is, if the Cubs don't get him first.

3 WORLD SWIM RECORDS BROKEN IN A. A. U. RELAY

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Three world's records were broken, including Johnny Weissmuller's standard for the 100 yard back stroke, at the Metropolitan A. A. U. swimming championships in the Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A. tonight.

All the marks were shattered during a 300 yard medley relay race, the Brooklyn Central team bettering its former world's record of 3:14 1-5 with 3:12 4-5.

The relay called for back stroke, breast stroke, and free style. George Kojac of the Boys' club, national back stroke champion, swam the first 100 yards in 1:02 3-5, against Weissmuller's time of 1:03 2-5.

Kojac's advantage for the Boys' club in the first sprint of the relay was overcome in the next lap by Walter Spence of the Brooklyn Central "Y," breast stroke champion, who surpassed his former mark in swimming the second 100 yards by a fifth of a second. The new time is 1:08 1-5.

The contestants were started by a pistol shot in order to comply with the regulations for individual marks.

DAVIES, PETERS TO TRADE BLOWS AT WHITE CITY

Wee Willie Davies, flyweight champion of Pennsylvania, and Ernie Peters, local 112 pounder, will clash in the windup of Mique Malloy's boxing show at White City tomorrow night. On Friday night Eddie Shea of the west side will meet Ignacio Fernandez, the Filipino, in the banner event of Jim Mullen's show at the Coliseum.

Hall Meets McCarthy.

Davies is considered one of the leading flyweights in the game. He has won from Newsboy Brown, crowned flyweight king by the California boxing commission, and he has two wins over Corporal Izze Schwartz, who has been installed as the 112 pound champion by the New York commission. Willie is a smart two handed fighter who has been made a 7 to 5 choice over Peters, who ability is well known to local fistic fans.

Bill Hall and Jack McCarthy, local welterweights, will meet in the semi-windup, which will be supported by four other fights.

The Shea-Fernandez fracas is creating a lot of interest. The Filipino is a 6 to 5 favorite, but if Eddie has one of his good nights he is expected to make things hot for the Filipino.

Schaeffer on Card.

Frankie Schaeffer of the south side and Spug Myers of Pocatello, Idaho, will be the principals in the semi-windup. This should be a slugfest all the way, as both are give and take fighters who will try at all times for a knockout. They will box ten rounds and weigh 145 pounds.

Otto Von Porat, the Norwegian heavyweight, and Al Rood of Detroit will mingle in one of the ten round openers, and Jack Sparr, the California welter, will clash with Buckley Lawless of Syracuse, N. Y., in the other. All boxers are in the city and training at the Mullen gymnasium.

MANY FRIENDS TO MAKE TRIP WITH "BIG BILL" TO N. O.

"Going to New Orleans?" every friend of Mayor William Hale Thompson asks every other friend he meets and the answer is that several hundred of them are going.

Messages from New Orleans announce that the city is preparing to give Mayor Thompson and his friends a reception seldom accorded any one. Their official statements are that they are going to try to repay Mayor Thompson for his efforts on national flood control, and they will honor him and give him a royal entertainment during the three days of his stay there.

His invitation originally was to come to New Orleans and present the $50,000 purse to the winner of the New Orleans Handicap, the great horse racing event of the year down there.

Robert M. Perbohner and John P. Cunningham are in charge of arrangements on this end and already they have reservations for two special trains, leaving Chicago Feb. 1 and returning Feb. 5.

HINSDALE CAGERS BEAT LA GRANGE, 23-15 AND 23-19

Hinsdale High school cagers won a doubleheader from La Grange last night on the La Grange floor. The heavies, after being held on even terms in the first half, captured a 23 to 15 decision. In the lightweight game Hinsdale triumphed, 23 to 19. Heavyweight lineup:

GUILLERMO ROLLS UP 8 POINTS TO SCORE HI LI WIN

Señor Guillermo suddenly came to life in the jai alai series at the Rainbo fronton last night, and rolled up 8 points in a row to win the elimination 8 points singles game which came second on the program.

This was not the feature game; but Guillermo's play was so brilliant that it overshadowed everything else that happened during the session. It was the first time 8 points have ever been scored in succession here in a singles engagement.

Urizar, Joaquin Win Doubles.

Guillermo was an outsider down where the encouragers congregated and rewarded his followers at the rate of $8.40 for each two dollars invested. Modesto was second and Creus third, but neither threatened the winner.

The 15 point doubles engagements which found Urizar and Joaquin lined up against Uranga and Mugica in the feature match found the first named team the winner, 15 to 13. Urizar and Joaquin came from behind, tied the count at 13 all, then sailed on to victory. The mutuel price was $3.70.

Little Jeff Upsets Dope.

Little Jeff Santiago, the consistent loser, surprised everybody in the crowd when he came through with some brilliant shots in the fourth game and won from most of the stars in the local jai alai colony. He got 5 points in a row and it was easy for him to coast on home with Ulacia second and Pascau third. Little Jeff had a few backers present who collected at $8.90 in the palm garden. Summaries:

FIRST GAME — Elimination double, 6 points.

	Points.
Saiz-Anibal	6	4.30	out	out
Lizarralde-Uria	3		out	out

50,000 to Watch Champions in Norge Ski Meet Today

World famous ski riders will compete today in the twenty-third annual jumping tournament of the Norge Ski club of Chicago at Fox River Grove, near Cary. Meet officials are prepared to handle a crowd of 50,000. Close to 100 expert skiers are entered. The tourney starts at 1 p. m.

ANDERS HAUGEN.

Topping the list of champions who will take the air at today's tourney, which rates with ski fans as the Kentucky Derby ranks with turf followers, are the following:

Lars Haugen, St. Paul A. C., national ski champion; Nels Nelson, Revelstoke, B. C., world's record holder; Anders Haugen, Ogden Dunes club, former national champion and winner of last Sunday's meet at Palos Hills; Alf Bakken, Norge club, holder of the Cary jumping record; Strand Mikkelsen, western Canadian champion, representing the Norge club; Alf Jansen, former eastern champion and captain of the Norge team; Harry Lien, Olympic star, Norge; Le Moyne Batson, Westby, Wis., last year's Cary winner, and the famous Hall brothers, Carl and Clarence, of Detroit.

Norway Has Entry.

An international angle to the meet is added with the entry of Roy Mikkelson, who arrived in this country recently from Norway. Nels Nelsen and Tom Tapping will represent Canada.

The meet will be divided into two classes. Class A will consist of expert skiers. Class B will be composed of those with less experience. Two jumps will be taken and the contestants will be judged on their distances and form.

Fans' interest centers on the two Haugens and Nels Nelson, whose 212 foot jump at Revelstoke, B. C., on Feb. 4, 1925 is recognized by the National Ski association as a world's record. These performers most always ring the bell when they start as witness Anders Haugen's record jump at Palos hill last Sunday to win the Forest Preserve Ski club tournament from a field of 109 riders. This is the only meet that Nelson will enter in the United States this season, it is said.

Among the other entries are Wisconsin university's three star jumpers. Hans Troy, who leads Badger skiers, will compete in the class A event. Troy showed considerable skill at Lake Placid, N. Y., and made several long leaps. The other members of the team are Morris Waterman and Knute Dahl, both entered in class B.

In addition to Lars Haugen, who has won the class A national ski title six time, Hans Thorsdalen, national class B titleholder, will compete. Thorsdalen is coming from his home in Minneapolis to compete in class A. The Gopher entry is said to be one of the most graceful skiers in the country.

Ski Meet Is On

There will be no postponement of the Norge club's annual ski meet at Cary today, according to Johnny Ohs, secretary of the club, last night.

"The meet is on for certain," said Ohs. "We have checked with the weather bureau, and it assures us that there will be a freeze Sunday. We have plenty of snow to pack the slide and hill.

"Should it rain tonight it will make the meet more spectacular for the spectators, as it will put an icy crust on the snow and offer more opportunity for riders to break records."

List of Entries.

Other class A riders who will take part in the meet are:

Alf Mathisen, Christ Berge, Einar Jenseh, Rolf Jahren, Karl Nilsen, Arne Sletner, Oluf Skogen, and Fred Bruhn, all of the Norge club; Halvor Walsted, Racine, Wis.; Hans Hansen and Carlyle Lindholm, Lake Hills club; Peder Falstad, Sioux Valley club; Herbert Elfstrand, Duluth, Minn.; Alfred Ohrn and Barney Reilly, Forest Preserve club; Jorgen Johansen, Rockford; Arvid Bakke and Svein Welhaven, Milwaukee; Andrew Olson, Westby, Wis., and Walter Bratlund, Ironwood, Mich.

Class B riders are:

Thorolf Lund, Rockford, Ill.; Erling Gordon, Erling Lindstad, and Thoralf Guidbeck, Norge; Albin Nordby and Bjarne Erickson, Forest Preserve Ski club; Tom Tapping, Revelstoke, B. C., Canada; Rudolf Gundersen, Norge; Bert Wilscheck, Ironwood, Mich.; Erling Eide, Norge; Paul Christensen, Racine, Wis.; Harald Olson, Red Wing, Minn.; George Gunderson, Norge; Sig. Stedt and Anker Halvorsen, Norge; Reuben Onsrud, Westby, Wis.; Knut Johnsen, Racine, Wis.; Knut Bakkelid and Ingvald Bruseth, Norge; Hans Strand and Magnus Svensli, Rockford; Vincent Haben, Hammond, Ind.; Magnus Lien, Henry Larsen, Karl Lauritsen, and Leif Martinsen, Norge; Ted Stand, Rockford; Reidar Fjosne, Westby, Wis.; Dick Dean, Berrien Springs, Mich.; Victor Larsen and Wilh. Ursin, Norge; Reidar Lund, Ogden Dunes, Ind.; Oscar Knutsen and Gerhard Andersen, Norge; Fred Pabst Jr., Oconomowoc, Wis.; Buck Hedman, Hammond, Ind.; Henrik Lund, Ogden Dunes, Ind.; Lawrence Maurin, Milwaukee, and Elvin Aasen, Chicago.

Road Maps for Autoists.

According to the Norge club officials the meet will be staged regardless of the weather. The club has been carefully conserving four huge piles of snow under tarpaulins. In addition the jump yesterday was banked with seven inches of snow. The task of packing the snow on the slide will be finished this morning.

A road map in the automobile section of today's TRIBUNE will show those who expect to drive the roads to the meet. The most favored route appears to be over Washington boulevard west to River road, then north to Des Plaines from which point the Northwest highway leads directly to Cary. Trains will leave the Northwestern station this morning at 9:20 and 10:20 o'clock.

RECORD ENTRY WILL COMPETE IN TRIB ICE RACES

With close to a record breaking list of entries already received, nominations for THE TRIBUNE's twelfth annual Silver Skates Derbies to be held on the west lagoon of Washington park on Saturday and Sunday will officially close tomorrow at midnight. No entries will be accepted after this date, but any received in the mail on Tuesday which bear a Monday postmark will be accepted.

JULIAN T. FITZGERALD.

Although weather conditions have been unfavorable for ice skating, a couple of days of cold weather will leave the lagoon in excellent shape for the races on the week-end. There is plenty of ice, but it is covered with water and has broken away from the shore in places. A hard freeze will make racing conditions almost perfect, according to officials of the south park system.

Midwest A. C. Enters 42.

Despite the weather, entries continue to be received in large numbers. Julian T. Fitzgerald, who has done much for the sport in this section, and who is chairman of the athletic committee of the Midwest A. C., has nominated forty-two boys and girls for the various races. The list includes many well known experts and is a favorite for the trophy which will go to the organization which scores the greatest number of points.

In the boys' senior Derby such well known speedsters as Henry Nelson, Robert Reed, Julian Steinmetz, John Miniter, Fred Schultz, and Ray De Wyze will face the starter. Olga Anderson, Bernice Dolan, Florence Holmquist, and Minerva Bower will wear the club's colors in the girls' senior, and August Boehm, Roy Carlstrom, George Hansen, and Tom Jordan in the boys' intermediate. The team is well balanced and, barring accidents, should make a strong bid for the honors.

The Portage Park Skating club will be represented by twenty-seven entrants, according to the list submitted by Harry E. Mayfield, secretary of the club. Among some of the club's best performers are Ted Rill, Eddie Lange, Robert Thompson, Gerald Mayfield, A. Jacobson, Eddie Foreman, Wilbur Marks, Virginia Crowley, and Naomi Monger.

To Hold Preliminaries.

A number of clubs and playgrounds have not sent in their entries, and unless these are received before tomorrow night the skaters will not be permitted to race. This rule has been enforced in other years regarding post entries, and will prevail in this race.

As soon as the entries have been classified officials of the Western Skating association, who will handle the races, will determine the events in which trials will be necessary on Saturday.

Racing on the final day will start promptly at 1 o'clock, while the starting time of the trials will be announced later. The south park commissioners and employés are coöperating splendidly, and indications are the event will be more successful than the one of last year, which was held under the most ideal conditions of all previous TRIBUNE races.

Complete plans for putting on the races will be printed during the week, with instructions for contestants and officials.

WHAT YOU OUGHT TO KNOW ABOUT BRIDGE

BY R. M. ROGERS.

An original bid is to show the number of tricks in the hand, including quick tricks, either a no trump or suit, and not to show how many honors are held, and assumes three probable tricks with partner, and in a suit bid the ace or king or queen, one or three small trumps. The question for partner to determine is how to show by bidding or passing what he really has to help in the partnership.

R. M. ROGERS.

The skill in bidding comes after the original bid, and there are some features purely mathematical that are easily learned and shoud be known by every one who wants to be considered a good bridge player.

Last week we gave the only logical mathematical holding for an original bid. Today we will give briefly the holding necessary for partner to have in order to do his share for the partnership by a pass or overbidding an opponent or nominating a different bid.

Let us suppose second hand overbids the original bidder. If the partner has only what the original bidder estimated him to hold he must pass, and if on the second round the original bidder raises his own bid and intervening opponent again overbids, then the partner should raise the original bid to show that he has the estimated holding, but if he only holds two tricks he should again pass, and if the original bidder again raises his bid and is overbid the partner can now raise to show his two tricks, and thereafter should pass. Failure to hold the assumed trump will cause the loss of one trick for each shortage of one trump.

If partner has not the assumed holding of trumps he may warn his partner that the adversaries have more than their share of trumps by passing, or if holding 1½ quick tricks in his hand or a six card suit, he may make some other bid, and the original bidder can drop his own suit bid and support the partner, or continue his own suit, according to the makeup of his hand and his deductions concerning his partner's holding.

If the original bid was a no trump and intervening adversary makes no bid, it is the obligation upon the partner to bid a suit when having a void suit or worthless singleton or worthless hand in support of a no trump which the original bidder can accept or go on with his no trump bid, as judgment dictates.

Next week we will take up the opponent's course of action in defense against original bidder.

Below is given a hand to illustrate the bidding particularly of north and south, although east and west will also illustrate defensive bidding.

The bidding:

S.	W.	N.	E.
1 spade	2 hearts	Pass	Pass
2 do	3 do	3 spades	4 hearts
4 do	Pass	Pass	Pass

North has as good as three tricks and shows it by supporting south on the second round; east shows the same for his partner and north and east both show no further help by passing on the third round.

A bidder is justified in going far enough to be mathematically a loser if he fears that the adversary cannot be prevented from going game and rubber.

Bruins Sign New Center, 7 Feet 2 Inches in Socks

Chicago Bruins annexed the tallest center in professional basketball yesterday when George Halas announced the signing of Milas (Slim) Shoun, southern college star, who stands 7 feet 2 inches in his stocking feet, weighs 205 pounds and is 22 years old.

The human skyscraper will make his first appearance with the Bruins next Thursday night when they play the Cleveland club.

Shoun started his basket career at Johnson, Tenn., high school. Due chiefly to "Slim's" work Johnson was undefeated for three years. During his prep days the boy averaged 25 points per game.

At Carson-Newman college of Jefferson, Tenn., Shoun led the way to three consecutive championships. During his collegiate career the new Bruin averaged 21 points a game. His average in his last year of collegiate play was 29 points per game. In a game played for the title between Emery and Henry college and Carson-Newman college Shoun registered 44 points.

Shoun's home is in Mountain City, Tenn. He has a 15 year old brother who is 6 feet 8 inches tall and a 17 year old brother who stands 6 feet 10 inches.

MOTORDOM

Motor Leaders Regard Highway as Big Problem

Car Makers Discuss Basic Questions on Eve of Western Invasion.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The legions of the American automobile makers, whose initial display of brilliant wares at Grand Central Palace marked the beginning of another new era in car values and operation in this country and a definite indication of keen business competition for 1928, began to tear down the exhibitions today, preparatory to moving them on to the Chicago show, which opens at the Coliseum on Jan. 28.

The net disclosures at the eastern exhibition and gathering of the clans of motordom appear to lend credibility to the predictions that 1928 will be a year of overwhelming production and spirited sales. The readjustment of prices to the consumer, it would seem, has been made. Little further in this direction is looked for, for the present.

In the eyes of those who have observed the tendencies of the automotive trade for years, the dominant feature of the automobile production for this year is the lining up for an intensive competitive combat of Chevrolet, Ford, and the Willys-Overland Whippet division, with Chevrolet girded for action that will maintain its 1927 supremacy in the light car field. This triangle, as seen now in position for action, promises interesting developments for the ultimate consumers of the light car classification. Chevrolet chieftains perceive victory in the contest with Ford and ask only that the battle be started. No indication is held out that there will be a further cost reduction. In fact, there are surface symptoms of a complete stabilization of price as matters now stand, though minor manufacturing improvements may yet be announced.

In the upper brackets there appears no ground for dispute as to the advance in car values in all standard manufacture. Even the trade received a thrill at the showing of Essex, Dodge, Oakland, Pontiac and smaller Chryslers, while in the range of Graham-Paige, Oldsmobile, Auburn, Hupmobile, Studebaker and others of the straight eight all former efforts of makers seem to have been greatly overshadowed. In fact all leading makes of cars are offering excessive inducements.

By the time the Chicago show is under way the trade will have achieved its stride, in the opinion of most leaders, and the automotive business of the country will have settled down to the hard and serious labor of turning out cars and selling them.

The proposed addition of somewhere in the neighborhood of five millions of new cars this year has brought to the serious attention of manufacturers the growing problem of provision of sufficient highway facilities to bear the burden of this and other future increases in the volume of motor traffic.

Leaders in the industry are quite frank in their views concerning the lack of a proper balance between the increase of cars and the increase of highway facilities. They point out that the production of cars and the production of highways to accommodate the cars, do not coincide this moment and present few indications of coinciding, excepting in certain localities. Stress is laid on the necessity for the scientific treatment of the highway situation on a basis that includes future car production.

Much interest was expressed by men high in the councils of the giants of the automotive industry in the proposed Avondale highway project at Chicago. It was pointed out that speedways have been built in other localities with results that have been highly favorable, but that the Chicago project is one not only eminently progressive in the treatment of the rapid transit and safety features of motordom, but also of outstanding importance to the whole of the great metropolitan area, an extensive suburban area, and a wide country area in the Chicago district.

If the financing and building of the Avondale project is done with facility and no obstacles of importance are encountered, the development of other similar arteries, not only in Chicago, but in other large centers of traffic congestion through the country, is practically assured.

On the other hand, one eminent figure of the automotive business, in discussing the proposal, expressed the opinion that if public financing of such works as this proves too difficult a problem, there may be developed within a very short period of time factors which will offer sufficient finance to bring about such necessary public works in some such manner as were the toll roads and bridges of years ago.

While the practice of financing privately toll highways under public franchise and building them for operation as special service utilities faded with the pioneer days in the northern portion of the country, the plan has experienced latterly considerable revival, especially in parts of the south, where lack of roads and bridges made motor transit next to impossible and certainly impractical from an economical standpoint.

Private interests, however, have financed and built tunnels, bridges and causeways in more recent years, and the success of these enterprises has served to attract an ever increasing amount of capital.

The figures provided by Hugh E. Young, engineer for the Chicago Plan commission relative to the actual economies of motor traffic between the city limits and downtown Chicago, in connection with the Avondale studies, are uniformly convincing to the operators of motor cars.

The most illuminating point brought out in the studies of economy in motor car operation effected by the construction of such an artery as Avondale avenue, as designed, was that a net saving of 44 cents per vehicle trip would be possible. This economy, it was pointed out, is in addition to the saving of a considerable amount of time and the elimination of much of the hazard and responsibility of driving over the ten miles of highway.

If such economies as the one quoted can be established clearly by scientific means the leaders of the automotive industry appear to be of the opinion that any hesitancy on the part of governmental units to build required facilities will be met with a great flood of private funds. They feel that highway extensions and improvements are coming in increasing volume, and the problem of financing is a comparative simple one.

Creates Too Much Heat.

A late spark means overheating, and in winter many motorists allow the spark to fall too far behind schedule, according to engineers. At no other season is the damage from delayed timing so serious. It should be part of the motorist's routine to have the timing checked periodically.

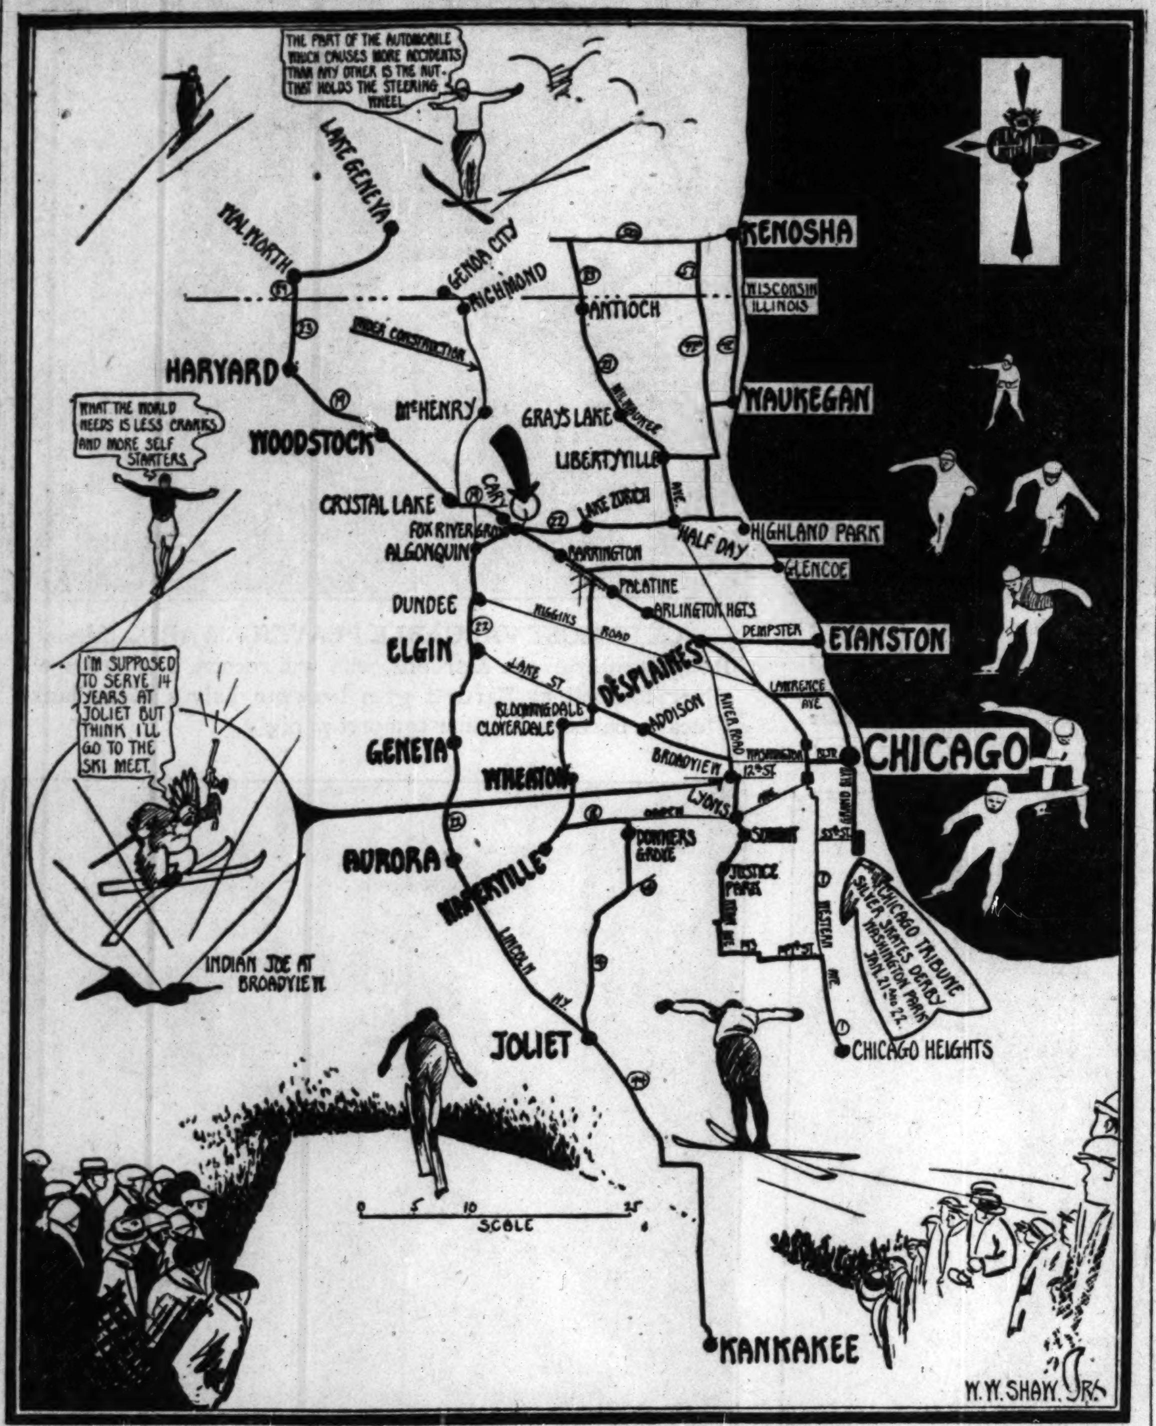
XXXIV.—ON THE TRAIL OF WINTER SPORTS



THROUGHOUT the country of which Chicago is the foreground the winter sports are now at an active stage. The skater, the ski jumper and the other out of doors enthusiasts who seek the wide open spaces in winter have come into a glorious era with the improvement of highways in every direction. All roads out of Chicago are reported as being in excellent shape for travel, and throughout the area much is offered for those who care either to participate in or to watch the winter sports. The ski meet at Cary today offers an interesting attraction. Northwest highway which reaches it is shown with its connections.

Iowa's Dirt Roads Swallow Value of Four Major Crops

IT TAKES Iowa's entire corn, oats, wheat, and barley crops to pay her dirt road transportation bill, according to figures compiled by the highway commission of that state. The cost of operating the 699,000 motor vehicles registered in 1926 is estimated at $314,608,000, while the value of the four principal crops that year was $313,367,000.

As a means of reducing the transportation bill, the commission advocates paving all the main highways and graveling roads with light traffic. To prove this claim, figures are quoted showing the saving on the three principal items, new cars, gasoline and tires, between dirt, gravel and paved roads.

Iowa spends $120,000,000 annually for new automobiles, it is stated. The average life of a motor vehicle on dirt roads is given as five years, on gravel six years, and on pavement seven years.

The annual bill for gasoline in the Hawkeye state is estimated at $50,000,000. Most of it is used in propelling vehicles on dirt roads, and tests made by the Iowa agricultural college show that a gallon of gas will carry the average car fourteen miles on a dirt road, twenty-one miles on a gravel road, and thirty-one miles on pavement.

The annual expenditure for tires is figured at $30,000,000. The annual cost of tires for an average motor vehicle is figured at $31.65 on concrete pavement, $63 on gravel, and $158.25 on average macadam.

Apparently the people of Iowa have come to the conclusion that the cost of riding on dirt is too high, for fifty-three counties have to date voted to authorize a total of $60,085,650 in highway bonds. From Jan. 1 to Aug. 31 200 miles of paving had been completed, and considerable more will be finished before freezing weather comes. Contracts for 186 miles of paving were let during July, August, and September. More contracts will be let later, and it is quite apparent that Iowa will be some distance ahead of Minnesota in paved road mileage by the end of 1928.

Automobile Makers Start Tug of War for Record '28 Business

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 14.—The tug-of-war contest, with every manufacturer participating in an effort to pull a record amount of business into his individual plant, is now in full swing. The automobile industry has done its part, and it is now up to the buying public to contribute toward making 1928 the banner year of all time.

For many months the industry looked forward to the opening of the National Automobile show in New York as the time the big drive would get its real start, and that classic event, which was successfully staged this week, found everything in readiness.

It was hard to believe that so much that is new in the automobile world could be offered at one time, but after a quarter of a century or more of show history along came the biggest thrill after the motor wise public was beginning to concede that all possible new kinks have been worked into the annual shows.

Leading manufacturers concluded months ago that in order to compete successfully with producers in the various class fields they would be compelled to show new models, and to what extent they have gone is well illustrated by show exhibits. Those familiar with the general appearance of every make of car were compelled to look at the nameplates before cars could be identified.

Among the new offerings this year are the Graham-Paige line [formerly the Detroit-Page], the new Hupp Century Eight, the new Dodge Victory Six, the Durant models, the latest Pontiac, the improved Whippet, the "Bigger and Better" Chevrolet, the Super Six Hudson and Essex models, the five new La Salle bodies, new Studebaker eights and the American Erskine, the Chrysler new line of high grade vehicles, and the Nash, Franklin, Buicks and Fords.

But with the many improvements which have been worked into the new lines there has been nothing in the way of price advancement. In fact, the trend has been downward to a seemingly dangerous degree from the manufacturing point of view. Ford steps out with a car that has a hundred dollars' worth of new trick to it at the old price, but is unable to fill orders on account of a slow start of production which is now approximately 200 cars per day.

General Motors follows Ford into the low price field with a new bigger and better car on which the corporation encourages the public to buy by slashing prices from $10 to $50 with the added attraction of immediate delivery. John Willys, president of the Overland, makes it harder for Ford and General Motors by announcing a new Whippet model on which sensationally low price tags have been tied.

This is classified as "friendly competition" and not to be considered as anything in the nature of a price war. The public is not at all particular, and will be satisfied to have it known as either price war or competition if the quality increases and the prices decrease.

Generally speaking, buyers will get smaller cars in the higher priced field and larger ones in the low price lines, while bodies are more roomy, with added comfort, than ever before.

Another entry in the low priced class is W. C. Durant with his new Star models. Improvements include a longer wheel base and entirely new body lines. There are four models—a roadster, coupe, two door sedan, and four door sedan. The price range is between $495 and $570, which places the line in direct competition with other manufacturers of low priced cars, including Ford, Chevrolet, and the Whippet. Durant announces his Star plant has a capacity of 600,000 cars in 1928.

The new line of Star cars commemorates Mr. Durant's twenty-fifth year in the automobile industry. In the last quarter of a century Durant created General Motors, Buick, and Chevrolet, and has continuously been a recognized leader in the industry.

The Ford plant is still on a low production basis, with a daily output of approximately 200 cars, but a promise is held out that this figure will be rapidly increased from now on, although the high point will probably not be reached before next September.

Employment in the automobile plants and accessories shops now totals 204,856, which is an increase over the preceding week of 17,640, and an increase over the corresponding week of 1927 of 960. This barometer of the industry shows conclusively the extent to which manufacturers are anticipating the demands for new cars. With all new models now completed, the plants are stepping into a more intensive production and fairly high schedules are being maintained.

Announcement is made that Capt. "Eddie" V. Rickenbacker, one of the best known men in the industry, has been appointed assistant sales manager of the Cadillac Motor company, specializing on the La Salle line.

With the New York show closed, attention is now directed to the twenty-seventh annual Detroit show, which will be held in Convention hall Jan. 21 to 28, and which, in size, ranks with the New York and Chicago exhibitions. The Society of Automotive Engineers will again be held here during show week and will include many hundred engineers.

General Motors Truck company has entered the one ton field with a low priced six cylinder truck, equipped with interchangeable bodies. The company is now moving its executive and production activities into the new $8,000,000 plant, just completed at Pontiac, Mich.

The Jordan Motor Car company has announced price reductions of from $200 to $300 on all Air Line eight series and Little Custom six series. The price reductions were effective Jan. 9.

* * *

The tire industry continues to operate at top speed in preparation for the heavy demand that will be made upon it as automobile production increases. Plans are completed to hold to the present high schedules for the next ninety days at least.

NINETY DAYS IN CANADA.

Automobile tourists from the United States are to be permitted to remain in Canada for a period of 90 days insteady of 80. The motorist must go to the nearest collector of customs and convince him that he is a bona fide tourist.

Patchwork Roads at Obsolete Width Worry Wisconsin

Highway Officials Point Out Defect in Lack of Continuity.

LACK of wide paved roads and of continuous routes on the roads that are now paved at 18 and 20 foot widths has begun to worry the highway authorities of Wisconsin. Although the state was one of the pioneers in the hard surface improvement of road systems, it now is revealed that the concrete roads were constructed more for the purpose of serving local communities than for creating a system of transportation for motor vehicles.

Outside the cities and villages no pavement of more than so-called standard width exists in Wisconsin's road system. For the last five or six years the situation has been recognized and promotion of the road widening idea has been stimulated. But in that regard no definite progress has been made, in spite of the fact that congestion in areas about the larger cities and in lake resort sections is such as to be considered a serious menace to safety.

"We hear with some alarm that it will soon be possible to travel on a hard surfaced road from Chicago or other points in Illinois north through Iowa, on the opposite side of the Mississippi from Wisconsin, to other playgrounds in the middle west," says the December Badger Highways, published by the Wisconsin highway commission. "We may soon discover that we are no longer living on the main road but that some one has built a road around us, without the least consideration of our interest or feelings. We leave it to your imagination as to what this change might mean to Wisconsin's future."

The article points out that although about 3,000 miles, or one-third of the entire Wisconsin trunk highway system, are paved, there is not a single through route paved, and few roads are wider than the original standard adopted in 1912. If this hard surfacing could have been located almost wholly on the primary federal air roads there would now be some excellent through routes.

"Nearly every one is familiar with the activity of the state of Illinois in its construction of a state system of through and wider roads," says the article. "We are becoming acquainted with the wonderful activity and awakening of Iowa along this line. Minnesota is not neglecting her opportunities."

Interest in possible Twin City-Chicago pavements is not confined to Wisconsin. When such a route is completed, it will not be a Twin City-Chicago pavement, but it will give continuous hard surface from many points in Minnestota such as Sauk Center, Brainerd, Belle Plaine, Owatonna, Grand Rapids, Hibbing, Virginia, Duluth, and intervening points, all the way to the Atlantic coast. Before any Chicago route is finished several more Minnesota communities may be linked to the system.

Some progress is being made on three routes which get most of the through traffic, but on each of them there are still long gaps of unpaved road.

On On U. S. No. 12 pavement from St. Paul to Hudson will be laid in 1928. From Hudson to Eau Claire there is concrete except about 12 miles which will be paved within two years. From Eau Claire to Madison is nearly all gravel, but beyond Madison it is nearly all paved.

On U. S. Nos. 61 and 16, via La Crosse and Milwaukee, the Minnesota portion, from St. Paul to La Crosse, is two-thirds paved and the balance gravel, nearly all bituminous treated. In Wisconsin the western half of this route is nearly all gravel, and the eastern half all paved, including the portion in Illinois.

One route which leaves out Wisconsin is via Rochester, Minn., and Dubuque, Ia. This is paved from both St. Paul and Minneapolis to Farmington, and will be paved from Farmington to Cannon Falls in 1928. This leaves 105 miles from Cannon Falls to the Iowa line and 124 miles from the Iowa line to Dubuque which are unpaved. From East Dubuque it is possible to drive on pavement to all parts of Illinois.

USE MUCH RUBBER.

Automobiles use 84 per cent of the rubber production, 350,000 tons annually.

News and Views of the Auto Trade

NEW maps of the highway system of Cook county, including state roads completed during the last year, have been issued by the board of county commissioners and county highway department and are ready for public distribution. Copies may be procured, if desired, at the Public Service office of THE TRIBUNE at 1 South Dearborn street, where a supply has been placed. The maps contain representation of all surfaced highways completed or passable, if in the course of construction, as they existed on New Year's day.

Announcement is made by Nash Motors of the appointment of Milton H. Pettit, long identified with the industry, as general manager of the Nash company. Mr. Pettit has been a vice president of the company for eighteen months. He previously was connected with the Simmons company of Kenosha.

Price reductions have been announced on three models of Peerless cars, the amount of reduction ranging from $50 to $750.

There have also been reductions ranging from $200 to $300 on eight and small six models. The cut became effective last week.

* * *

The largest outright individual purchase of motor cars from the Studebaker corporation in the company's history was made recently by Henry R. Levy, Chicago distributor. The company reports that Mr. Levy's purchase consisted of 1,013 cars and amounted to $1,014,650, paid by a single check.

THE ONLY CAR OF ITS KIND IN THE WORLD

The Victory Six has been called, and with due moderation, a triumph of engineering foresight, for in many basic features it is years ahead of its time.

And for numberless puzzled motorists it will simplify the problem of selection, for nowhere in the world is there a car like it. Greater expenditure will not duplicate it. It compares with no other car or class.

To possess this car's unique advantages you must possess this car.

A Radical Departure in Body Design

In this car, for the first time in history, the body sill is eliminated. Body and chassis are built as a single integral unit.

Thus, the wide, deep chassis frame of The Victory, now flush with the lines of the body, avoids the customary overhang of a wide body upon a narrow frame; and the chassis itself, rather than the body, supports all weight—body, floor, seats and passengers.

Amazing Results

The results of this construction are astonishing.

330 body parts are eliminated.

175 pounds of superfluous weight are cast off.

The all-important CENTER OF GRAVITY is materially lowered.

Without the slightest sacrifice of head-room or road-clearance, the over-all height of the car is also lowered—one of the secrets of The Victory's great beauty.

The amazing resources of the car's brilliant power plant are multiplied still further by perfect distribution and economy of weight.

Power in relation to load is materially increased—pick-up quickened—far greater flexibility achieved.

21 valid miles per gallon at 25 miles per hour is made possible FOR A SIX! Incredible smoothness at high speed is another great gift of this new design!

Startling as it may sound, smooth going AT 40 over rough cobble pavements is another!

Elimination of back-wheel "chatter" when the 4-wheel Lockheed-Hydraulic brakes are quickly applied is still another!

And thanks to The Victory's low center of gravity and wide chassis frame, swaying, skidding, tipping—each a factor of weight and its proper and improper placement—are reduced to a new and negligible minimum.

Another New Safety Feature

Yet Dodge Brothers have taken a further revolutionary step to insure the safest motor transportation it is possible to create.

For the first time in automobile history, they have applied the so-called battleship construction to closed car design.

In other words, the body has a double steel shell, locked together, with an air space intervening—is actually TWO bodies, one within the other—yet lighter by 175 pounds—and the safest body known.

Only 8 Major Body Parts

Yet The Victory is amazingly simple in design throughout.

Splash shields are replaced by the deep, wide Victory chassis frame. Major body parts are reduced to 8—a single welded unit! Nothing to squeak or rattle. A silent body—staunch, safe, long and low.

LEECH SUGGESTS HIGHER REWARDS FOR SCIENTISTS

BY HARPER LEECH.

The increasing conscription of ability by business and the threatened enfeeblement of the imaginative arts thereby may be viewed calmly if that draft on intellect and character does not also raid science and engineering.

The weakest spot in our social and economic set up is right there. With all our inventors and their world shaking achievements, it is probably true today that we offer disproportionate rewards to business organizers, salesmen and financiers, as compared to the return of engineers and scientists. The men who organize to produce the things that science and invention make possible, the men who organize to finance production and to sell the output are dependent on a constant stream of new scientific discoveries and applications for the rise and growth of those new industries the functioning of which makes capitalism an ever going concern.

The entrepreneur of the older individualistic capitalism was not infrequently something of an engineer, or an inventor or a researcher. But the large scale corporation now hires researchers and inventors and also depends on the endowed or tax supported efforts of universities and government scientific bureaus. A crying need of our time is the greater application to engineering and research staffs of the principles of management participation prevailing in such modern corporations as General Motors, Woolworth, Studebaker—to name a few examples. Such systems of compensation are being tried.

General Electric, various motor companies and many utilities have gone far in that direction. It is an every day occurrence for some scientific professor to be yanked out of a university berth and given a chance to make some money—but even then it is all too frequently the case that he is in effect asked to abandon fundamental work in pure science to devote his talents to something promising a more immediate return.

No view of the cultural aspects of contemporary capitalism would be complete without noting that engineering and architecture are developing a new art for the new age. Our modern buildings, bridges, textiles, automobiles and locomotives, even, are becominz "easy to look at." Are artists making business beautiful or is business itself producing an age in which a new type of art is naturally evolving or are our tastes being changed by our economic environment, so that things now seem beautiful which once seemed otherwise?

This column is entirely incompetent to discuss such a question. This, however, is plain—as our modern structures, cars and other gear get rid of the vestiges of past ages and become more efficient—more harmonized to the power driven machinery which makes them possible—they seem to be more beautiful. The automobile has grown more agreeable to the eyes in the degree that its designers have gotten away from the horse and buggy concept. The modern building has grown more beautiful in the degree that it has recognized the elevator and forgot the stairway—and so on.

St. Paul Railway Bonds Leaders in Day's Trading

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The long list of bonds of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul raiload spurted upward again in today's market, giving a little color to an otherwise dull session. Other railway liens pursued the even course of the last few days, with an undertone of easiness. Erie 7s were offered in considerable amounts, but were supported a small fraction under the last closing price. Seaboard All Florida B 6s also sagged lightly.

Dominion Iron and Steel certificate 5s again spurted upward, reaching 98½ for the first time in a year or more. Columbia Gas 5s reached new peak territory on a small turnover. Convertible issues moved upward in the fist hour, but subsequently fell back on profit taking. Moderately large offerings of Polish 7s were absorbed with little net change in price. Otherwise the foreign group attracted little attention, and prices established no definite trend. U. S. government obligations were inactive.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

While a few of the loop banking institutions' shares recovered last week from the profit taking which started the first of the year, the majority of the list continued to seek lower levels. Union Trust was an exception, being strong throughout the week and establishing a new high record in selling at 690, an improvement of 40 points. Continental National Bank and Trust displayed a good tone and closed in good demand at 559 with offerings at 562. The bid price for Chicago Trust rose to 455, up 5, without attracting sellers. National Bank of the Republic improved from 464 to 468 bid, 471 asked.

Bank of America was freely offered at 336 with best bids at 332. Central Trust was in supply at 460, off 5. First National relinquished 15 points in selling down to 838 bid, 842 asked. Foreman National was steady between 655 and 660. Illinois Merchants lost 10 points at 945. State Bank of Chicago was about 4 points lower at 628 and 632. Stock Yards National was the feature of the outlying shares, scoring a 15 point rise to 355 bid, 360 asked.

Industrial issues were in better demand and moderate advances were recorded. Acme Steel Goods moved up from 79 to 83, prior to its listing on the Chicago stock exchange. Beatrice Creamery was a point better at 65½; while the preferred improved 2 points to 105 bid, 108 asked. The bid price for Bucyrus preferred was increased from 109 to 110 without attracting sellers. H. Channon common changed hands at 17½, up 4. The first and second preferred issues were unchanged at 94 to 96, and 100 to 102, respectively. Chicago Daily News common continued to advance, and reached a new high level at 43½ to 45. The preferred gained a point at 99¾ bid.

Creamery Packages full voting and nonvoting stocks were fractionally higher, the former at 30½ to 31, and the latter at 30 and 30¼. Elgin National Watch was quiet and practically unchanged between 60 and 61. Federal Electric common was wanted at 15; while the preferred advanced 3 points to sales between 64 and 66. The bid price on First State Pawners was 2 points better at 137. Sales in Godchaux Sugar first preferred ranged between 21 and 22. Goodman was neglected at 50 and 51. Numerous bids of 6½ were again noted for Henney Motors.

After a period of inactivity Kellogg Company common was dealt in between 172 and 176. The McCord issues lost a portion of their previous advances, the common was offered at 8¼ with buyers at 7¼. Both the debenture and class A stocks were a point lower at 17 to 18, and 65 to 67. National Tea preferred was in good demand at 104½ with offerings at 105¼. Northwestern Yeast relinquished about 5 points to 197 bid, 199 asked. Pyle National rose 2 points to 43 bid, 44 asked. Van Ess Laboratories was inactive at 9¾ to 10½. German Dye Trust Plans Artificial Oil, Gas, Silk

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—A general meeting of Germany's $250,000,000 dye trust was held at Frankfort today and approved of the issue of $65,000,000 worth of new obligations. The czar of the dye trust, Geheimrat Duisberg, announced that funds will be used to develop the production of synthetic oil, gasoline and artificial silk.

Herr Duisberg reported optimistically on the activities of the German dye trust, which this year will be able to pay 12 per cent interest despite the fact that great sums have been lavished on the completion of synthetic gasoline plants.

The German dye trust gave the details of its alliance with French chemical plants, which it signed Dec. 14, and it is hoped to perfect an alliance with the British chemical trust.

Motor Stocks A Purchase Now?

Motor trade reports forecast record output for 1928. What about net earnings—and stock prices? After favoring purchases during 1924 and 1925, American Securities Service in special motor report Jan. 8, 1926—note arrow—pointed out how conditions had changed, and recommended sales. Compare later trend. Dodge, Pierce-Arrow and Jordan are now low. Can they be bought, safely for a broad advance? Has General Motors passed its peak—or is it destined for even greater prosperity? What of Ford?

Another report, just prepared for our clients, answers these questions with definite facts and forecasts. A few extra copies reserved for distribution free. Simply ask for "Special Motor Stocks Report."

Further advances on the week end trade boosted the general average price of hogs to $8.45 yesterday, highest since Thursday of the previous week and 25c above last Wednesday. Light weights scored the sharpest gains, showing 40@50c advance since midweek, with underweights and pigs in spots as much as $1.00 above four days ago. Light brought top prices more readily than butchers. Fancy 160@280 lb averages topped the list at $8.60.

Hog Receipts Smaller.

Hog receipts last week at 188,000 were smaller than any corresponding period since 1923, comparing with a five year average of 238,800. Three years ago receipts totaled 321,975. Weights were heavier, lifting the week's estimate average to 231 lbs., the heaviest since the first week of last November. Despite smaller supplies, the week's general average price was lowered 25c at $8.25, within 15c of the low week last year, and $3.65 under a year ago.

Prime weighty beef steers held a high position all week, the top at $18.65 being within 35c of the peak in 1927 and 40c above the highest sale the previous week. All urgent orders called for weight. Top yearlings stopped at $16.50, averaging 1,000 lbs. Reports showing a 6 per cent decrease in the number of cattle on feed in leading corn belt states forced further gains in best classes at the extreme close. Others finished barely steady, with cows and heifers showing a loss.

Lamb Market Top Heavy.

Following a 50@75c break in fat lamb prices after the middle of last week, the market finished in a top heavy condition on par with the lowest level since January, 1927. A government report of a 10 per cent increase in lambs on feed in principal corn belt states was released last week and had a weakening influence. Lambs this winter are exected to average 3@5 lbs. heavier than a year ago.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 20,000 cattle, 63,000 hogs and 28,000 sheep, against 22,682 cattle, 48,771 hogs and 21,650 sheep a week ago, and 28,218 cattle, 47,522 hogs and 16,320 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 57,000 cattle, 210,000 hogs and 100,000 sheep, against 64,604 cattle, 182,375 hogs and 90,566 sheep a year ago.

BOARD OF TRADE REPORT REVEALS HUGE RESERVES

President John A. Bunnell of the Chicago Board of Trade presents a favorable showing for the association in his yearly report to be given to the members Jan. 16. He will report satisfactory relations with the U. S. department of agriculture, declare the new clearing house system works well, and that the cotton trading department has justified itself fully in its third year. He also will refer to the members' approval of the new building.

The balance sheet of Jan. 9, 1928, showed liabilities and surplus of $2,712,648, compared with $2,133,780 on Jan. 3, 1927. The treasurer's report showed receipts of $1,611,599, against $1,357,962 the previous year. Disbursements were $1,518,022, compared with $1,281,698 the previous year, leaving a balance of $93,577, against $164,952 last year. The board has $855,000 in bonds, compared with $652,526 last year. In 1927 it handled 123,992 cars of grain moved into store and 60,876 cars taken out. This was less than in 1926. There were 53,451,000 bu of grain handled, against 60,524,000 bu in 1926.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

While there was some sales of corn and barley for export at the seaboard and a little wheat the general demand was regarded as slow. Norway was credited with taking 60,000 bu rye. English dealers were after corn for shipment to continental ports, and an inquiry was understood to be in the market for a full cargo. Bids generally were somewhat under sellers' views.

Domestic shipping sales here were 10,000 bu wheat; 101,000 bu corn, and 18,000 bu oats, with 10,000 bu barley sold to exporters. Deliveries on January contracts were 10,000 bu corn.

Red winter wheat remains scarce and the basis was 1c higher at 10@11c over the May. Basis on other kinds was steady with No. 2 hard, 1@1½c under, and No. 1 northern May price to 3c under. There was little change in the basis at Kansas City and Minneapolis.

EGG FUTURES ADVANCED

Fresh eggs for January delivery advanced to 40⅝c and closed at 40⅛c, a net gain of ⅝c. February gained ¼c and closed at 28⅛c. April storage packed closed unchanged at 28⅞c, with November refrigerator up ⅛c at 30⅞c. Sales were 141 cars and arrivals 5,102 cases.

January storage butter closed ⅛c higher at 43¼c, and February up ⅛c to 43½c. Sales on the Chicago Mercantile exchange were 41 cars and receipts 11,794 tubs.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Trade sentiment in grains at the close Saturday mainly was bearish, particularly in corn, owing to expectations of a larger movement. Receipts at Chicago for the week were more than three times the shipments, and there were reports of an enlarging movement in the southwest. Several of the commission houses had selling orders for futures from the southwest. Pit traders who have been bearish and fought the advance all week were active on the selling side, while the buying did not appear to be as urgent as of late. There was active buying of bids after the close.

The main bearish argument in wheat continues to be the statistical situation and the lack of outside support. Traders are also disposed to follow any weakness in corn.

"If any one thinks that our corn is too high or that it has been advancing too rapidly, they should give attention to the fact that on Oct. 20 our May corn was selling at 89⅝c, on Jan. 13 it closed at 92¼c," says A. T. Martin. "Compare this with the fact that on Oct. 20 December corn in Buenos Aires was selling at 78⅜c, while January corn on Friday was 90⅝c, an advance of 12⅜c. This comparison emphasizes strength of corn in our competitive market and shows that our own domestic market has not advanced as rapidly as that in Argentina."

PRODUCE MARKETS

A feature of the produce markets on Saturday was the decline of ¼c in the spot butter market to 46⅝c, for extra creameries, and ½c advance in eggs to 43½c for fresh firsts. In live poultry, prices were unchanged.

Cold storage holdings on the first of January, as reporetd by the United States department of agricultuer, bureau of agricultural economics, follow:

COTTON MARKET LOWER

Cotton markets were weak all day and closed at nearly the bottom with prices down well toward the lowest level of the season. Selling was attributed to the fine weather over the cotton belt and predictions of an increased acreage this season.

Reports from the dry goods trade were said to indicate an unsettled condition. A report from the treasurer's department ruling on bagging manufacturers in reference to jute is causing considerable comment in the cotton trade—an imposition of 40 per cent advalorem duty on jute bagging containing cotton salvage.

PROFIT TAKING LOWERS WHEAT, CORN PRICES

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Grain markets were firmer early, but free profit taking sales and increased pressure brought about a decline of 1¼@1⅜c from the best figures on wheat and 1¼@1½c on corn and the finish was well toward the bottom, with wheat showing a net loss of ⅜@½c at the last.

March wheat closed at $1.29@1.29⅛ and May at $1.30⅛@1.30¼, while corn was off ⅝@1c, with March 88¾@88⅞c and May 91⅜@91½c. Oats finished unchanged to ¼c lower and rye ⅛c higher to ¼c lower.

Forecast for a cold wave over the wheat belt and relative strength in Liverpool led to scattered buying and a small upturn at the start, but selling against offers filled buyers up and when corn started downward support was less aggressive and it was not until there was buying against bids that the decline was checked. The northwest was a persistent seller of the July, while spreaders bought July and sold May.

Export Demand Slow.

The trade looks for a good reduction to be shown in the domestic visible supply on Monday, with probably little change in supplies on ocean passage. Foreign demand for cash wheat was slow, and no sales of consequence were reported. Liverpool and Buenos Aires finished unchanged, and Rosario ⅝cc lower. Winnipeg resisted pressure and was unchanged at the last. No. 2 red winter on spot here was 1c higher as compared with May, selling at 11c over the future.

Profit Taking in Corn.

Corn was firm at the start with local bulls buying, but the market declined rather sharply later on the forecast for much colder weather and increased country offerings to arrive, all leading markets reporting the country showing a disposition to sell. Houses with southwestern connections were good sellers of futures at times, and the decline was easily attained. Expectations are that receipts at terminal markets will show a good increase within a week.

There were strong intimations of export business in corn from the seaboard, with the demand improving, but no figures were given. Spot basis was unchanged to ½c higher here. A fair increase is expected to be shown in the visible supply statement on Monday.

Commission houses and local traders bought oats, and the market showed a firm undertone, easing toward the last in sympathy with corn. A car of No. 1 white oats sold on spot by Lamson Bros. at 60c, the highest price since the spring of 1925. Buying by houses with eastern connections was responsible for the relative stength in rye. The seaboard reported 60,000 bu sold to Norway.

PROVISION MARKET EASY

A fair business was on in provisions, with a little more pressure from packers and traders while the buying was somewhat restricted, despite the fact that hog prices were strong to 1c higher. Predictions of a larger run for next week, 200,000 at Chicago, lead to selling and weakness. Lard closed 12½c lower in Chicago, while Liverpool futures were 3d higher and spot up 6d.

Expectations are that there will be a fair increase in stocks in Chicago shown in the semi-report on Monday. Exports of lard were 2,230,525 lbs.

Trade in meats was light, with bellies unchanged to 2½c lower and short ribs unchanged. The cash trade was fair, with larger shipments of lard and meats than a week ago, and a year ago. Prices follow:

DRY GOODS MARKET.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Curtailment of production in the cotton goods division continued to spread and is gradually having a stiffening effect upon gray cloth prices. Demand was in moderate proportions. The call for finished goods for spring is increasing. Raw silk was slightly off. Burlaps were quiet. In the wool goods division there was a sharply increased call for printed flannels for spring and summer wear.

Playing the Market.

While we do not recommend dealing in stocks on "margin," we realize that a vast number of people are doing this all the time—many of them believing that they are investing.

It is a dangerous game for the amateur and we strongly advise against it for those of limited means.

We realize, however, that most of those who have tried it probably will keep on playing the market in spite of their better judgment or our advice, so we want to make a few remarks on the subject which we hope may be helpful to them in one way or another.

In the first place, the amateur speculator is entering a business about which he knows nothing.

There are professional operators who make a life study of the stock market.

It is their business or profession and they specialize in it just as the man in any other business or profession specializes in his own particular line.

The amateur speculator who goes into the market is attempting to match wits with these men in their own business.

It is obvious that the odds are heavy against him right from the start.

He blunders around with "tips" and "hunches" and rumors, and is lucky if he gets out with a whole skin.

He usually buys an advancing stock because he has watched it climb for some time and thinks it will continue to do so.

Too often he decides to buy about the time it has reached its peak—just before a reaction sets in.

Frequently the amateur is attracted to low priced stocks because he can buy more of them and he thinks they should some time get up to par—not realizing that they are low priced probably because they are not really worth much and may never be.

Another factor enters in which usually prevents one who actually has potential profits from taking them.

This is that trait of human nature which makes one always greedy for more.

If one has a few points' profit on paper he is inclined to hold for a further rise, hoping to get one or two points more.

If, instead, the stock drops off a point or two, he does not want to sell, as he feels he might have sold for more and wants to hold until it gets back to the high point again.

In other words, it seems to be human nature not to sell while a stock is gaining, nor yet when it starts to decline.

The result, too often, is that one holds on until he is forced to sell or put up more margin.

In marginal trading the potential profits are large, but so, also, is the potential loss.

The amateur speculator is too apt to think only of the profits he expects to make and to shut his eyes to the consequences of loss.

Speculation is never safe.

It is not a poor man's game.

If indulged in at all it should be only with money that one can really afford to lose.

Our advice to those who feel that they must play the market is:

Be sure that you have ample margin.

Buy only stocks of successful concerns that are paying dividends (so, at least, you are getting a return on your money if forced to hold for some time).

Choose your stocks—not from their market fluctuations but from a knowledge of the condition, record, and earnings of the company.

Be content with a reasonable profit on your capital and sell when that profit is attainable.

A good rule would be to figure on the amount of profit you would be content with—say three points, perhaps—and give a selling order to the broker when you buy the stock to sell it whenever it reaches that figure.

This would eliminate the human element which makes you hold on too long, and you simply would be betting that your stock would go up, say, three points before it would go down close to your marginal limit.

Remember that it is better to take a small profit than to take none at all.

It is better to be sorry that you sold your stock at a reasonable profit and that it later went higher than to be sorry that you did not sell it.

Our 47th Anniversary Gift

Once again we celebrate the closing of a year of safety and satisfaction for our thousands of investors in every state in the Union.

Millions of dollars worth of Cochran & McCluer first mortgage real estate gold bonds have been purchased without the service of a single salesman (we employ none).

We appreciate this recognition of the Cochran & McCluer direct plan of serving investors—a plan which gives the purchaser the highest interest rate consistent with safety, now 6½%, and the personal attention of our officers.

As a mark of our appreciation to our regular customers on our 47th Anniversary—and as a token of welcome to new investors—we have chosen this beautiful lamp as a gift to each purchaser of our certified first mortgage bonds, either for cash or on payment plan, while this offer is in effect. Bonds are in denominations of $100, $500 and $1000. As little as $10 starts you on the Retire in 15 Years Plan and entitles you to our attractive gift offer.

The lamp, with its rich colors and tasteful Spanish Galleon design, will be a charming addition to any home. By a touch of the finger, it may be regulated to six varied degrees of light—from gentle glow to vivid brightness. It will make an appropriate and decidedly attractive gift. We can make this offer for a limited time only.

Retire in 15 years
on your present living budget

Follow the definite plan in this new book and your financial independence is won. The plan works just as surely, whether you are now earning $1000 or $100,000 a year. Phone, call or send coupon for free copy.

What Market Position Is Sound Now?

Heavy transactions, gold exports, latest earnings statements, also record brokerage loans combined with present level of prices—these call for critical analysis now.

Have current declines placed the market already in sound position? Or do these recent reactions point to further declines of real consequence? Which stocks are safe to hold and which should be sold?

Our latest "Security Market Review," treating these matters, is of special importance now. Sample copy free. Address

STOCKS DECLINE ON MONEY SCARE AS WEEK CLOSES

YESTERDAY'S AVERAGES

	High.	Low.	Last.	Net chge.
25 railroads...	119.16	118.41	118.52—	.52
25 industrials..	242.23	239.90	240.18—	2.05
50 stocks......	180.69	179.15	179.35—	1.28

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The stock market ended the week with a general decline, although there were no bad breaks in prices. The market started off with a show of strength, but met with a large volume of profit taking and professional selling that carried the whole list down.

Final quotations disclosed a long list of issues with net losses ranging up to 6 points in some of the specialties. The volume of trading was unusually large for a short two-hour Saturday session. Total transactions were 1,135,100 shares. The weakness of the market was attributed to nervousness over the money situation and fears that the federal reserve banks will tighten money rates by either selling securities or increasing rediscount rates.

Nervous Over Money Rates.

The statement of the federal reserve system, appearing on Friday, indicated that the banks had sold a large amount of government securities, which would have the effect of drawing money out of the market, curtailing credit, and firming money rates. There are fears that this process may be carried further.

But other news of the day was more cheerful. The weekly report of the New York clearing house banks showed a deficit on reserves of $30,707,540, compared with a deficit of $62,374,630 a week ago. The reduction in the deficit is constructive, although the banks may call in more stock market loans this week. The weekly mercantile reviews reported more activity in trade and industry, although trade conditions continue uneven.

Standard Industrials Sold.

The industrial section of the list bore the brunt of selling today. The standard industrials were steadily liquidated. United States Steel declined 2 points and General Motors lost 2¼, while losses ranging up to 4 points were shown by Baldwin Locomotive, Allied Chemical, American Smelting, General Electric, and Radio Corporation.

Among the specialties, Case Threshing Machine and Greene Cananea dropped 6½ and 6 points respectively. Losses ranging from 2 to more than 4 points were incurred by American International, Borden, Brooklyn Edison, Calumet and Arizona, Cuba company, Devoe & Reynolds A, Du Pont, Equitable Building, Foundation, General Asphalt, International Match preferred, Kraft Cheese, Liquid Carbonic, Midland Steel preferred, National Surety, Standard Milling, Timken, United States Cast Iron Pipe, United Drug, and Wright Aero.

A Few Specialties Advance.

A few of the specialties ran counter to the trend. Manati Sugar preferred was bid up 5 points and smaller gains were made by American Snuff, the American Linseed issues, Archer Daniels, Continental Insurance, Dunhill, Kress & Co., Fidelity Fire Insurance, General Outdoor certificates, Gimbel preferred, Lambert, Savage Arms, Sinclair preferred, and Vick Chemical.

In the railroad group Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis dropped 4½ points, and smaller declines were shown by Atchison, the St. Paul issues, Louisville and Nashville, New York Central, Nickel Plate, Norfolk and Western, Northern Pacific, Pere Marquette, Ptitsburgh and West Virginia, Texas and Pacific, Western Maryland, and Western Pacific. Lehigh Valley gained a point.

CHICAGO STOCK MART ACTIVE BUT WEAK; EVANS SHARES RISE

Chicago stocks were unusually active in yesterday's week-end trading and prices were moderately lower. Fractional losses were shown by National Leather, Swift International, Auburn Auto, Morgan Lithograph, Northwestern Engineering, and Sears Roebuck.

A few issues ran counter to the trend. Consolidated Film common made a fractional gain, but the preferred showed weakness. Borg & Beck held about steady. On light trading Evans Auto Loading A and B advanced 3 and 4½ points, respectively; on reports of large business and good earnings and the possibility of extra dividends Keystone Steel gained two points.

Walgreen preferred was traded in initially on a when-issued basis between 106 and 108, and the warrants to purchase common stock ranged between 6 and 8.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE

Money in Chicago held at 4½@4¾ per cent on collateral; commercial paper, 3¾@4¼ per cent, 4¾@5 per cent over the counter. Bankers' acceptances, 3@3⅝ per cent. Chicago clearings yesterday were $120,300,000, compared with $171,700,000 a week ago and $102,400,000 a year ago. New York clearings yesterday totaled $1,206,000,000.

NEW YORK MONEY MARKET.

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Prime commercial paper, 3¾@4¼%. Bar silver, domestic, 57⅝c. Mexican dollars, 44c. Call money steady; all loans 4%; closing bid 4. Time loans: Steady; mixed collateral 60-90 days 4⅛@4¼; 4-6 months, 4¼@4⅜.

Dated December 1, 1927 — Due Serially December 1, 1929, to June 1, 1943

THE NEW YORK TRUST COMPANY, TRUSTEE

Security: This issue is secured in opinion of counsel by a First Mortgage on the leasehold estate comprising approximately 24,549 square feet and five-story and basement, steel, brick and stone exterior building containing approximately 127,664 square feet, including Post Office equipment owned by the corporation. The lease to building site is for 99 years at annual rental of $29,662.50 until 1930. In 1930 annual ground rental will be increased to $32,487.50, which increase in rental is applied towards the purchase of fee. The lease further provides that fee may be purchased outright at any time at option of The United States Parcel Post Building Company and is also renewable for further period of 99 years from date of expiration. Legal title to premises has been passed upon by Messrs. Day and Day, Cleveland, Ohio, and certificate of title has been issued on land by the Title Insurance Company, Cleveland, Ohio. Adequate insurance will be carried at all times, payable to Trustee for protection of bondholders. Purpose of this issue is to retire bonds of this corporation which are outstanding at higher interest rates.

Basement and first three floors are occupied by the United States Government Post Office Department, under non-cancellable leases at an annual rental of $78,072.50. The two upper floors are occupied by two responsible firms at an annual rental of $27,367.20 until January 1, 1930 and in the event the Government does not require the fourth and fifth floors beginning 1930 the same tenants will pay an annual rental of $34,209.00, making total annual rental for the building, beginning January 1, 1930, $112,281.50.

Valuation: The leasehold estate in land, building and equipment owned by the corporation have been appraised by F. J. Bachelder & Co., Inc., Chicago, Illinois, as follows: Leasehold Estate $264,325.00; Building $574,217.00; Equipment $17,500.00; Total Valuation $856,042.00.

ADDING A NEW SUPREMACY TO ITS LONG LEADERSHIP

—and the greatest reception in HUDSON history

THE enthusiasm of their glorious reception, in some measure signalizes the momentous advancements the new Super-Sixes bring to motordom.

At the New York, and subsequent automobile shows, and in dealers' salesrooms everywhere, they focused an instant and sustained public attention such as no cars in all Hudson history. And this against the competition of the most beautiful offerings that the industry as a whole has ever presented.

As the Super-Sixes have achieved and led the mechanical possibilities of the day, so in these new models they achieve and lead a new mode in beauty and fine car appointment.

All bodies are designed in a modern style that is outstanding for smartness—with higher, narrower radiator, vertical radiator shutters, saddle lamps, full crown fenders and low, sweeping lines. This leadership of mode extends to every detail within and without. It marks a new Hudson supremacy, as definite and unmistakable as its mechanical dominance through the Super-Six principle, and its companion invention which set today's standard for motor smoothness and efficiency.

Three lines of Hudson bodies are presented — the Standard, the Custom Designed and the Custombuilt—and two chassis —the 118-inch and the 127-inch.

The vigor and intensity of public interest makes this much certain: — until you have examined and ridden in the new Hudson Super-Six you cannot be sure that any choice you make will not lose its satisfaction when you do know these new Hudson advantages.

NEW HUDSON PRICES

118-inch Chassis

Coupe $1295 · Sedan $1325 · Coach $1250

127-inch Chassis

Standard Sedan $1450 · Custom Landau Sedan $1650

Custom Victoria $1650 · Custom 7-Passenger Sedan $1950

All prices f. o. b. Detroit, plus war excise tax

Buyers can pay for cars out of income at lowest available charge for interest, handling and insurance.

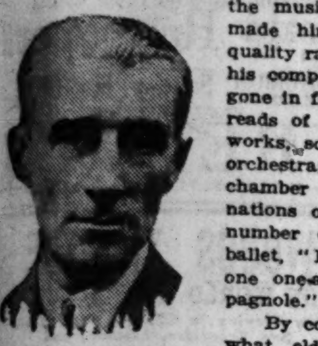
Maurice Ravel Will Conduct Symphony

By Edward Moore.

MAURICE RAVEL is to take charge of the Chicago Symphony orchestra this week, while Mr. Stock goes on a vacation—to do some more conducting in Philadelphia. This one looks to be about the most important announcement to be found in the week's music.



MAURICE RAVEL
Conductor of his own works with the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

For M. Ravel is a distinguished and distinctive figure in the musical world, one who has made himself a notable by the quality rather than the quantity of his compositions. He has never gone in for mass production. One reads of less than a dozen piano works, some later transcribed for orchestra; a few songs; some chamber music in varying combinations of instruments; a limited number of works for orchestra; ballet, "Daphnis et Chloé"; and one one-act opera, "L'Heure Espagnole."

By comparison with his somewhat elder compatriot, the late Claude Debussy, or with Richard Strauss, or with half a dozen other contemporary composers, it does not seem a great amount, yet by virtue of what he has put into it he has put himself into the front row. That his list of works is not greater is not entirely his own fault. For one thing, he is 52 years old, and consequently has plenty of time to do more. For another, his service in the war and several years of ill health following his being invalided home put a temporary stop to a productive period. At any rate, what he has done makes him a distinct personality.

His First Visit to Chicago.

This is M. Ravel's first visit to Chicago—in fact, his first visit to America. An account of him must therefore come through other eyes and other typewriters than mine. Several observers have tried. Irving Weil wrote this about him in the New York Journal last fall:

"Ravel at 52 is to make his first visit to America. No one will accuse him of haste toward that honest thrift which the easily-come-at American dollar represents to the foreign musician. One doesn't, as a fact, accuse Ravel of things. It isn't done, and he happens not to be that sort of foreign musician.

"When he arrives, and the curious—and, let us hope, interested—concert goer goes to hear him conduct some of his own music, or take part in the performance of it, there will appear on the stage a spare, trim, somewhat lined Parisian, who will look rather more like an excellency of the embassy than a musician. But then, after all, Ravel isn't a musician, but a composer. And composers no longer look it. Take Stravinsky, or, nearer home, our own Deems Taylor."

And Olin Downes went to call upon him last summer and wrote about him for the New York Times.

"Something much older than himself looks from the eyes of Ravel," says Downes. "It is the spirit of an experienced and ironical race. He is urbane, Parisian, and very swift. He came into the room before one knew he was there, examining everything, the furniture, the ceiling—everything seemingly except his company, which he was examining closest of all, talking very rapidly the while to the air.

"His dress was exceedingly plain, fastidious, exotic. And now he sat in a very charming garden known to a few, fussing with his food, sampling a Ravelian liqueur, saying the most monstrous things, in phrases that cut so swiftly that seconds flew by before the full and awful import of the words sank into a slower brain. A real Parisian, an artist, French to the bottom of his soul, on his native heath, and in the most capital fettle. A humming bird would have been maladroit in his company. M. Ravel grinned behind his lips, shot quick glances, which took in everything, guyed the millennium and roasted the universe."

An Impression of Subtlety.

Composers may not often look like composers in these days, but still fewer look like their own music. Apparently Ravel does. One gets an impression of elegance and subtlety from what he writes, of charm and sophistication, sometimes of breath taking and abysmal wit. One still remembers the horror stricken amazement with which "L'Heure Espagnole" was regarded in certain quarters when, during the consulship of Campanini, that gay and highly improper piece was sung at the Auditorium by Yvonne Gall and Maguenat and Defrere, and Cotreuil and some of the others.

Some of his music has not been played here yet, even by as tireless a score hunter as Mr. Stock. He plans to present three works that will be new to the orchestral audience: "Le Tombeau de Couperin," "Schéhérazade," and his own arrangement of Debussy's "Sarabande and Dance." He will also do "The Waltz" and the so-called orchestral fragments (second series) from "Daphnis and Chloé," which have been played several times.

"Schéhérazade" is a set of three poems for voice and orchestra, settings of verses by Tristan Klingsor. Here the soloist will be Lisa Roma, an American soprano who has sung opera at the Staatsoper of Berlin and concerts east and west in this country.

There further is word that M. Ravel, Miss Roma, and Jacques Gordon, the concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, will appear in the Gold room of the Congress hotel under the auspices of Pro-Musica, but so far this department has not received a copy of their program.

From One Resident to Another.

In which a letter from South Bend evokes an answer from South Bend:

Dear Mr. Moore: Several people in Chicago have taken the trouble to send me the article from the Jan. 1 TRIBUNE, labeled "Talent for the Provinces" and written by Joseph Danziger of this city. Several others who live here have suggested that some few words be written to correct a serious misrepresentation.

I do not know Mr. Danziger, but do know he is very evidently not a patron of the music we are fortunate enough to have, since he does not seem to know the price of the membership fee of our local Civic Music association, of which he speaks. It is not ten dollars, but five, and has included such artists as Muzio, Formichi, Jacques Gordon, Cecil Arden, the New York String quartet, and others of equal interest.

In addition to this we have had St. Olaf's choir, the Dayton choir, the Russian Symphonic choir, the Ukranian Singers, the Chicago Symphony orchestra, the Little Symphony, Sousa's band, Rosa Raisa, Schipa, Galli-Curci, Kreisler, a very recent performance of "The King's Henchman," all within the last two years.

In regard to young, less known artists, every other week or so one or the other of our two large women's clubs presents in recital some worth while artist who would come under this classification.

Mr. Danziger speaks of the desirability of South Bend's "peasantry" hearing some good young baritone. I wonder why he didn't hear the recent recital sponsored by a local club, given by one of the most interesting and popular of the younger baritones of Chicago (Barre Hill), which, while it was an artistic success, was far from being a financial one, due to the fact that there are too many people here who bemoan the fact of not enough music, without the enthusiasm or appreciation to support what we have.

There is also a local choral society which gives one or two concerts a year, engaging such artists as Herbert Gould and Mark Love, and a Little theater in connection with a music school, where frequent performances of opera are given by surprisingly talented local musicians. Connected with another music school is a splendid symphony orchestra, which gives several concerts each season.

It would be a so much happier condition if the citizens of South Bend would take pains to acquaint themselves with what is being done musically in their city,

"A TEXAS STEER"

Produced by First National. Directed by Richard Wallace. Presented at the Oriental theater TOMORROW.

THE CAST.

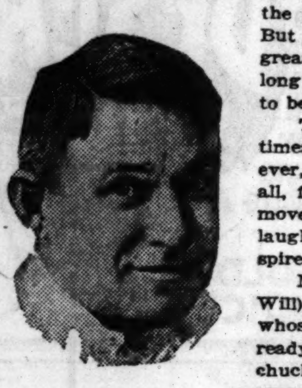
Maverick Brander	Will Rogers
Mrs. Ma Brander	Louise Fazenda
Brassy Gall	Sam Hardy
Bossy Brander	Ann Rork
Fairleigh Bright	Douglas Fairbanks Jr.
Dixie	Lilyan Tashman
Fishback	George Marion Sr.
Othello	Bud Jaimison
Knott Innitt	Arthur Hoyt
Bragg	Mack Swain
Blow	William Orlamond
Yell	Lucien Littlefield

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

To talk a little Texas (maybe!)—ol' Will Rogers sure cavorts right smart in this yar "Texas Steer" that opens at the Oriental tomorrow!

Did you see the old Charles Hoyt play from which this film has been adapted? I didn't—so can't say how closely the picture follows the original. But I suspect it doesn't matter a great deal one way or the other so long as the screen show manages to be as entertaining as it is.



WILL ROGERS
is up to his usual antics in this film.
[Mishkin Photo.]

The picture is episodic and, at times, lacking in continuity. However, that doesn't burn you up at all, for the reason that the action moves rapidly and is plummy with laughs, not all of which are inspired by the antics of Mr. Rogers.

No, Maverick Brander (that's Will) has three good old cronies whose doings bring joy to the ready chuckler. And by a ready chuckler I mean us folks with an every day sense of the ridiculous. The abandoned ones who do not require a Little Theater gem to make them smile. Mack Swain, William Orlamond and Lucien Littlefield are the cronies, and if you are familiar with their work you know what to expect.

Louise Fazenda Qualifies as Ma.

Then, there is Louise Fazenda who qualifies richly as Ma Brander. And Arthur Hoyt is there—RAWTHAH funnily—as a social secretary—and so on, and on and on.

Mr. Rogers is, nevertheless, the pièce de résistance and—do you know the story of "A Texas Steer"? Tell you a bit of it:

Maverick Brander, a rich ex-cowboy, is, while out on a roundup, made a congressman, without his knowledge, by his ambitious wife and some Texas friends who want him to vote for the Eagle River Dam Project. He refuses at first to go to Washington, but the pleadings of Mrs. Brander and their daughter, Bossy, finally win him over, and to the nation's headquarters the two of them go.

Here, among other people, live Fairleigh Bright and his sister. Fairleigh, while vacationing in Texas, has fallen in love with Bossy and he has eagerly awaited the arrival of the congressman's daughter.

But Bossy in picturesque western garb and Bossy in naive finery donned with pride—and awful effect!—to wear in the Big City, are two different appearing persons and Fairleigh is not only horribly ashamed of his girl and her mother—but is cad enough to show his feelings.

He comes nobly out of this, though, and acquits himself with much bravery and gallantry before the end of the picture.

Political Schemers Get Busy.

No sooner does the cowboy congressman enter Washington than political schemers get hold of him. Their lure, a lady blackmailer, proceeds to do her stuff and for several reels the dam project looks to be in great danger.

BUT—give ol' Will Rogers a rope and he can lasso himself out of any scrape. The rope is forthcoming, and I rise to advise you that Texas is proud of her congressman in the long run.

A glance at the cast will show you that the rôles are capably handled. Who, for instance, could do any better blackmailing than Lilyan Tashman and Sam Hardy? Ann Rork and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. are pleasing as the young folks—Douglas doing business in a series of leaps and bounds a la poppa in the last couple of reels. Work of the other principals has already been commented on.

Subtitles By Will, Himself.

The film has been well directed, carefully staged—part of it was made in Washington—and the subtitles are by none other than the star, Mr. William Rogers.

WHO, got his start as a cowboy-humorist—if you care to know—like this, according to a press sheet:

"'I had a vaudeville act, a dumb act they call them because I didn't do any talking,' said Rogers. 'The ropes were the big part of the act and I closed with a difficult double rope gag. Some of the other actors on the bill kept telling me that the gag was a dandy and the audience would appreciate it more if I would explain what I was doing and how hard it was.

"'So I did this one day at the Fourteenth Street theater in New York City, and I explained it just like I do my gags now, chewing gum and sort of talking natural—and like you know. The audience howled and I thought they were making fun of me, and it took a week to convince me that they weren't making a fool out of me.'

"So the 'dumb' act quickly became much alive and Ziegfeld quickly engaged Rogers as a number in the Follies."

Sort of interesting, isn't it?

LEW CODY has signed a new long term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

IF YOU DON'T BELIEVE a lady can economize, gaze upon this note from May McAvoy's budget—she allows herself only $25,000 a year for home and personal expenses and spends but $10,000 on clothes!

DOLORES DEL RIO, they tell me, has registered a complaint against suggestive touches in her pictures. Because she objected so bitterly to certain scenes in "The Red Dancer of Moscow," these were, we hear, eliminated.

COLOR NOTE: Clara Bow's hair is now flamingo. Constance Talmadge is a natural blonde again after a venture into the dark. Margaret Livingston wears auburn tresses instead of the flaming red she has recently been sporting and Mrs. Tom Mix, after several years of blondeness is now a brunette darling. (So says report from the coast.)

AND LITA GREY COOS THIS: "Divorce is nothing more than severing something that wasn't successful. If I had to marry fifteen times I would do it if necessary to find the one who could bring me happiness. Charlie Chaplin is a genius. He belongs to the world and I have given him back—to his world. He hasn't time for a wife, home or children." (Quoted from interview in Motion Picture Classic.)

On Crime

By H. L. Mencken.

ONLY a glance at such a book as "The Elements of Crime," by Boris Brasol, lately issued by the Oxford University Press, is needed to convince any rational man that the science of criminology, romantically so called, is bankrupt. The volume has a formidably scientific air, there are impressive instructions by high legal and medical authorities, and the author is obviously a serious student of the subject he discusses, but when he comes to formulate "the real causes of criminality" (his own italics) the best he can offer is the theory that they are "those fundamental destructive changes which take place in the composition of society itself, assuming the form of dangerous gangrenous processes and threatening the very existence of the social order." In other words, crime is caused by crime.

Nor is there anything more satisfying in the works of the experts who offer simpler explanations. On one hand stand the sentimentalists who argue that poverty is the mother of it all—and straightway collide with the innumerable hosts of the honest and virtuous poor. On the other hand stand the pseudo-scientists who argue that all criminals are somehow crazy, or, at all events, subnormal—and only succeed in proving that they are not. The gentlemen of the latter faculty stem from Lombroso, the Italian criminologist, and they have had a lot of support of late from the advocates of mental tests. But the more widely those mental tests are applied, the more obvious it becomes that the average criminal is not only as quick of wit as the average noncriminal, but a great deal more so.

All such investigations, indeed, tend to reduce criminology to an absurdity. It becomes a science that makes hash of its principal postulate—to wit, that there is such a thing as a definite criminal type. Apparently there is no such thing. Certain kinds of fools, under certain conditions, are likely to resort to crime, but the very same fools, under conditions only slightly different, may well become honest Elks, or even Kiwanians. The distance separating Henry Judd Gray from a pious Gideon, until the moment he met the Snyder siren, was not greater than the difference separating tweedledum from tweedle-dee.

Thus it is immensely difficult, if not downright impossible, to segregate the potential criminals from the rest of us in advance of their crimes, and in consequence all schemes of prevention are full of folly. Even crime itself is no certain gauge of criminality. When a boy of 12 steals fifty cents there is in the fact no indication that he is likely to steal $50 later on, for all of us in youth have stolen fifty cents. Nor is the fact that a man is in prison any proof that he is a criminal, either actually or potentially. He may be there by accident, or on false testimony, or simply because the law is an ass. How many bootleggers are really criminals, in any rational sense? Probably not ten per cent. Yet every jail in the land is crowded with them.

The impulse to commit crime, indeed, may be a perfectly natural and even laudable thing. It may be proof, not of degradation, but of a sensitive dignity. It is perfectly normal and decent to want to strike back at those who have invaded our rights, however lawfully, and it is perfectly normal and decent to try to evade an oppressive and dishonest law. The American people, in unnumbered thousands, have violated the Volstead act, and they will continue to do so until it is removed from the books. The Anti-Saloon league theory that all of them are criminals and ought to be jailed is plain nonsense. Many of them, I believe, are moved, at least in part, by a motive that almost amounts to patriotism: they are trying to rid their country of a shame and disgrace.

Even murder may be logically defended—as the celebrated Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals has shown. It is not always a crime, even by law. In fact, it is a crime but little more often than it is not a crime. If every murderer guilty under the law were convicted and hanged, as alarmists constantly demand, hundreds and thousands of homicides would still go unpunished.

It is in this department of punishment that criminology is most quackish and ineffective. Its practitioners constantly vacillate between excessive leniency and excessive harshness. On various pleas, some of them humane and some of them alleged to be scientific, they have got rid of all the old physical punishments save that of death, and even it seems likely to be abandoned very soon. But, on the other hand, by making prisons more secure and the discipline within them more strict, they have increased rather than ameliorated the burdens of imprisonment, and so more than half of their patients, coming in to be cured, go out incurable.

Obviously, society has to get rid of men who menace its peace and security. Moreover, there is something in the normal human mind which demands that they be punished, even when there is no likelihood that they will offend again. But certainly it shows a great poverty of imagination when all such men, regardless of the nature of their crimes or the chances of their committing more crimes, are herded into steel cages, and there kept for years like wild beasts in a zoo. As a means of punishing them it is inordinately cruel; as a means of reforming them it is stupid and useless.

The eighteenth century, which has come to be regarded as very harsh in this department, had simpler and far more humane devices. It punished many petty criminals by flogging them—a painful and humiliating but by no means brutal scheme. It punished others by exiling them to what was then the wilderness. Some of the latter, continuing as criminals, quickly succumbed to the harsh justice that the wilderness has on tap. Others, returning instantly to normalcy, became good citizens, indistinguishable from the rest of the human race, and some even became heroes. The United States was largely peopled by such exiles. Their descendants, in many cases, are rich and haughty today.

But we do not send criminals to the Philippines now, nor even to Alaska, Delaware and Nevada. It would be, I daresay, too unscientific. The plan currently in favor is to lock them in steel cages for a while, and then let them out on some pretext or other, and invite them to resume their crimes. Whenever, by some archaic provision of local law, a rogue is flogged there is a sentimental uproar from end to end of the land. If it were proposed to punish and dissuade pickpockets by cutting off their index fingers, or hi-jackers by removing their right hands, the heavens would be cracked by the ensuing yells.

Yet it must be plain that cutting off the index fingers of pickpockets would be far more efficacious than the present method of punishing them, and, what is more, far more humane. A pickpocket is not cured of his art by sending him to prison; he is simply tortured. There is, I believe, no record in police annals of a pickpocket who ever reformed. They all return to work the moment they get out of jail. If their fingers were chopped off they could not do so. But they would be quite free to practice any one of a thousand honest trades.

What is the objection to flogging for common rogues? Apparently that it is cruel. But is it actually more cruel than locking a healthy man in a small steel cell, perhaps with two or three other men, and forcing him for long months and even years to perform degrading and unrewarded labor? It costs a great deal of money to support him while he is thus tortured, and meanwhile his dependents, if he has any, can starve. Flogging would turn him loose at once, to seek more honest labor—and always there would be the threat of another dose of the cat before him, in case he were tempted to resume his old malpractices. Flogging hurts. Well, why shouldn't it? What is the objection to hurting criminals?

But I am not on the stump today to advocate a new criminology. All I essay to do is to argue that all the existing criminologists are mere sound and fury, signifying nothing. They have not made punishments rational, and they have not diminished crime. Scientifically speaking, they all lie upon the low level of chiropractic, fortune-telling and university philosophy.

O'Neill's Marco Polo Is King of Rotarians

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—An event of some importance to the drama world hereabouts took place this week. The Theater Guild, which 25,000 subscribers and not a few professional critics admit has become America's premier play-producing organization, presented the first Eugene O'Neill play of the year, a spectacle drama called "Marco Millions." And there are any number of people who insist that Mr. O'Neil is, by a considerable margin, America's white haired boy among the playwrights.

ALFRED LUNT
[Nickolas Muray Photo.]

As predicted, the combination proved a happy one. The play is elaborate as to setting and subtle as to text. It offers Mr. O'Neill's opinion that young Marco Polo was the first go-getter of his time, a Venetian Rotarian with personality plus and a nerve that could move more mountains than most men's faith.

In Marco the playwright seems to symbolize the tough-souled braggarts of the world, whether they be men or nations; result-getting, beauty-destroying agencies who are materially irresistible and spiritually bankrupt.

He sends Marco out with his travel starred ancestors, his father and his uncle, to the court of Kublai Khan as a sort of gift from Pope Gregory. Kublai has asked for a hundred wise men versed in knowledge of the immortal soul as discovered by the Christian fathers, and the pope, with a sense of humor and a vast optimism, not having a hundred wise men, thinks perhaps the Khan can learn enough from a study of Marco to convince him that western civilization is on the right track.

Marco sells himself to the Great Khan and confounds the wise descendants of Confucius by his crust and his cunning. He amuses them as a sort of gifted clown, but he also unwittingly brings tragedy to their court. The lovely Princess Kukachin, beloved granddaughter of Kublai, falls deeply in love with Polo, and when she cannot arouse more response in him than a soulless automaton might express, she finds peace in death rather than risk marriage with the king of Persia.

The O'Neill text, which is romantic and poetic, philosophical and satirical, calls for a grand lot of scenery and many players. The Guild has skillfully cut both orders in two and still manages a suggestively heavy and rich production. Alfred Lunt plays Marco, first as a 15 year old youth, which is not so easy, and then as a self-confirmed but still amazingly successful ass of 30, when he is better and great fun.

Margalo Gillmore is the sad and sweet little princess, Baliol Holloway the wise and dignified Khan, and Dudley Digges a Cathayan sage.

A Heavy Load for Miss Lillie.

They haven't done right by our Beatrice Lillie, if we may be permitted the "our." She really is Canada's Beatrice Lillie first and England's Beatrice Lillie next. But we have borrowed her the last two or three seasons and she seems content to be adopted. If she ever gets tired of paying income taxes in both countries, who knows, her Lord Robert Peel may yet be filing his first papers. And what a story that will make!

Anyway, they have not done right by Beatrice. They have set the entire weight of a musical farce called "She's My Baby" on the Lillie shoulders. Without her it would sag and crumple and be reduced to nothing more than a libretto of cheap jokes and frayed plot, fitted to a few good tunes.

I don't know just what has happened to Charles Dillingham. He used to be most particular about the selection of his writers and the quality of entertainment they offered. There was a Dillingham standard represented by the Fred Stone and Marilyn Miller entertainments that was high, supported by a sense of fitness that was fine. None of the producers of music shows was as particular as he and none more successful. But I suppose, as so often happens with high minded producers, C. B. lost a lot of money trying to maintain the Dillingham standards and went deliberately into the cheaper field. A little discouraging to those of us who have admired him for what he has done. But that's show business.

"She's My Baby" uses that oldest of the farce plots, the one about the harried youth who needs a lot of money and can get it only from a rich uncle if he, the youth, pretends to be married and the father of an heir. You will remember that he always borrows the wife from his friend and the baby from a perambulator or from his janitor, with resulting complications. It is trash, but the crowd still laughs at it.

Miss Lillie is gorgeously funny as the acting wife, drifting into those scenes and songs of sheer burlesque at which she is adept. She is assisted principally by Jack Whiting, Nick Long Jr., and Clifton Webb.

Two in Favor.

Russell Janney, who was so successful with "The Vagabond King," has produced another operetta of similar type called "White Eagle." It is based on a free use of Edwin Milton Royle's most successful melodrama, "The Squaw Man," and has an impressive score by Rudolph Friml. I English Without a Don't Usage.

By Wallace Rice.

NOT one rule for speaking or writing English has any authority against what Kittredge calls "The easy language of cultivated men who are neither specialists nor pedants." "He who fights custom with grammar is a fool," said Montaigne long before.

There is no standard except usage. As Ben Jonson said, "Custom is the most certain mistress of language, as the public stamp makes the current money." George Campbell gives another aspect to this by saying, "Language is purely a species of fashion. . . . Every tongue whatever is founded on use and custom. . . . The only certain, steady standard accessible to all consists in authors of reputation."

Lounsbury defines the standard: "The doctrine that the best, and indeed the only proper, usage is the usage of the best, and that any rules or injunctions not based upon the practice of the best speakers and writers neither require nor deserve attention, no matter how loudly they are proclaimed nor how generally taught."

Thomas Jefferson advised "Appeal to usage as the arbiter of language, and justly consider that as giving law to grammar, and not grammar to usage." Hugh Blair, grammarian though he was, said as much: "There is no standard, either of purity or propriety, but the practice of the best writers and speakers in the country."

"People are accustomed to look upon grammar as containing the rules to which they must conform in the use of language," wrote E. S. Sheldon. "We should hardly need to explain that we look upon grammar simply as the description of the structure of a language, of its condition during some definite period of its constantly changing history. We must accept the principle that in the use of language, a question of syntax, good usage is decisive."

To sum up: The choice of authorities in speaking and writing English can only lie between the usage of the accepted speakers and writers of it and the mere say-so of grammarians unaware of such usage. The decision, it is plain, lies between knowledge and ignorance.

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

PLAYS about the Press continue to be written; and not fewer than three are in the keeping of respective producers who, presumably, have paid something in cash as advance-royalty for the express purpose of getting the plays into their keeping. So far, but one play on the subject has had a measure of success—Joseph Medill Patterson's "The Fourth Estate," shown in Chicago eighteen years ago. James Bernard Fagan's "The Earth," an importation, failed here that season, and failed when, some years later, Miss Grace George tried it in New-York. Jesse Lynch Williams' "The Stolen Story," with a background in the New-York Sun office when that paper was Dana's, was an interesting piece with a certain veracity: at least, it had that for me, as one who had been a cub in that office; but it was a quick failure. More recent was one named "Ink," a November venture in New-York, where the reviewers were in seeming agreement that it was the worst newspaper-play ever written. (The author was a drama-critic—the one who wrote "A Good Bad-Woman," a tasteful Yuletide offering in Chicago.) Arnold Bennett's "What the Public Wants" is (or was) a newspaper-play: the uncertain tense is due to its being in print, although out of use in the theater, wherein it was held to be stupid and uninteresting as drama. It was acted three or four times in what is now the Playhouse by Miss Horniman's company from Manchester, in 1913; and the Theater Guild of New-York, trying it four or five seasons back, was glad to be rid of it in a fortnight, with no wailing from the subscribers who were thus denied the privilege of sitting through it.

KENNETH MACKENNA
He's leading-man in the new piece, "It Makes a Difference."

Although I have neither seen nor read the play, I think I'm right in saying that Pinero's "The Big Drum" had to do not sweetly with some of the uses of advertising. Michael Arlen thought, doubtless, that his play named "Dear Father" (and shown here by Cyril Maude under the title of "These Charming People") took a crack at the newspaper-game because he had an evil owner and a noble-hearted and intellectual editor in amatory rivalry for the affections of the former's wife. One of Galsworthy's recent plays—one listed among his failures—had to do with the cruelty of newspapers in publishing facts about the domestic affairs of persons in private life: as usual, Galsworthy tried to be "neutral"; but my recollection of what I read in a full synopsis is that he didn't bear heavily on the inescapable fact that persons in private life automatically become persons in public life when their doings are spread upon the records having to do with litigation and with what are still known as "vital statistics."

As to the three impending plays about the newspaper, one is named "For Two Cents," and is by George S. Brooks, whose "Spreadeagle" was the subject of some of last season's most laudatory reviews in New-York, although the populace displayed little interest at the box-office. A second was told about in this place as long ago as last August—Guy F. Lee's "Tabloid." The author was for years on the staff of THE TRIBUNE; and he is now on that of the New-York Daily News, first of the seven-days-a-week tabloids in the United States. A third is called "Gentlemen of the Press," and is by Ward Morehouse, who writes about the plays and the actors for the New-York Sun. Mr. Morehouse is said to have not fewer than three collaborators—all, like himself, active at present in helping to get out daily newspapers in Manhattan. And, à propos, George S. Kaufman says in today's New-York Times:

"In the case of four collaborators, of course, the overhead for luncheon alone makes it a highly-hazardous venture."

Reporters in the Drama.

Page 7 of this issue of THE TRIBUNE carries a letter about actors when called upon to impersonate reporters; and it is a good letter. The theme, if not directly related to newspaper-plays, is at least collaterally kin. . . . An explanation of Mr. Helston's angry bewilderment is not difficult to make, seeing that what confuses him is that, nine times in ten, the gentlemen who review plays for the newspapers say, when a reporter is a character, that the actor is bad.

Part of the explanation is that few of the men who get the desk of drama-critic on an important newspaper in the larger cities have been reporters: most of them, I swear, could not properly report an arrest for bootlegging—if an arrest in kind were ever made! Part of the explanation is that the reviewer, even when he is a good reporter, is inclined to disregard the actor's impersonation on the ground that he doesn't know a real reporter who looks just as that especial actor happens to look. But the best part of the explanation (and I know part from part, inasmuch as it is my explanation) is that the writing by the dramatist is at fault. Mostly, it is ignorant. Sometimes, as in the instance of the reporter in Shaw's "The Doctor's Dilemma," it is mean, mischievous, vengeful, or malignant: I've known fairly well fifteen or twenty London "newsmen," as they're called there, and have known none to be ill-mannered or stupid.

The reporter in "Chicago" was authentic: he was ineffective in the recent performances of the play in Chicago because he was acted badly. Miss Watkins used for "copy" on that reporter one of the good men of THE TRIBUNE, and then invested him with a Hearst complex for the purposes of the play. The man who had the rôle in New-York, Charles Brackett, was aces: a good actor met a good part, and knew what to do with it. . . . The best stage-reporter I have seen was Richard Bennett in Augustus Thomas' good comedy named "The Other Girl." The first good one I recall was a minor actor, Lionel Lawrence, in the original cast of "The Belle of New-York." And I'm told that the acting of the two or three reporters in "The Racket"—the acting referred to by Baird Leonard in the quotation by Mr. Helston—is bully.

To the Burning-Ghat with These!

Thrown away after last night's performance in New-York were "Restless Women," "Celebrity," "Bless You, Sister!" and "It Is to Laugh!": none of them had been on view there previously to December 26. "Celebrity" was about a prize-fighter; "Bless You, Sister!" was the first of the Aimée McPherson plays; and "It Is to Laugh!" was Fannie Hurst's dramatization of the tale named "The Gold in Fish," with Miss Edna Hibbard again trying to be a star. . . . Another removal from observation by the Manhattan populace was "The Marquise," the comedy by Noël Coward in which Miss Billie Burke reëmerged nine weeks ago. Curiosity to see her kept the piece from being a flat failure; but I doubt that it will be sent hither.

Helping Out William.

Moissi, one of the actors with Reinhardt in New-York, is said to be eager to have a go at Hamlet while he is in the country; and the Boston Transcript, which seems to know more about what Reinhardt and his players will do than any newspaper in Manhattan, says that Moissi will use German, but will have English-speaking performers in the other rôles.

And, in this matter of Shakspere, there is to be a formal celebration of the Bard late in the month down in the Metropolitan Opera-House; and one of the "features" will be a scene from "The Taming of the Shrew" by Basil Sydney and Miss Mary Ellis in everyday clothes. . . . I leave to somebody else the difficult chore of putting a new twist on the old gag about opening Shakspere's coffin.

Dreams of Love and the Dance.

Isadora Duncan would seem to have spent the greater part of her life in the two activities of dreaming dreams of the dance and engaging in fortissimo love affairs, and she sets out a good deal of both in "My Life," which comes from the press of Boni & Liveright. The manuscript, completed but uncorrected, extending up to the time of her departure for Russia in 1921, was found after her death by automobile accident last Sept. 14 and is printed without revision.

Apparently her love affairs were like her dances, matters of spotlights and orchestral blare, and, like her autobiography, full of adjectives and splashed with capital letters. There was nothing furtive about them. The world was taken into her confidence at once, and such of the world as missed them at the time she tells now. In fact, one might call her appallingly frank and not exaggerate.

But her dreams of the dance were big ones, too big for her, or, for that matter, any one else to realize. That one might be disappointed, as one generally was, in her performances had nothing to do with what she dreamed. Occasionally she tries to tell about them, to define her vision of America dancing.

"This music," she says, "would have a rhythm as great as the exhilaration, the swing, or curves of the Rocky mountains. It would have nothing to do with the sensual lilt of the jazz rhythm; it would be like the vibration of the American soul striving upward through labor to harmonious life."

American Dancing.

And if she despised jazz she disliked the old time dances only a little less. "Why," she inquires, "should our children bend the knee in that fastidious and servile dance, the minuet, or twirl in the false sentimentality of the waltz? Rather let them come forth with great strides, leaps, and bounds, with lifted forehead and far spread arms, to dance the language of our Pioneers, the Fortitude of our heroes, the Justice, Kindness, Purity of our statesmen, and all the inspired love and tenderness of our Mothers. When the American children dance in this way it will make of them beautiful beings, worthy of the name of the Greatest Democracy.

"That will be America Dancing."

A Technical Treatise.

Another book of a quite different kind is "Key to Musicianship," by Christine Trotin, a New York music teacher. It is distributed by E. L. Sarter, 811 Steinway hall, New York.

This is a treatise on some of the technical elements of music, a description and discussion of such matters as notation, rhythm, pitch, scales, modes, the beginning of harmony, and some general rules of interpretation. In such respects it seems to be entirely orthodox and commendably concise. In its table of expression marks, however, it departs frequently from conventional spelling, and in its appendix its protest against modern music is rather astonishing.

"Modern music," asserts Mme. Trotin, "seems to be the product of a revolt, undertaken by a certain group of musicians, against any rule whatsoever, and reflects the trend of thought of the present generation. It is supposed to be based on what is called the 'whole tone scale,' illustrated here and which explains the frequency of the discords which at times follow each other in the most distressing manner."

It is evident that Mme. Trotin does not like contemporary music. Her definition, however, will be news to those who have believed that the whole tone scale is old stuff, as well as to those who think that it has only limited possibilities in music of any age.

With the Melody Makers.

Now that "The Bat" is up for its third performance this week, enough, according to the Civic Opera methods of the season, to classify it as a standard item of the répertoire, word is relayed that after all it was not an unheard of experiment to give an operetta by a grand opera company. In fact, states the official historian, this same work, "Die Fledermaus," was played on the Auditorium stage nearly twenty-three years ago with no less an artist than Marcella Sembrich in the part of Rosalinde which Rosa Raisa has revived, and such famous personalities as Emma Eames, Lillian Nordica, Johanna Gadski, Enrico Caruso, and Edouard de Reszke disported themselves gleefully in small rôles and in the ensemble.

It was a gala performance for the benefit of Heinrich Conried, then director of the Metropolitan company, and it netted him $24,000. He had just put on "Parsifal," and the Wagner and Strauss works were sung the same day, March 22, 1905. "Parsifal" started at 11:30 in the morning and continued until 5:30 in the afternoon. At 8 o'clock seriousness was thrown aside and "Die Fledermaus" went on. In addition to Mme. Sembrich and the group of small part artists already named, Andreas Dippel, later the first director of the Chicago opera, appeared as Eisenstein; Otto Goritz, as the jailer; Albert Reiss as Alfred; Bella Alten as Adele; M. Greder as Dr. Falke; Adolph Muehlmann, today a singing teacher and music critic of Chicago, as the lawyer, Blind; Marian Weed in the male rôle of Prince Orlofsky which José Mojica now sings

Nathan Franko, then in his prime but now best known as a conductor of orchestras in New York hotels, conducted. They say that the critics were enthusiastic, but that they fell afoul of the arrangement by which Miss Weed appeared as the Russian noble.

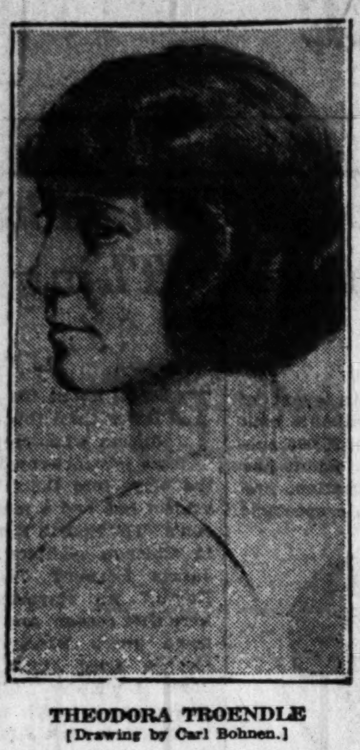
The German theater at Sheffield and Belmont avenues would seem to have had about as good a time with "Die Fledermaus" and the Civic Opera with its translation, "The Bat," and has given it repeated performances. It now tells of its next attraction, another Strauss work, "Wiener Blut," which is ready for performance. Lucie Westen, formerly of the Civic Opera company, will appear, as will Helene Holstein, Otty Ottmar-Hahn, Herbert Kiper, Angelo Lippich, Ernst Robert and others.

PIANIST



THEODORA TROENDLE
[Drawing by Carl Bohnen.]

She registers among the concert announcements of today, since she will appear at the Playhouse this afternoon in a joint recital with the tenor Theodore Kittay. Chicagoan and composer as well as pianist, several of her own works will be introduced in her part of the program.

"Faust" in English Scores Great Hit

By Alfred Frankenstein.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—[Special Correspondence.] — Opera in English has come into its own. The American Opera company's production of "Faust," now on view in New York and soon to be seen and heard in Chicago, not only demonstrates that opera can be sung in intelligible English but also that a home grown company can make an old opera something new, surprising, and exciting.

Three men are responsible for this. They are Vladimir Rosing, director of the company, Robert A. Simon, who made the English libretto, and Robert Edmond Jones, the designer of costumes and scenery. The combined efforts of this trio make of "Faust" not an opera but a drama, not a succession of tunes strung on a story but a conflict and criss-cross of desires and purposes, in the expression of which music plays a part.

Two big changes have been made in this new version. Two singing actors play the name part, one the rôle of Faust the philosopher and one Faust the cavalier. Unfortunately, the first of these rôles is not assigned to a bass, as it should be. The part of Siebel is sung by a man.

New Settings and Effects.

The traditional settings and costumes and business are completely done over. The scenes are typical Jones—huge arches, sinister dark masses, purple lights. The action is directed by a coach who knows that a play must move and develop and climax. The text comes from the tongues of young singers ninety-five per cent of whose words can be understood without any straining on the part of the listener.

At the opening performance of "Faust" one member of the cast received and deserved half the ovation. That was George Fleming Houston, the Mephistopheles. Had this young man sung at the Metropolitan his debut would have been front page stuff. His voice is immense. His diction is literally perfect. His John Barrymore-Douglas Fairbanks acting knocks them out of their seats.

Houston was beautifully seconded by Natalie Hall as Marguerite, not badly assisted by Clifford Newdall as the young Faust, and admirably set in and against a young, spontaneous, exuberant ensemble of young singers. Frank St. Leger directed an excellent orchestra.

A Genius of the Guitar.

There were other important debuts and ovations. First of the debutants was Andres Segovia, the Spanish guitar player. To hear this artist is one of the rarest and most delicious experiences one may have in a concert hall. Under his fingers the guitar sounds ever so slightly like a harpsichord, a flexible harpsichord capable of infinite inflection in nuance and tone quality. The lute pieces of Bach, the Mozart-like tunes of Fernando Sor, and other classical works came tinkling and strumming delicately out of the instrument. In a modern sonata by one Torroba there were hard, metallic tones, rich sounds like those of a contralto voice, sonorities like those of an organ built for a doll's house. It was an evening of fresh, bright miniatures, and unknown music we should have known before.

The Kedroff quartet, four male singers from Russia, added to the pleasures of living. They are a sort of Russian equivalent for the English singers, singing gloriously and with humor, and drawing on a rich and vast literature of folk-song.

Fernando Germani, organist, and Mario Corti, violinist, both fresh from Rome, made their bows at the same concert. Germani played Leo Sowerby's "Medieval Poem," which was conducted by the composer and had its first New York hearing.

Music Notes

The January meeting of the Chicago Artists' association will be held at Fine Arts Recital hall on Tuesday afternoon. The junior program will be given at 2 o'clock and the artist program at 2:30. Glenn Dillard Gunn will be the guest of honor.

Sir Thomas Beecham has arrived in this country from England ready to begin his course of conducting symphony concerts here and there. Sooner or later some one is almost certain to make a remark about the Philharmonic orchestra.

The glee club contest for Chicago high schools will take place in Orchestra hall on Thursday night at 8 o'clock. More than 1,000 contestants will take part, according to a bulletin received from headquarters. The preliminaries were held at Crane High school a week ago yesterday.

MANDEL BROTHERS

first, as usual, in radio . . . . announce for the first time in America!

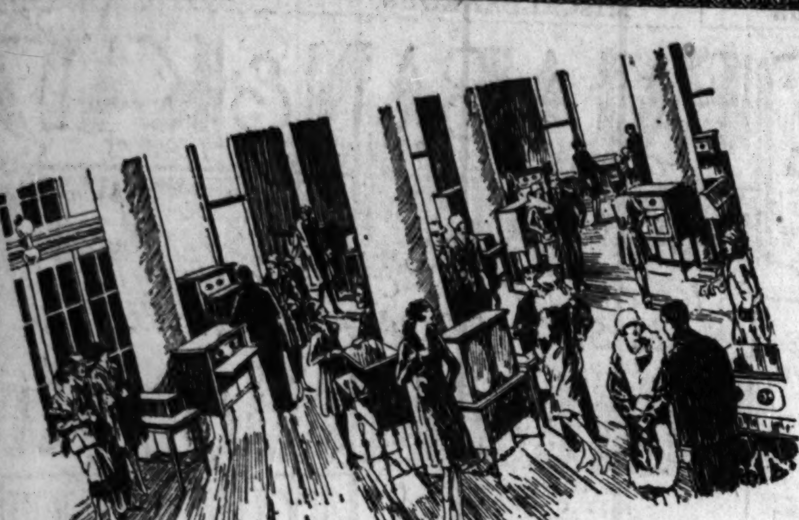
ATWATER KENT

Factory exposition

Beginning Monday—be here when doors open at 9 o'clock

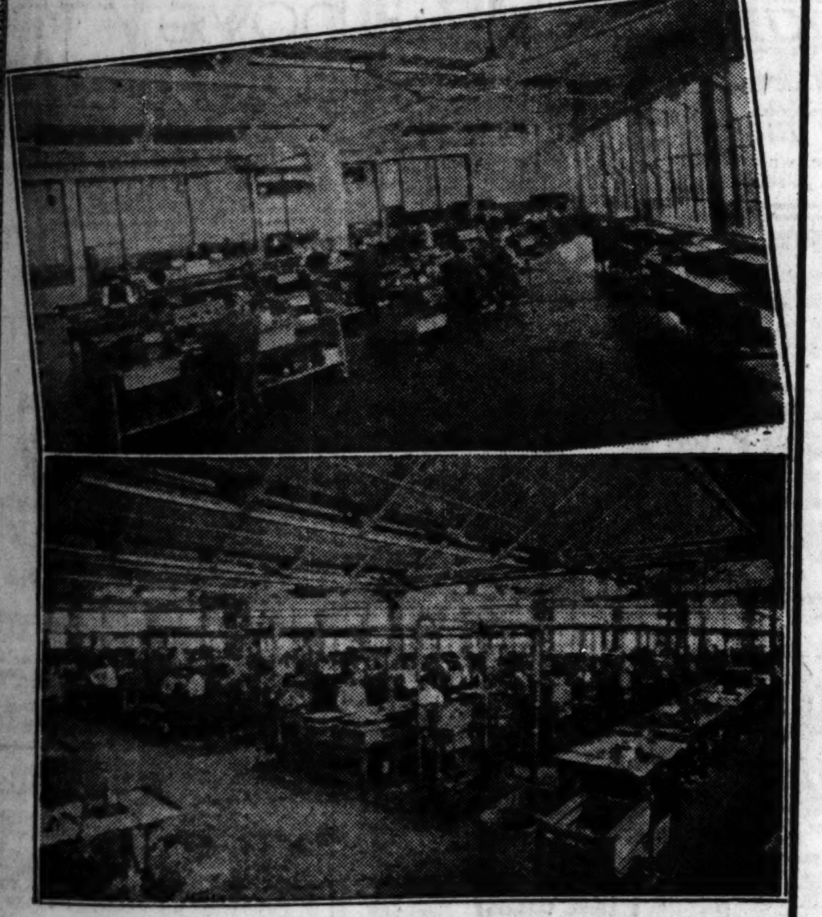


This is a portion of the tremendous floor space we have devoted to this wonderful exposition—15,000 square feet on the sixth floor—State Street side.

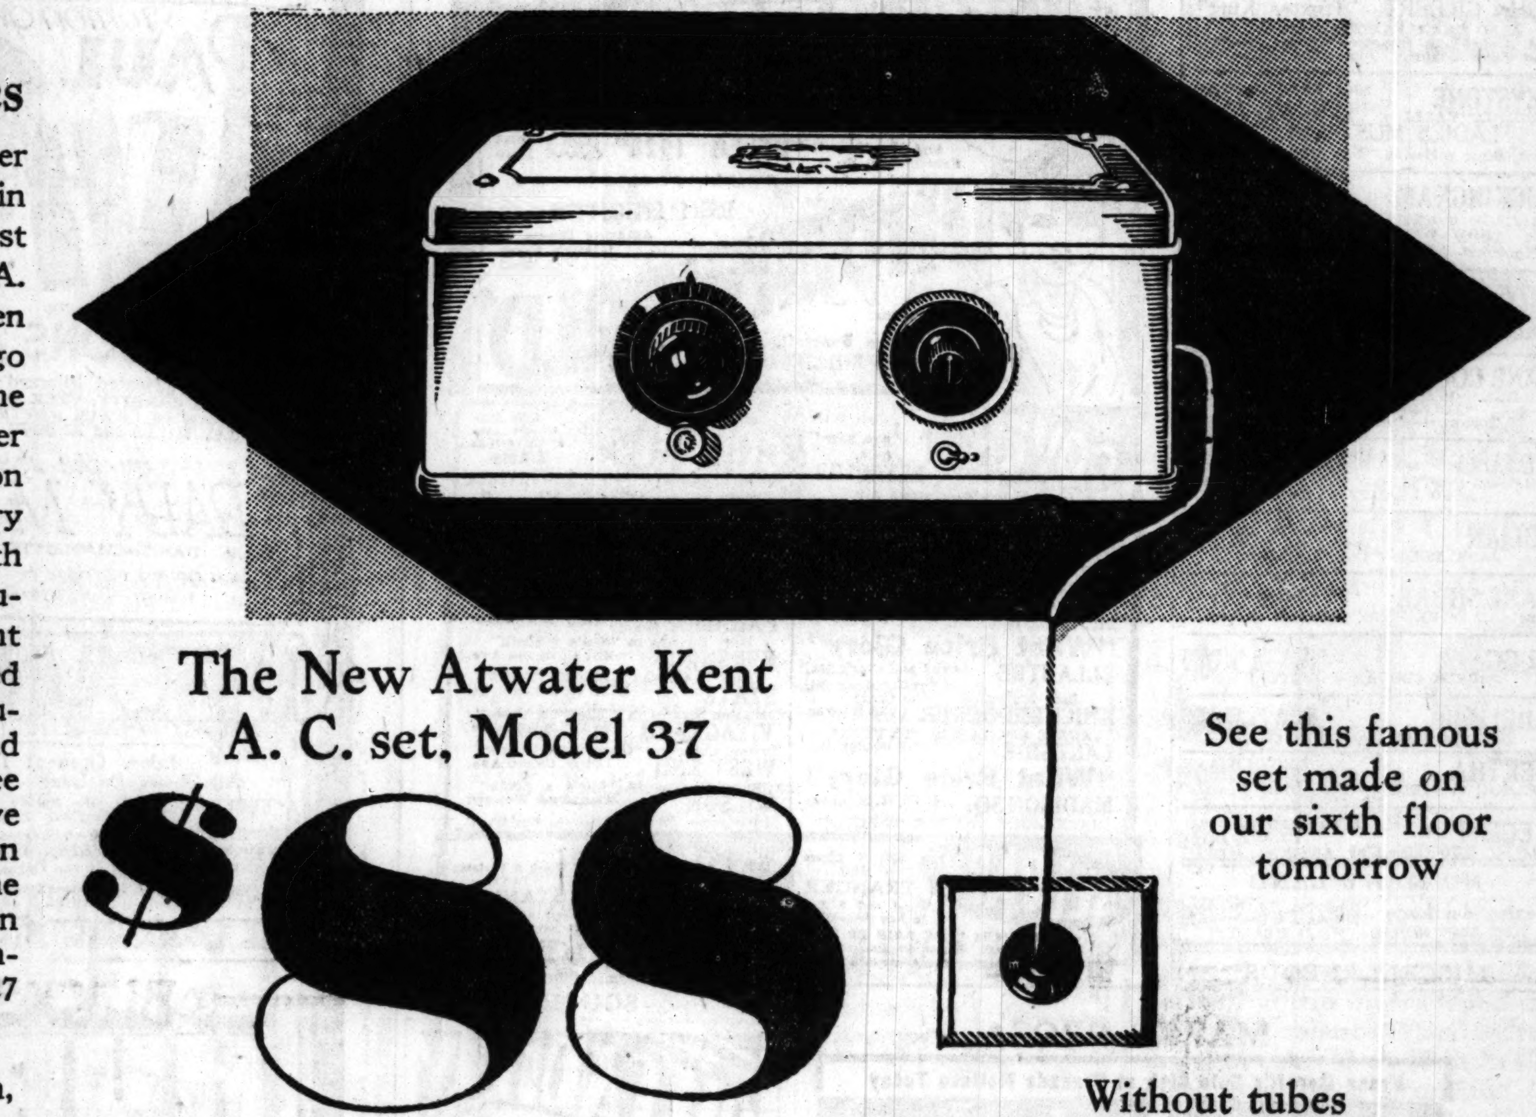
See this nationally famous radio made before your eyes

NOW you can see what few people have ever seen—the famous Atwater Kent Radio in the making—just as it is done in the largest and finest radio factory in the world. Mr. A. Atwater Kent has sent 15 picked craftsmen from their Philadelphia factory to Chicago especially for this Exposition to show the methods of precision that have made Atwater Kent Radio preferred by over one million families. On the sixth floor a model factory has been set up. See just how it's done with the endless belt conveyor, the testing instruments, and everything. See the Atwater Kent A. C. set and the model E speaker assembled before your own eyes. See the careful, accurate workmanship that makes one thousand sets as carefully as one could be made. See the scientific methods of production that have made possible such a fine radio at such an extraordinarily low price—that make the Atwater Kent A. C. 37 the biggest value in radio. See how the 222 factory tests and inspections assure every owner of the A. C. 37 the famous Atwater Kent reliability.

Don't miss this rare sight. Bring the children, too—they will enjoy and profit by it just as you will!



Two views of the famous Atwater Kent factory in Philadelphia.



The New Atwater Kent A. C. set, Model 37

Without tubes

Free installation and service for 60 days

We will install this set, ready to play, with a light socket antenna, without charge

IN conjunction with the exposition we are making this sensational offer: $10 down delivers the new Atwater Kent A. C. set. We are so enthusiastic about the new A. C. Atwater Kent Model 37 that we are making this offer so that every family in Chicago can easily own and enjoy it—and share our enthusiasm.

$10 Down

Delivers this new A. C. set. The balance is payable in small monthly amounts. We are offering this liberal term arrangement

For the first time in Mandel Brothers' history

This is the new A. C. set

THE Atwater Kent 37 is radio in its simplest, most convenient, most efficient form. No radio will give you more value, more service or more complete and lasting satisfaction. It is a real electric set without batteries or battery substitutes—powered entirely from your lighting circuit. It needs only your touch on the switch to send the current through the A. C. tubes and start the program. A true, high-power A. C. set—compact.

Here are just a few of its many other advantages:

1. Exquisite tone, without disturbing power-noises.
2. Shielded cabinet and doubly shielded built-in power supply—assuring this superiority of tone.
3. True single dial control, including innovations which cannot be copied without infringing on Atwater Kent patents.
4. Every working part of every receiver matched for that particular receiver.
5. Every part tested for accuracy—some even to a fraction of a thousandth of an inch.
6. Every part protected against deterioration. This means long life for your set—a lifetime of pleasure for you.
7. Full-vision dial. You don't have to scan the numbers closely. Read the whole dial at a glance, just as you look at your watch. A turn of your wrist takes you to every station within range in a split second.
8. Efficient volume control. You can bring the music down to a whisper.
9. A cabinet only 7⅛ inches high, 17¼ inches long—with everything inside except the speaker. Small, convenient—you'll never have to ask: "Where can I put it?"—it fits in anywhere.
10. Your choice of two color combinations—deep rich brown and old gold, or golden bronze and old gold—both in the new satin finish.

The 37 was not rushed on the market. It was first perfected in the laboratories. And you may be sure it will serve you, and continue to serve you for years to come with the best performance that you could wish for.

The Atwater Kent Model E Radio Speaker

Estelle Taylor Has Busy Day in Quickie

By Rosalind Shaffer

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—After a year of idleness Estelle Taylor is in the middle of a rush of work that has left her rather breathless. Her present picture, "Lady Raffles," which she is making for Harry Cohn of Columbia Pictures, is a "quickie," the name used to designate pictures made for independent producers who work rapidly to save production costs.

Half an afternoon and evening produced four changes of costume for Miss Taylor with constant rehearsal and work before the camera. This is in marked contrast to the methods of the larger studios where such intensive work is unknown.

Roland Drew, leading man who recently completed "Ramona," with Dolores del Rio, is also in "Lady Raffles" and was having a lot of fun out of the expeditious methods of the independent industry. A sort of Potash and Perlmutter and Abie's Irish Rose dialect seemed to have been adopted for kidding purposes and everybody from the prop boy to the assistant director was talking it.

Jack Drops In.

Jack Dempsey came in about supper time to take Estelle to dinner. Jack has been training for several days as the holiday plum pudding and turkey seemed to him to have put on extra poundage. Jack makes it a practice to keep perfectly fit. He has been working with his trainer, Jerry the Greek. Jack had a new bottle of perfume for Estelle's dressing table at the studio and Estelle said, "See, I have a sheik. The other day he brought a basket of roses to my dressing room."

Harry Cohn, owner of Columbia studios, brought in several cans of film of old pictures Estelle had made. Jack and he were looking through them while Estelle changed costumes. One was "Passion's Pathways," which Estelle stoutly claims she doesn't remember at all. Cohn and Jack were laughing over the tiny inch high pictures when a new box was opened.

"Look, Jack, it's western, all horses," said Cohn. Estelle came forward and recognized the opening scene in "Don Juan," in which she, as Lucretia Borgia, with two other Borgias, enters the city of Florence on horseback.

"John Barrymore would like to hear you call his Don Juan a horse opera," she remarked.

No Time Lost.

Following a hasty supper at a nearby restaurant with the head of the house of Dempsey, Estelle went back to the studio to don still another makeup. A knock at the door and Harry Cohn entered.

"Hurry up, Estelle," he said. "The shots are all from the left side in this scene so don't bother to arrange your hair on the other side."

Downstairs Lilyan Tashman was ready waiting on the set after being called back to work from the afterdinner comfort of her Beverly Hills boudoir. Estelle, the lady detective, apprehended her as Lilyan, the lady crook, in about three minutes of neat work before the camera, and was off to still another set, where another director and the leading man and another camera were all set waiting to shoot scenes in still another costume. It was all quite efficient with not a second wasted.

Unusual Weather.

Usual working schedules in films are holding this year. It was a couple of years ago that Lew Cody called attention to the fact that invariably all scenes requiring him to wear only undies were made in the winter and snow scenes with fur coats and whatnots in the summer.

Bill Boyd now comes to the fore to express his ideas of California and its "unusual" weather. The weeks before Christmas found Hollywood and environs shivering and freezing with rain and more rain.

Bill Boyd and Sue Carroll were required in summery diaphanous clothing to make love in a canoe near an amusement pier at the ocean front. It took three days to get just the idyllic quality required and Bill and Sue froze and rubbed their numb limbs while not looking sentimental and warm before the camera.

The day the company returned to the studio for indoor work the typical California poured down a heat wave which has held ever since. The picture was "Skyscraper."

A Lucky Visit.

They welcomed A. A. (Old Man) Stagg, famous football coach of the University of Chicago, like a long lost brother at the Cecil De Mille studio when he showed up there one day this week as a sightseer through the sets.

Rod La Rocque was making "Hold 'Em, Yale!" and Rod and everybody else seemed to feel sure that the famous Chicago coach was the greatest living exponent of Yale prowess.

La Rocque was working in a football sequence with a number of the University of Southern California football players providing the lifelike action. They all wanted to know what Mr. Stagg thought about this and that; did they do this at Yale and how would a trainer advise the studio regarding this and that shot, for instance? If that picture shows good technical direction, Director E. H. Griffith and Producer C. B. De Mille probably can offer thanks to the breaks which sent them "the old man of the Midway" in the middle of shooting this particular film.

News of Films and Players.

Elinor Fair, having a few idle moments on trips back and forth to location on "Sintown" for De Mille, started collecting signs on a well known make of car. Here are a few: "There's beauty in every jar." "I rattle, but don't strike." "Don't laugh, girls, you'd look funny, too, without any paint." "Don't call me, Aimee, I need water in the desert."

Jesse L. Lasky has been asked by the editors of the Encyclopedia Brittanica to prepare a special article on motion picture production for their next edition which goes to press in March. Lasky considers it a great honor. The article is to be quite exhaustive and will include a brief historical survey of the industry, a delineation of modern tendencies in motion pictures and also the theory, practice, and technique of production.

This is the first time the Encyclopedia Britannica has devoted such a considerable space to motion pictures.

A TEXAS STEER.

Looking backwards! Meaning that's what you are doing at this moment. The three so much in—arrears—are, reading from left to right, Will Rogers, Louise Fazenda and Ann Rork. The white line points to the White House. The scene is from "A Texas Steer", which opens tomorrow at the Oriental theater.

Teaching a Lesson.

"The Ten Commandments" made a deeper and more lasting impression on me than any movie I ever saw. We so often deplore the actions of youth. Advice and lecturing on the part of older ones seem to do but little good. They have to learn for themselves, and the place where they are most apt to learn life's lessons these days is in the moving picture show. They learn for "weal or wore."

This picture gave excellent Bible instruction, and alongside with this showed the results of obeying as well as the results of disobedience and how their conduct would in later years be brought to bear upon those dearly beloved parents who grow dearer "each step of the way."

Give us more of these good plays which we want our children to see and be educated by. And not only are they good for youth; we grownups can profit as well.

I shall never forget "The Phantom of the Opera." O, how weird and spooky! Perhaps that is the reason it made such an impression on me. But not the entire reason, however, for the acting was superb on the parts of all. Lon Chaney was marvelous [he always is] throughout the whole thing.

The scene that stands out in my mind is when Mary Philbin took off the mask and beheld the horrible, inhuman face that she believed would be so handsome.

I could never finish talking about this most wonderful screen production. Do you not agree with me, folks?

Marco Polo Is the King of Rotarians

By Burns Mantle.

doubt if it attains the popularity of "The Vagabond King," but it is nicely done and well sung by Allan Prior in the Faversham part, and little Marion Keeler playing the Nat-u-ritch now renamed Silverwing.

There is also another back-stage play called "Excess Baggage" that the folks are giving signs of liking a lot. It tells of a small time vaudeville pair who split when the wife goes into pictures and the husband, hounded by a fear complex, fails to carry on his juggling act alone. There is a sensational finish in which the husband tries a "slide for life" on a wire stretched from the gallery rail to the stage and nearly breaks his neck. They use a double, of course, but it is realistically managed and frightens the audience into excited spasms.

The Voice of the Movie Fan

A Weary Fan Takes Hope.

Dear Miss Tinée: Please let me say a few words in praise of the picture, "The Way of All Flesh."

I began to get disgusted with our American moving pictures. Even war pictures are extremely exaggerated and improbable, which seems ridiculous to me, as an ex-service man, who saw the real war "over there."

The plots in most of our modern pictures are—with little variety—all alike. Here is the unfailing hero who might be a little roguish once in awhile, but be sure he means well and has a heart of gold. Some improbable misunderstandings will come up, of course, but you know it before the first reel is over; he finally will get the fair lady and everybody is happy.

Along comes "The Way of All Flesh"—a relief, a piece of art, which makes me hope again for bigger and better pictures.

Can you guess the plot here? No, it just keeps you going from the start to the end. It is also realistic to the smallest detail and, therefore, makes you believe it all really happens.

I realize Emil Jannings' marvelous acting is the main reason for said effects, but don't you think, Mae, that many of our screen actors are able to do better things than we see in nine out of ten pictures?

MARTIN."

Editor's note: Sometimes I think so, and sometimes I don't.

Chip on the Shoulder.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have been gnashing my teeth at both you and Peggy ever since reading the latter's letter in the Voice of the Movie Fan—at her for thinking it, and at you for printing such advertising copy. Your whole grinning "good morning" system is antagonizing to me.

Yours truly, J. S.

Editor's note: Well, then—here's printing the sort of stuff you DO like. Y'wekkum.

ABSOLUTE SATISFACTION OR YOUR MONEY BACK

New Royal Opera Is Established in Rome

OTTAVIO SCOTTO, an impresario who has for many years been the personal representative of Claudia Muzio and who, through the force of circumstances has suddenly been lifted to the foremost position in the world in the excutive branch of that field of art, is in Chicago looking after the affairs of his greatest song bird, and making final arrangements for the opening of Italy's new royal opera.

The wheel of fortune has made Mr. Scotto the "Standard Oil company" of grand opera. At the command of Benito Mussolini he recently was made director general of the Opera Constanzi at Rome which will open on Feb. 23 as the municipal opera of the famed capitol of the Seven Hills and which henceforth will be known as the Teatro Reale de l'Opera. For several years, through arrangement with the government of the Argentine Republic, he has been director of the Colon theater at Buenos Aires, where grand opera is conducted on perhaps the most lavish scale in the world, and through state arrangement he also directs the affairs of the Teatro Municipal, Rio de Janeiro, and the Teatro Municipal at Sao Paulo, Brazil, constituting, with his new responsibilities in Rome, the greatest chain of grand opera houses in existence under one management.

Americans Will Sing.

"When the curtain rises at Constanzi, although it is essentially Italian in spirit, atmosphere and aspirations, we will introduce at least four American artists," says Mr. Scotto. "American music lovers always are agitated over the possibilities of American singers. I have brought out a number in the past and on the eve of this great opening it is no secret that four splendid artists of American birth, who have thus far been unheard in the lyric drama at home, will be given notable recognition. Merit alone is responsible for this, which is the best answer to the question whether America is producing or can produce great opera singers.

"Although Constanzi is technically the municipal opera of Rome, it will be, in fact, a national gesture and no one will find recognition there save upon the premise of preëminent ability. While the announcment of our artistic personnel cannot be made for weeks to come, it is no longer a secret that the quartet of splendid young American candidates will find place in the first rank there."

Conductors Announced.

Chicago music lovers will be interested in the fact that Gino Marinuzzi, who was artistic director and chief conductor of the Chicago Opera seven years ago, is one of the first conductors to be announced for the new Rome Opera. Antonio Guarnieri, Gaetano Bavagnoli, Riccardo Zandonai, and Igor Stravinski are among the conductors whose participation Impresario Scotto promises.

Stravinski will conduct his operas, "Edipus Rex" and "Rossignol"; Zandonai his new opera, "Juliano"; Mulé, famed as director of the world celebrated Santa Cecilia conservatory at Rome, will conduct the world premiere of his new opera, "Dafne." Another novelty which will attract world attention will be a performance of the new opera, "Sly," by Wolf-Ferrari, which recently received its world premiere at La Scala, Milan.

In addition to these novelties the standard répertoire for the approaching season will include "Nerone," which will be heard for the first time in Rome; "La Traviata," "Il Trovatore," "Aida," "Carmen," "Tosca," "Norma," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "La Sonnambula," "Elisir d'Amore," and "Orpheo." No Wagnerian presentations will be undertaken this year, although a year hence a number of the German master's works will be included in the répertoire. Pericle Ansaldo, formerly of La Scala, Milan, and more recently of the Colon theater, Buenos Aires, will be general stage director.

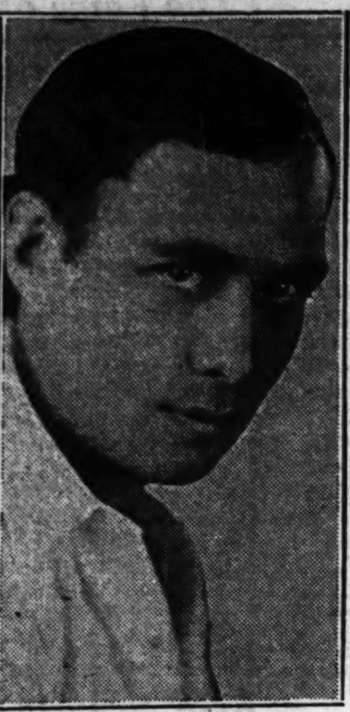
Scenic Artists Busy.

As every stick and stitch in the productions at the rebuilt Constanzi will be entirely new, a formidable array of famous scenic artists have been engaged to design the productions, including Benoit, Magnoni, Parravicini, Pierretto, Bianchi, and Scaioli.

The new Constanzi Opera is a practical reconstruction of the famous old institution. An entirely new stage has been installed, which Impresario Scotto insists is the most perfect and up to date in all the world. The stage has been enlarged and the research and inventions of German as well as Italian technicians have contributed to its perfection. While the auditorium itself has been rebuilt, it remains practically the same as of old in its general aspects, the only material change being the addition of a hundred more seats.

Mr. Scotto will remain in Chicago for another week arranging details for Mme. Muzio that she may reach Rome in time to constitute the outstanding feature of the final week of the season after the close of her tour with the Chicago Civic Opera and then hurry on to Buenos Aires for the opening of that brilliant season and squeeze in gala performances in Brazil and elsewhere throughout South America before returning to the Chicago Civic Opera next fall.

ON THE CREST



PHIL BAKER

He's in "A Night in Spain," and going strong with the crowds that for weeks have been looking on at this show in the Four Cohans. Mr. Baker has managed in a few seasons to push and pull and squeeze and torture that thing he carries hung from his neck into high favor;—and maybe it is, as the chatting lad in the right-hand box calls it, a zither.

THE ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

For those whose drama going is in the armchair or those who, having seen a play, relish it again in reading it.

IN NEW YORK.

THE week's spectacular opening was "Marco Millions," by Eugene O'Neill (although news of that opening hadn't yet reached this department when the typewriter began to click these words off). Eugene O'Neill is almost unanimously recognized as the greatest American dramatist—although sometimes his dramas are pretty hard for the mob to understand, and so they take themselves to the Follies and assorted more sympathetic revels.

"Marco Millions" is one of his best, and certainly one of his most understandable later pieces. As a satire it is patent even to readers, who sometimes miss the finer digs which a good actor can put into a line. It is a series of events, mostly in China, in the life of one Marco Polo, who set out as a youth to journey to China and spent the years of his youth with the great Kubla Kaan (as Mr. O'Neill chooses to spell the gentleman whom Mr. Coleridge introduced to most of us as Kubla Khan). The love of the Kaan's daughter contracts Marco Polo's blahness, his boastfulness, his good American business methody manner, as does also the old Kaan's search for a grain of wisdom in what Marco chooses to call his immortal soul. To the journeying Marco all countries are alike—at first a little intriguing, afterward only so much lay furniture on the path. There is satire, too, in the struggles of the believers in the religions who meet only to call each other infidels.

It is a play that builds its own scenery in your mind as you read it, creates its own atmosphere. It has had a strange career as a play. It was written first to be produced on two successive evenings, then cut down to one evening measure. It was bought first by Belasco, who planned to spend the trifling sum of $250,000 to produce it, and to send Robert Edmond Jones to China to get into the spirit of the stage sets. Belasco relinquished it, as Mr. O'Neill wanted immediate production, which he did not get, however, and it is just being put on, almost a year after its publication in book form. The Millions in the title refers to the nickname Il Milione which Venice gave to the traveler who was believed by his townspeople to be the greatest liar of his age.

The musical comedy version of Mark Twain's joyous "A Connecticut Yankee" will remind the literate that the affairs of that gentleman in the court of King Arthur are among the funniest things ever written in America.

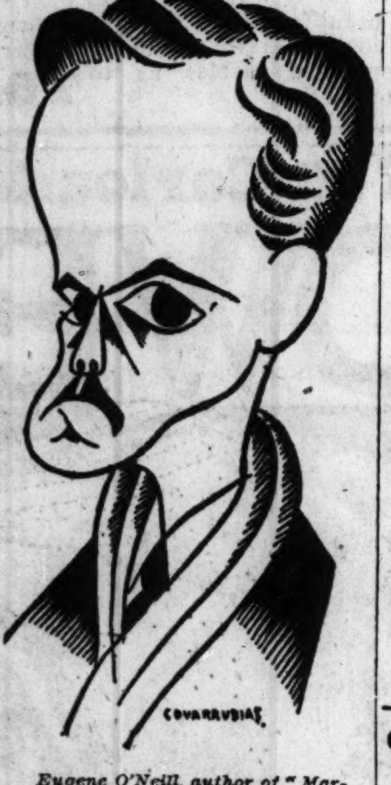
IN CHICAGO.

There may be more truth than appears on the surface in the words of the character in "Behold This Dreamer," who says that insane asylums are not meant to keep the inmates in but the rest of the mad world out. She isn't the only person who has ever thought that the scurrying mobs were mad. The acting version of the story has not yet been published, but the novel by Fulton Oursler, from which he made the play, was one of the outstanding pieces of fiction of last year—the kind of book that the critics wound huge laurel wreaths about.



Eugene O'Neill, author of "Marco Millions," after a caricature by Miguel Covarrubias in a volume called "The Prince of Wales and Other Americans."

JUST PUBLISHED.

"History of the American Drama," by Arthur Hobson Quinn (Harpers)—Mr. Quinn's history of the American drama begins in civil war times and finishes at the end of the second volume, with the last popular success. It is a scholarly piece of work, but in no sense pedantic. It would give a great lift to any one who has been seeing plays for a generation—because it brings back all the thrills of the great days of the stage. If some one hasn't already said it, some one should, that there is no thrill so thrilling as a relived one — which may account for the glory of most of the autobiographies, but which certainly accounts for the fact, so often bemoaned by playgoers, that since Joseph Jefferson died there are no great actors.

$5 FOR WAR LETTERS

AttenSHUN, veterans!

Where were you ten years ago? Whom were you fighting, or what deviltry were you up to?

The Tribune will pay $5 for every former soldier's, sailor's, or marine's published letter of not more than 300 words and dealing with 1918 service reminiscences.

Parlez-vous? Then put your words on paper and address War Letters, Chicago Tribune.

A Wet Party.

It was very, very warm.

All day the hot sun had blistered our hands, faces, and necks on the drill grounds at dear old Fort Snelling.

With relief we stacked arms and prepared for the evening meal—

"Soupy, soupy—soup—soup,
Without a single bean;
Porky, porky—pork—pork,
Without a streak of lean;
Coffee, coffee, coffee,
Meanest ever seen."

Then we hied off to the Y. M. C. A. or lounged around on our bunks.

At 9:30 p. m. tatoo sounded and lights were smothered.

Some went to roll on their bunks for the night, trying to sleep.

Only the glow of a fag told that all were not asleep.

After midnight yours truly, who happened to be in charge of quarters, noticed the light flickering out into the night. Closer investigation revealed a dozen or so of the boys in a game of galloping dominoes. The officer of the day, a citizens' army shavetail, happened along and took charge of all the investigation.

Peering through cracks in the wall we noticed that the game did not lack for interest, and unnoticed we stepped into the rear of the building. Our movements were hidden from the offenders by canvas screens, which were drawn closely around the game, which was being played on the cement floor directly beneath a shower bath attachment.

"Seven, come eleven!"

"Little Joe!"

"Eliza Jane, don't turn me down!"

"Big Dick from Boston!"

"Little Phoebe from Alabam'!"

For a moment we listened to their appeals to the ivories. Then we noticed that the light switches and water valves were just at our elbow. Yes, it would be better than taking them to the guard house.

The lights were quickly switched off and the room was plunged into utter darkness. The same instant the shower bath emitted water in full volume. Quietly we stepped outside and ran as shrieks and curses rent the air. From the orderly room I noticed several of my buddies sneak into quarters very meek and—wet. W. I. H.

Now and to Come in the Theaters

THIS is the calendar for the Chicago theaters as indicated by the resident-managers down to midnight of Friday last. Change of plans since last Sunday's issue has been made with respect to some of the houses:

Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner in the Harris: the daughter of Otis Skinner, known heretofore as an actress of incidental or contributory rôles, in an entertainment of her own devising and authorship. . . . This afternoon at 3:30; January 22 and 29, also.

"It Makes a Difference" in the Princess: a play by Hugh Ford, of high celebrity as a stage-director, and Edwin Stanley. Miss Mayo Methot, Kenneth Mackenna, and Miss Thaïs Lawton head the cast. The première of the piece was last night in South Bend (Ind.). . . . Opens tonight.

"Just Fancy!" in the Olympic: a romantic comedy with music made from A. E. Thomas' piece named "Just Suppose!" which was liked when acted in 1921 in the Blackstone. Joseph Santley, who produced the new version, has with him in the cast such celebrities and somebodies of the theater as Raymond Hitchcock, Mrs. Whiffin, H. Reeves-Smith, Miss Ivy Sawyer, and Eric Blore. This diversion is quite unlike anything else in town; and the nightly proceedings include an entr'acte speech by Mr. Hitchcock. . . . Second week.

"Kongo" in the Central: a wild play about nearly everything save Prohibition. . . . Second week.

"The Mask and the Face" in the Goodman Memorial: easily the best of the several plays made known to Chicago in this theater since its opening, late in 1925. It is a vivid and topical comedy from the Italian of Luigi Chiarelli, and so good that it stands up even under the disadvantages of bad stage-direction and some goofy acting. . . . Third week.

"Two Girls Wanted" in the Cort: a comedy by Gladys Unger and Winchell Smith, with Miss Nydia Westman, Miss Mary Philips, and Donald Foster. . . . Fourth week.

"The Squall" in the Adelphi: a play by Jean Bart, with Miss Blanche Yurka. . . . Fourth week.

Miss Ethel Barrymore in "The Constant Wife" in the Harris: a brilliant comedy by W. Somerset Maugham wherein this actress has her most popular conveyance since "Déclassée." Kenneth Hunter replaces C. Aubrey Smith in the principal man's rôle. . . . Fourth week.

Fred and Miss Dorothy Stone in "Criss Cross" in the Erlanger: the long-popular clown and his lovely daughter in a show fashioned with the talents of both in view. . . . Fourth week.

Glenn Hunter in "Behold This Dreamer!" in the Blackstone: a comedy based by Fulton Oursler and Aubrey Kennedy on the former's like-named story. Miss Elinor Patterson and Thomas A. Wise are of the cast. . . . Fourth week.

"A Night in Spain" in the Four Cohans: a funny show from the New-York Winter Garden, with Miss Marion Harris, Ted Healy, and Phil Baker heading the long roster of performers. . . . Eighth week.

"Hit the Deck!" in the Woods: a song-and-dance comedy with tunes by Vincent Youmans, composer of "No! No, Nanette!" Miss Queenie Smith, Charles Purcell, and Miss Trixie Friganza are in the principal rôles. . . . Eleventh week.

"Broadway" in the Selwyn: a wow of a piece about bootleggers, joint-owners, ham hoofers, chorus-girls, murders, double-crossings, revenges, and other things. . . . Eighteenth and final week.

"The Desert-Song" in the Great Northern. . . . Twentieth week.

Impending.

"Abie's Irish Rose" in the Kedzie: third Chicago engagement of the most popular play in the annals of the theater. . . . Opens January 22.

Earl Carroll's Vanities in the Illinois: fourth show under this name to be seen in Chicago. Moran and Mack, Julius Tannen, and Johnny Dooley are in it. . . . Opens January 22.

"Peggy-Ann" in the Selwyn: a song-and-dance piece that has been through a New-York run, with Miss Helen Ford and Miss Lulu McConnell. . . . Opens January 23.

Miss Jeanne Eagels in "Her Cardboard Lover" in the Adelphi. . . . Opens January 30.

"Good News" in the Four Cohans. . . . Opens February 18.

F. D.

As to Stage-Reporters.

SIR: I ran across this today in reading Baird Leonard's "Mrs. Pep's Diary" in the current issue of Life:

". . . and then to the playhouse to see 'The Racket,' the most satisfactory new play that I have seen, with the newspaper-men in the cast true to life, for once, and inordinately amusing"; and I'm sending it in, in case you've not read it, to ask why it is that newspaper-men invariably find fault with the actors of newspaper-men. Are they, ethnologically or by pigmentation or by facial or physical phenomena, a race apart? Is it the notion of newspaper-men that a stage-reporter or a stage-editor must be just like the reporters and editors he knows in his office? I don't get it! Miss Leonard says that in "The Racket" they are "true to life for once." If an actor can give satisfaction as a banker, a bootlegger, a clergyman, a hobo, a dude, a dub, or a cop, why not as a reporter?

GEORGE G. HELSTON.

Chicago: January 10, 1928.

But "A. I. R." Isn't Gone!

Was it mere coincidence that "Abie's Irish Rose" and the old Ford went out together?—From Life.

AMONG OUR PLAYERS IN MID-JANUARY

MISS MAYO METHOT

MISS IVY SAWYER

MISS METHOT was in Chicago in the fore part of last season as the stowaway in "Alias the Deacon," in the Studebaker and, later, in the Playhouse. She afterward took over the part of the girl who loves the cantor's son in "The Jazz-Singer," but did not remain in occupancy of it. . . . She returns tonight in "It Makes a Difference," in the Princess.

Miss Sawyer is the player in "Just Fancy!" of the girl loved by the especial Prince of Wales who was identified as Albert Edward until he became King Edward VII. She is Mrs. Joseph Santley when at-home; and she has been with Mr. Santley in his Chicago visits ever since 1917, when he was the "juvenile" of "Betty," whereof Raymond Hitchcock, now with him in "Just Fancy!" was the star. Subsequent visits were in "Oh, Boy!" and the first and third issues of the Music-Box Revue.

20 YEARS AGO in Chicago's THEATERS

From The Tribune of January 12, 1908.

WILLIAM FAVERSHAM will return to Powers' Monday in "The Squaw-Man"; and the engagement, of two weeks, is the last to be played here by Mr. Faversham in this piece; for his managers, Liebler & Co., state that they have a new work ready for his use next season.

"The Squaw-Man" was afterward acted here by Dustin Farnum. Mr. Faversham, when through with it, was financed by Felix Isman, of Philadelphia, as an actor-manager: he is now making ready to act in "Diplomacy." And "The Squaw-Man" has been made into an operetta, "The White Eagle," current in New-York.

Nat Wills and his company will give "A Lucky Dog," by Mark Swan, in the Great Northern, starting with a matinée today. Mr. Wills promises new songs and parodies, including one named "B. P. O. E."

Wills, popular in the guise of a hobo, died some years ago of asphyxiation in his garage. His last appearance in Chicago was in 1917, in the Auditorium, as a contributor to a show from the New-York Hippodrome: Charlotte, then at the height of her great vogue as a skater, and Sousa and his band were in the same show.

In the Whitney Opera-House Monday afternoon, Miss Constance Crawley will present the dramatic version of Gabrielle d'Annunzio's "Gioconda," which that author wrote for Eleanor Duse. It is a story of passion, picturing the struggles of a sculptor between the duty he owes his wife and the love he bears his art, as represented by his model.

Miss Crawley, remembered as persistent in seeking the interest of Chicago theater-goers with what she called "unusual things," long since vanished. . . . 'Twere difficult to say what the writer of the above paragraph meant by "dramatic version"; and his description of the play is reason for doubting that he knew what it was about. . . The present dramacritic of THE TRIBUNE wrote, at the time of Duse's death, that the wife in "Gioconda" was the rôle in which she was best.

This Tuesday, in the Fine-Arts Music-Hall, the Theater de l'Alliance Français will present a strong modern French play—"Blanchette," by Brieux, a clever and sincere playwright; and for this reason the theater has drawn out a cast of characters which includes Prof. F. C. Locard, a veteran of the local French stage.

The foregoing paragraph, including the French, is verbatim from THE TRIBUNE. The date was nearly five years before "Damaged Goods" was acted in Chicago; and Brieux was unknown to theater-goers here.

"The Banker, the Thief, and the Girl," a melodrama of New-York life, comes to the Academy with the matinée today. The play was provided for Joe Morris, heralded as both a pleasing singer and a remarkably-faithful Hebrew impersonator.

"The Girl of Eagle Ranch," with Mamie Fleming in the title-rôle, will entertain the Bijou's audience this afternoon. Miss Fleming is a bright and versatile soubrette.

"Little Heroes of the West" is the title of the heart-interest melodrama to begin the week in the Alhambra this afternoon. The plot concerns love, jealousy, a tenement-house fire, and sensational escapes.

CONTINUING ATTRACTIONS:

Chicago Opera-House — Fifteenth week of William Hodge in "The Man from Home."

Colonial—Seventh week of "The Merry Widow."

La Salle—Twenty-third week of "The Girl-Question."

Whitney Opera-House — Forty-first week of "A Knight for a Day."

Pekin—Second week of the resident Negro company in "Out All Night."

The Chicago, the Colonial, and the Pekin are no more. The La Salle is a "grind" house for movies. The Whitney is become the Central. . . . Mr. Hodge is now rated a millionaire; and "The Man from Home," rewritten as "Hoosiers Abroad," was recently taken off as one of this season's failures. Miss Lina Abarbanell, who had the title-part of "The Merry Widow," is still active. Junie McCree, Miss Georgia Drew Mendum, Miss Frances Demarest, and others who were in "The Girl-Question" in the Mort H. Singer days of the La Salle have passed from view. Nobody hears of John Slavin, the comic of "A Knight for a Day," wherein his co-star was the late Mabel Hite.

OLD-TIMER

MISS PATRICOLA

She's in the week's Palace bill; and less than anybody else in the bill does she require to be explained or made known to Chicagoans. . . . As Mr. Donaghey said in his column last Friday, to see her name in print is to recall vividly the nights when Rector's had the best cabaret in town.

Gershwin Explains Ideas Back of Jazz

George Gershwin is quoted in the New York Evening Post as trying to put the meaning of jazz into words, growing philosophical and a bit highbrow over it, and then giving it up.

"Tin Pan Alley doesn't know why it writes the sort of songs it does," said Mr. Gershwin. "Its song writers have a vague notion that the public will like a certain kind of rhythm, and mostly the rhythms are accidents—or seem to be."

"I didn't realize it at once," he explained in tracing his awakening to the meaning of jazz, "but it was finally borne in upon me that jazz was the result of a spiritual force in America; that it was the expression of our lives; that it sang a crude and beautifully fierce freedom that sings in the hearts of American youth.

"I knew finally that I was creating out of the musical heritage of our land. I knew that jazz, the jazz I was writing, came out of the accumulated sounds and melodies that I had been hearing since a boy. Jazz I discovered was a recreation and accumulation of American folk songs, Negro spirituals and ragtime, all whipped up into swift and half mad rhythms; whipped up, perhaps, by the war.

"I think," he said, after a pause, "that you might set jazz down as being the syncopated fusion of all the racial music of the peoples that have gone into the great melting pot of America. It is the hybrid song of exultation and freedom of a new people emerging into an industrial age of steel and skyscrapers. Of course, jazz can't be expressed in definitions; it is beyond that. You can't define any music."

NEW PLAYS in New-York's THEATERS

BELOW are the new plays and the revivals listed for the week in the theaters of New-York. The items likely to be of most popular interest for those who make up what is called the first-night crowd are George Arliss as Shylock, tomorrow, and "The Patriot," Thursday.

"The Merchant of Venice," in revival by Winthrop Ames for Mr. Arliss, undertaking his first important character in Shakspere. Miss Peggy Wood will be the Portia.

"A Distant Drum," by Vincent Lawrence, with Louis Calhern, Miss Catherine Wilson, Miss Mary Newcomb, and Felix Krembs. . . . This play has borne a number of titles since first announced: the most recent until now was "Possessed." Mr. Lawrence is known in Chicago for "Two Fellows and a Girl," which was thin and good; "In Love with Love," thin and a bore; and "Kelly's Vacation," thick and awful. Mr. Calhern was here last Summer in "Tenth Avenue." Miss Newcomb, who has been in domestic retirement, hasn't acted here since January of 1925, when she was in "The Lady of the Streets."

"Love and Intrigue" [Schiller's "Kabale und Liebe"] in revival by Max Reinhardt, making the sixth play he will have given in New-York with his German-speaking players from Berlin and Vienna. Hélène Thimig, who didn't cross with the others, makes her début in this country in the old piece.

"John Ferguson," a play by St.-John G. Ervine, in revival for afternoon performances, with Augustin Duncan, Miss Marion Kerby, Miss Miriam Hopkins, and Barry Macollum. . . . This genre piece was one of the earliest of the things staged by the Theater Guild of New-York.

"The Silver Box," an early play of Galsworthy's, in revival by Mr. Ames with James Dale, Miss Isobel Elsom, and Halliwell Hobbes. . . . The play was first staged in Chicago by the amateurs of Hull-House. Later, some performances were given in what is now the Playhouse by the company known as the Manchester Players. Miss Barrymore had the principal rôle, Mrs. Jones, in the first New-York hearing of the piece, in 1907; and the inhabitants were quite indifferent to what I have ever regarded as one of her best impersonations. Of the actors named for Mr. Ames' revival, Mr. Dale has been here in "Loyalties" and "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney"; Mr. Hobbes, in "The Swan"; and Miss Elsom was the actress who needed income so keenly that she took the rôle of the wife in the sewage named "Sin of Sins."

"Mirrors," by Milton Herbert Gropper, with Miss Sylvia Sidney, Miss Marie Nordstrom, Hale Hamilton, Raymond Guion, and Albert Hackett. . . . The author wrote part of "New Toys," part of "We Americans," and all of "Ladies of the Evening"—all plays that have been given in Chicago.

"The Patriot," by Alfred Neumann (in a translation from the German by Ashley Dukes), with Miss Madge Titheradge, Leslie Faber, Lyn Harding, Vernon Steele, and Frank Shannon—all well-knowns of the stage, although it is a long time since Miss Titheradge, Mr. Harding, or Mr. Faber has acted in this city. . . . The play is of Russian locale: the time, 1800-'01.

F. D.

Forecast.

The Great American Movie will contain a scene on an old sailing-vessel, with the hero appearing as a rooky seaman. He will be ordered by the captain to take the wheel; and while he is thus engaged the heroine won't come sidling up to him and distract his attention to such an extent that he leaves the wheel and starts chasing her playfully about the decks. Indeed, there won't be a girl on board the boat in the first place.—R. E. Sherwood in Life.

Looking Backward with Fred Stone

By Figaro McGee.

GIVEN as I am to speculation on the eternal, unceasing gamble of all that makes up the theater—a gamble in which I have not been successful—I never see Fred Stone's name without my mind's running back to the 'Nineties, when I first "caught" him and David Montgomery in a variety-house, working like Trojans. (Why did the Trojans, whoever they were, work so hard that their labors became a criterion of what labor ought to be?) They were blacked up; they sang none too well songs that were none too smart; they exchanged jests that were none too bright; and then they danced, and danced, and danced. Their steps were then less a tradition than they would be today: the variety-stage was alive in the late 'Nineties with men and women who were repositories of all the dance-idioms that had come into the American theater from the Irish, the Scotch, the waltzing Germans, and the plantation Negroes; and it was up to Montgomery and Stone to do something individual with those idioms. They did.

To what extent—if at all—Stone then was the better dancer of the two I may not say,—although at the time I thought, doubtless, that I knew. He seemed, in the tricks, always to be "leading" Montgomery—to be setting a pace the latter had trouble in catching and maintaining. But I seem to remember Montgomery as the neater in his stepping, especially when they were doing unisons in the familiar steps of the jig, the reel, and the Essence. He lacked even then Stone's uncommon physical facility and cleverness. Both impressed me that they were terrifically eager to please that afternoon audience of a hot Summer day in the old Union-Square Theater in New-York. The test of success in the Keith theaters, of which the Union-Square was one, was the number of recalls, of "encores," and of "bows." Montgomery and Stone had a trick of forcing the recalls that was as much part of their "act" as the dancing, itself. It is not my recollection that either at the time was rated by variety-house audiences—at least, those of the eastern cities—as a comedian to be remembered till the next time round.

But they were real headliners by the time, in the last year of the old century, Charles Frohman decided to use them in support of Edna May in "The Girl from Up There." In that, they gave to me the impression of two eager chaps pushing their specialty into something not meant to be a show for specialties. That employment took them to London, where Miss May was popular because of her having been there in the long run of "The Belle of New-York." They were liked; indeed, they had previously made good there in one of the principal music-halls. But it is not my belief that their rating as comic fellows was much higher than it had been in the varieties. They had to wait for that rating until 1903, when the Hamlins staged "The Wizard of Oz" here in Chicago in the Grand Opera-House.

That good show was an amalgam of fairy-play, extravaganza, spectacle, Boxing-Night pantomime, burlesque, and go-as-you-please song-and-dance piece. Julian Mitchell's skill made fine utilization of many of L. Frank Baum's ideas in the fairy-tales on which the show was based; but the librettists fell down in the item of inventiveness. The idea was, of course, that the chief comic rôle should be that of the title—the Wizard, himself; and John Slavin, then rated high as a comic actor with a gift for putting laughs into a part, was hired for it. I think he was the most envied comedian of that Springtime, so certain were all the other comedians in the market that each of them needed nothing so much as the rôle of the Wizard for a conveyance whereby they might ride into eternal fame. And now, just twenty-five years later, I'm wondering how many of the thousands still alive who saw the lovely and amusing show remember that Slavin was in it at all!

For there, if ever, was a first-night whose principal performer "woke next morning to find himself famous," as the old, old bromide puts it. Stone as the Scarecrow was the most talked-about player in the American theater in the next year or so. The I-knew-him-when boys were out in full vocal force: true to the tradition of actors everywhere, they seemed, as they recalled his career, to be protesting that he had no right to have the rôle! Of course, the hit was, when broadcast, that of Montgomery and Stone: the former's Tin-Man went along with Stone's Scarecrow as Joe Weber's eye went along with Lew Fields' right forefinger, or as Jim McIntyre's low moan of hunger went along with Tom Heath's unctuous description of hot biscuits swimming in a pool of roast-beef gravy right near the good old Sweitzer Swamp.

Other producers, true to the tradition of producers, began to poke about in the variety-theaters of all classes on the lookout for a "team" as good as or better than Montgomery and Stone. Wherever there were two song-and-dance men who corked up, there were two noisy candidates for a show like "The Wizard of Oz." "Wait till they come to New-York!" warned the idle actors, hopeful that Broadway would resent a success made in Chicago; but Broadway jammed the theater for the months and months "The Wizard of Oz" was on view.

I don't believe they had a big salary from the Hamlins, who were not spendthrifts in such matters. Whatever it was, it wasn't so big that Montgomery and Stone were unable to resist an offer from Mr. Dillingham to pass to his management after they should have finished out their contract in "The Wizard." Fred Hamlin had meanwhile died; his brothers didn't care for the work of producing; John H., the father, was aged and ailing—circumstances that make me think the two performers were silly in not having asked to be let out of the Hamlin option on their services. Actor-like, they seemed to take it for granted that the Hamlins wouldn't mind; and the Hamlins did mind: they minded so much that not only did they trade their option, after they instituted litigation, for part of the profits of the first show to be staged for the performers by Dillingham, but also for the booking of the show in their Chicago theater.

That show was "The Red Mill." Save for Victor Herbert's tunes, it was a dull piece to me; and it was so popular that its profit in three years must have been ten times the original investment. The success of the show "fixed" Montgomery and Stone: they were from then on the best drawing-cards on the American stage. . . . The sequence of shows thereafter is, perhaps, remembered by their public—"The Old Town," "The Lady of the Slipper" (wherein they had Elsie Janis as co-star), and "Chin-Chin." It was early in 1917, in the second Chicago engagement of "Chin-Chin," that Montgomery died. Stone since then has been in the shows named "Jack o' Lantern," "Tip Top," "Rolling Stones" (wherein his lovely daughter joined him), and that now in the Erlanger, "Criss Cross." Of them all, and excepting not even "The Wizard," "Chin-Chin" was to me the best.

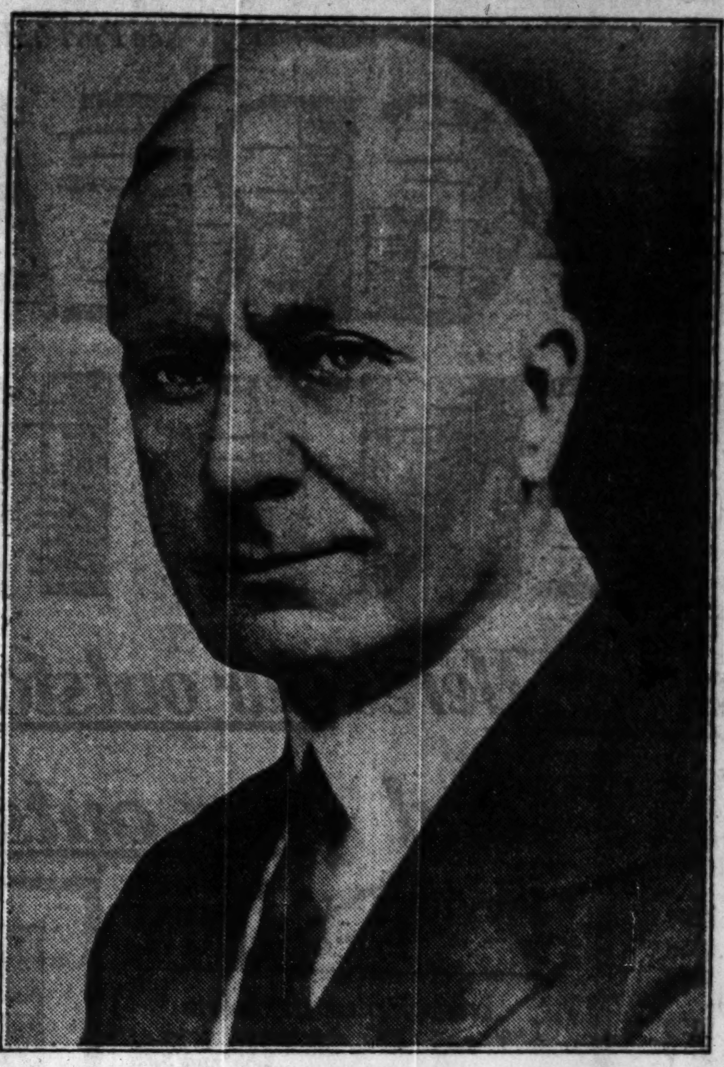
And, as Henry James used to say, there you are! For a quarter-century, Fred Stone, once fifty percent of a "team" of burnt-cork song-and-dance men, has been the most consistent drawing-card in American amusements. Only Jolson—who is still burnt-cork'd, and doesn't dance to speak of—has of late years been a bigger individual attraction at the box-office;—but (and this is an important but), what a difference in the character of their respective audiences!

SEASONED AND SOUND



H. REEVES-SMITH

HE is in the roster of black-type performers in "Just Fancy!"; and this is, so far as the available records show, his first adventure with a song-and-dance piece in the United States, at least. . . . Mr. Reeves-Smith has been here in many a play in the years since he came from England to act in the farce named "A Brace of Partridges." He's been with some of the popular stars—with Miss Grace George, Miss Margaret Anglin, Miss Emily Stevens, and Miss Ina Claire. He was last here late in 1926 in an offense named "Sin of Sins."

BEST PLAYS

Send us a letter telling which play stands out in your memory as the best you have ever seen and stating briefly why it made a hit with you. The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter printed. Address Best Plays, Chicago Tribune.

Back in 1909.

The most vibrant play that held me breathless from beginning to end was "The Thief," performed in 1909 at Powers' theater. Effie Shannon acted the wife, the late Kyrle Bellew, undoubtedly one of the most finished actor of his generation, took the part of the husband, and Eugene O'Brien, the lover.

These three, assisted by a perfect cast, gave the most thrilling performance of the best written play I have ever seen. Every move furthered the plot, the action was logical and well knit, and interest was sustained until the last drop of the curtain.

And memories of Kyrle Bellew! Was there ever a more magnetic, a more handsome, a more perfect actor, or a greater gentleman?

Of Delicate Beauty.

"Peter Ibbetson" is the play to me. I saw it several years ago with Julia Hoyt as Mimsy. The book had been my prize possession for some time and it was with trepidation I decided to see the play. But nothing could be more lovely than Miss Hoyt's Mimsy, especially when she comes back to her Gogo, who has decided to die because of grief at her loss.

Her mystic sweetness, her voice like distant music, her comforting explanation of the universe to the sorrowing prisoner—these are beautiful things I cannot find in more modern plays.

"Happiness is like time and space—we make and measure it ourselves," she said.

"Peter Ibbetson" could never be popular and no doubt is passé, but I cannot hope to see anything so exquisite again.

Back in 1896.

It was in 1896 that I saw Wilton Lackaye as Svengali and Blanche Walsh in the title rôle of "Trilby" in the old Schiller theater.

That's a long time ago, but I can still remember how beautifully she sang "Ben Bolt" as she was dying. It was soft, yet so clear that we in the top gallery didn't miss a note.

Playgoers Vote on G.-and-S. Operettas

CHICAGO'S thousands who are forever writing to the editor to ask why somebody doesn't revive the Gilbert-and-Sullivan operettas may be interested in the outcome of balloting by Winthrop Ames' audiences in the New-York theater where his revival of "The Mikado" ran from early October until last night. Mr. Ames is to send his G.-and-S. company to Chicago in the late Spring, he says; and it is assumed that he knows pretty well, through his alliance with the Messrs. Shubert, that the operettas from the series heard here in the last twenty years haven't prospered too greatly. The figures are from Mr. Ames' publicity-man; and THE TRIBUNE, in printing them, assumes they are correct.

So far, Mr. Ames has revived "The Mikado," "The Pirates of Penzance," and "Iolanthe." The ballot-blank distributed to the audience asked for an expression of preference as to what the next revival should be. Here is the result of the voting down to about the end of 1927:

"Pinafore"	4,810
"The Gondoliers"	3,933
"Patience"	3,462
"Ruddigore"	2,754
"The Yeomen of the Guard"	2,417
"Trial by Jury"	1,433
"Princess Ida"	1,331
"The Sorcerer"	710
"Utopia (Limited)"	700
"The Grand Duke"	662

All the listed operettas save "Utopia (Limited)" and "The Grand Duke" have been heard in New-York within the last fifteen years. De Wolf Hopper in 1915 gave there a revival of "The Yeomen of the Guard," "The Sorcerer," and "Trial by Jury" after having used them in Chicago. "Ruddigore," neglected in this country from the time of its American première, was successfully restored about nine years ago by the organization called the Society of American Singers. That organization gave "The Gondoliers," also. "Princess Ida" was the subject of a foolish revival there less than two years ago. . . . "Utopia (Limited)" hasn't been undertaken by any management since it was first brought out in New-York, in the early 'Nineties; and "The Grand Duke" was such a failure in London that none of the American managers of the day had the hardihood to import it.

From Recent Movies.

"I ain't a duchess at all: I'm the skirt wot delivers the wash."

"I'm not the wealthy heiress, Reginald: I'm only Sally O'Rourke, the tablemaid."

"I loved you so that I pretended I was a social leader. But now let me go back to the pickle-works."

"My name is not Flavia de Peyster. I'm only Gussie, the hat-check girl."

"I was acting a part, Orlando. The truth is, I toil in a shirt-factory."

"My parents know me as Maria Meggs—not Claudia von Château; but I will never regret leaving that laundry-job for you."—From the Toronto Telegram.

My Best Joke

Breaking It Gently.

An old darky was carefully tending the last two remaining sheep belonging to his master, who was very ill. Some misfortune had happened to each one of the flock of sheep until only two were left. Finally, they died. The old darky immediately told the master's wife and she told him to tell the master but, as he was ill, to break it to him gently.

The old darky went to his master's room and quietly entered. He broke the news to him gently in the following manner:

The Old Darky—Massa, massa.

His Master—Yes?

The Old Darky—One of yo' sheep done died.

His Master—Yes, Sam.

The Old Darky—An'—an'—an' anoder done died, too.

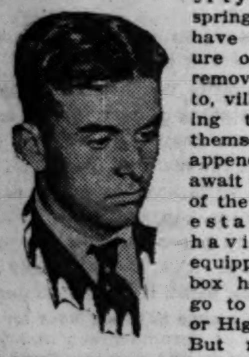
LIBERTYVILLE CITIZENS GIVE TOWN HOSPITAL

Ready for Patients During Spring.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.



SAMUEL INSULL JR.

Sickness, involving a sojourn in a hospital, for the townspeople of Libertyville next spring is due to have some measure of the sting removed. Hitherto, villagers desiring to separate themselves from appendixes or to await the arrival of the stork in an establishment having a well equipped bread box have had to go to Waukegan or Highland Park. But now comes word that work is being rushed on a Libertyville community hospital so it will be ready for the spring supply of indisposed.

The institution will be known as the Elizabeth Condell Memorial hospital and it will be located at the southwest corner of Stewart and Cleveland avenues. It is named to commemorate an old citizen of the town who, on her death about a year ago, willed her fortune of $20,000 to start a hospital fund. The rest of the $110,000 needed to put up the structure was raised by popular subscription.

Of Spanish Design.

Now for a word or two about the building. It was designed by H. V. Von Holst and is of Spanish architecture. It will be in the shape of a cross and will have accommodation for twenty-five beds. All the patients will be cared for on the ground floor, while on a small second story over the central part of the structure will be quarters for the nurses.

Beds for the sick will be placed in two wings of the cross, a complete operating room will be located in the third, and the service department will occupy the fourth. The nurses will have especially attractive rooms. which will open on porches covered by pergolas.

The hospital building will occupy an irregular shaped piece of ground measuring roughly 281x246 feet and comprising about one and two-thirds acres. The size of the land provides for future expansion and eventually it is planned to have a building that will accommodate fifty patients. Additions will be made to two of the wings when needed.

The Unknown Donor.

It is planned to landscape the grounds and at the rear there is to be installed an attractive pool which some of the patients' rooms will overlook. Incidentally the land was given to the hospital organization by a wealthy individual who does not wish to have his name disclosed. But we guess the generous donor to be Libertyville's richest citizen, a gentleman whom Chicago has drafted to run many of its most important institutions, from "L" lines to opera. And one thing for which he is not noted is being a tightwad. We'll leave the reader to do the rest of the guessing.

All the civic bodies of Libertyville helped to raise the money for the hospital, including the American Legion, Kiwanis club, women's clubs, etc. President of the board of directors is Paul Ray, while Martin J. Casey is secretary. Other members of the board are Max Kohner, Samuel Insull Jr., Mrs. F. H. Noble, R. G. Kaping, and Mrs. Alvah L. Johnson.

PLAN $332,000 STRUCTURE FOR 79TH AND RHODES

Plans are being prepared by Kocher & Larson, architects, for a three story structure which Johnston Brothers, builders, will erect at the southeast corner of 79th and Rhodes. The building will occupy a 132x125 foot site, contain ten stores, twenty-six apartments and ten private garages and represent an investment of $332,000, it is stated. The site was recently purchased from Michael Kultgen in part payment for which Johnston Brothers gave two three flat buildings at 8116-20 Ingleside avenue. J. L. Hess represented Mr. Kultgen and J. C. Jorn & Co. acted for the Johnston Brothers.

H. C. CROWELL BUYS HOME SITE AT INDIAN HILL

Henry Coleman Crowell of Winnetka has purchased one and three-quarters acres on Indian Hill road, facing on the third fairway of the Indian Hill golf course at Winnetka from H. J. Freyn for an undisclosed consideration. It is stated Mr. Crowell expects to build a residence on the property in the spring. McGuire & Orr were brokers.

Joseph K. Brittain to Talk Before 'Y' Class on Realty

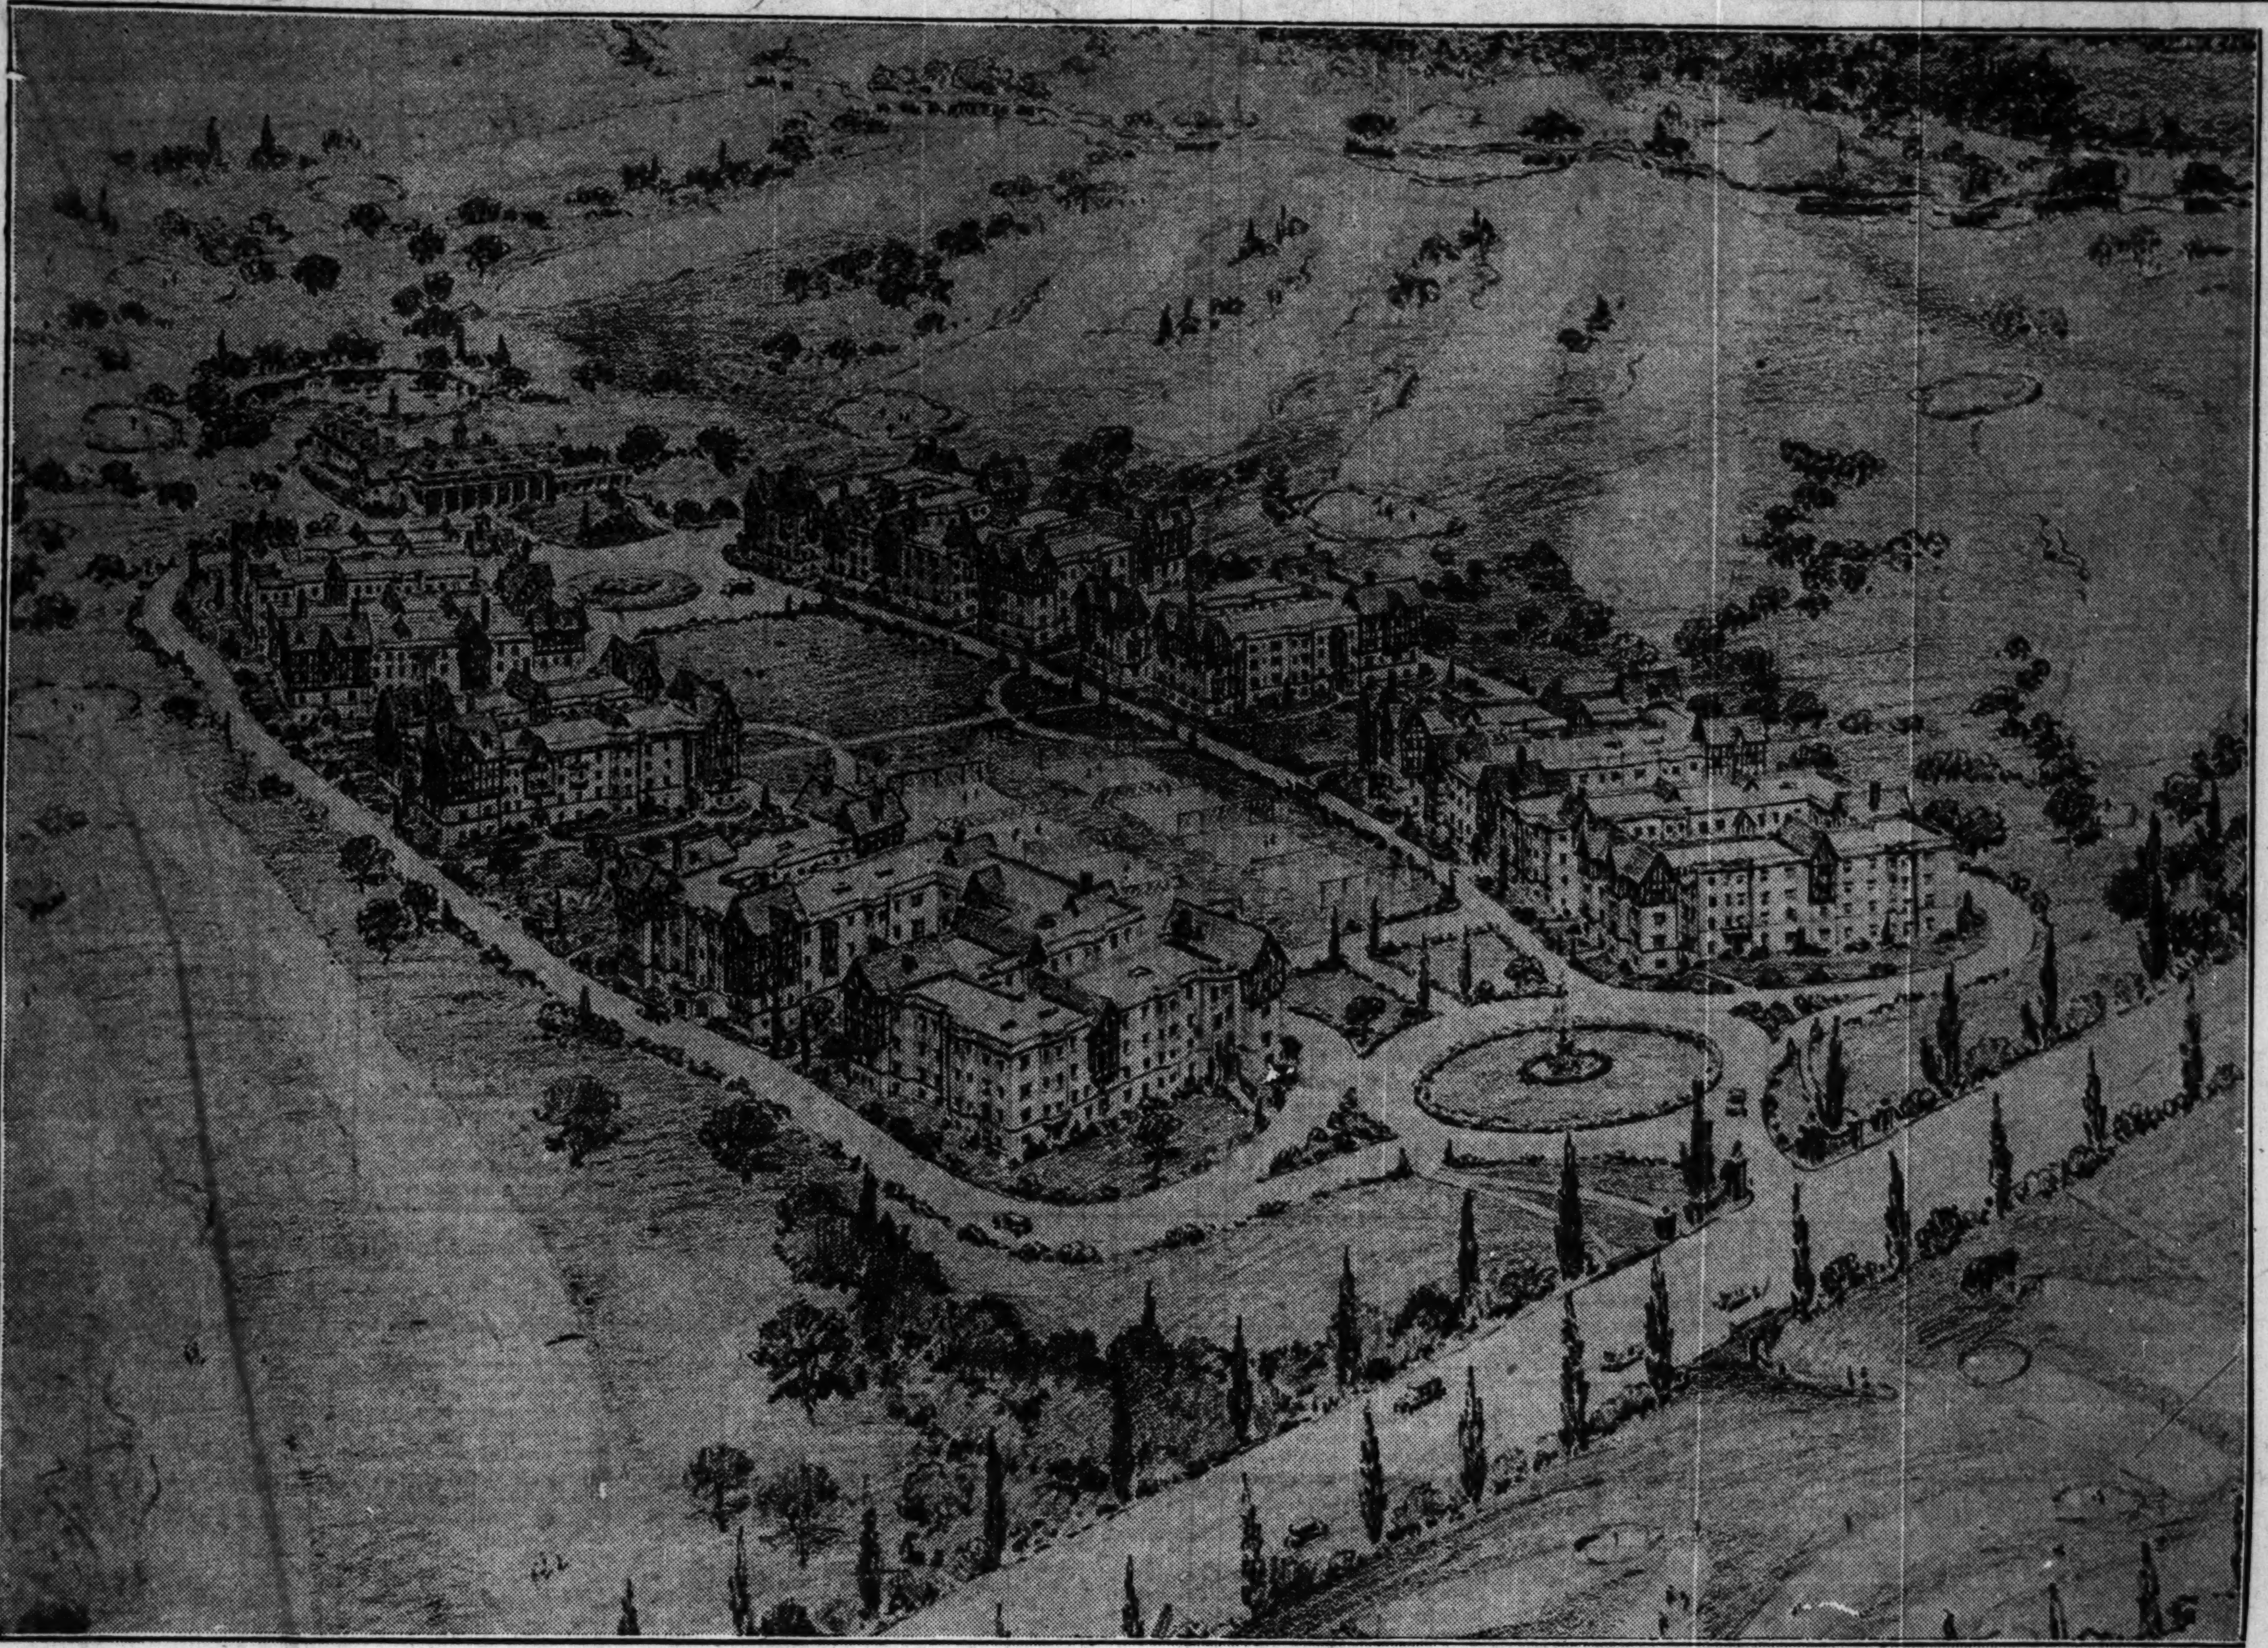
COMBINING HOME COMFORTS WITH CLUB LUXURIES IN A NOVEL SETTING



Above is an airplane view of Normany-at-Flossmoor, a $5,000,000 combination city flat and suburban golf club coöperative project designed by Frank D. Chase, Inc., to be erected on a 187 acre tract of rolling land southeast of Flossmoor, by a syndicate headed by Newton B. Lauren, James R. Cardwell, Henry Hedberg, and John A. Jennings. There'll be six large three story and English basement units, containing 330 suites of from four to eight rooms. Allen M. Weary made this sketch for the architect. Details of the project are given in an adjoining column. The above view is looking west, with the Dixie highway in the foreground.

How'd you like to own a luxurious city apartment, with all of the countless comforts to be found in the modern urban suite, plus about 1,000 per cent more sunshine, unchlorinated water, and fresh air, dropped down in the middle of an 187 acre eighteen hole golf course about twenty-six miles due south of the loop? Sure! That's what we thought.

Well, this new idea (at least we understand it's new) of placing coöperative apartments in a rural setting of fresh air and handy golf is to be developed on an imposing scale in the Flossmoor district, it was disclosed yesterday. A $5,000,000 project is to be carried out by a syndicate headed by Newton B. Lauren, James R. Cardwell, John A. Jennings, and Henry Hedberg.

The site is a tract of 187 acres bounded on the east by the Dixie highway and on the south by Volmer road. It's practically an island in a sea of golf clubs, for the Idlewild Country club is directly northeast, the Olympia Fields Country club is southwest, the Chicago Heights Country club is south, and the Flossmoor Golf club adjoins on the west.

Apartments Overlook Golf Course.

Now, if you're a golfer you've certainly got the location fixed in the old bean, so we can go ahead and tell about the buildings. Putting fraternal modesty, pride, or what have you, aside, we'll say that Frank D. Chase, Inc., architects, have designed what we think is an interesting and imposing group of old English-Normandy style buildings.

They'll be along two sides of a thirty acre rectangle arranged in six big units with all of the 330 apartments looking out on the golf course and with a huge service court 1,000 feet long and 400 feet wide separating the two groups. The suites will have from four to eight rooms. There'll be tennis courts, a bowling green, putting greens, children's playgrounds, etc., in this 400x1,000 service court.

The buildings will have an interesting variety of materials used to lend charm and individuality to the group. For instance, one unit will be of reddish tapestry brick, with stucco and half timbers used; the next will be of variegated Wisconsin limestone and the next perhaps will be of a combination of brick and stone.

Plan Underground Garages.

All will have roofs of random, varicolored slate and plate glass will be used throughout the project. Every outside wall will be of the same materials: there'll be no "shirt front" design used.

Each unit will contain a swimming pool, a gymnasium, handball court, children's nursery and playroom and extra maid's room. Every tenant-owner will have space for his automobile in one of the underground garages to be built and landscaped in such a way that they'll be invisible from the grounds.

"Now, how about the golf course?" you'll ask. Well, the syndicate will operate the eighteen hole course, to be laid out by Harry Colliss, and will erect an attractive colonial type of clubhouse, with a quaint pillared veranda and mansard roof topped by a cupola overlooking the big service court.

Pay $650,000 for Site.

This will be a regular year round clubhouse with a large lounge, dining room, cardrooms, library, billiard room, and bowling alleys, and a large ball room. Tenant-owners of apartments will pay annual dues to the club, but no initiation fee. These co-op owners, by the way, will own a pro-rata interest in the thirty acre tract on which the buildings stand. They will not own the golf course. This will be held and operated by the syndicate.

The syndicate, by the way, will manage the six units for the six groups of owners, so tenant-owners will not have any worries over management. The entire project is to be on the 100 per cent coöperative plan.

The 187 acre tract was bought by the syndicate for a reported $650,000. Newton B. Lauren & Co., who were brokers in the purchase, will manage the property and be the sales agents. Lackner, Butz & Co. will finance the project.

The Linden Is New Inn for Park District

Further evidence of realty activity just west of the Clark street border of Lincoln park and south of Center street comes to light with the announcement that a six story hotel is being erected at 1939-41 Lincoln avenue. In the last year or two this district, which previously had deteriorated somewhat, has been the scene of developments of considerable importance.

The latest to be erected in this vicinity is the Linden, which, it is stated, will represent an investment in the neighborhood of $300,000.

And what may be of interest to those Chicagoans who are trumpeting the slogan "America First" is the fact that all decorative features about this hotel will be of American influence. The architect, William Campbell Wright, has selected an American colonial design of the Georgian period.

Early American Lobby.

Exterior construction will be of colonial face brick and Indiana limestone, with a carved stone cornice. The colonial effect is emphasized through wood shutters, iron balconies, and similar devices. The entire first floor will be of rusticated stone.

The lobby will be strictly early American, both in decoration and in the furniture. There will be a knotty spruce paneled wainscot, while the upper walls will be covered with colonial scenic wall paper, varnished and shellacked.

The mantelpiece and the doors will be of knotty spruce. Then there will be wide oak board flooring. And the rooms will be decorated and furnished in the old fashioned American spirit.

Automatic Conveniences.

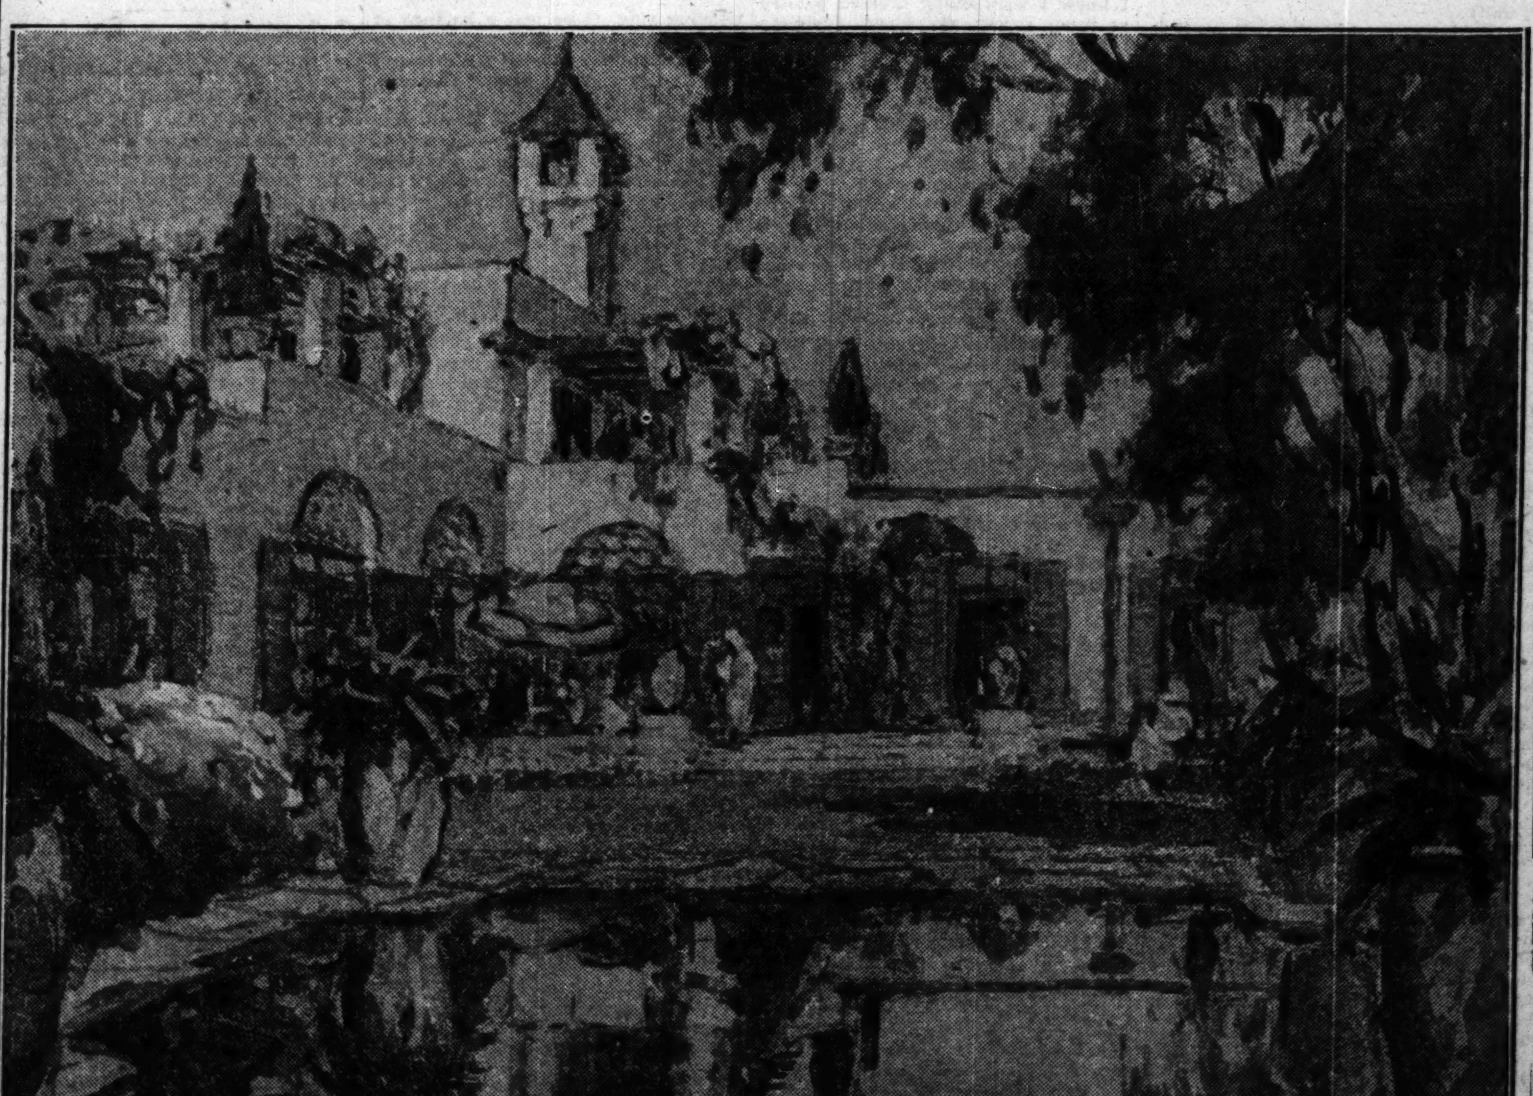
Here the past will end and the present step in for the hotel will have all the conveniences of this radio age. Automatic elevators, automatic refrigeration, and automatic ventilation. Bill paying, however, won't be automatic, but will have to be personal.

The project is to be completed in the late spring. S. Yondorf & Co. have underwritten a $185,000 bond issue on it. Two weeks ago the Lincoln hotel for Clark, Wells, and Lincoln was announced. The Lantz-Wilbur Construction company has the general contract.

Sells Apartments at 80th and Drexel for $125,000

Jackson B. McManus bought from Clarence V. Snyder the eighteen flats at the southwest corner of Drexel and 80th for a reported $125,000. M. Hoffman & Co. were brokers.

SICK BAY FOR SUBURBANITES



H. V. Von Holst designed the Elizabeth Condell Memorial hospital which is under construction at Libertyville. The structure, of Spanish architecture, will have accommodations for twenty-five beds, with provisions for expansion when needed. Lawrence Buck drew this picture, which shows the rear of the building, overlookig a pool that will be installed.

Work Under Way on 16 Flats in North Troy St.

Construction is under way on a sixteen flat building at 3237-39 North Troy street, designed by Arthur Klewer. The owner is Miss Estelle S. Adams. It's to be called the Avondale apartments, and will have two, three, and four room suites. Completion is set for April 1. Edward Mahlke of Lee, Breadman & Co., was broker.

Buys North Clark Street Business Block: $195,000

Julius Presk has purchased the 111x200 at 2470-78 North Clark, from Max M. Grossman and Charles Edelman, for a reported $195,000. The property is improved with three stores, a large motor showroom, 100 car garage, five offices and two furnished apartments. The Hensel-Coffman company was the only broker. Max Grossman and Samuel E. Davidson were attorneys.

Garage Properties in Oak Park and Chicago Are Sold

The one story garage at 543 West Madison street, Oak Park, and the four stores and garage at 4011-13 West Lake street, Chicago, were sold by Arthur A. Klein to the Home Bank and Trust company for an undisclosed principal for a reported $52,000. Arthur A. Klein & Co. were brokers. Edward P. Saltiel was attorney.

Judge Osche to Lecture on Merchantable Abstracts

Judge M. M. Osche will lecture on "Merchantable Abstracts" next Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock at the Real Property institute conducted by the Cook County Real Estate board. Commissioner of Public Works Richard M. Wolfe will also talk on "Public Improvements and Their Bearing on Real Estate Values."

Here's the answer to one of the favorite questions of Boul Mich travelers asked just before they reach the river while going north. "When are they going to get rid of that terrible looking building? And the terrible looking building in question refers to the dilapidated red brick affair a couple of doors south of the London Guaranty building on the west side of the street.

A. R. Clas of the architectural office of Walter W. Ahlschlager, Inc., furnishes the answer by stating that work will start within thirty days on remodeling the premises at 332-34 North Michigan.

It will be recalled that C. N. Johnson of the Demet Candy and Restaurant company last October leased the property for 99 years from former Judge Richard W. Clifford. The parcel originally was purchased in 1841 by a grand uncle of Judge Clifford for $200. And the taxes for the year 1845 amounted to the huge total of $1.80. The present valuation is given as $300,000.

Mr. Johnson will have the structure entirely remodeled to provide suitable quarters for Michigan avenue renters. The new front will be three stories high, of granite or polished Benedict stone.

SOMETHING OUGHT TO BE DONE ABOUT THIS, SAYS FORMER FRISCON

Speaking of Frisco and earthquakes and fires 'nd everything, and incidentally referring to the story in the real estate section of last Sunday's TRIBUNE in which the $1,000,000 Pacific coast branch of Butler Bros. was told about, we give below a copy of a letter by Thomas G. Sextony of Waukegan, Ill., to President Frank S. Cunningham of Butler Bros.:

"The writer was a resident of San Francisco for six (6) years prior to our country entering the world war. To my knowledge the residents of our fair state, California, and particularly those of San Francisco, dislike to hear their city spoken of as Frisco and to see it in print amazes them. Butler Bros. or THE TRIBUNE will no doubt hear from our fair sons and daughters of the Golden state. From one who knows."

PLANS HOSPITAL FOR ANIMALS AT 6320 BROADWAY

Dr. Frederick B. Whipple, for some time head of the veterinarian department of the University of West Virginia and later practicing in Peoria, has purchased from Mr. and Mrs. John P. Heintz the two story brick building at 6320 Broadway, lot 25x125 feet, for an undisclosed consideration. After remodeling the building he will open a small animal hospital in it. George F. Clute of Cochran & McCluer's Edgewater office was broker.

HOME BUILDERS' DEPARTMENT

HOUSE OF SOUTH EUROPEAN TYPE; PLEASING TO EYE

Bedrooms Are Half Story Above Living Room.

[A Tribune Competition Five Room House designed by Richard Haviland Smythe, Architect, 681 Fifth avenue, New York City.]

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

[Home Builders' Editor.]

LOUISE BARGELT.
[Chambers Photo.]

A colorful light orange stucco home which may be briefly described as a "split level" house.

By this, in architectural parlance, is meant that it is a cross between a bungalow and a two story house, with the garage half a story lower and the bedrooms half a story higher than the living room. Economy is obtained here through reduction of the amount of basement excavation. The cellar proper is not deep and it extends only under the front portion of the house, as the laundry and garage are at ground level.

Pleasing in the graceful informality of its outlines, this home allies itself more closely perhaps to the Mediterranean than any other style, and yet so simplified a treatment has it been given that either Spanish or Italian furnishings would be appropriate. Or, indeed, almost any cottage type of interior decoration.

The architect has specified walls of brick or concrete stucco, covered with a roof of slate or heavy asbestos shingles in reds and browns.

Slate Flagging, Walk.

Slate flagging forms the approach to the porch, which leads to the long living room at one side of the house and directly back to the kitchen and breakfast alcove.

From the north end of the living room a narrow hall has steps leading to the two bedrooms and bath suite. Windows from this hall overlook the patio in the rear, a delicate Mediterranean or southern Europe touch.

The interior throughout can be treated without trim, a narrow metal molding being used at the doors. Around the fireplace opening can be a simple cement or stone molding without a shelf. As for woodwork it has been practically eliminated, except for the doors which have a walnut finish.

If one wished to conform to Mediterranean type, the floors could be of tile as the architect has suggested. Cork or rubber tiling or embossed linoleum would give the same effect. If the home were given a vividly colorful interior hard maple colored flooring might be used.

Radiators Are Hidden.

Indeed, the range of possibilities in this home are many, both as to floor treatment and wall treatment. This latter finish can be rough plaster, sand finished.

Radiators have been concealed in this home; radiator enclosures in walnut finish used to match the doors. The grill work designs can be either vertical bar or cane types to correspond with the furniture used, and the tops, insulated make it possible to use them for tables of cozy seats.

Incidentally, there are excellent metal radiator covers which might be installed to protect walls and ceiling from radiator smudge and afford a concealed water container for moistening the air. These safeguard health as well as furniture during the cold months when the air in the room becomes too dry and thin.

Observe in the house plan itself the many convenient features, but it's the little things supplied which make for comfort in a home and the little things left out which cause constant worry and work.

Large Sun Porch.

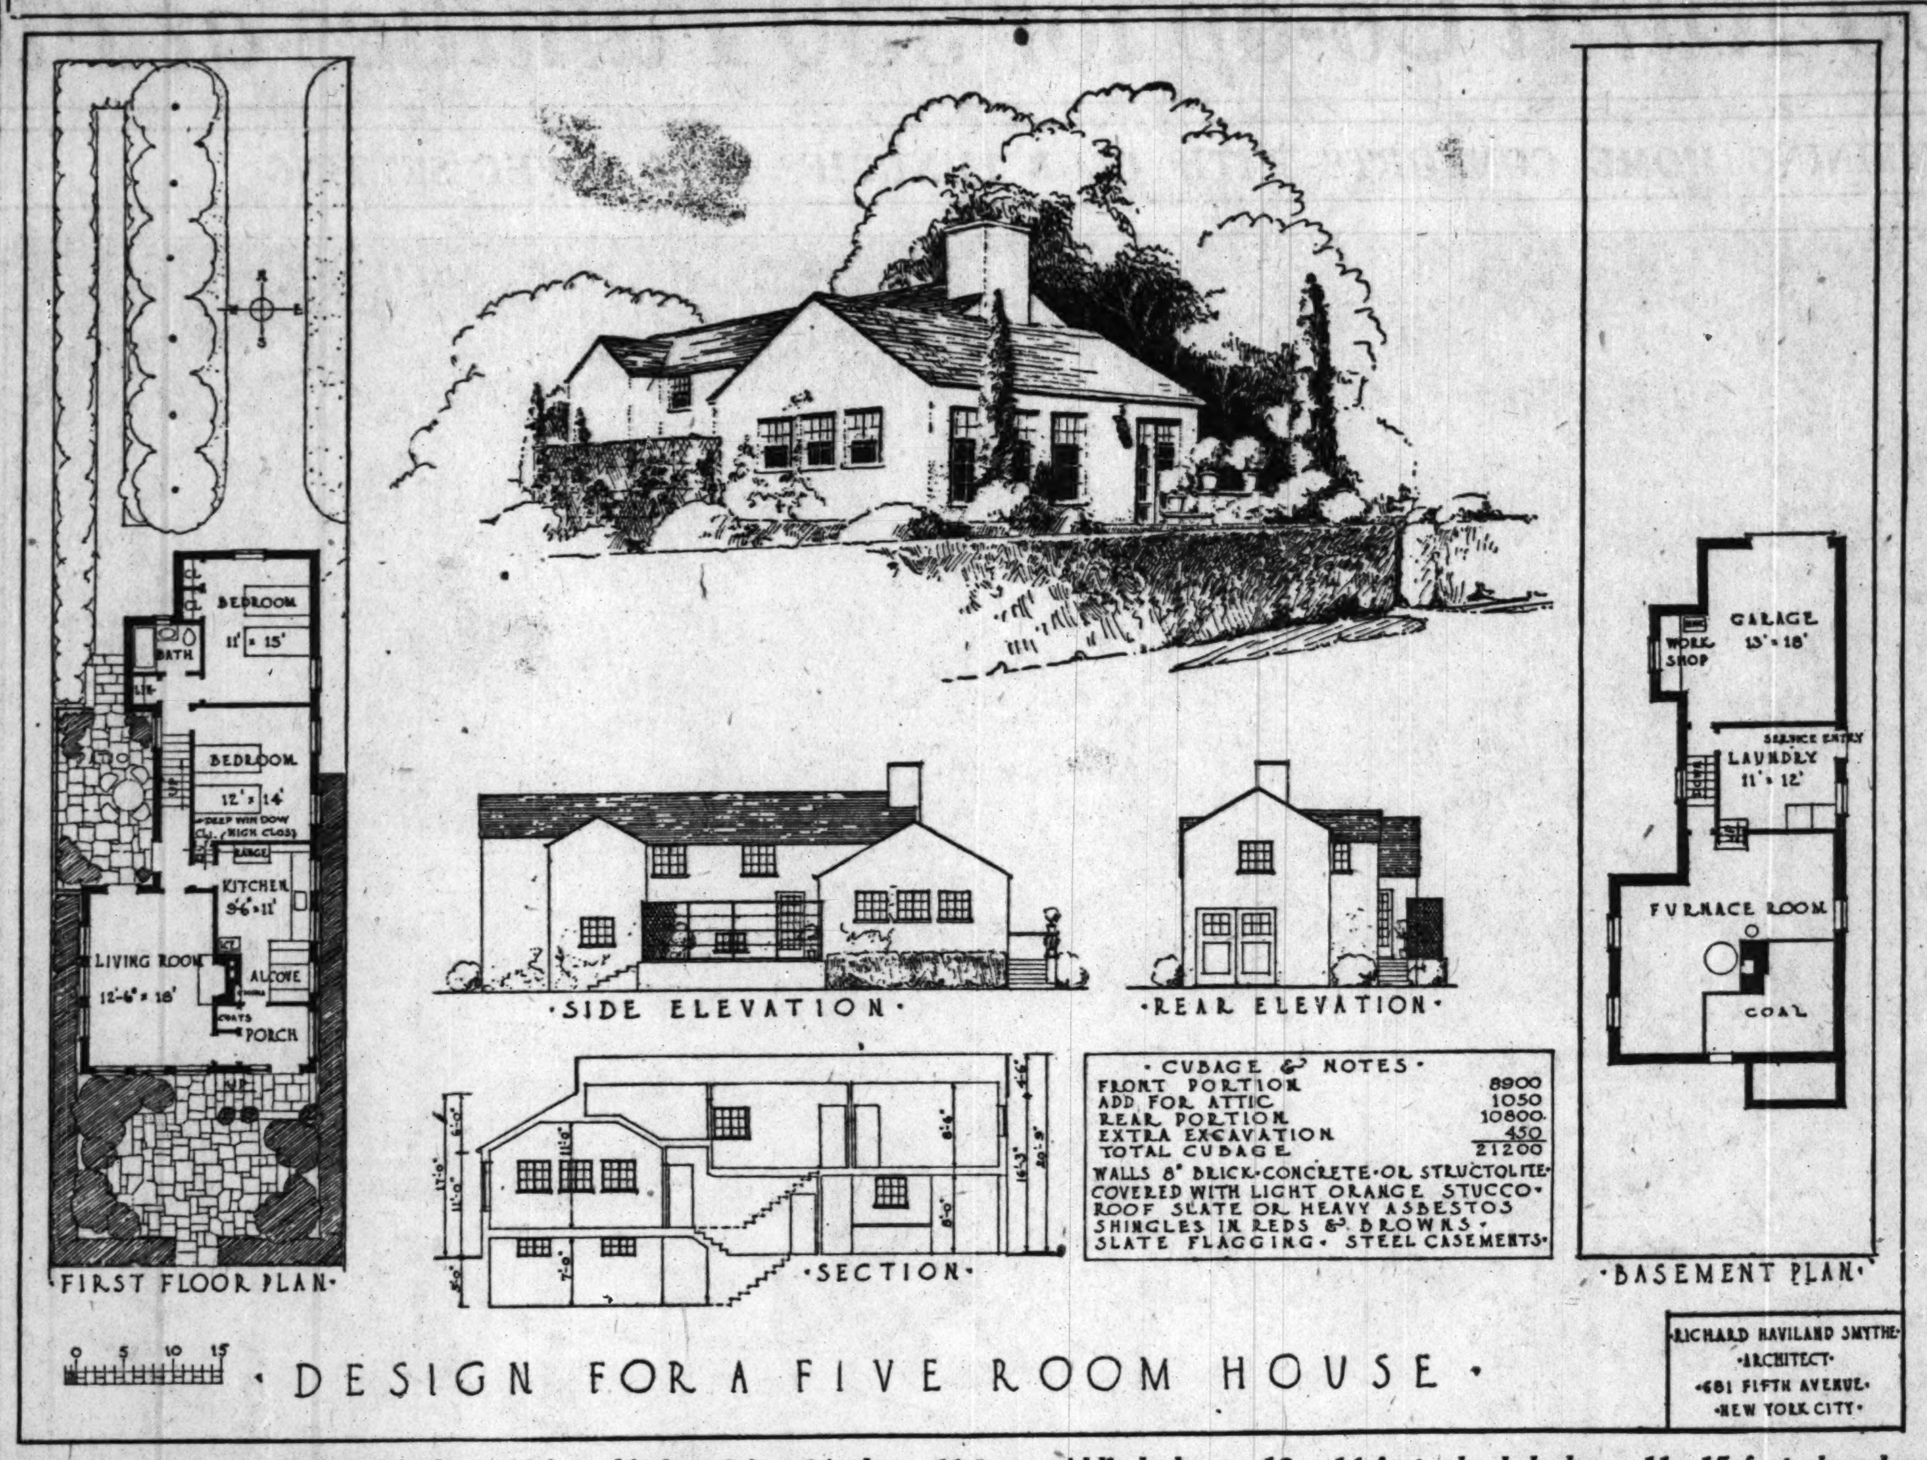
The sun porch is large enough to afford a recreation area for summer days. A coat closet adjoins it. The breakfast alcove, with its east window, has a built-in china closet opposite. There is wall space in the kitchen for modern cabinet provision. And last, but not least, the bedroom and bath, half a story higher than the living room, have all the advantages of completely detached sleeping quarters.

The garage in the basement has workshop and sink. There is a service entry directly into the laundry and the garage is reached from the house interior.

With velvety lawns, shrubbery plantings around the foundation, and a few appropriate landscaping touches, this cottage home leaves little to be desired in simplicity, charm, and interior convenience.

Fueled with oil or gas, equipped with modern incineration, it offers all the advantages of the ultra-modern apartment, and all the luxurious consciousness of ego satisfied, which comes with home ownership—home possession.

COTTAGE FROM BORDERS OF MEDITERRANEAN



Living room measures 12 feet 6 inches x 18 feet; kitchen, 9 feet 6 inches x 11 feet; middle bedroom, 12 x 14 feet; back bedrom, 11 x 15 feet; laundry, 11x12 feet; garage, 13x18 feet.

A pleasant cottage, allying itself with the Mediterranean style, but so simplified that either Spanish or Italian furnishings would be appropriate. The walls are of brick or concrete, covered with light orange stucco, and the roof is of slate or heavy asbestos shingles in reds and browns. A Tribune competition five room house designed by Richard Haviland Smythe, architect, 681 Fifth avenue, New York City.

COMMON BRICK EMPLOYED TO GET MASS EFFECTS

Common brick is more and more being used to achieve the modern tendency to rougher surfaces and mass textural effects in walls.

Its irregular lines, its different colorings, its glistening, hard head clinkers and overburned dark benches combine, through the direction of the architect and the mason's clever handling, to produce tapestried effects of mellowed beauty.

Those who desire an appearance of age, no matter how new or ultra modern their homes may be, can obtain this quickly and inexpensively by whitewashing the brick.

Cooked and Painted Way to Her House

OMAHA.—I came here several years ago from a smaller town, after taking an art course. I came to paint. I remained to cook, catering at twenty-five cents an hour. Did errands in exchange for a room and telephone service in an apartment.

MRS. JOHN RASMUSSEN.

I lived very economically and sayed $250 in a year, which I used as a first payment on a new modern four room and bath bungalow. I moved in in October and rented the bedroom, with kitchen privileges, to a young couple for $15 a month. My house payments were $20 monthly.

I continued catering and I sold china and water colors and gave lessons on Saturdays to raise money for insurance and taxes.

The following May I was married, and while my husband has never made big wages and has gone through several periods of unemployment we have kept up our payments, furnished our home nicely, added a garage, and put in pavements and other improvements. We have a nice hedge, lawn, shrubs, and fruit bearing trees.

During the war, when other people were paying immense rents, we enjoyed our own home for only $20 a month. Now that our place is so nearly paid for we are thinking of exchanging it for a brick duplex, so we will not only have a home but a little income. Our place has doubled in value since buying it. Our happiness has been doubled many times and we have taken our place in the community as home owners. All on an initial investment of $250.

MRS. JOHN RASMUSSEN.

WASHINGTON, Ill.—For two years after we were married, we kept wishing we might buy our own home but with work scarce my husband was compelled to stick to his job, which paid very small wages. I worked at first but when Junior arrived, the doctor's bills ate up my savings.

However, we both liked to write and so entered every contest that came along. We won a large number of small prizes, but whenever large prizes were offered, we lost out. So—you can just imagine how happy I was one evening to have the mailman drop a letter into our box from one of the contest holders and there lay a check for $1,000—along with a request for my picture as I had won first prize.

Then began the battle—every one wanted me to buy a car, a fur coat, and some nice furniture, arguing that a thousand dollars wouldn't buy us a home so we might just as well enjoy the money some other way. Without my husband's knowledge, I purchased a large lot at the edge of town for $800, and then went to see a contractor who built homes, with the owners paying him for them as rent. The husband was indignant but decided to make the best of it and be ready to laugh if I failed.

For our summer vacation I bought a tent and this was set up on the lot. Out of the two hundred remaining dollars I bought a portable chicken house, some chickens, and some fencing. Well, we finally stored our household goods in a shed on my father's grounds, thereby we saved the rent, but I collected the rent from friend husband all the same.

The contractor finished the house in a very short time and the rent money I had saved made the first payment down which I was anxious to do since it would shorten our payment by the rent method. My flock of chickens paid for the extra things we needed for the new house, the insurance, and the sewer.

The second floor was not completely finished but we rented it out unfurnished during the next year to some rather wealthy college lads who thought it a lark to live in our town and motor each day to the neighboring town's college. Their rent almost kept up our rent and what money we would have paid for our rent we applied on the principal.

My husband finally became a commuter to a large city near us. He told some of these city people about my chicken business so the first thing I knew I was selling dressed poultry at fancy prices, my husband simply taking them to the shop where he worked. Eggs, too, brought handsome prices among his fellow city workmen.

Last month the chickens paid off the last month's rent due the contractor with all the interest and when rent time comes due this month, we expect to have a real chicken fry for all our friends whom we have been promising a dinner when we finished paying for our home. If the weather permits, we expect to have a huge bonfire to burn the mortgage which the contractor held on our home until it was paid for. Our friends all know of our struggle and rejoice with us.

I do not mean to be egotistical when I say, our friends all seem to think it a real treat to be invited to our spacious brick veneer home out where things are quieter than close to the business district.

About the car and fur coat — the chickens are going to buy those, too, but it will just take time, but like our wonderful home, they will be doubly appreciated when earned.

Courage, Not Luck.

PARK RIDGE, Ill.—Why will they call it "luck" if some one buys real estate that can not help developing into profits? We figured that Chicago had to widen out to the northwest, but not a friend would take our advice. We were laughed at and kidded wherever we went.

In the fall of 1910, after my husband bought the engagement diamond and wedding ring, there was a balance of exactly three hundred dollars. Yes, a small sum to get married on, but, with good health and my husband's trade, we risked it.

Our first thought was of an acre out in the suburb with chickens. We searched all around Chicago and were not pleased until New Year's day, 1911, when Mr. I. Gillick advertised in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE acres at $300, on time, in one and five acre lots. Did we hurry out? You bet, the same day, too, and walked with Mr. Gillick one and a half miles out on the Rand road (Northwest highway) near Oakton. It was cold, no busses then, and I think Mr. G. had no auto at that time either.

We bought one acre. That night we could hardly sleep thinking what a wonderful buy, so phoned the next day for another acre next to the other. In a few weeks hubby and I decided to buy one of the five acre tracts, as long as we could get it on time. Mr. Gillick sold us six acres, which were paid off in two years. Then we arranged for a $2,500 mortgage at the Park Ridge bank. Our house is of the monolythic type—Felgren system—solid concrete from foundation to the garret, steel reinforced. The warmest house in winter and the coolest in summer. Never any moisture, always dry, and noise and wind do not penetrate.

Now our profits: Sold four acres for $8,000 three years ago. Recently we sold three fifty foot lots on the highway at $9,000. Have a vacant fifty foot corner left which we will keep for a few years, as prices are still soaring. Right here we have two fifty foot residence lots and our home with one hundred feet on Park avenue (Rand road). We have beautiful surroundings of evergreens, silver maples, fruit trees, and flowers, all of which were planted by my husband and worked on after he came home from work as photo engraver in Chicago.

MRS. CHARLES SEYDLER,

FRENCH DESIGNS FOR HOUSES FIND INCREASING FAVOR

Because of its practical as well as its aesthetic appeal, the French type of architecture is rapidly becoming popular in this country.

One reason is that the materials from which early French houses were constructed can all be found in this country, and therefore its style is not a costly one. Nor is its form rigid, or is symmetry demanded. And because of this formality any desired floor plan almost may be achieved. If one wishes to enlarge the house later on, one can do so by adding a wing or a tower or a lean-to, without destroying the mass unity.

Furthermore, as the French style, or more particularly the Norman style, was developed in a climate not unlike that of our northern states, it is suitable also from this standpoint, fitting into our surroundings and reflecting our temperaments.

FOUR ESSENTIALS ARE NECESSARY FOR AN HONEST HOUSE

A house is a purchase which should never be made in a hurry. There are four basic essentials to a well built house. Sound construction, correct materials, efficient plan and attractive design. Eliminate any one of these four qualities from a large house or a small house and it is no longer an entirely successful affair.

Determine on these four essentials no matter how attractive the house may look before you really make up your mind to buy.

Colonial Design Ideal for Residence Owner

Does the colonial type of home appeal to you? There are many whom it attracts irresistibly; so many in fact that manufacturers have recognized this general colonial popularity and have catered to it by offering to the public hardware, furniture, trim, interior cabinets, wall furnishings, etc., all fashioned along colonial lines. For this reason one runs into few snags, indeed, in the erection of a true colonial home, whether it is a costly one or an inexpensive one.

Way to Avoid Hustling to Alley with Garbage

No reason for slipping out of the kitchen to dispose of all house garbage, waste cans, paper, trash, etc. A handy hopper door installed near the kitchen leads to a brick combustion chimney. This, connecting with the regular chimney in the basement, is quickly re-dried, and when lighted burns quickly without operating cost.

HOUSE HATERS VISIT A HOME; ARE CONQUERED

Find All Comforts of Flat in City.

BY HOMER GRANT.

Sometimes a letter comes to this department which reflects the situation in other lives so vividly, echoes the thoughts and desires in other hearts so clearly that it justifies the publishing almost in its entirety.

Such a one came the other day, apropos of New Years' resolutions and home owning. It is interesting in the light of the conclusions reached by a group of young married people, all of whom could afford homes of their own, modern homes, mechanically equipped homes, but who had always insisted that they preferred apartment life.

"This New Year's eve certainly proved an eye opened," one of the women wrote. "A crowd of us motored out to celebrate the occasion with some friends in a north shore suburb. There were six of us, apartment dwellers and proud of it.

"All the way out we kept congratulating ourselves that we had never taken the home owning plunge. My husband and I were especially sold on apartment life. We had been reared in big houses in small towns and all we could remember was the work involved. Every time we would see a particularly attractive house I would say:

"'When they get houses to the point where they have all the conveniences of apartments I'll have one—and not before.'

Comforts of a Flat.

"Well, the house we visited that night was just that. It had everything my apartment has—all the conveniences. I couldn't find a thing I had the house lacked—and besides all the comforts of automatic heat, incinerators, perfected laundry equipment and baths and showers, it had other conveniences.

"From the basement up, where there was a gorgeous billard room and study, with great fire, bookcases, dance floor and radio, to the attic, where the boys had their playroom and den, the house lacked nothing. It even had a switch operating from each bedside—flooding the house with light in any emergency at night. That appealed to me—I'm always nervous in a house at night.

"It was an English cottage style of home—story and a half living room—and it cost around $22,000. That seems like a lot, but when we figured up that all of us would spend more than that in the next ten years in rent alone and have nothing to show for it in the end, it was startling.

"O, we figured it all out in dollars and cents. A funny way to spend New Year's eve—I suppose the magic of the Yule logs in the huge fireplace and the darned comfort of it all sort of got into our blood.

In Same Boat.

"We were all of us in the same boat. Been married six or seven years, our husbands making between $7,000 and $10,000 a year. With nothing much left over after we checked out rent and bills each month.

"Some resolutions we made that night; at least we women made them, and the men told us to go ahead if we wanted to. Next spring we are going to take the plunge.

"We all want to live in the same suburb and land isn't cheap there. But the fact that we should be able to buy a home easily on what we make, and aren't, has acted as an eye opener, too.

"We may all have lots more money in ten years than we have now, but if we just keep paying higher rents and driving bigger cars we won't be any nearer homes of our own—or money to fall back on in case of trouble.

"Anyway, one thing is sure; we aren't going to sink around $20,000 in rent in the next ten years. And since the New Year has shown us plainly what we want, we will let 1928 show us just as plainly how to land it.

"Happy New Year to you, Mr. Grant. And wish us the same, won't you.—A Friend."

SOME HINTS FOR THOSE PLANNING PLASTIC PAINTING

Well to Try Out Sample on Wallboard.

Planning to do some plastic paint decoration this spring?

Here are a few hints which may help you some.

First, it is a good idea to try a panel of it on some wall board. You can see for yourself the exact effect you are going to get and if you don't like it you can try something else.

As for the wall, if it has been papered, revive the old paper. This eliminates the danger of the old paper coming loose and spoiling the plastic decoration.

If the walls are calcimined they should be well washed off.

Any cracks which show should be filled; patching plaster for the larger ones, while small ones can have some of the plastic material knifed in.

If the walls have ever been painted the surface can easily be scratched with sand paper to make the plastic paint hold. Also, if there is any loose or scaling paint, it can be scraped off.

Yellow ochre is much used for tinting. So is chrome green and black, burnt sienna and umber. Some claim that dry lamp black is hard to mix and that dry Swedish black is preferable.

Bronze, blue, green, and gold, it goes without saying, are always popular.

And, incidentally, after the first application, let it set a few minutes before putting on more so that it won't lift from the surface during the second application.

EXTRA BATHROOM IS INVALUABLE AS SAVER OF STEPS

Every mother appreciates the convenience of having a lavatory and a toilet close to the children's room whenever it is possible. That it is not made "possible" in more instances would be surprising if it were not for the fact that many young people with small children naturally are considering costs when they build their homes. Or when they buy a home already built other advantages the home possesses outweigh this particular one.

If it is not possible to afford an extra lavatory and toilet when the house is built, the children's room can be placed near the bathroom and the extra one added later, when it can, perhaps, be more easily afforded.

If the house has two floors, a first floor toilet and lavatory is considered by many to be preferable to an extra one on the second floor. Many steps are saved for the mother in this way.

Then, as the children grow older, if they are boys especially, a shower and toilet can be provided for them in the basement. This provision for the boys and their friends, incidentally, saves an immense amount of cleaning on the first and second floors most seasons of the year.

Thick at the Butt —It's Tapered— Thin at the Top

"The best money can buy," was one owner's specification for his roof. The architect selected Winthrops—the only tapered asphalt shingle made. More costly roofing could have been bought, but the owner's orders were for the best, not the most costly. Phone us for literature and name of dealer.

LABORITES HERE ARE STIRRED UP BY COAL STRIKE

Say Business May Suffer —Radicals Gain.

BY THOMAS WREN.

While the strike in the soft coal fields outside of Illinois and Indiana continues to excite very little attention among business men, because supplies of fuel have not been reduced nor prices affected, Chicago labor officials are beginning to speculate upon other consequences of the strike. They feel that it may turn out to have been an important strike.

Chicago labor officials aver that attempts to crush the miners' union in Ohio and Pennsylvania may have some bad consequences for business as a whole—that business in general may suffer eventually, even if the operators in the northern fields should better their position relative to competitors in the nonunion fields. In the latter mines the average wage rate per day is $4.40, while the scale in the union mines averages about $7.50 per day.

Sees Averse Effect.

Commenting on the situation, Patrick Cullen of the Stonecutters' union says:

"Lowering of the general wage scale in the mining industry, coming along with cuts in eastern textile mills and low wage rates prevailing in many of the new lines into which factory labor, displaced by machinery, is moving, has led to a serious curtailment of the people's purchasing power. And this conditions is being developed when predictions of good business for 1928 are being made on a basis of a high wage rate being the foundation of prosperity."

Building trades officers say that business recovery began in 1922 after the railroad and mines trikes halted the deflation of wages which had set in in 1920.

Conservative labor leaders see another evil consequence of the miners' strike, and that is in the advance of radicalism which it is almost certain to bring. The United Mine Workers of America had a membership of approximately 300,000; it is an important unit of the American Federation of Labor. Attempts to crush the miners' organization naturally will weaken the national federation.

Opposed to Reds.

Under the leadership of the late Samuel Gompers and the present régime of William Green the policy of the federation has been steadfastly, almost fiercely, anti-red, it is pointed out.

Then Hughie Mulligan of the Asbestos Workers' union avers:

"In the fight against communism and all kinds of radicalism, which are sponsored by men and women of a peculiar complex, the officials of the United Mine Workers of America have taken the lead from the first under Presidents White, Hayes, and Lewis. The John L. Lewis administration of the affairs of the Mine Workers' union has been one of the principal targets for radical attacks ever since Lewis became the big leader.

"Lewis and his lieutenants have retaliated and they have made some damaging exposures of radical tactics of boring from within. They have also shown up the activities of the parlor pinks of New York, who have and do encourage communistic efforts in the ranks of the miners' union."

Hated by Radicals.

Chicago labor officers are unanimous in opinion that John L. Lewis probably is the best hated man in America by radical intellectuals. At Indianapolis conventions of the miners, Lewis gives no quarter to radical agitators who attend in the guise of delegates. At these meetings Lewis often said he has respect for minority opinions and utter contempt for communist agitators who seek to destroy American trade unionism at the behest of Moscow agents.

"Defeat of the union in the strike or its serious impairment will be certain to increase communistic activity among the miners who, in large numbers, are inclined to be radical and susceptible to the hokum spread by the ultra radical forces," asserted Martin Durkin of the Steam Fitters' union. "The best illustration happened recently in the outbreaks of I. W. W. in the Colorado mining districts."

Dr. L. J. De Swarte Leases Whitfield Hotel Ten Years

The Whitfield apartment hotel at 5330 Harper avenue has been leased by Dr. L. J. De Swarte from Ben Friedman for ten years at a term rental of $465,000, according to Hoffenberg & O'Pizzi, hotel brokers. Altheimer & Mayer and Harry C. Barnes were attorneys.

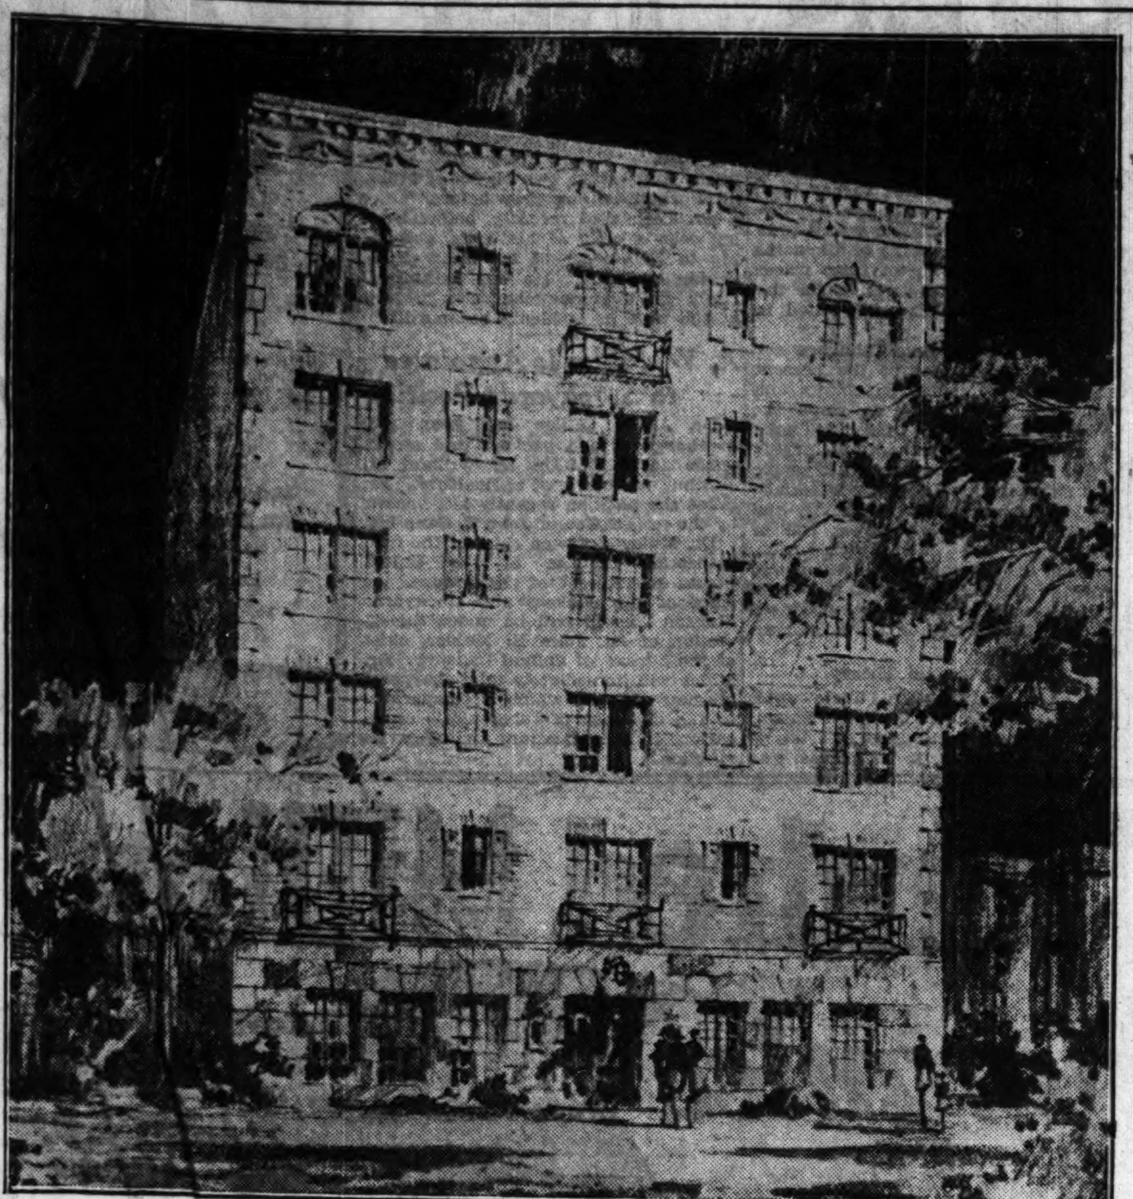
NEW NORTH SIDE HOTEL



William Campbell Wright designed the above six story hotel, which is to be erected at 1939-41 Lincoln avenue, near Lincoln park. The inn will be known as the Linden and will represent an investment of $300,000, it is stated. S. Yondorf & Co. are underwriting a $185,000 bond issue on it. Elmer A. Johnson made this sketch.

LAWSON FLOORS GO INTO FARM HEALTH RESORT

Sunny Brook Gets Wood from Famous House.

All of the flooring, heating plant, kitchen equipment, and other parts of the interior of the former Victor Lawson residence on the Lake Shore drive are being installed in the enlarged Sunny Brook Farm Health resort, it was announced yesterday. This property at Round Lake, recently purchased by a syndicate sponsored by Dr. George A. Niswender of Chicago, for an undisclosed cash consideration, has been known as the Sunny Brook Farm sanitarium for the last fifteen years.

The property consists of ninety-two acres, sixty of which are devoted to farming and dairying for the health resort. Thirty-two acres are used for the resort grounds. Besides the main building there are three smaller structures for nurses and executive staff. Six log cabin bungalows are now under construction for use of patients and guests.

It is stated that the project has been financed without subscription from professional or other sources. It is forty-eight miles from the loop, on the newly paved Wilson road. The formal opening will take place about May 1. The project will represent a reported investment of $175,000.

MARY AND STELLA REYNOLDS BUY 30 2 FLAT BUILDINGS

Stella M. and Mary K. Reynolds, whose names are seldom long absent from real estate news, are here again today by reason of being parties to an important south side transaction. They have acquired from Geary V. Stibgen and William H. Bell thirty two flat buildings in the Archer and Kedzie subdivision, along Sawyer and Spaulding. Each of the two flat buildings occupies a lot 30x150 and was transferred at $12,650.

The Reynolds gave in exchange the 66 apartment building at the southeast corner of Clyde and 67th street, lot 125x150. The Central Manufacturing District bank took title while the details are being worked out. They also gave the twenty-two flats at 4611-17 Drexel. Julian J. Luster was attorney in the deal.

PLAN $350,000 FLAT BUILDING FOR OAK PARK

Alexander & Brandt, Chicago architects, have designed a thirty-five apartment building to be erected at the northwest corner of Washington boulevard and Grove street, Oak Park. The suites will have four and five rooms. The reported total investment will be $350,000. The building will be called Grovedone Hall. The Chicago Trust company has underwritten a $215,000 ten year 6 per cent loan. O. C. Braese was broker in the purchase of the site from Charles H. Paschall.

Start Work on Business Building at 55th-Kedzie

Work has started on a business building at 55th and Kedzie [which corner no one seems to know], which will have eight stores, fourteen flats and three offices and will cost a reported $190,000. Louis A. Snitzer has made a $105,000 loan on the project.

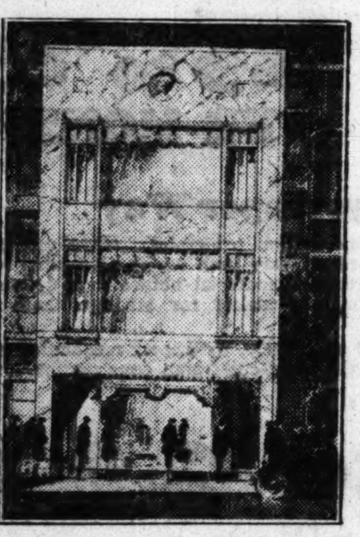
Hungarian Cafe Leases Store at 226 Dearborn

Howard G. Grey leased for five years to the Hungarian Restaurant company the store at 226-28 North Dearborn street for five years at a term rental of $50,000. The Brownlee Realty company was broker.

KENWOOD CORNER SOLD TWICE.

The four story store and flat building at the northwest corner of 47th and Woodlawn, lot 50x111, has been sold by John F. Sullivan to Herman L. Nahin, who then resold it to Isaac Gettler.

REPLACES RELIC



Here is the new front which will replace the dismal face of the old relic of a building at 332-34 North Michigan avenue, just south of the London Guaranty building, near the link bridge. Walter W. Ahlschlager, Inc., made the design. Work of remodeling the old structure is to start within thirty days, it is stated. C. N. Johnson of De Met's holds a 99 year lease on the property.

FROM HOOSIER SHOP COUNTER TO AFFLUENCE HERE

Less than two and a half years ago Elta Lewis Phelps was standing behind the counter of a department store in Indianapolis dispensing feminine finery to Hoosierites at $18 a week. She got a bit weary of that and decided to try her hand in the real estate business in Chicago. She entered the employ of a realty firm as a saleswoman, but in a few months she had risen to an executive position, training other women in the work. And now she has just joined the Laudermilk Realty association as a division manager in charge of sales.

NO PARKING LAW PUTS PEP INTO GARAGE OUTLOOK

Plan $300,000 Annex to Terminal Building.

Enforcement of Chicago's no parking program already is giving impetus to the development of private garage projects. For instance, Clapp, Riley & Hall, who own the seven story Northwestern Terminal garage at 16 North Clinton street, intend to increase its capacity 100 per cent by erecting a nine story building adjoining it on the south and also adding two floors to the present structure.

The Northwestern Terminal garage has a capacity of 350 cars. The building has a frontage of forty feet. When the proposed nine story addition to the south is completed the total frontage on Clinton street will be 125 feet. The depth of the building and annex varies from eighty to 150 feet.

Plans by Architect Herman Simpson call for an expenditure of $300,000 on the addition and the two upper floors of the present building. When work will start has not yet been determined, according to Clapp, Riley & Hall. They intend to see how the nonparking law will affect the garage business. Even prior to its enforcement the Northwestern Terminal garage was filled daily to capacity, according to Max Riley.

There'll be stores on the first floor of the new addition. On the second floor offices will occupy the front part with the rear of that story and the seven floors above to be used for car space.

PLANS 24 FLATS AND 3 STORES AT PEORIA-69TH

Louis Walin is having plans drawn by David Saul Klafter for a store and apartment building to be erected at the southwest corner of Peoria and 69th streets, to represent an investment of $200,000. The structure is to contain three stores and twenty-four apartments of four, five and six rooms. The architecture is to be Spanish. Street sides of the building will be of pressed brick with terra cotta trim. It is expected to have the structure ready for spring occupancy.

$242,000 ANNEX BEING BUILT FOR NORWOOD HOTEL

Three Stories High; Will Have 50 Suites.

Construction is under way on a three story and English basement annex to the Norwood hotel at the southwest corner of Normal boulevard and 64th street, which it is stated will represent an investment of $242,000.

The original Norwood hotel was erected in 1925 and the annex will adjoin it. Entrance will be through the lobby of the main building.

The addition will contain thirty-eight apartments of one room and kitchen alcove, four apartments of one room and Pullman kitchen, and eight apartments of two rooms and kitchen alcove, a total of fifty.

L shaped, the annex will be of the corridor type. Its exterior will be of face brick, with cut stone ornamentation, to conform with the rest of the structure.

Each apartment will be completely furnished and will have the latest equipment, including mechanical refrigeration, ventilation, etc.

The owners are Arthur J., Clarence A., and John A. Usher. A bond issue of $127,000 has been underwritten by Straus Brothers.

KANKAKEE REAL ESTATE BOARD HAS ELECTION

C. L. TRACY.

C. L. Tracy, vice president of the fourth district of the Illinois Association of Real Estate board, has been elected president of the Kankakee County Real Estate board. Thor Fritz has been made vice president; Louis Ray is secretary, and H. L. Cornwell is treasurer. The three new members of the board of directors are: Harry L. Topping, J. Bert Frazer and George Cooley. According to Director Topping there was $800,000 in building in Kankakee last year.

ISSUE TORRENS PAMPHLET FOR HOME OWNERS

Information concerning the Torrens system is now available for home owners in a pamphlet entitled "Torrens and Real Estate Data for Cook County" compiled by J. Scott Matthews, chief examiner of titles, under the direction of County Recorder Joseph F. Hass. Copies may be had by writing to the recorder's office, in the county building, or by calling there.

"The home owners in Cook county will find this pamphlet indispensable in outlining to them the method of protecting their titles under the Torrens system," said Mr. Hass. "Every case that has ever been decided by the Supreme court of Illinois has been cited and the pamphlet has been put in such language that the average home owner will understand it, even though technical real estate questions are dealt with."

Picture of seventeen story cooperative apartment building which is under construction at 5421 Cornell avenue. There will be sixteen apartments in the structure, one to a floor. Reichert & Finck designed the building. It is stated the structure will represent an investment of $500,000, in which connection the Continental National bank has underwritten a $290,000 bond issue at six per cent. McKey & Poague will handle the sales.

BUNGALOW TYPE CO-OP FOR 5421 CORNELL AVENUE

Will Be 17 Stories; Cost $500,000.

Work is under way on the seventeen story coöperative apartment building at 5421 Cornell avenue which was sold about in this department on Sept. 4. It is stated the structure will represent an investment of about $500,000. This building will be of the bungalow type, which means there will be but one dwelling to the floor. It will be close to Jackson park and to an express station of the Illinois Central.

As the ground floor of the structure will be used for service purposes, there will be sixteen apartments in the building. Each flat will have seven rooms, a breakfast room and three baths. There will be all the last minute convenience, so each apartment owner will have mechanical refrigeration and mechanical ventilation for both summer and winter.

Colored Tile Bathrooms.

The bathrooms all are to be done in colored tile and will have Venetian mirrors. Each apartment will have a liberal supply of closets, including cedar closets designed to make life more disagreeable for clothes eating moths.

Storerooms located in the basement will all be tiled. Other service features will be individual laundries, driers, etc.

Reichert & Finck are the architects for the structure, the exterior of which will be of pressed brick and terra cotta. The ground floor will be faced with cut stone. It is planned to treat the penthouses on the roof so that they won't be eyesores. George L. Arquette has the general contract.

A 100 Per Cent Coöp.

It is stated that the building will be a 100 per cent "coöp." The Hyde Park office of McKey & Poague will handle the sales. The project is fathered by the 5421 Cornell Building corporation, of which Claude M. Baker is president, Gustave C. Anders is secretary, and H. P. Reger is treasurer.

The Continental National bank has underwritten a $290,000 bond issue at six per cent on the project.

Fred Bernstein Buys Lot at 10821 South Michigan

Fred Bernstein, master in chancery of the Superior court, who erected a store and office building at the southwest corner of Michigan and 111th a few years ago and who is now completing a building at the southwest corner of Michigan and 110th, yesterday bought 69 feet of frontage at 10821-25 South Michigan, partially improved with a store and flat building, for a reported $75,000. Louis Cohen and Dr. Julius J. Friedman were sellers. The Hagstrom-Matson-Venning company was broker.

WORK ADVANCES ON DEVELOPMENT AT THORNBURY

Model Village to Be Ready in Late Spring.

One big country estate development which is going ahead instead of slipping off into limbo, as has been done in several cases, is Thornbury village—a new model town just east of Libertyville, which was first told about in this department on April 17, 1927. Thornbury village comprises a tract of about 500 acres controlled by a syndicate headed by Benjamin Dall. It is located on the Skokie valley branch of the North Shore line and on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul. Jacob L. Crane, city planner, laid out the village.

Since its announcement last spring, twenty-five acres between Mrs. E. L. Wickwire's estate and the home of W. A. Brewerton have been completely developed, which means that the roads are in, water, gas and electricity are available and arrangements have been made for sewage disposal.

Weather Delays Work.

Work has been under way on the improvements for the other 475 acres on a wholesale scale, being stopped by the weather. Activity is expected to get under way again about March 1 and it is hoped to have the entire project completed and ready for the market by June or July. As in the case of a big residential development in the Calumet district, described here some months ago, the property will not be sold until everything has been finished.

In addition to looking after the practical needs of the future town, the owners are giving attention to the esthetic side of it. Evergreen and other long life trees are being planted along the roads and at the entrances. The streets are being laid out in curving lines to take advantage of the scenic aspects of the rolling country.

Boulevards Along River.

Along the Des Plaines river there is to be a park which, however, will be developed by the county in connection with park land on the west bank of the stream. Boulevards are to run along the river.

The entire property will be divided into lots not less than half an acre in area, with homesites up to two acres. Of course there will be restrictions as to the types of buildings to be erected.

Six residences now stand in the area that has been completed.

GEORGE W. MAHER.

One of the finest residences on the north shore, both in point of cost and architectural attractiveness, has just been completed for George B. Dryden, president of the Dryden Rubber company. It is on a lot occupying the entire south frontage in the block on Dempster street, between Asbury and Ridge avenues, Evanston. It was designed by George W. Maher. The architecture of the house is colonial in its most simple and refined aspects.

Murray Wolbach has conveyed to Margaret A. McCormick the high grade six apartment building at 6719-21 Chappel avenue, lot 53x125 feet, for a stated consideration of $30,000, subject to an incumbrance of $16,000.

Dr. W. A. Evans has purchased from Eric A. Werner and Herman N. Gottlieb the high grade three apartment building at 439 Oakdale for a price said to have been $28,000.

ABEL DAVIS.

Abel Davis, county recorder, has announced the appointment of Capt. John V. Clinnin as chief deputy recorder, and of Leopold A. Dunn of the 16th ward as chief clerk.

A readjustment of the lease conditions in connection with the Ashland block propert at the northwest corner of Clark and Randolph streets, executed Sept. 1, 1900, prior to the death of Alexander J. Alexander, was filed for record during the week. The lease is of special interest as making public the annual rent, which is $72,750. The lease covers the Ashland block proper and the annex at the north, and includes 180x80 feet of ground, with 160 feet on Couch place. The lease runs from Mr. Alexander to the Ashland Block association.

W. D. Kerfoot & Co. have sold for the Holton estate 80 acres south of and adjoining the village of La Grange, at the corner of 5th avenue and 47th, at $1,200 an acre, or $96,000.

A. T. Galt has leased to the Edgewater Golf club, at a nominal rental, an eighty acre tract at the northwest corner of Devon and Evanston avenues, Edgewater. The property will be improved and the club will build a clubhouse. The lease is for three years, with the privilege of a longer term if the property is not sold.

Holabird and Roche have designed for Robert Leesley a three story basement and attic residence to be erected at 3260 Beacon street.

SCIENCE AIDS FARMERS' FIGHT AGAINST BORER

Menace Still Threatens Middle West.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

No one in the whole scientific world has found a way of stamping out the European corn borer, the greatest crop menace in agriculture's centuries of history. Unless some means of eradicating it is found it will eventually reach the heart of the corn and cotton belts. Entomologists, agricultural engineers, agronomists, chemists, and bacteriologists are scratching their heads day and night in search of an adequate and practical means of putting the best out of existence. A philanthropist's millions might stimulate them a little more, but that is doubtful because each man in his own field is trying to beat the other scientist to it.

Despite the effective work of farmers and scientists, who spent approximately $9,000,000 out of the $10,000,000 federal appropriation in the control of the borer last year, the pest continues to spread. Trained scouts in search of the end of the worm's trail found that it had traveled many miles beyond the limits charted on their map at the beginning of last year.

Present Over Vast Area.

A recent summary of the scouts' data shows that the European corn borer is now present and fairly well established over a vast area covering approximately 90,000,000 acres, or 30,000,000 acres more than the scouts had discovered a year ago. Encouraged by the cleanup work in the infested territory last year, farmers and workers in the campaign are asking congress to appropriate another $10,000,000 for 1928.

A joint committee of national societies of agronomists, entomologists, and agricultural engineers recently reported that its members believed the compulsory cleanup campaign of 1927 not only greatly reduced the rate of infestation increase but that the expenditure of large funds for this purpose had been completely justified.

Where the Money Goes.

The proposed campaign for this season is quite similar to the one carried on last summer, where farmers were paid a maximum of $2 an acre for their extra labor in cleaning up their fields. From the $10,000,000 farmers were paid a total of a little over $4,500,000. They held the borer in check on 2,292,822 acres. They were paid an average of $1.86 an acre. More than $2,000,000 was spent for equipment and supplies. Most of this is ready for use in this year's campaign. Nearly a third of the federal appropriation was paid out for operating costs.

Experts who have studied the work done in the infested areas of Ohio and other states say the extra labor spent in the fields by farmers last summer has paid big dividends by increasing the crop yields. C. O. Reed, an Ohio agricultural engineer and an authority on the corn borer, says that at the close of the clean-up period last June it was estimated by careful counts that the work has been instrumental in the destruction of more than 90 per cent of the larvæ or borers which existed in the corn refuse the previous March.

"Evidently the clean-up has been effective, because, although there are more borers now than ever before, the rate of increase has been materially reduced," he said.

Extensive Clean-up Work.

The clean-up work last year covered 202,338 farms growing 2,506,005 acres of corn. There were 7,000 employés working in small units over an area of approximately 25,000 square miles. A much larger territory will be covered this year, reaching perhaps a total of 3,500,000 acres.

In a new technical bulletin, No. 53, just issued by the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., Worthley and Caffrey, federal entomologists and co-authors of the publication, say, "Judging from results thus far obtained, it is evident that the major control efforts should be directed toward mechanical measures and cultural practices leading to the utilization or destruction of plants and crop residues containing the corn borer, particularly by feeding such materials to live stock, by clean plowing, or by burning."

These authorities are of the opinion that "voluntary coöperation" in the suppression of the corn borer cannot be depended upon to accomplish results. "There must be legislation, enacted by state governments, compelling the universal adoption of clean-up measures," they add.

Wholesale Destruction Needed.

Entomologists, chemists, engineers, and bacteriologist are trying to find some wholesale method of killing the borers or the moths of the borers. Engineers are working to develop some practical means of burning the vegetable waste in the field where the borer lives during the winter. Their goal is to have a machine that can be drawn over the field burning everything that lies on the surface in its path.

Men also have been trying to find some kind of light that will attract the moths of the European corn borer or drive them into a trap. They have met with little encouragement.

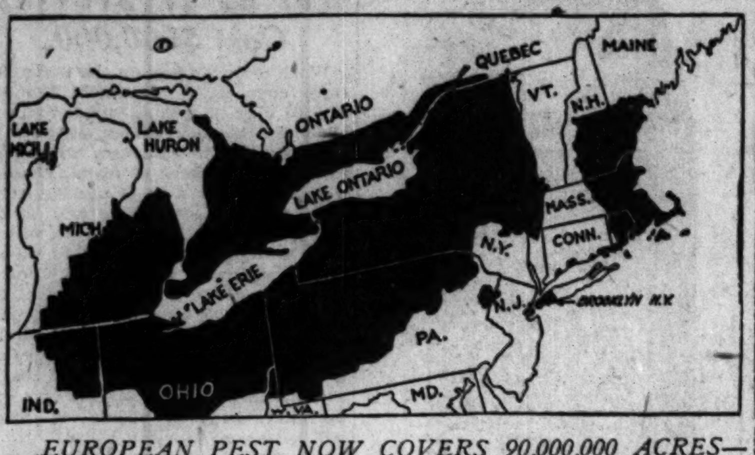
P. J. Parrot of the New York agricultural experiment station, Geneva, N. Y., who has used the moth of the European corn borer and other insects in recent tests, says that "as a general rule the insects used in the experiments were negative phototropic (turn toward the light) where colors at the red end of the visible spectrum were used, that their response was more positive at the violet end, and that where a free choice of all colors was allowed, the yellow, the very light blue-green of daylight, and the red-purple and blue-purple filters proved the more attractive."

Find Hope in Raking.

Some are hopeful that horse drawn rakes can be developed that will clean the field thoroughly. Rakes have been used quite effectively in windrowing and burning corn stalks after they had been mowed down, but the ordinary horse drawn rakes leave enough short pieces of stalks to furnish winter homes for many borers.

While experiments are being made the work of holding the borer in check must be done even if it is not perfect, experts say. No one is yet willing to say that the corn borer can be kept out of the corn belt indefinitely. If it is allowed to go unhampered it would spread to every field of corn in Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, and Missouri within a few years at the rate it has been traveling since it was first found in the United States eleven years ago.

CORN BORER TERRITORY.



EUROPEAN PEST NOW COVERS 90,000,000 ACRES—Like a dark cloud the European corn borer has cast a shadow over more than 140,000 square miles of the United States. It is now within a few miles of Lake Michigan's east shore. Scientists plan to repeat their compulsory control campaign in this zone in 1928. Congress is being asked to appropriate another $10,000,000 fund for clean-up work this year.

Within the last year scouts have found the borer on 30,000,000 acres not included on their 1927 map. The above map shows where scouts have found the pest established in the agriculatural regions of the northeastern part of this country. The borers are now sleeping in their winter quarters within a few miles of the heart of the great corn belt of America.

Flower Show Will Teach with Life Sized Models

Fifty miniature houses and lots, unpainted and unplanted, will be used in the 1928 Chicago Garden and Flower show to teach lessons in gardening and as the raw material for Illinois garden clubs to display their skill in landscape architectural designing around small homes in the exhibition's unique contest. With each shrub, annual and perennial in its proper place, these exhibits are expected to be one of the most unusual and instructive features of modern, big city flower shows.

Each house is made up of twelve interchangeable units which can be taken apart and reassembled to suit the taste and fancy of the garden club exhibitor. With every house goes a lot, made to the scale of 75x150 feet with one-fourth inch representing a foot. The house is so made that its chimneys, wings, and dormers can be put together in a variety of ways on the front or back, or in any corner of the lot.

It will be the task of the contestants to plan the garden and house in such a way that the two will be related. Competitors will be required to furnish interior plans of the house, and the judges will consider how the entire house, inside and outside, is related to the garden, emphasizing the accessibility of the indoor living room to the "outdoor living room."

May Teach Practical Gardening.

At this year's show, which is to be held at the Sherman hotel, Mar. 24 to April 1, technical landscape architects and practical gardeners expect to teach lessons in gardening, so that every amateur grower who visits the exhibition can go away with a definite idea of how to plan and plant his own grounds. Experts of the show have so carefully worked out the small home garden contest that it will serve the double purpose of offering first an exceptionally fine competition for garden clubs and second, the winners and losers will display their exhibits as object lessons for beginners in gardening.

These experts point out that an American style of treatment for small home gardens has been evolved in the last ten years, and, in the opinion of many judges, the American garden expresses strict originality and is superior in design, material, and usefulness to the types found in other countries. It has been found that the amateur's garden frequently fails in artistry and effectiveness because of inexpert planting. The style of American garden which is gaining high favor, these horticulturists say, is the garden which is carefully planned and laid out with attention to architectural details so that it is definitely a part of the home and the setting.

Outdoor Living Rooms.

John A. Servas, manager of the flower show, said that in America we are developing a garden area in close proximity to the house, easily and directly accessible from the living room, and designed carefully to complement the effect of the house and its environs. The term, "outdoor living room," which is generally applied to the small American garden, aptly describes it.

"We expect to demonstrate the effectiveness of this national development with carefully designed and expertly constructed exhibits. They will demonstrate the varied types of gardens that may be introduced in small areas which ordinarily give little range for originality. The directors of the show hope to foster this distinctive originality in the American garden," he added.

Expressing One's Taste.

"The truth is, so many materials are available for our gardens and the types of design applicable to them are so varied that a garden may be easily designed to express the owner's individual taste more accurately than any other department of the home," said Mr. Servas.

The flower show committee plans to give the amateur gardener the formulas of the professional and to teach him the importance of architectural design and harmonious planting, so that the Chicago Garden and Flower show may serve to promote educational, healthful, and increasing interest in this important department of the American home.

Eleven States Will Meet in Farmers' Equity Union

Eleven states will send delegates to the national convention of the Farmers' Equity union, which is to be held at Greenville, Ill., Jan. 18 and 19. R. W. Dunlap, assistant secretary of the United States department of agriculture, is scheduled as one of the chief speakers.

STUDY OF LAND PROBLEMS PUT IN BOOK FORM

Waste Areas Main Discussion.

"ANY PLAN FOR RAISING the price of agricultural products will defeat itself unless it includes provisions for limiting production, that is, for limiting agricultural expansion."

That statement is particularly significant with farm leaders in Washington, D. C., at the present time struggling for some form of legislation that will bring agriculture into a closer balance with other industries. It is significant, too, because it was made by the late Ray P. Teele, agricultural economist, in his new book, "Economics of Land Reclamation." This book summarized his study of this question for almost a quarter of a century in the federal census bureau. The book is published by A. W. Shaw company, Chicago, Ill.

Many Problems Discussed.

It discusses the draining of swamps and the irrigation of dry lands from the economic standpoint rather than from an egineering or a crop production. The author answers many questions concerning cropping of idle acres and how the boosting of farm prices would put more idle acres under the plow unless production is limited in some way.

Mr. Teele said these inquiries are particularly pertinent at the present time when our farmers, legislators, and economists are trying to solve the problems of disposing of surplus agricultural products, rather than trying to find means of supplying our people with sufficient food and raw materials.

With the aid of maps, charts, and tables he packed 337 pages full of information on land reclamation, showing the location of irrigation and drainage projects, their cost, who pays the bills, and the effect crops produced on these lands have on the economics of agriculture.

An Erroneous Theory.

In his preface Mr. Teele said: "There exists a very common feeling that to bring unused land into use is good—at all times, in all places, and without reference to the relation between costs and returns. This feeling finds expression in the popular phrases, 'Make the desert blossom as the rose,' 'Make every idle acre work,' and 'Make two blades of grass grow where but one grew before.'"

Mr. Teele died recently, before having seen a copy of his book, according to E. Horner of the Shaw Publishing company. He was making a study of a western reclamation project at the time he suddenly became ill.

A. W. Miller Is Appointed to Stockyards Position

Dr. A. W. Miller has been put in charge of the packers and stockyards administration by William M. Jardine, secretary of agriculture. He takes the position recently left vacant by the resignation of John T. Cane III.

Dr. Miller has been chief of the field inspection division of the United States departmeht of agriculture. As chief of the packers and stockyards division he will still be under the direction of Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the bureau of animal industry. Dr. Miller will immediately take charge of his new division, which is comparable to the divisions of tuberculosis eradication, tick eradication, and meat inspection.

Build Your Home the Skyscraper Way

"Honor Bilt" homes are built on the money saving, skyscraper construction principles. Have you ever seen a skyscraper under construction? Weren't you impressed with the orderly way with which all beams were swung into place—no confusion—no cutting? This careful cutting and fitting of material before it is delivered on the job, whether it be steel or lumber, not only saves the cost of labor, but makes for stronger and more solid construction.

"Honor Bilt" homes are furnished ready-cut. They are cut to fit accurately, by expert mechanics and modern machinery in our own factories. They embrace the best points of the hand-cut frame construction and, in addition, give you the advantage of our successful "Honor Bilt" System.

SAVE $500.00 to $2,000.00

Own a Substantial "Honor Bilt" Modern Home

Our Easy Payment Plan, $25 to $85 monthly, has enabled thousands of families to get out of the renter's class and own their own home in a short time.

Sears, Roebuck and Co.'s famous Guarantee of Satisfaction is backed by resources amounting to over one hundred million dollars, and by the testimony of eleven million satisfied customers.

When you consider that our experience covers a period of over 25 years, and includes the cumulative knowledge of our nation-wide organization. Sears surely is a safe place to select your home.

41,200 "Honor Bilt" Homes Today

Our customers have invested over one hundred million dollars in "Honor Bilt" homes. 29,300 have been erected by customers themselves, because "Honor Bilt" homes are easy to build.

One Order Brings All
No Extras

We ship you all the material for a complete house, including lumber, millwork, roofing, building paper, paint and varnish; also plumbing, heating and lighting fixtures. Material we furnish is shipped to arrive at the job when that particular material is needed. We do not furnish masonry materials.

Permanent, Modern Homes

By actual certified test, we know our system saves nearly one-half the labor and assures a better job. Our homes are solid, durable, warm and permanent. With each house we furnish a booklet which explains and illustrates the simple directions of construction. Every piece of lumber is marked to correspond with number shown on the plans, which we furnish free. The smallest pieces are bundled and marked so as to save time in locating.

Best Quality Lumber and Millwork

Lumber furnished for "Honor Bilt" homes is bright and new, fine, dry No. 1 framing Clear Cypress for outside finish and Clear siding. Expert mechanics, modern machinery and good materials assure perfectly made millwork. Oak, Birch, Fir or Yellow Pine (as specified) for interior finish—the kind of material that will prove to be a little better than generally used in home construction. All other materials of the best quality.

World's Largest Mills

We own and operate a chain of the world's largest lumber mills, millwork factories and building material plants, covering a total of 125 acres, and representing an investment of ten million dollars, all located with a view towards serving our customers economically, efficiently and quickly.

NEW WATER FERN
Beautiful House Plant — REQUIRES NO SOIL.
THRIVES IN A VASE OF WATER
A peculiar and interesting plant that is admired by everyone; handsome, velvety, fine, fern-like foliage. Curls up and goes to sleep when taken out of water, and keeps in its sleeping or dormant state for weeks and awakens again in a few minutes after being placed in water. Owing to the fact it is capable of sleeping and awakening repeatedly, it is called the Opossum Fern. Do not confuse this plant with the much advertised Resurrection plant. If you want one of the most satisfactory and beautiful "Table Ferns," something entirely new, get one of these marvels of plant life. Plants, 25c each; 3 for 50c; 7 for $1.00, postpaid. NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Events of Interest on the Week's List

By Mildred Jaklon.

SOCIAL lights who have been partying and partied to the point of satiety are tearing away to fashionable spots in the south, east, and west, and the weary little debutantes are being trundled off to regain their pep and rosy cheeks, but the social season continues to show unmistakably active signs of life. Some of the interesting things on this week's program are the 47th annual meeting on Tuesday of the Dearborn Seminary Alumnæ association at the Fortnightly, and the Friends of Opera meeting tomorrow afternoon at the Drake hotel.

The Dearborn seminary, where young ladies acquired the gentle arts and knowledge that were considered appropriate for their capacities a half a century ago, was founded by Zwenglius Grover, and the association, which includes many of the city's prominent women, holds its annual meeting on the anniversary of his birthday, Jan. 17. Mrs. John Downey of Evanston has been nominated for president for the new year.

The Friends of Opera are to have a change from the usual fare partaken of at their meetings. Instead of the customary short talk on some important opera with illustrations by opera company artists. Cyrena Van Gordon is to sing, José Mojica will give a group of French and Spanish folk songs, and Charles Moor, the company's stage director, is to speak on "Stagecraft."

The Arts club, Pro-Musica, and La Chorale Française are to give a tea at the Arts club from 4 to 6 o'clock Thursday afternoon for M. Maurice Ravel, the French musician who has been cutting such a tremendous swath in New York City during his visit there, and who has come to Chicago to conduct the Symphony orchestra this week.

Miss Jessie and Miss Catherine Colvin are to give an afternoon affair at the Fortnightly tomorrow, when Branson De Cou will give his illustrated talk, "Dream Pictures of South Sea Wonderlands."

WEDDINGS

Miss Romayne Warren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin S. Warren of Grosse Pointe, Detroit, Mich., became engaged recently to John P. Wilson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Wilson of 1516 State parkway. Their wedding will probably take place in June.

Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson's costume for the Twelfth Night festivities was of white, decorated with gold, and her crown was of gold leaves.

Striking Features of 1928 Are Noted

By Mme. X.

THE latest comer of the many thousand years we mortals have been inheriting this earth entered auspiciously, if a little violently, fifteen days ago, blown in by a polar gale. What did it find of especial moment here in Chicago? What seems to the dweller in this western burg the striking features, as so far revealed, of 1928?

Well, for one thing, an immediate impression is that the city is really and unmistakably smokier than it has been of late years. Facial applications of cleansing cream followed by wiping with a cloth dipped in hot or cold water rewards one with the spectacle of a portentous removal of black soot, which is most exhilarating to the true Chicagoite. To such the process of washing the face here has a thrill not equaled by any similar performance in other metropoli, unless it be Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, or St. Louis.

The next most salient feature of the new year to this observer of Chicago is the fact that there seems little let up in the great building campaign started here of late years, in spite of the continuing rumors that the near north side, where most of the striking new structures are going up, is threatened with overbuilding. Day by day the face of the city is changing. Old houses are disappearing over night. New and much larger architectural creations are shooting up on every side.

The World Comes to Us.

Our skyline is developing into features that catch the eye and enchant the imagination of visitors from all over the globe, for the rest of the world is discovering Chicago and coming here, each with his or her goods to sell. It may be a noted artist, or a member of a once celebrated and titled family with something to offer, or a person interested in promoting some excellent, though far-away enterprise. We are given the opportunity to subscribe to funds to help educate people of alien stock for their life in regions far from here. We can be among those who are interested in establishing foundations consecrated to the promotion of our Anglo-Saxon culture. We can join in welfare work for the Chinese, or the Patagonians, or the wild tribes of Borneo. In short, Chicago is on the map as far as promoters of art, philanthropy, commerce, and reform the world over are concerned.

Among other striking features of the moment here is the rise in cab fares of which comparatively little has been said in the way of comment. Personally, the X. family is inclined to be rather grateful than captious about this, as we find that we walk much more than formerly, which is good for the health. No longer do we signal the passing taxi as eagerly as we were once wont to do. Nor do we grieve when we see long lines of empty ones pass by on the street, their drivers looking earnestly for patrons.

Modern Taxi Meters.

If you've been to New York in recent years and become accustomed to those delightfully and alluringly cheap vehicles that throng the streets of Gotham with their initial charge of 15 cents for a quarter of a mile, you are inclined to resent somewhat the initial charge here for the first fifth of a mile of 25 cents, with the first mile costing you 45 cents, later ones 25 cents and a 10 cent charge for every three minute wait. And the meters in our local taxis seem keyed up to a swifter rate than any I've ever seen anywhere else.

Where it used to cost me 55 or at the most 65 cents to drive from the North Western station to Walton place and Rush street, it now runs up to 85 cents if I have luck, otherwise the meter trots on to 95 in the twinkling of an eye. Luckily for the family exchequer, some well established and very comfortable cabs, still maintaining the old tariff, can be found traversing the streets. That the principal taxi companies in Chicago charge more than any of their kind elsewhere, is, however, not to the advantage of the city. Meanwhile, it is much to the profit of the makers of walking shoes that our local cabs are so costly. It also breeds pedestrian habits excellent for the general health. These excessive cab charges are among the things noticed in this new year.

To Aid Mrs. McCormick.

A salient feature of this immediate period is the candidacy of Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick for the Republican nomination for congressman-at-large from Illinois. At a meeting of over 300 women held last week at the Illinois Women's Athletic club, an association was formed to help her in her campaign. Mrs. Hathaway Watson is chairman of these "Ruth McCormick volunteers." One of the outstanding features of this occasion was the speech made by Mrs. George Bass, a well known Democrat, who announced her allegiance to Mrs. McCormick, the Republican candidate, stating as her reason her great admiration for Mrs. McCormick and her belief in the latter's fitness for this post.

Among those present that day, which was a midday luncheon meeting, I noted Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. E. R. Fifield, Mrs. Howard Linn, Mrs. Clive Runnells, Mrs. John Paul Welling, Mrs. Waller Borden, Mrs. Jacob Baur, and Mrs. Harris Brewer.

By inheritance, tradition and natural taste is Mrs. McCormick allied to and fitted for our political and public life. Her father, the late Mark Hanna, senator from Ohio, was one of the foremost, outstanding figures of his day, which was more than a quarter of a century ago. Her husband, the late Medill McCormick, was senator from Illinois for six years. Mrs. McCormick has many of her father's qualifications, among them being a genial attitude towards the rest of the world; a clear idea of what she wants and believes in; an ability to mix well with the many and various elements that make up our electorate; a gift of ready, even eloquent, speech; and great ability in organizing and carrying out any proposition in which she has belief and interest. Politics in Illinois.

The Republican party in Illinois is nothing if not picturesque and varied in its many aspects. It is by no means the cut and dried organization it is in some states where the G. O. P. is so deeply intrenched that elections are a mere form and candidates are but figures put up by accepted leaders. Here Republicans are capable of hating other Republicans much more than they do Democrats or followers of other political parties. Added to this is the large floating vote which shifts from one side to the other and makes betting on elections the exciting uncertainty that it always is in this commonwealth.

Nor is Mrs. McCormick the only striking and conspicuous personality of her sex here at this beginning of 1928. Chicago has several remarkable and commanding women who direct our social and philanthropic activities. Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman is one of these modern leaders whose name is known throughout the city. For many years she has been closely associated with the work of that interesting organization, the Red, White and Blue club, an enterprise which helps transform youthful aliens of exotic origin into fervent Americans. It has its headquarters in attractive rooms in the northwest section of the city, on Wade street.

The Problem of Funds.

It is an annual problem how to raise the money with which to run the club. Many a delightful social, semi-public function has been devoted to this purpose. Always up with the times, Mrs. Coleman, honorary president, and Mrs. E. R. Fifield, active president of the committee in charge of the club, have accepted the offer of Fred Mann, president of the Rainbo Exhibition company, to take over the evening of Jan. 31 in which to raise the sum necessary to support the club for the coming year.

The latest fad in the sport loving world is the Spanish game of "jai alai," pronounced "hi li," which has been imported to Chicago this winter and which is nightly drawing thousands of people as onlookers. This was introduced to Chicago at the Rainbo Gardens by Mr. Mann, who has installed there a team of thirty-five players. The game is set in what in Spain is called a "fronton," and is played with strange, large, long straw paddles, implements that seem to grow out of the arm and in shape strongly suggest the pleistocene age. Such might have been the rackets of prehistoric man.

These have to be made of wicker with infinite care, and are called the "cesta," or basket. Even more intricate and laborious in construction are the balls which are, like the cesta, manufactured in Spain. The center of the ball is made of calves' entrails, dried and powdered. Over this is wound, round and round, raw Spanish rubber a quarter of an inch wide and four miles and a half long—yes, miles it is, not feet, as described in the little book issued by the jai alai company. Again over this is linen twine, wound tight and close, to be covered in turn by a cotton packing which again is encased in kid, which is likewise and lastly still further covered with a goatskin outside.

Women to Sell 2,000 Seats.

The game itself, as played by professionals, is one of the most thrilling, difficult, lively and exhausting of all ball games. Every one who sees it becomes enthralled by it.

It is a great piece of luck for the Red, White and Blue benefit committee to have this enterprise for one evening. The offer was eagerly accepted at a large meeting of the committee gathered in Mrs. John H. Winterbotham's charming drawing room last Monday afternoon. Mrs. Coleman and Mrs. Fifield presided jointly at this gathering and received promises of the hearty aid of the thirty-one women present, who have cheerfully undertaken to sell the 2,000 seats and the 22 boxes. Many of the latter were immediately taken by members of the committee.

Seats are $5 each and boxes holding six are $60. Included in the price of the tickets, besides the game of jai alai, is a table on the edge of the adjacent dance hall where excellent and lively dance music and a high class entertainment are provided freely. That night a new program will be presented.

One of the chief things the promoters are anxious to stress to you and me is that there is absolutely no expense attached to this affair; that every cent paid for tickets goes right into the coffers of the club, and that checks can be made out to the Red, White and Blue club. It is 100 per cent a charitable entertainment.

Mr. Mann is giving the use of his office force, his publicity agent and everything else that is concerned with presenting the game. In return for the $5 the public has all of the table, the dance floor and music, including also being in the company of some of the city's most notable citizens. It will be worth your while to buy a seat or two and be there.

Commander Byrd to Speak.

Looming up not far ahead is the illustrated talk to be given by that delightful and remarkable aviator, Commander Richard E. Byrd on Jan. 25 at Orchestra hall, under the auspices of the Illinois League of Women Voters. Commander Byrd shares honors with Col. Lindbergh as being one of the most striking and picturesque figures in our life today. The latter was first to make a nonstop flight across the Atlantic. The former was first to fly over the north pole and is now making his arrangements to fly over the much lonelier and more remote south pole.

He is of an old southern family. His brother is governor of Virginia and the name Byrd has been associated with the history of this famous state since the seventeenth century. Among those who have bought boxes for this lecture are the A. A. Carpenters, John Bordens, William E. Clows, James L. Houghtelings, W. Scott Linns, James W. Morrissons, George Packards, Frederick H. Rawsons, Edward L. Ryersons Jr., Walter Bensons, Culbreth Sudler, Eugene S. Talbots, Vaughan Spaldings, Joseph Valentines, the Mesdames Walter Ayer, Rockefeller McCormick, E. I. Cudahy, William G. Hibbard, Charles Munroe, Gustavus Swift, Hathaway Watson, the Messrs. John G. Dollenbacher, Alfred Hoyt Granger, and Henry H. Porter.

The Illinois League of Women Voters is already making plans for the grand meeting in the spring here of all the various chapters and branches of this great organization.

Two Social Events.

Next Sunday evening the members of the Arts club are invited to a supper and musical at the club, where that fine artist and charming man, M. Vanni-Marcoux, will be the guest of honor and give a program of songs after the supper. It sounds like a rare and choice entertainment. The party is sure to be one of those that help put this enterprising and valuable club on the social and artistic map of the city.

Another social affair in the offing is the Fort Sheridan Polo team ball, which is billed for Friday evening, Feb. 3. Yes, the shortest month of the twelve seems to be approaching before we've even realized that January was passing by. This party is a revival of similar polo balls which were at one time annual events.

It is to be given in the Louis XIV. room of the Sherman house. Capt. James Rodwell is chairman of the ball. Mrs. Lloyda Smith Shaw is at the head of the ticket committee. She has enlisted the aid of the season's debutantes. It will be a picturesque and colorful dance. No matter how much pacifists prevail, there will always be a glamour to uniforms not to be matched by anything else.

Anything left over from the proceeds from the sale of tickets, after the expenses have been met, will be devoted to the rehabilitation of the fort's polo field. The army polo team has always been noted for its dashing, even ferocious manner of playing this royal game. The game itself came originally from Persia, I believe. Old Persian missals present exquisite pictures of turbaned riders, clad in brocades and mounted on richly caparisoned ponies, dashing madly after a tiny ball. Later the Indian maharajahs and other Hindu satraps made it their favorite sport. From there English conquerors took the game to England, where it has ever since stood high in popularity.

A Winter Picnic.

There is to be a winter picnic this afternoon out at Fort Sheridan that promises to be one of the gayest and most enjoyable affairs of the month. It is given for the debutantes of the season and others working to make the polo ball a success. Those nice young officers who are wintering out there on the brink of the lake have organized what should be a lively and interesting afternoon and evening. There is first to be a polo match in the Riding hall between the Whites and the Reds. After this match, allowing for a sufficient interval to enable the players to change their polo togs, there will be a picnic supper in the south living room of the Officers' club, in front of a roaring fire. Among the young buds who are to be there are the Misses Helen Hardenberg, Frances Richardson, Rosemary Morrisson, Louise Brewer, Jean Adams, Katherine Nelson, Anne Wood, and Pauline Wolff. Captain and Mrs. Nelson Levings are chaperoning the party.

It was young and attractive Lieut. Burgess who gave me this information, and if the rest of the officers are like him, it ought to be a pretty good party. [Pardon this personal observation, Lieut. Burgess.]

Carrying on a Fine Work.

On Tuesday afternoon at the Blackstone will be one of the most interesting occasions in our very up to date philanthropic world; namely, the annual meeting of the Visiting Nurse association of Chicago, when the president, Mrs. Joseph Cudahy, will preside and reports will be read of the work done by this remarkable organization during the last year. Dr. Ludvig Hektoen of the John McCormick Institute of Infectious Diseases will deliver an address on "Infantile Paralysis."

Reports will be given by Mrs. Bruce Borland, head of the nurses' committee; by Mrs. Albert A. Sprague of the committee on after care study of infantile paralysis; by Mrs. George E. Throop, treasurer; by Mrs. Ralph Winston of the auxiliary committee; by Miss Edna L. Foley, superintendent, and on "The First Visit," by Miss Emily Dieshulski.

Forty-two women compose the board of the Visiting Nurse association. They are more than usually active in their interest in the work of the society. Miss Edna L. Foley, the extremely able superintendent of the V. N. A., reports that thirty-seven different directors made 736 visits to her office last year to show their interest in what was going on. The staff of 118 nurses and twelve student nurses made 287,768 visits to 41,062 patients. Of these, 28,513 were made to crippled children and adults.

Human Touch Given.

It is not only the scientific care and helpful advice given to the ill and disabled by this band of what must seem like heavenly angels that is accomplished; it is also their human touch, their sympathy in many a life problem, their tender concern in matters outside their immediate domain that makes these visiting nurses one of our most beloved and wonderful organizations.

These annual meetings with their reports and discussions are more interesting than any drama presented by the world's greatest actors, for in them are to be found all the elements that Shakespeare or Molière or any dramatist ever imagined as a basis for their plays.

Today the family doctor plays the rôle once universally given to the father confessor. The visiting nurse is even more intimately taken into the heart of the households in which she visits. Her hands minister to the ill. Her words give encouragement and counsel. Her voice soothes the agitated. Her advent is the day's chief event. Her uniform enables her to walk safely through the most dangerous and gloomy city slum. She is the bodily expression of motherly love and comfort.

Officers of this society, besides Mrs. Cudahy, president, are Miss Margaret Conover, first vice president; Mrs. Richard I. Stearns, second vice president; Mrs. Uri B. Grannis, recording secretary; Miss Naomi Donnelley, corresponding secretary; Mrs. George E. Throop, treasurer, and Mrs. John B. Drake, assistant treasurer. The headquarters of the association are in the Monroe building on South Michigan avenue and East Monroe street.

A Difficult Art.

Many friends of Otis Skinner, the well known actor, and of his daughter, Miss Cornelia Skinner, are interested in the Chicago debut of the latter at the Harris theater this afternoon as a monologist. She is young, good looking and, according to reports coming from New York, where she has been giving a series of these entertainments, is most successful in both her matter and her manner. It is not an easy field in which to achieve fame, because for some years Miss Ruth Draper has been so preeminent in this line of entertainment.

Not only does the artist in this department have to possess dramatic talent of wide scope, but he or she has to have literary ability, as each one creates not only the rôles presented but also the very words and scenes and costumes. This requires keen wit, also a lively sense of humor, for wit and humor are quite different roads of approach to the expression of life. These entertainers must be apt students of their kind, and have an instinct as to what constitutes the dramatic and what will make an appeal.

The First Monologist.

The first of these monologists was Miss Beatrice Herford, daughter of the well known Unitarian clergyman, the late Brook Herford, and sister of the equally famous humorist, Oliver Herford. Following on her heels came Miss Draper, "facile princeps" today in her work in this line. I remember the time, not so many years ago, when she was not able to fill even a quite small hall. Today she crowds the largest theaters with enthusiastic throngs.

It will be interesting to watch the career of this latest candidate for honors in this high and difficult art. While actors and actresses interpret the lines of playwrights, these monologists have to create their own lines as well as learn them. They may well be called interpreters of life and its many phases. Their satires have to be subtle; their humor must be compelling; their understanding of the tragic should be profound; their appreciation of what will touch the sympathies and tickle the risibles of their audiences is bound to be of a live and pulsating order in order to achieve success.

By the way, have you read George Arliss' "Up the Years from Bloomsbury"? It is a rich and rare record not only of his conspicious and interesting career but also of the changing times in which he has lived and risen to eminence. Read it if you want a good time.

For the Children.

Those clever young Junior leaguers have put another charming and successful production on the stage of the Harris theater. This time it is "The Land of Oz," dramatized by Mrs. Charles Barney Goodspeed, who is herself making a record as a writer of good lines and creator of dramatic situations. This piece is likely to evoke an even more spontaneous sympathy from the very young public to whom it is addressed than did its immediate predecessor, "The Rose and the Ring." The latter delighted the elders because it resurrected one of the most enchanting pieces of literature in the English language. This fact would not appeal to the infants of today.

This latest production has any number of features that awake the delight and laughter of the children from [illegible] years up. Space forbids my mentioning the performers specifically. I can only say: Be sure to take or send your youngsters there on Saturday mornings, O mothers of this part of the country!

· ART AND ARTISTS ·

Portraits by Sorin Merit High Praise

By Eleanor Jewett.

At the Arts club is now an exhibition of portraits by the Russian artist, Savely Sorin, which stands by itself. The paintings are unusually lovely. They possess to a marked degree that quality so difficult to describe—charm. In the first place one must consider the way in which these portraits are painted. M. Sorin accents "Tempera—sans blanc." Tempera—without white—no white. To the initiated that must convey something. To most of us it means but little.

Even most of us, though, disregarding the injunction sans blanc can feel the clearness of his color. It is as cool as a snowdrift. The various personalities stand out as though delicately, very delicately, carved against their pure background. There is a serene disregard for conflict and motion. Nothing is hurried, nothing is unpremeditated. We have here a thinking master of good taste and a trained technician.

The "Russian Ingres."

It was not by chance that M. Sorin won for himself the title of the "Russian Ingres." His drawing is exquisite and exact. The lines melt into each other. There is a marvelous fluency of modeling. For the best illustration of the reason for linking Sorin with Ingres look at the painting of the young girl in the outer hall. The name of the picture has escaped me, for the canvas was not numbered when I saw it, but you cannot mistake the likeness. A distinct impression of the "Broken Pitcher" floats like a subtle halo through and about the tender lines of this fresh, sweet and charming person. She and her French prototype are sisters.

It is in the atmosphere, not in the resemblance, that the relationship of the two artists is felt. The Russian has taken the virginal qualities of Ingres' paintings and adapted them; made them his own and translated them into modern settings. For this to have come out of present day Russia is indeed something. Though, on second thought, to be Russian is not to be, today, from Russia, so quite possibly M. Sorin is more truly from Paris than from Petrograd. And if from Paris, then is he again a brave man, for his work absolutely defies the current spirit of his French contemporaries.

Portraits of Many Types.

To return to the specific exhibit at the Arts club. There are many fashionable names among the portraits. There are also, here and there, a more or less imaginary hero or heroine, as "An Artist of Montparnasse," "French Painter," "Russian Dramatic Artist," "Russian Peasant Woman," and the like. There is, too, the effective girl of the night life clubs, "Au Café," and the graceful, partly clad figure in "The Dancer's Dressing Room."

There are portraits of philosophers. There is the dancer, Anna Pavlova. Countless types and countless personalities rubbed against the gold of M. Sorin's genius and put upon canvas to delight and amuse and intrigue us. It sums up into this: Simplicity, purity, rational composition, sincere presentation, clarity of color, no underwash of mysticism or symbolism, a charming accounting in a generous and intelligible manner by a great painter of the beauties and differences which, when all is said, are the basic principles upon which the human race is built.

In the first gallery of the Arts club sculpture by Robert Laurent is shown. This is sculpture in wood and a deep, mahogany red is the color apparently preferred by the artist. He gives us a fat setting hen; several thick blades of vegetation, presumably cactus; the head of a woman who might easily be the red queen from "Alice in Wonderland"; one or two geometric conceptions, and several portrait busts. It is not possible to say much about this exhibit. Laurent evidently is working out his spiritual salvation in a peculiarly personal way. There may be reason in some of these pieces; there may be promise in others. In them all there is a sense of strain and of artifice. They do not seem natural.

Perhaps another few years or a wider experience will lead this young sculptor into less strange paths. Perhaps this strange path will emerge suddenly into something extremely beautiful and rare. Who, indeed, can tell?

Some Charming Carving.

In the children's museum at the Art institute there is a treat awaiting you. An exhibit of wood carvings by Carl Hallsthammar has been arranged there and if you want to smile and forget yourself in an exhibition of humor, absolutely without bitterness, take the time to go and see these little figures. They are remarkable, and, as far as I know, without a duplicate in this country.

Mr. Hallsthammar carves in a broad manner and yet the details of his work are fascinating. There is nothing too trifling for him to neglect in his searching and painstaking method of caricature. Grotesque though some of the results are, they are all fascinating. It is caricature at its kindliest. Take "The Singing Brothers," for example, a group which has recently been given to the children's museum by Charles H. Worcester. Here are several men all singing loudly, their mouths wide open, their lungs like bellows. And the group breathes the sentiment of jolly Christmas ballads. It is gay and funny—and exactly right. The artist has caught the spirit of group singing, the gay spirit that makes brothers of audience and men when, for instance, a college glee club is here with us in Orchestra hall.

Every bit of success Mr. Hallsthammar meets with, he is worthy of. He is doing unusual work, clever, amusing, careful, and is bringing the boy's fun of whittling into the man's outlet of art.

Prizes Awarded at Galleries.

The prize awards have been announced in the fourth annual exhibition held at the Chicago Galleries association. The largest prize of $1,000 went to the picturesque "Children's Masquerade" by Oskar Gross. Carl C. Preussl was awarded the $750 prize for his "Sunny Sails." Anna Lee Stacey was given the $500 award for her portrait, "The Lace Veil."

"On the Mesa Near Taos," by Oscar E. Berninghaus; "The Kingdom of the Winds," by Frank C. Peyraud, and "Bess and Jess," by Carl Krafft, were given $400 each. "Rylla," by Matteo Sandona; "In the Great Smokies," by Rudolph F. Ingerle; "Old Winter—Slow and Chill," by Frank V. Dudley; "The Black Shawl," by Paul Trebilcock, and "A Fairy Tale," by Helga H. Dean, were awarded the $300 prizes.

"The Port," by Irma R. Koen; "When the Leaves Begin to Turn," by Pauline Palmer; "Ad Finem Diei," by Edward T. Grigware; "Old Houses at Plombieres," by Frederic Tellander, are the paintings given the $250 prizes. Prizes of $200 each went to "Barca de Pesca," by Arthur Rider; "Junks and Sampans," by Florence White Williams; "The Great Smoky Mountains," by Clifton Wheeler; "Forest Solitude," by John A. Spelman; "Where Peace and Quiet Prevail," by Edward B. Butler; "Shadows," by Indiana Gyberson; "Sycamores, Santa Barbara," by Orrin A. White; "Afternoon—October," by Harry A. De Young; "A New England Pastoral," by John F. Stacey, and "Twilight Over Swampland," by Felix Russman.

A prize of $50 was awarded to Viola Norman for small sculpture.

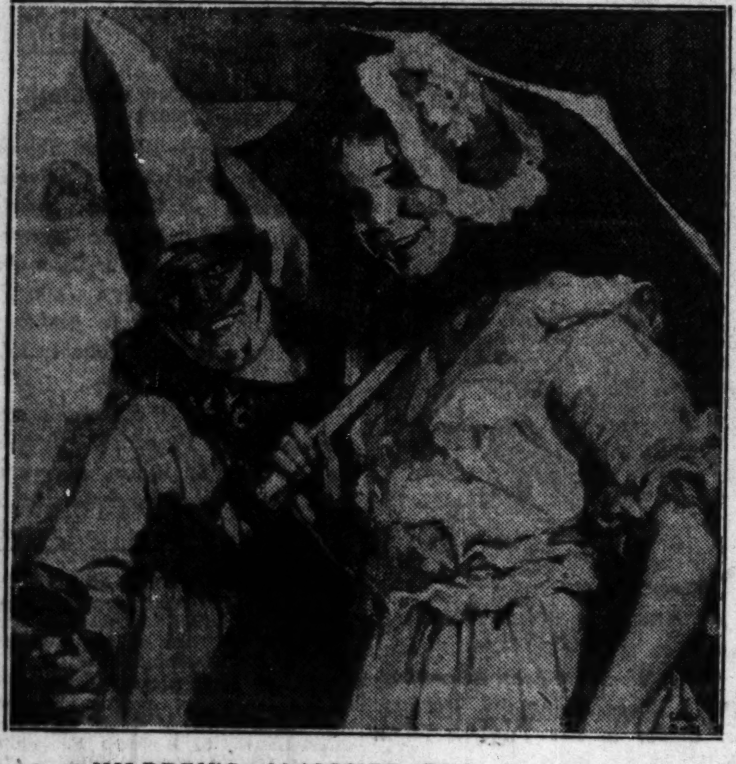
News of Art and Artists.

At the Marshall Field galleries there was current last week an exhibition of sculpture by Tennessee Mitchell Anderson and of original prints by Walt Kuhn.

An attractive Christmas message from Glen Mitchell leads us to infer that he is still making Paris his headquarters.

The National Small Sculpture committee announces another, the fourth annual competition for prizes offered by the Procter & Gamble company for sculpture, using white soap as a medium. For fuller information address National Small Sculpture committee, 80 East 11th street, New York City.

At the Anderson galleries there is an exhibit of paintings by Everett Shinn, an American who for the last twenty years has forsaken art for the drama. These pictures make one long for him to take his brush in hand again and convey to us his present state of mind about the stage.



"CHILDREN'S MASQUERADE," by Oskar Gross, awarded the prize of $1,000 in the Fourth Annual Members' Exhibition at the Chicago Galleries association, an exhibition which closed last week.

Helpers of the Deaf Celebrate Founding

By Kate Webber.

THE Chicago League for the Hard of Hearing will celebrate the twelfth anniversary of the founding of the league with a reception and program on Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock in Recital hall, the Fine Arts building. Mrs. Charles J. Wilson is chairman of the social committee, which has charge of the program of dance interpretations to be given by Marcia Preble of the Bolm ballet. Dancing will follow.

Organized by a small group of workers, the league has patiently and effectively carried on a work for prevention of deafness and the education and rehabilitation of the deafened. The community house at 206 East Superior street is proving inadequate already for the demands made for assistance and instruction in this vitally important task. The house is also used as a social center, much of the rehabilitation work being done through social activities. Plans are now under way by the officers for the acquisition of larger and more commodious quarters such as are in operation in Boston, Toledo, and other cities. The interest of the public is being enlisted in making this new residence possible.

A Progressive Step.

One of the most progressive movements of the league has been the coöperation with the board of education in having the ears of school children examined. A prominent otologist of the city has said: "The movement to examine the ears of the pupils of our schools in Chicago, which has been inaugurated by the Chicago League for the Hard of Hearing, is too great to be appraised at this time. Their other departments of endeavor are of greatest importance to the community."

Lip Reading Taught.

Any impairment to the hearing is seldom noticed until it has reached serious proportions, sometimes too late for medical aid. Hence rises the need to help these people help themselves, chief among these aids being lip reading. The women active in social or club work and persons of independent means need this help chiefly for the sake of easing for themselves, their families and friends, the daily intercourse and social contact.

When, to the handicap of deafness, there is added the necessity of self-support the problem becomes a serious one. It is with this class that the league mostly concerns itself. Far from treating these persons as patients, league officers and workers help them through the transition stage to surety and command of themselves which they, of course, lose when deafness comes on. Chronic discouragement and morbidness are dispelled and an outlook of negation becomes one of pleasant and constructive assurance.

THE twelfth annual dinner dance of the Canterbury club is to take place on Friday evening, Jan. 27, at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Mrs. Samuel M. Hamilton, president, assisted by the other officers and a committee, will receive.

Mrs. Martin J. Klein, social chairman of the Edgewater Catholic Woman's club, will be in charge of the club's annual party for husbands of members on Friday evening at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Dancing and cards will be features of the evening's program.

The Chicago League for the Hard of Hearing will celebrate the twelfth anniversary of its founding with a reception on Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock in Recital hall, Fine Arts building. A program by Marcia Preble and dancing will constitute the entertainment. Miss Rose Dickinson, who was founder and second president of the league, will assist Mrs. Charles J. Wilson, chairman, and other officers in receiving.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

Edward Davison, poet and critic, will address the Chicago Woman's club on Wednesday at 2 o'clock on "Oxford, Cambridge, and Their Poets." Today a program on "Carmen" will be given at 3 o'clock before the Sunday open door meeting. Tomorrow the directors of the art and literature department will meet at 10:30 and at 12:15 a luncheon will be given by the education and philosophy department and the home and public welfare department, when "New Conceptions of Anti-Social Behavior" will be discussed. The parliamentary law class will meet at 2:30 and at 3 o'clock a reception will be given to new members of the departments. On Tuesday the committee on the Park Ridge School for Girls will meet at 10:30, the two Italian classes at 11 and 12, the moving picture committee at 12:30. At 12:30 o'clock a war memorials extension luncheon will be given, when Dr. Copeland Smith will address the meeting.

On Wednesday the art and literature department will hold a business meeting at 10:30 and the three French classes will meet at the usual hours that day. On Thursday the English study class will meet at 10:30 and at the same hour there will be an annual meeting of the Park Ridge School for Girls committee, and at 12:30 the city beautiful committee will give a luncheon, to which prominent citizens have been invited. On Friday the current events class will meet at 10:30 and at 6:30 o'clock the Chicago Heart association will give a dinner, when the problems of exercises for children with heart disease will be discussed.

Club Ethics . . . . By Maude Swalm Evans

"I GET so mad at myself that I could say things that wouldn't sound a bit ladylike if I hadn't been taught in my childhood that it wasn't nice," stormed the high-strung member as she flung her handbag on the club lunch table and herself into a chair.

"What terrible thing have you been doing now?" inquired the mild member.

"I've made up my mind over and over again that when I meet Mrs. Rand, no matter what she says, I'll treat her courteously, and here I've gone and lost my fool head again."

"And the circumstances?" persisted the mild one.

"O, yes, she was panning our president for not letting her talk at our special meeting on a matter that had nothing whatever to do with the question under discussion, and I was cross with her."

"She would irritate all kinds of a saint," interposed the matter-of-fact member.

"No, that doesn't excuse me," held out the high-strung member. "It wasn't so much what I said, but the fact that I was just boiling inside. Now, if I'd been born with a disposition like some people," she added, looking meaningly at the mild member, "I wouldn't always have to fight to make myself treat people decently."

The mild member laughed.

"That sounds good," she said, "but you don't know half of it. I may be slow to get riled up, but when I do I hang on like a puppy to a root. I scold myself and reason with myself, but myself goes shamelessly on until she gets good and ready to stop. So fight on, sister. You aren't the only one."

"I guess we all have our own little set-tos with ourselves, about one thing or another," decided the matter of fact member. "If it isn't Mrs. Rand who bothers us it's some one else, or something else. It may seem hard to have to fight such impulses, but it would be deadly if we didn't."

"That's so," agreed the mild one. "I've a notion that the desire to fight them down is a sign of vigor, and life, and progress."

The Question.

"There's a by-law in our club stating that a member who has charge of a program and fails to arrange for it must pay a fine of $3. I didn't know about the by-law and I got the date for my program mixed and didn't arrange for it—was out of town, in fact. What do you think I should do?— Anna P. M."

Reply.

Pay your fine. Read your by-laws.

St. Moritz Attracts Lovers of Sports

By May Birkhead.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—It may be said that the Chicago party led the way to what has turned out to be the most popular winter resort. The Chatfield Taylors and their friends chartered a special coach some weeks ago to enjoy the sport at St. Moritz. This always much frequented spot now is thronged with ever increasing numbers of skaters and skiers.

One important factor in the unusually early vogue of St. Moritz is the presence of the king and queen of Belgium. The queen participates with other women in coasting down the long Cresta run, where the spills are frequent unless the driver is skillful and the passengers steady. Lady Ribblesdale, first wife of the late John Jacob Astor, like Queen Elizabeth, usually lies flat on her stomach to take this exciting sport.

Prolong Their Stay.

The Chatfield Taylors, whose group includes Mrs. Byron Harvey and her son, and Mr. and Mrs. James Simpson, are prolonging their stay, while Mrs. Chatfield Taylor's mother, Mrs. George Blow, is returning to Paris.

Many Americans returning recently to Europe via the Mauretania had their skis ready for St. Moritz, where the climate this year is unusually favorable. The English find it a popular spot for the Christmas holidays. One British notable always seen is Lord Northesk, who is an active athlete. He married Jessica Brown, the American actress, five years ago. She did not accompany him this year She is remaining in Paris pending the completion of a divorce. Princess Viora, the former Mrs. Frank Gould, participates in the bobsled tournaments and is a frequent winner.

Among the Chicagoans at the Carlton hotel at St. Moritz are Mrs. William Bruyn ReQua and her daughter, Eloise. They plan as soon as the ending of the season, about the middle of January, to take a tour of three weeks through Switzerland, Germany, and Italy and then proceed to Cannes for the height of the Riviera season. They also are considering a brief north African trip, following a sojourn along La Corniche.

Helen Rend Composes Ballet.

Helen Rend, who has been studying musical composition with an eminent Roumanian composer in Paris, left on the steamer Macedonia with her parents and young sister for Bombay and a trip around the world. She completed her musical studies here by composing a ballet which gives promise. The Rend party will return to Chicago in March.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Woolf just arrived on the Mauretania and spent several days in the Hotel du Rhin, then left for Egypt via Rome. Mrs. Wilhelmine Rogers and her son also arrived on the Mauretania and will spend four months in Paris. They are living in the Hotel de France et Choiseul.

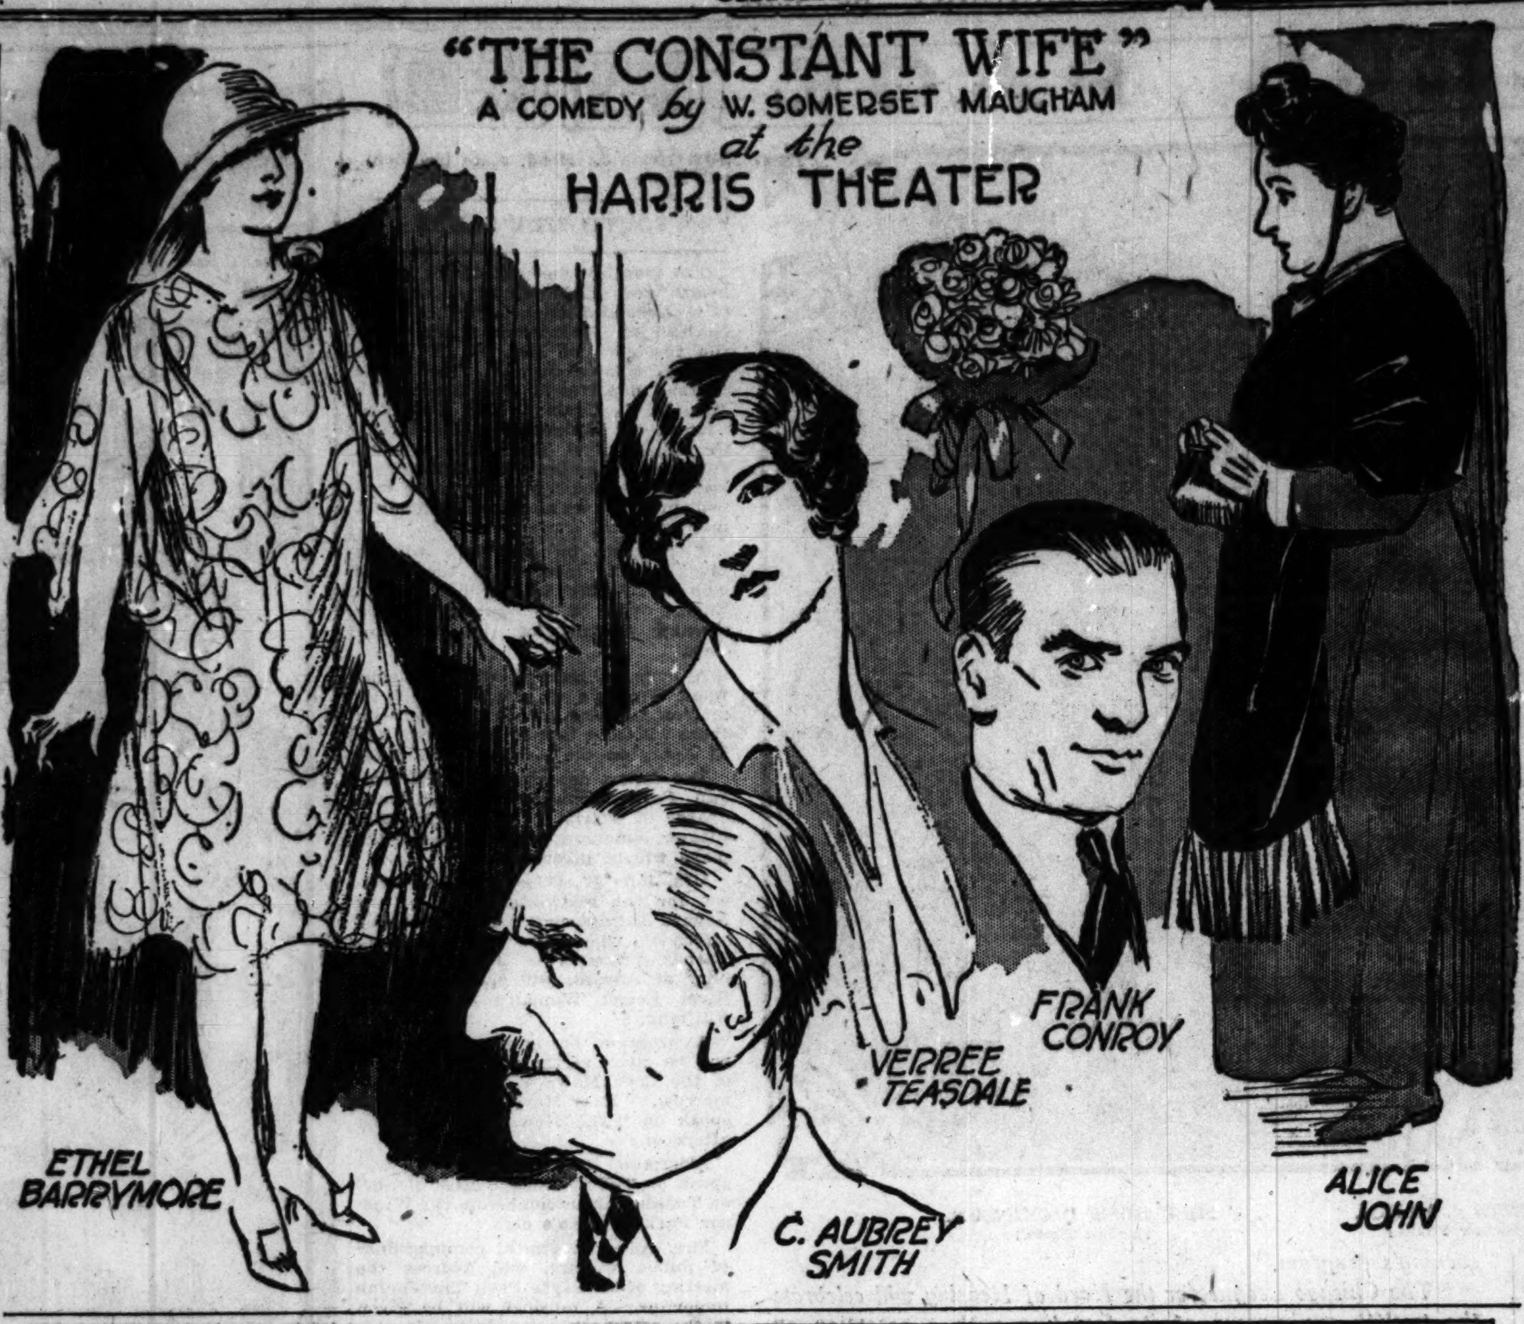
Portrait Attracts Attention.

The portrait of Mary McCormic done by the American painter, Albert Gihon, is attracting attention at Knoedler's gallery. The singer just sailed for a concert tour in America after a successful season in the Paris opera. She will return to France in April and go to South America in June.

Mr. and Mrs. Augustus F. Hartigan are among the most recent arrivals from Chicago. After a few days in Paris they will leave for a three weeks' tour of Spain and then will return to France, to Grenoble, where their son Arnold is entering the university.



NEWS OF NEW YORK SOCIETY

Rumor Again Stalks Rhinelander Clan

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—[Special Correspondence.]—Pity the poor Rhinelander family. After all the horrible times they've had with Kip and his marriage to the dusky Alice Jones of New Rochelle, N. Y., they shun public notice as a burnt child shuns the fire.

Ages and ages ago, before Kip was more than a bespectacled lad playing around with the rest of the blue blooded boys of K company of the 7th regiment, the crack infantry regiment of New York, his sister, Adelaide, up and married an inconspicuous Brooklyn boy.

His name was Julian St. Charles Shackno, and socially he was no great shakes. In fact, we had not even heard of him, except that he was a good looking fellow with nice manners and was much to be seen about the Plaza at tea time, where, in those days, all the younger set congregated.

Addie was one of the most popular members of the débutante horde, and when she insisted that she was going to marry Julian, family or no family, the Rhinelanders decided it would be best to let her have her own way. So Adelaide Kip Rhinelander, descendant of several of New York's oldest families, married the man of her choice and all was well.

Yet the Rhinelanders, having permitted Adelaide to marry Julian, decided that society should be induced to forget his plebeian origin. To that extent they encouraged the young people to migrate to Paris, and once there, Julian was got to change his name from Julian St. Charles Shackno to Julien St. Charles Chacqueneau. Who, thought the Rhinelanders, would ever recognize under that patrician sounding name the Brooklyn Mr. Shackno? And, besides, it was not as if they'd really changed the name. No, indeedy, all they'd changed was the spelling. The sound was unchanged.

Still it soon became report that the Chacqueneaus weren't going so well domestically and that Adelaide was to get her freedom. The report passed into oblivion, as such rumors will, only to be revived periodically when Mrs. Chaqueneau arrived in town each winter to spend a few weeks with her family.

Rumor Is Active Again.

This winter Mrs. Chacqueneau arrived as usual, to stay with her father at the latter's home at 18 West 48th street. No one thought anything of the fact that she arrived alone, since her husband has never accompanied her on the winter visits.

Some weeks back Mrs. Chacqueneau and her father sailed for Paris. And then—most startling—they came back again. Now all Park avenue is agog with the report that she is to get her freedom, but not, mind you, in Paris—here in New York state. Of course, the last thing the Rhinelanders desire is that the news be bruited about, and they are doing everything possible to keep the facts of the matter out of print. After what happened in the case of Kip Rhinelander no one has anything but sympathy for Mr. Rhinelander in his desire to save the family from further notoriety.

Audrey Joel Married.

The continued mildness of the weather is keeping the Palm Beach migration within decent limits. Still, there is no end of shopping going on in preparation for the Florida season, and as soon as the late January events are over and done with the town will be quite deserted socially.

However, there is activity enough, just now. Wednesday saw a pretty wedding and an unusually pretty bride, when Audrey Joel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Joel, became the bride of Clifford Vail Brokaw Jr. in the chantry of St. Thomas' church.

The wedding was necessarily a quiet affair, since Audrey's mother, who was hurt in a motor accident last summer, remains an invalid still. Therefore, only close friends of the immediate members of the two families were invited to the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Harold Gibbs, assistant rector of St. Thomas'. The reception followed at Sherry's.

Ice Carnival Gay Event.

But the chief dish of the week was the ice carnival at Madison Square Garden given in aid of the New York Music Week association and entitled: "A Night in St. Moritz."

It was that and lots more. For a good four hours all sorts of spectacles held forth on the ice of the famous sports edifice. Society turned out in force, both taking part in the pageantry and sitting about, looking on.

Reindeer drawn sleds laden with refreshments toured the rink, serving the notables who had tables on the ice, while through the boxes and the arena seats went the horde of debs, laden with trays of food to serve the audience.

The pageant of the Court of Catherine the Great featured Irving Brokaw, society's best skater, as John Paul Jones, the American naval hero, who was created a Russian admiral by the empress. Princess George Matchabelli took the part of Catharine and her court was composed of many notables.

Then there were hockey matches, skating competitions, a Follies revue, and much more to bewilder the eye. But the reindeers drew great applause. They turned out to be not real, but débutantes in costume and on skates, including France Ottley, Louise Wilson, Barbara Hall, Cornelia Kelly, Maud Pool, Doris Borden, and Maude Merriam.

Among the boxholders were Cornelius N. Bliss, Mrs. E. F. Hutton. Harry Harkness Flagler, Mrs. Arthur H. Claflin, Amory L. Haskell, Mrs Charles E. F. McCann, Mrs. Rembrandt Peale Jr., Mrs. Henry P. Davison, Mrs. Grosvenor Atterbury, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Brokaw, Prof. Fairfield Osborn, Mrs. Henry H. Rogers, Mrs. Morris De Puyster, and Mr. and Mrs. Delos A. Blodgett II.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Congregationalist Leaders Meet Here

Other news of churches will be found on the following page.

By The Rev. W. B. Norton.

OFFICIAL leaders of Congregationalism will be in Chicago for five days. Many of the Congregational pulpits will be occupied by them today. Headquarters will be at the Cooper-Carlton hotel. The Rev. Charles Emerson Burton, D. D., New York City, general secretary of the National Council of the Congregational Churches, will preach at the hotel this afternoon at the opening service of worship. The Rev. E. R. Stearns, New Hampshire, will have charge of the service.

The chaplain for daily devotional services will be the Rev. Harley H. Gill, First Congregational church, Sacramento, Cal. One-third of both the officers and members will be women. The Rev. Mrs. Helen Street Ranney, a fully ordained Congregational minister, is to remain in Chicago at Congregational headquarters, 19 South La Salle street, as joint regional secretary with the Rev. Howell D. Davies, to promote interest in missions, home and foreign, in nineteen states extending from Ohio to Montana and south to Texas.

Equal opportunity for women to participate in all phases of church life has only recently been adopted as a policy of the Congregational churches. They now have eighty-five ordained women in their ministry. Dr. Charles C. Merrill of Chicago will lead the discussion on the plan of promotion.

The Congregational Ministers' union will be addressed tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock at 19 South La Salle street by Bishop Francis J. McConnell of the Pittsburgh area of the Methodist Episcopal church. Bishop McConnell will also address the Congregational club at the La Salle hotel in the evening.

One of the chief events in the Congregational visitation this week will be the dedication of the First Congregational church of Glen Ellyn, Ill., of which the Rev. O. L. Kiplinger is pastor. The church plant has cost $815,000 and is complete with pipe organ, classrooms, gymnasium, social hall with stage for dramatics, men's clubroom, and ladies' parlor.

Dr. William Horace Day will preach this morning at 11 o'clock. At 3:30 p. m. the dedication will take place with an address by the Rev. Ernest Graham Guthrie, D. D., director Chicago Congregational Missionary and Extension society.

Tomorrow at 8 p. m. there will be the dedication of the organ, with Dr. J. Lewis Browne as organist and Mabel Sharpe Herdien as soloist. No admission will be charged. On Wednesday evening there will be communion service and reception of members; Friday evening, community service with several speakers. Next Sunday President Ozora S. Davis and Dr. Charles S. Mills of New York will be the speakers.

Harold Gray, the cartoonist of Orphan Annie, which appears daily in THE TRIBUNE, will be the attraction, drawing cartoons, at the meeting of the Men's club in the Glen Ellyn Methodist Episcopal church on Tuesday evening. The program will also include motion pictures.

Bishop Philaretos of the Greek Orthodox church will be the principal speaker at the meeting of the Catholic Club of Chicago, Tuesday, at the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer, 56th street and Blackstone avenue. Dr. John Henry Hopkins, rector, will also speak and have charge of the services preceding, and dinner will be served at 6:30 in the parish house.

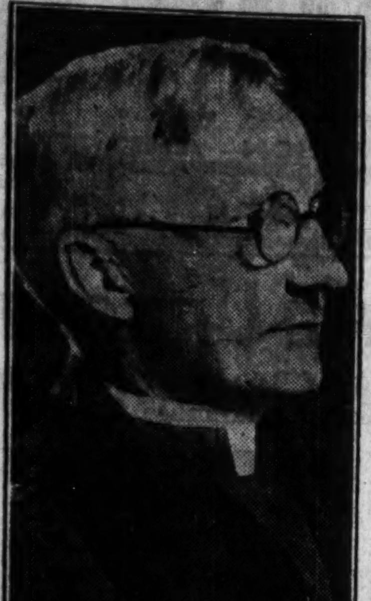
The religious editorial in today's TRIBUNE is by His Eminence George Cardinal Mundelein. It is entitled, "Letters of a Bishop to His Flock." It gives a glimpse of some of the utterances of his eminence on important subjects affecting the church and state.



THE REV. WILLIAM HORACE DAY, D. D.

The Rev. William Horace Day, D. D., is pastor of the United Congregational church, Bridgeport, Conn., and president of the recently merged Congregational home boards. He will preside at the annual national conference of Congregational executive boards and officers, which begins today at the Cooper-Carlton hotel, Chicago. The conference will continue through Thursday.

Dr. Day will preach this morning at 11 o'clock at the first service of dedication week at the First Congregational church of Glen Ellyn, Ill. Dr. Day is a former moderator of the National Council of the Congregational Churches and was a delegate to the World Conference on Faith and Order at Lausanne, Switzerland, last August. He went to Bridgeport more than ten years ago to become the first pastor of the United church, resulting from the merger of the First and Second Congregational churches. The membership of the church is 1,850 and has a new building costing more than a half million dollars.

Dr. Day graduated from the Chicago Theological seminary in 1892. He served here as assistant pastor of the New England Congregational church for three years and then studied two years in England and Germany on a traveling fellowship awarded by the University of Chicago. He was pastor of the First Congregational church of Aurora, Ill., 1896 to 1900.

He then went to the First Congregational church of Los Angeles, where he served until he went to his present pastorate. While in Los Angeles he was associated in the pastorate with his father until his father's death in 1913, one of the few cases where father and son have occupied the same pulpit.

The Good Shepherd Lutheran Congregation in Maywood, Ill., will dedicate today with three services the chapel of the Good Shepherd, the first unit of a church group. The Rev. Luther Schuessler, whose father is the Rev. G. Schuessler, pastor of the important Church of the Redeemer of Chicago, is the pastor. The elder Schuessler will preach the dedicatory sermon at 10:45 a. m. At 3 p. m. the Rev. J. M. Bailey of Chicago will speak. The Harmony Male chorus of Oak Park will sing. At 7:45 p. m. the Rev. E. F. Haertel of Austin will preach and the Redeemer church choir of Chicago will sing.

On Tuesday evening there will be a dedicatory service for the children, Prof. P. Bretscher preaching, and St. Paul's school of Melrose Park furnishing the music. Thursday evening there will be a banquet.

Next Sunday morning the pastor will preach and in the evening the cantata, "Ruth," will be given by Christ Lutheran church of Austin. The chapel has cost $30,000.

CHURCH NEWS

Other news of churches will be found on the preceding page.

The First Swedish Methodist Episcopal church, Highland avenue and Paulina street, is celebrating this week its seventy-fifth anniversary. Dr. Ole E. Olson is pastor. The first meeting was held Friday evening with Dr. C. G. Wallenius, president of Wesley Academic and Theological seminary, Evanston, as the principal speaker. This morning Dr. C. G. Nelson, Stillwater, Minn., pastor of First church 37 years ago, will preach. At 3 p. m. there will be a homecoming program. At 7:45 p. m. the Rev. Carl J. Erickson, Auburn Park Methodist Episcopal church and former pastor of First church, will preach.

Tuesday evening the speakers will be the Rev. T. J. Westerburg, Austin, and the Rev. Olaf Johnson, superintendent of the Galesburg district. Wednesday evening the Rev. Fred Stromberg; Thursday evening a service in Swedish; Friday evening Miss Mary Ross Potter, Northwestern university; a jubilee banquet on Tuesday evening, Jan. 24, at which Dr. Wallenius will speak, are additional features.

The Holy Name Technical school, referred to in another paragraph, is regarded by His Eminence Cardinal Mundelein, Bishop E. F. Hoban and other Catholic leaders of the diocese as the most important undertaking ever assumed by the Holy Name society. A site of 150 acres has already been secured and the maintenance of the school, after the building is erected, will be the work of the salvage bureau, which is extending itself to all parts of the city and utilizing waste material which is being donated for that purpose. It is the intention of his eminence to care for boys who need the help of the church without having them committed to the school by the Juvenile court or any other civil authority. The Big Brothers of the Holy Name society are pledged to look after individual boys and hold them to the church and to an upright life, as well as to give them a technical education by which they may earn a living. The school is to be erected by contributions from the membership of the Holy Name society.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of the Chicago area of the Methodist Episcopal church will preach at the Chicago temple this evening at 8 o'clock under the auspices of the Chicago Temple Men's club. His subject will be "A Message for Young Men." Arthur Dunham will give an organ recital at 7:45 preceding the service.

Bishop Hughes will also speak at the Methodist Preachers' meeting in the Chicago Temple tomorrow morning at 10:45 on the subject, "The Periods of the Ministry."

The Rev. Duncan C. Milner, D. D., formerly associate minister of the Ravenswood Presbyterian church and for many years a leading figure in Presbyterian church circles and in reform and patriotic movements in Chicago, has taken up a permanent residence in Mount Dora, Fla. Dr. Milner is the author of a book entitled "Lincoln and Liquor," in which he shows Abraham Lincoln as an advocate of total abstinence and legal prohibition.

Mrs. John W. O'Leary, 4331 Drexel boulevard, will entertain the Agard Aid association Wednesday at 2 p. m. The River Forest Woman's Club chorus will sing and Miss Bertha A. Barber, principal Jennings seminary, Aurora, Ill., will speak.

The speaker at the Sunday Evening club at 8 o'clock this evening in Orchestra hall will be Dr. Alfred E. Stearns, for 24 years principal of Phillips Andover academy, Andover, Mass., on the subject, "A Fighting Faith." Dr. Stearns is one of the annual preachers at the club and is an expert on youth problems. Mr. Bernard E. Sunny of the Illinois Bell Telephone company, a trustee, will take part in the service as well as Dr. Frank G. Ward of the Chicago Theological seminary. Clifford W. Barnes will preside and will speak at 7 o'clock on "The Story of Conscience."

Dr. Stearns will preach this morning at Kenwood church, 46th street and Greenwood avenue, at 11 o'clock.

The Drexel Park Presbyterian church, 64th street and Marshfield avenue, will hold a special service tonight to study the prohibition question in its progress and failures of the last eight years. The Rev. C. C. Cox is the pastor. Thomas Briggs will give two readings.

An all-Bach program will be given this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Sunday Afternoon club in the First Methodist Episcopal church, Hinman avenue and Lake street, Evanston, Ill. William Boeppler will be the conductor; Mrs. Alvena Ressegule, contralto soloist; Edwin Stanley Seder, organist; Theodore Lams, pianist. The solo chorus of the Chicago Bach chorus will give a complete program. The Rev. Paul Sauer will make an address.

The request has been made by Bishop Thomas Nicholson, president of the Anti-Saloon League of America, that all ministers preach today on the enforcement of the prohibition law, reading a part of President Coolidge's message to congress on enforcement. Tomorrow morning the various ministers' meetings are expected to take action on the subject. In New York City a union ministers' meeting will be held, the address being on the eighteenth amendment. Tomorrow is the eighth anniversary of the eighteenth amendment.

The Very Rev. William Pence James, dean of the Episcopal cathedral of St. John, Quincy, Ill., will be the special preacher at 11 o'clock today at Cathedral Shelter, Peoria street and Washington boulevard.

Bishop E. F. Hoban, general spiritual director of the Chicago Holy Name society, has called every branch president and secretary of the society to meet at the Quigley Preparatory seminary Wednesday at 8 p. m. Details of the program for raising funds for the Holy Name Technical school will be discussed.

In connection with the dedication of the new organ of the Episcopal church of the Ascension, northeast corner of Elm and La Salle streets, there will be solemn high mass this morning, Missa Marialis-Plain Song, and this evening solemn evensong and benediction, the combined choirs of St. Peter's and the Church of the Ascension taking part. Tuesday evening there will be a dedicatory recital by William H. Barnes; Thursday evening a festival service of the American Guild of Organists, and on Friday evening a recital by Lester W. Groom.

The Rev. Harold Brown Hoag will preach his final sermon today as rector of St. Michael and All Angels' Episcopal church, Berwyn. He becomes chaplain of Racine college, Racine, Wis., and associate rector of St. Luke's church of that city.

Encouragement has been given to the campaign for raising $35,000 among Episcopal churches of Chicago, beginning today, for the erection of a Chicago building at St. Paul's school for the education of Negroes at Lawrenceville, Va., by the announcement that Julius Rosenwald has contributed $20,000 toward the fund.

The young people of the Evangelical Synod of Chicago and vicinity will hold a fellowship dinner tomorrow evening at St. Peter's Evangelical church, Oakley boulevard and Cortez street. Prof. Karl H. Carlson of Elmhurst college will speak and the Elmhurst college quartet will sing.

Miss C. Delano, Washington, writes:—"About two years ago I was bothered a great deal with a muddy, sallow and pimply skin. I found I could cover the blemishes with cosmetics, but this was only a temporary relief. My druggist recommended your purely vegetable laxative, and suggested my trouble might be constipation. After taking a short while I noticed a wonderful difference. My complexion has improved, also headaches, indigestion and biliousness never bothered me any more."

Youth Returns— on "Isle of June"

The world's best connoisseurs of Playgrounds have chosen Nassau as the Paradise of Play. Quaint, lovely and unspoiled, "Isle of June" awaits your coming: music in golden sunlight, music in silver night, on cay-reefs where surf thunders wild symhonies to eerie cries of sea-birds, in palms when, with rustle of silk, scented winds play invisible harps. Come down to laughter and youth in old Nassau!

Hotels perfect as hotels can be; fishing and golf links unexcelled. Down to the sea with happy laughter troop the bathers, where booms the surf on coral sands sugary fine.

Private Showing Is Given Old Masters

PALM BEACH, Fla.—[Special Correspondence.] — An interesting event of the week was the opening of an exhibition of twenty-four old masters of the English, Italian, Spanish, and Flemish schools of the 15th to early 19th centuries.

The exhibition in the galleries of Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. G. Clark, in the Wyeth building, was opened with a private showing for members of the Friends of the Arts and Crafts, who are sponsoring a series of four exhibitions during the season.

The opening dinner-dance at White Hall will be held on Saturday evening, when the muleteer grill of the Alba hotel will also be opened for the season.

Chicagoans Arrive.

Mrs. David A. Noyes of Chicago has arrived at her Sea Spray avenue villa, where Mr. Noyes will join her this week.

Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin has taken an apartment in Palm Beach for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Phillips Sedgwick of Highland Park, who are occupying their new winter home, Villa Muriel, have with them for the season their daughters, Mrs. Norman E. Bengston and Mrs. J. A. Decelle, and Mr. Sedgwick's sister, Miss Lucy Sedgwick. Mr. Bengston and Robert Sedgwick will come to Palm Beach later. Miss Betty Sedgwick, another daughter, has returned to Mount Holyoke college, where she is a student.

Home Remodeled.

Mrs. Franklin P. Smith and Miss Daisiana Smith will arrive on Tuesday at their ocean front home, which has been completely remodeled since last season.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander H. Revell have arrived at the Everglades club, where the first of the Sunday and Thursday evening dinner dances will be held tonight.

Mr. and Mrs. Wiley R. Reynolds of Jackson, Mich., have opened their ocean boulevard home. Mrs. Reynolds' sister, Mrs. Hood Bassett, is a season guest at the Breakers hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Jelke Jr. of Lake Forest have arrived to spend the season at La Torre Biaca, the winter home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Odman of Philadelphia, which they have leased.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth G. Smith of Chicago, who spent a few days at the Breakers hotel, have moved to a house in Australian avenue, which they have rented for the season. Mrs. Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Clements, are their guests.

At the Breakers.

Arrivals at the Breakers hotel include Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Stanton of Winnetka, Capt. and Mrs. C. A. Parliament, W. C. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Milton G. Florsheim of Chicago, who are season guests.

Mrs. W. David Owen of Lake Forest has arrived at Eastways, the Brazilian avenue cottage she has leased. With her for the season are Mrs. Gretchen Vanzandt Merrill of Boston and Miss Louise Metcalfe of Natchez, Miss., who motored from Jacksonville with Mrs. Owen.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McLennan, who are occupying a villa in the Lake trail, entertained a Christmas house party. Mrs. Philip Foley of St. Paul is remaining with them for an extended visit.

Stotesbury's in Residence.

Edward T. Stotesbury of Philadelphia has recently joined Mrs. Stotesbury at El Mirasol, their Ocean boulevard estate.

A number of the Chicago colony were guests at a luncheon given by Mrs. Stotesbury for Mrs. Charles B. Wright, a guest at the Breakers hotel. Among the thirty-five people were: Mrs. George A. McKinlock, Mrs. Lucius P. Ordway, Lady Maud Warrender, Miss Marcia Van Dresser, the Hon. Mrs. Frederick E. Guest and her guest, Mrs. Frissel, and Mrs. Marion Sims Wyeth.

Lt. Col. and Mrs. Eben Pike (Olive Snell, artist) of London have arrived at White hall.

A dinner will be given this evening at the Standard club for Mrs. Hannah G. Solomon, at whose seventieth birthday last week the Chicago Sinai Temple sisterhood fund was established. Mrs. Solomon will speak on Tuesday at the Chicago Woman's club on "Movie Censorship."

The department of American citizenship of the South Side Catholic Woman's club will have charge of the meeting on Thursday afternoon. A musical program will be given later.

WEST SIDE CLUBS

There will be a meeting of the Eighth district, I. F. W. C., on Wednesday at 1:30 o'clock at Bowen hall, with the Hull House Woman's club as hostess.

The art department of the Millard Avenue Woman's club will give the program at the meeting on Friday afternoon.

The life of Sir Edwin Arnold will be the subject of the meeting of the West End Woman's club on Friday afternoon.

Reciprocity day will be observed at the meeting of the Austin Woman's club tomorrow afternoon. A business session will precede the meeting.

Mrs. William H. Lewis will be hostess on Friday afternoon for a meeting of the music and literature department of the West End Catholic Woman's club.

A musical program will be given at the meeting of the Institute Woman's club on Wednesday afternoon at 1243 North Wood street.

The woman's auxiliary of St. Anne's hospital will give the first card party of the new year on Thursday afternoon at 4902 Jackson boulevard, the proceeds to go toward the building fund. Mrs. S. Chapsky is in charge of arrangements.

SUBURBAN CLUBS

Mrs. George Bass and Mrs. Frederick A. Dow will discuss "How Much Is Your Vote Worth?" on Tuesday afternoon before the civics department of the La Grange Woman's club.

1928-29 ANNOUNCEMENT!

NEXT WINTER'S ROUND-THE-

WORLD CRUISE

from New York . . . Dec. 1 . . . 136 Days. Booking list now officially open. The 6th annual Round-the-World Cruise by world's greatest travel system. Empress of Australia, 21,850 gross-tons. . . . . . Cruise-wise people know the advantage in choosing space in these early days.

• • • •

This cruise is the complete circuit of the wonder-belt of the world — Its route and arrangements perfected through five previous successes. Next winter . . . extra days, making 136 in all; extra countries, notably Siam . . . Outstanding features of former years retained; Christmas in Holy Land, New Year's in Cairo, India in January, plum-blossom time in Japan. Remember Canadian Pacific's record . . . never a port omitted, never a call cancelled. Cruise staff with five years' on-the-ground experience. Resident agents in principal ports. Official connections, such as Agent in North America for State Railways of India. One management, ship and shore, backed by the power and prestige of the world's greatest travel system. And remember the Empress of Australia, a joy to those who love luxurious suites . . . large, airy rooms . . . wide-spreading lounges . . . and the newest ideas in shipboard equipment.

San Antonio

Every Day an Outdoor Play Day!

Come on ‧ ‧ say "good-bye" to freezing winter with its biting winds and gloomy skies ‧ ‧ and come to San Antonio, the land of sunshine and joy ‧ ‧ where the mild climate and warm, dry, invigorating air make every day an outdoor play day.

Here, amid the unique combination of Old-World romance and New-World progress, you can enjoy a winter vacation that is different ‧ ‧ more interesting ‧ ‧ more enjoyable than you have ever before known.

Each day offers a wide variety of new, novel and delightful things to see and do. Historical spots to visit ‧ ‧ old quarters to explore ‧ ‧ sporty golf courses that will test your skill ‧ ‧ fine hunting and fishing at neighboring lakes ‧ ‧ and if you like to hike, ride or motor, you will find wonderful roads and endless vistas of alluring sights and scenes.

Plan now to come to San Antonio. You will like its congenial social atmosphere, reflecting the spirit of true Southern hospitality.

Reduced fares via the Katy (Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad), and San Antonio's ample accommodations at reasonable rates make this a vacation moderate in cost. Learn more about San Antonio. Send coupon below or write

Intimate Bits Concerning Busy Chicagoans, North, South, and West Siders

By Edward Burns.

ART LUEDER, the w. k. postmaster, says he has run his business up higher than ever. Well, competition isn't so strong in his line.

Many business men on the near west side have become volleyball bugs. T. I. Foster, box manufacturer, of 1553 West Madison, has become so pleased with progress that he's booked a game for Tuesday night in Elgin with a team of Kane county men.

Lou Barbour Sr., 8053 South Throop street, is a water widower. Mrs. Elsa is a member of the Sinai swimming team and Lou Jr. is an aquatic star at Englewood High. Mother and son plunge almost every night, but pap is afraid to get into even the family tub without water wings.

Charles Ehegartner, the big fish and lobster man of 4021 Broadway, plans to close his pinochle season early and go to New Orleans. "If the railroads don't get the money the doctors and pinochlers will," says Mrs. E.

Mrs. Mabel Lunde, 3467 West Madison street, who was hit by an auto as she alighted from a taxicab on New Year's eve, was able to return to her shop several days ago.

William L. O'Day, 4008 Washington boulevard, the distinguished private detective, has a new wrinkle for trying out applicants for sleuthing jobs. He sends them over the west park system to see if they can find an intersection with no stop light.

Sergts. William Shanley and William O'Donnell of the East Chicago avenue station are involved in the Kegel-Bundesen controversy. Shanley has a four months old offspring he's training under Bundesen rules, while O'Donnell, whose baby also is four months, has switched to the advice of a motorman, father of eleven.

John Hertz's polo ponies are not getting the winter lay-off enjoyed by Reigh Count, Anita Peabody, et al. Mr. Hertz shipped his entire stable of polo performers to Miami, Fla., last Wednesday.

Our Mayor Bill Thompson says the best old sea chanty he has heard in years was "Gumbo Sal" on board the schooner Elsa at the Boston Tea wharf. Get him to sing it for you.

Ald. Donald F. McKinley of the 11th ward and some of his south side colleagues are all steamed up over the idea that their section of town is not going to cut in adequately on the $100,000,000 about to be spent for city improvements.

Rob Crowe, the king's counsel, so to speak, says h—l can't be such a mean place when you've got a cold like his'n. That's a harsh thought for the curly-headed lad whose picture you see above this item, but the lad is the same Rob. He looked like that when he was 3 years old.

DR. O. G. WERNICKE, 3532 West Adams street, who, unlike Achilles, found his heel his most vulnerable spot, after he had broken it four months ago, is able to be out again despite the fact that broken heels usually rate from one to two years' confinement.

Smiling George Eldridge, 555 North Austin boulevard, an invalid for five years and destined to spend his life in bed, is apace with the revived popularity of "hooked" rugs. Mr. Eldridge last Tuesday completed the weaving of his fifty-ninth rug.

Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom has been invited to speak at the dinner-dance to be given next Thursday evening by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce at the Swedish clubhouse, 73d street and Cregier avenue. The affairs is in honor of newly elected officers of the chamber.

MASTER IN CHANCERY JAMES J. KELLY, 6859 Jeffery avenue, sister, Miss Nona Kelly, and niece, Miss Gertrude Kelly, have left for a four months' visit on the west coast.

Frank P. Ross, 531 North East avenue, Oak Park, who made his several millions in a score or more different manufacturing enterprises, is just plain "capitalist" now. He sold his last factory interest, a soap works in Dayton, O., last week.

Congressman M. A. Michaelson has been in Havana relaxing a bit. Whether Congressman Michaelson is on a business mission is not known, nor is it known whether he has been picking the winners consistently at Oriental park.

A prohibition agent, getting measured for a snappy set of patent teeth, confided to Dr. Lewis A. Dyer, Ashland and Madison, that "most prohibition agents now are starving to death. Joke on Doc: He thought the agent was talking about food shortage.

Col. Matt Winn, the famed public benefactor, has just returned from a visit to New York, where he entreated leading hoss men to do right by our village by not keeping all the good nags in the east, come this summer.

Mrs. Wendell Hall and Miss Flora Martin, 4351 North Paulina street, who last week organized the Ravenswood Rotund Ladies' Walking society, have dissolved the organization after one meeting. The abandonment was caused by "fretting dogs."

Some of this town's most eloquent orators are billed to say a few kind words at the opening of the handsome new Chelten theater, 79th street and Exchange avenue, next Friday evening. There also will be a comedy and other things for those who don't care for speeches.

Friends gave Henry Busche, 100 Washington boulevard, Oak Park, a jade cage for his canary. Mrs. B. was a bit miffed when Henry required her to postpone entertainment of her club until he had the front room done over in green to harmonize with the cage.

Honest John Alger, 1523 Dearborn parkway, has announced that he positively is not a candidate for the United States senate, no matter what final action may be taken in the case of Frank Smith, senator elect.

SIGN UP FOR SAFETY.

HOLY NAME

Chicago's board of education is enrolling practically all the city's school children in a safety league to help cut down the number of traffic accidents. The camera shows the pupils at Holy Name Cathedral school enrolling. Seated are Kenneth Herlihy, Anna Furey, Annabelle LaRue, and Sam Nester. The children standing are Mathew Joyce, Eugene Burns, Harry Van De North, James Lavelle, Bernice Grosch, Margaret Conlon, and Rosemary McManmon. The Rev. Father John Kozlowski and two of the nuns who teach in the school are directing the work.

The family physician has ordered Mrs. Irene Blum, 1101 Independence boulevard, to quit feeding those big medium-rare porterhouses to her husband, Albert, the rubber broker. Mr. Blum has rheumatism and sits and reads the cook book for hours at a time.

U. S. Commissioner Henry C. Beitler, 4641 Dover street, though in a weakened condition from several weeks' illness, appeared in his court Wednesday and bravely listened to bootleggers tell how the whisky found behind their bars was planted there by their mothers-in-law, etc.

Mrs. Gertie Waterfall, who opened a candy store on Randolph street a year and a half ago "to occupy her time," has sold the place and now is spending her spare moments bossing the servants in one of those elegant new residences at Grace and Sheridan.

Principal Benjamin F. Buck of Senn High, 5900 Glenwood avenue, says that response of citizens to the invitation to sign petitions for an addition to the school buildings has exceeded the expectations of persons sponsoring the action.

The Rev. F. E. Davison, pastor of the Austin Boulevard Christian church, after conducting a radio series of religious services at 7:30 mornings, says the response leaves him with no regrets at having got up before daylight each morning during the zero snap.

Eugene Byfield says it ought to be a great season for corned beef and cabbage, what with the Democratic convention here and all.

Mabel G. Reinecke, collector of internal revenue, with income tax scheduling two months away, is organizing for the big panic. Won't she have fun when she gets the schedules of

Patient Politeness Wins $50 for This North Side Woman

Johnsons and Cohens Aid in Tribune Quest

By the Politeness Reporter.

THEY didn't know they were doing it, but seventy-two Samuel Cohens and eighty-six Edward Johnsons—all listed in the Chicago telephone directory—aided THE TRIBUNE'S politeness reporter last Tuesday in his search for the most courteous person he could find in a day's journey on the north side.

At 5 p. m., when the hunt came to a close, there was no doubt in the reporter's mind where he should leave the $50 order that is given each week for super-politeness. The winner was a blonde young woman who is manager of a branch, at 2566 North Clark street, of the American Home Service company, a laundry and dry cleaning concern.

Mrs. Minnie Raschke, branch laundry manager at 2566 North Clark street, who finds that politeness pays.

THE HUNT BEGINS

Just to start the day the reporter stopped in a few places near the Howard street elevated station. He was greeted politely, even warmly, in a bank, a store, and a barber shop. But he couldn't leave the order in any of these, because he was known to those he met, and the rules are that a total stranger must be the recipient.

He wandered west to Clark street and then south, stopping now and then to ask questions. He was answered courteously enough for all ordinary conversation, but not courteously enough for $50.

Near Lunt avenue he came to a little shop, a bright and cheery spot. On the walls and from the ceiling were suspended dozens of little cages. In them were canary birds, singing their joyous songs, and solemn parrots dreaming of tropical jungles. On the floor were stands and tables and on them bowls in which goldfish swam and played little games of their own.

HOT AND COLD

To the rear, in a small room that was barely visible, was an elderly man at work before a carpenter's bench. The reporter went in. The elderly man came out to the front.

"I didn't come to buy," said the searcher for politeness. "I just wanted to learn about the fish and the birds."

The proprietor—it was he—had time for that sort of talk. He took a seat He told of the varieties of canaries, of how the young ones had to be trained by old ones, of the little tropical fish he had raised himself and of how to keep them well and happy in their glass prisons. Here, thought the reporter, was a man who for sheer love of his own business and his politeness to one who wasn't a buyer deserved reward.

Then the door swung open and from the street there came a beggar, a man with a stump of wood where his right leg had been. His hand was out. The canary man shook his head and spoke gruffly:

"Nothing. Too many of you fellows. You ought to work."

GETTING WARMER

And so the reporter left. On the street a minute or two later he met the beggar.

"Have you got a card?" he demanded.

"I don't need none," was the short reply of the beggar; "I'm workin' for myself."

On again went the reporter. He halted a milk wagon when he saw the driver half galloping his horse, protested, and was informed it was none of his business, which it wasn't. By easy stages he went to Devon avenue, meeting courtesy from policemen, from storekeepers, and from passersby. A middle aged lady in a Devon avenue shop looked up in a catalogue the names of the artists who painted a dozen pictures. Fair enough, but it didn't satisfy the reporter.

He rode a surface car to Clark and Wellington. At a corner drug store he purchased a pair of dark green spectacles. A little later he went into a store.

"My eyes are under treatment and I can't read. Will you look up a number in the telephone book for me?" he asked.

The name, he said, was Sam Cohen, on Rush street, but he wasn't sure how it was spelled. The book has seventy-two Sam Cohens listed, but none on Rush street. And under the name Cohen is the cryptic message, in italics, "see also Coan, Coen, Cohan, Cohon, Cohn, Cone, Kohn." In reserve the reporter had the Edward Johnsons, "see also Johnsen, Johnston, Johnstone."

THE HUNT ENDS

Moving southward, he put his request to one after the other. Finally he came to 2566 North Clark street. There at her desk sat Mrs. Minnie Raschke. She said cheerfully that she surely would get the number. She looked up Sam Cohen, "Coan, Coen, Cohan, Cohon, Cohn, Cone, Kohn." Regretfully she said there was no Sam on Rush street.

The reporter suggested that Sam lived with Edward Johnson, but he wasn't sure how to spell that, either. So Mrs. Raschke looked up the Johnsons, the Johnstons, the Johnstones. Still not satisfied, she volunteered the Jonsons, the Jonssens, and even the Johansens.

No Sam, no Edward, and so the reporter went out. He tried a real estate office on Diversey parkway, near Clark, a golf school, near Surf and Broadway, a florist shop in the 3300 block on Broadway. It was no use. Mrs. Raschke had distanced them all by the Johnstons, the Johnstones and the Johansens. It had taken her sixteen and a half minutes, solid, to find out there was no Sam Cohen on Rush street.

So the reporter went back and gave her the $50. It was worth it.

OOMSBURY SHOOTING CASE AT THE CENTRA

with i

One of "Chicago May's" numerous court appearances, as depicted in the London Daily Graphic twenty years ago.

May Churchill, 52, an her prospective briegroom, Netley N. Lucas, 26, British author and criminologist.

Insert, the Queen of the Underworld at the height of her dizzy career.

THE next time Englewood Edna, or the Tiger Lady, or the Baby Bandit takes a curtain call as as something new in lady criminals, with a superlative technique, don't bother to toss too many bouquets.

Just recall the name and fame of "Chicago May." And you'll recollect that, criminally speaking at least, the good olds days were indeed the good old days.

For just as Holinshed's Chronicles furnished the foundation for Shakespeare's historical plays, so is "Chicago May" the source book for the girls who today get their names scratched across the police blotters. Only "Chicago May" made the front page of newspapers oftener than she made the desk sergeant's entry book.

BACK ON PAGE ONE

She was called the world's cleverest woman crook, back when the century was turning. And the distinction was not unmerited.

Recent report that this one-time queen [she's now 52] of beauty, blackmail, and burglary is soon to marry Netley N. Lucas, 26, British author and criminologist, has brought her back to the news columns, where she once figured so prominently.

For in the Chicago world's fair days it was this good looking girl, with the baby stare, the fluffy hair, and the innocent eyes, who was heralded as the country's first shoplifter. A dreamy smile beguiled the salesmen. A voluminous but modish skirt with inside pockets housed the plunder. And enchanting eyes covered the get-away.

THE TRAIL BLAZER

She was really a pioneer in woman's rights in a world of crooks. In Chicago, too, she is credited with having perfected the fainting fit, during the agonies of which she would revive sufficiently to steal watches and scarfpins of the men who were helping her.

In London, later, she went busily along this same highway of invention. It was she, they say, who introduced the camera into the art of blackmail. A confederate, concealed behind the arras, snapped the pictures. And they do say that British barristers, members of parliament, and even a knight or two paid no end of money to gain permanent possession of these photographic plates.

Then there was her hansom cab trick. She dearly loved to lure men into cabs with her. Once in the cab, she always liked to have their arms about her trim waist, her blonde head on their shoulder. This loving position gave her opportunity to bury her lips in his scarf and deftly to bite out the scarfpin. She always, of course, chose a man with a diamond pin, and the diamond was real.

Occasionally her companion called the police. Not often. But there never was evidence, and the prosecution always failed.

LIFE'S UPS AND DOWNS

It was in the spring of 1901 that she started, first up to dazzling splendors of wealth and excitement, and then down to prison sentences. For it was then that she met Eddie Guerin, Chicago's famed "Cockney Eddie," who was later to rob the American Express company in Paris, then to be sent for life to Devil's Island, that direful penal colony in French Guiana which earlier had held Capt. Dreyfus.

She, as an accomplice of Guerin's, was sentenced to five years at the French convent prison at Montpelier, and got out just about the time Guerin made his way to fame and freedom as the first, and some say the only, prisoner ever to escape from Devil's Island.

But more of "Chicago May."

She was born Mary Vechs, the blue-eyed, golden-haired daughter of a German baker on the east side in New York. She soon changed the name to May Vivienne, and her favorite last name was Latimer. But as she went from adventure to adventure she had many others. Some of them were May Fletcher, Katie Fitzgerald, Mary Guerin, and Mary Miller. But "Chicago May" Churchill was the name that lasted.

As a young girl she came to Chicago and put herself through a rigorous apprenticeship as a smart shoplifter before going back to New York for a career as a blackmailer. In New York her sweet face and her large eyes [victims were wont to swear they were hypnotic eyes] won her a place in the "Salvation Army" chorus of a musical revue. It was about this time that she made the acquaintance of a crook called "the king of the badgers."

Tiring, presently, of the gay and uncertain life, she married a man named Sharp. He is supposed to have committed suicide in despair. "Chicago May" went on to London, where she fell in love with a drill master. He was ordered to South Africa, in the Boer war. She tried to follow him as a nurse. Refused permission, she thought of taking her own life. But she didn't.

Instead, she rented a house in Montagu place and began to mystify police and Scotland Yard with her stunts. Her score in blackmail includes one earl, a knight, half a dozen canny barristers, and a number of wealthy clubmen. There was rarely a prosecution; never a conviction. Her camera technique was said to be perfect. Most of her accomplices landed in jail, and she went to Paris for a rest and some new clothes. She came back to a house in Bloomsbury.

EDDIE ENTERS

In the spring of 1901, in the Horseshoe tavern—a rendezvous for crooks and adventurers and Bohemians—situated in Tottenham Court row, she met Eddie Guerin.

Eddie, member of a respectable Chicago family, had left this city when he thought he had killed a detective in a quarrel over a woman. In 1882 he robbed the Mechanics' bank at Galesburg, and escaped. Next he turned up in Pittsburgh, where he robbed a ticket office and was sentenced to the Allegheny City Western penitentiary. He escaped and went over to London. In May, 1889, he went down to Lyons, dressed up in a frock coat and fawn colored gloves, robbed the bank, and was sentenced to ten years at hard labor in the Auvergne mountains. Then back to Chicago, to work on the west side at his trade of a tailor, just about the time "Chicago May" was leaving the city. But the two never met until that night in the Horseshoe tavern. Let Eddie Guerin tell it in his own words:

"There I met a woman; a goddess, I should say.

"Tall and beautifully proportioned, with an abundance of golden hair; the real thing, not the peroxide variety, and a complexion of delicate pink and cream, large blue eyes shaded with long, dark lashes, and a mouth the upper lip of which formed a perfect cupid's bow, while the lower was straight and full and ripe. Such was the vision of loveliness I beheld and instantly coveted."

UNITED

The two former Chicagoans exchanged reminiscences. She said she had reformed. He said he had. He had been serving as an interpreter at the Paris exposition and so, three days later, the two of them went to Paris, as Mr. and Mrs. Brown. Mrs. Brown was "radiant, lovely, elegantly attired, blazing with valuable jewelry."

But they both went to bad luck: he, to a life sentence on Devil's Island; she, to the isolation of a French female prison.

For, in spite of their resolutions of reformation, it wasn't long—April 16—before the American Express company in Paris was robbed of 30,000 francs. A man called "Dutch Gus," whose real name was George Miller, a former sweetheart of "Chicago May," was immediately arrested. Guerin and "Chicago May" took the first train for Calais, hopeful of getting into England. On the train Guerin was arrested. His companion tried to act the grand English lady, but she protested too much, and her haughty ways were overdone. The French detective turned to her and said:

"All right, Chicago May, we know you. It's better you go to London, don't you think, while you are safe?"

SEPARATED

She went to London in safety, but returned for the trial; whether to help Eddie or Dutch Gus no two stories agree. The most romantic version is that she came back to help Eddie, got ensnared, and received her five years' sentence. When she heard his life sentence she is said to have implored the judge to give her a similar one. Anyway, she kissed her hand to the judge as they led her away.

Women interested in her case got her out of jail after she had served three of her five years. She bought some new clothes and sailed down to Brazil, where she caused an English nobleman to fall in love with her and then, distracted at the revelation that she was "Chicago May," to kill himself.

Then back to London and the Horseshoe tavern in the spring of 1906. Guerlin had bribed jailers, wooed a warden's wife, suffered unspeakable privations, had starved and fought and sickened, and finally had made his miraculous way back to Chicago to the home of his sister, 125 St. Louis avenue. But he grew restive and went to Canada, across to England, and back to the tavern.

WHEN LOVE GROWS COLD

Here again the stories differ. He says "Chicago May" had never loved him and wanted revenge for having been sent to jail. Others say she had risked everything for him and now he repudiated her for an Emily Skinner. He says she said: "I'll send you back to Devil's Island to die like a dog." She says she never said it.

"Chicago May" and a new friend, "the man from nowhere," who was in reality a Charles Smith, got him tossed into Brixton jail and held for thirteen months pending extradition fights. He grew suddenly British, swore he had been born in Hoxton, England, and that the only reason he hadn't tried to prove citizenship before was that it would have meant that his aged mother [and he said he was her favorite child] would have been dragged into the controversy. He won his point and was not sent back to France.

But four days after his release from jail a mysterious man shot at him. The bullets merely crippled his foot. "Chicago May" was found hiding down an alley, and Charles Smith had the gun. They were tried.

TRUE CONFESSIONS

And once again, on a hot July morning in 1907, "Chicago May" stood in court, this time in New Baily, and heard a judge pronounce sentence on her. This time it was for fifteen years in prison at Aylesbury, England. But she was still able to smile at the judge. She served ten of the fifteen years and came out, reformed and autobiographical. She began to write her confessions.

But Eddie, too, had written his confessions. As a note to the prospective bridegroom we offer this sentence from Guerin's memoirs:

"O, woman, woman! You have much to answer for. Look at my own case, for instance. Ah, if I had never known Chicago May!"

TWO GOOD LOSERS.

"Sorry, old top, I was going too fast. It was all my fault."

"Nonsense! I should have been looking where I was going. I insist I'm to blame."

"O, very well. But I smashed your mudguard."

"Don't worry about that. It's nothing. But you'll let me pay for the damage I have——"

"Certainly not! Never mention a thing like that or I'll surely lose my temper."

"You insist?"

"Absolutely."

"Well, good luck to you, my friend."

"Same to you. I hope we meet again."—Life.

SNOWSHOE AL'S SAD BOOTLEGGER

Introducing Clarence, Who Sighs and Cries

AL BROMLEY

YESTERDAY morning I decides that it might be a good idea to have a pint bottle of Liquid Lightning around our shack in case of sickness, unexpected company, expected company, or the blues. Therefore I grabs the telephone and calls a certain number.

"Hello," answers the party.

"Hello," says I; "is this Clarence?"

"No," says the voice. "Clarence ain't here no more. He has went away and left no forwarding address."

"This is Al," says I.

"O, hello, Al," says the voice; "this is Clarence."

"Gallop over here with a pint," says I; "and don't add too much Lake Michigan to it! The last bottle I got from you must have contained at least three spoonfuls of booze. You should have stuck one of those 'Shake Well Before Using' labels on it."

"All right," says he; "what brand do you want?"

"I really hadn't given that any thought," says me.

"Well," says Clarence, "I'll bring eight different labels with me, an' in the meantime you can be making up your mind about it."

THREE IN ONE

A half hour later he rang my doorbell. Clarence is an ornery looking hombre what weighs 285 pounds. He's built like a cross between Strangler Lewis and a ferry boat. He has a complexion like a girl—an Indian girl. I wouldn't exactly call him handsome; in fact, his mug always reminds me of a train wreck. He's one of them bozos what cracks cocoanuts between his teeth and swallows billiard balls to relieve a headache. The city ought to hire him, because he would make three good traffic cops. Or, if they could make him promise not to get too rough, they could always send him out alone to quell a riot. He claims that, aided by the rest of the United States army, he won the war.

"Come right in, Clarence," says I, so he parks his carcass on the davenport in the parlor and hands me the pint I ordered.

"I've got another bottle with me for a customer in this neighborhood," says he, "an' he wants quick delivery on it, so I can't sit here very long."

Then he stared out the window and sighed. Clarence has the most odoriferous sigh what ever perfumed the air in a parlor. He has so much booze on his breath that he can murder a canary bird accidentally, just by standing near its cage and gazing at it. Whenever he enters a room the poor little flies fall off the ceiling and do tailspins to the floor. He's already embalmed, but he don't know it.

MATRIMONIAL BLUES

"What are you sighing about?" asks I. "Don't you feel good?"

"I feel blue," says he; "terribly blue! O, dear; O, dear; O, dear! My wife bawled me out this morning. I don't mind being bawled out by the cops and et cetera, but it just busts me all up to have my dear little wife call me names! I'm too tender hearted, that's the trouble. It just makes me feel blue all day."

"Why did she bawl you out?" asks me.

"Because I socked her in the snoot," says Clarence. "O, dear; O, dear! I feel rotten. I wish I had a drink of Funny Fluid."

He gazed longingly at the bottle which I just bought from him. Well, I begins to feel sorry for the poor simp, so I pulls the cork and slips him the Giggle Grease. He took a gulp that damn near wrecked the pint, so I figured I better get my share right away. Therefore, I did a little gulping myself.

"Yup," says Clarence, "I'm too tender hearted, that's the trouble," and he begun wiping big tears from his eyes; "I'm getting bluer an' bluer!"

"Have another shot," says I, passing the bottle back to him. So we finished the pint, and this dumb bimbo got bluer than ever; in fact, his whole framework shook with suppressed sobs. All at once he grabbed the other bottle and started pulling the cork.

"Hold on, Clarence," says I, "you said that bottle is for your other customer in this neighborhood!"

"Aw, to hell with 'im," sobs Clarence; "when I gets the blues, I gets them bad!"

HEART-RENDING

Me, I'm a sympathetic guy, so within another half hour we was both balancing very unsteadily on the edge of a Blue Breakdown. Then my phone rang. It was my wife.

"Listen, Creature," says her to me, "when I left the house this morning I noticed that there was a bunch of little sparrows looking for food in the alley behind our building. I imagine that it's awfully hard for the poor little things to find any food in this cold weather, so why don't you throw them some crumbs the next time you go outside?"

"Yes, Dear," says I, hanging up. The tears was galloping down my face as I told Clarence what she said.

"Aw, the poor little sparrers!" squawks Clarence, sobbing as if his heart was busted. Ah, at last! At last, here was something worth crying about! We sat on the davenport and wept wildly for a half hour. The more we thought about it, the more we cried.

"Could anybody be so cruel as to forget the hungry little birds?" weeps me, going to the bedroom to find another dry handkerchief. I found the handkerchief and part of a bottle of gin which I had forgotten about.

Well, by the time the gin was gone the grief was becoming so terrible that we couldn't stand it any more, so we crawls into our hats and coats, grabs a loaf of bread from my pantry, and goes outside to do a twin act on the Good Samaritan stuff. We couldn't find any sparrows in our alley, so we walked around the block about six times, but there wasn't a sparrow in sight. All the little customers had disappeared.

HIS NOSE KNOWS

"Let's take a taxi an' go looking for 'em," says Clarence, so we falls into a cab and tells the chauffeur to drive around till he sees some sparrows. The driver gives us a nasty look, sniffs the air a couple times in a suspicious manner, and then says:

"Is youse guys got any money?"

"Certainly," snorts Clarence, "we have dozens of money. Giddap!"

"Well," says the Gasoline Bandit, after a couple minutes of hesitation, "all right. Youse sound to me like a couple Flat Tires, but youse smell like a couple millionaires; in fact, your breath comes highly recommended, so I'll take a chance. Let's go!"

We drove three dollars west and two dollars and seventy-five cents north, but we didn't see one damn sparrow. We stopped several times to ask people if there was any in their neighborhood. They all told us "no," but advised us that there was lots of squirrels, and suggested that we drive fast as hell. At last we sees an old guy with chin whiskers which flopped back and forth against his knees. He looked like Father Time's grandfather.

BEHIND THE BUSH

"Aha," says I to Clarence, "we'll stop an' question this dear old gentleman. He looks like a chiropodist."

"What's a chiropodist?" asks Clarence.

"A chiropodist is a bimbo what has made a study of birds," says I, so we hails the old geezer, and Clarence says to him:

"Listen, Audubon, or King Ben, or Diogenes, or whatever your name happens to be: We are looking for sparrows. Yuh got any around here?"

"How dare you take up my valuable time with such silly questions!" howls the old bozo; "you intoxicated idiots!"

"Your valuable time!" yells Clarence; "why, you poor goat, you ain't done anything for the last ninety years except grow older! Shake your whiskers a few times—I'll catch any rabbits that come this direction."

"$@$@$@$@$@$@$!!" says the dear old gentleman. So we drove on, because if there is anything we detest, it's profanity. Well, by this time the blues had left us and we was beginning to feel much more sensible.

"I don't know why we hired this damn cab anyhow," says Clarence, "because I have got my own car parked right in front of your place. We probably was leaning against it when we hailed this driver."

"I," SAID THE SPARROW

So we told the Gasoline Bandit to drive us back to my place. We still had the loaf of bread. Just as we stepped out of the cab we saw the cutest little sparrow sitting about ten feet away, looking right at us! He was the prettiest little thing you ever saw! He had little bright eyes and a cheerful voice. Furthermore, he looked real hungry.

"Well," says Clarence, "look who's here! Aint he cute?"

"He's too cunning for words," says I; "just think, we spent twelve dollars cab fare looking for him an' he was here all the time, the little darling!"

So we slammed the loaf of bread at the dirty little bum and killed him.

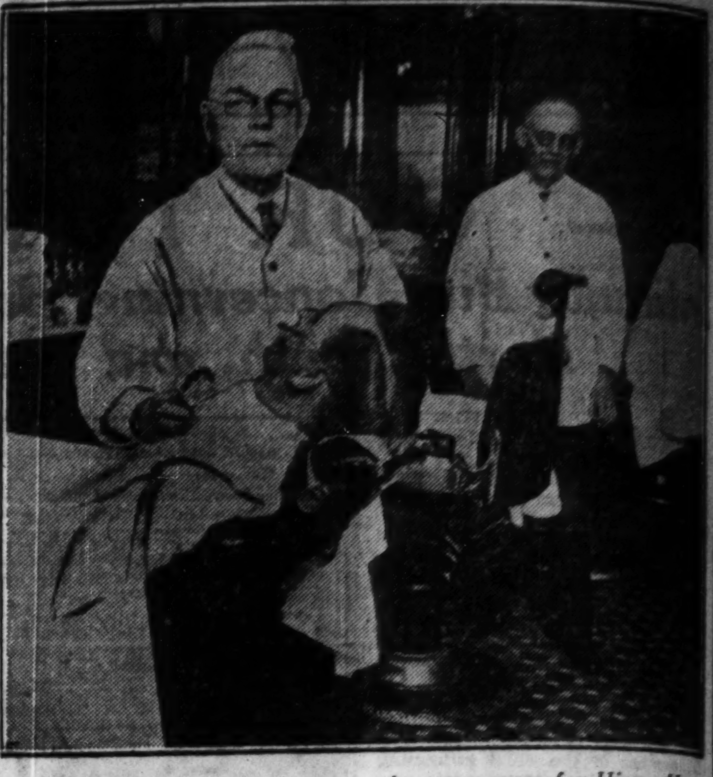
"YES, THOSE WERE THE DAYS."



THE days are just as busy as they ever were for Hiram Harmon in his barber shop at Madison street and Sacramento boulevard. Conversation and the style of haircuts have changed in forty years, that's all. Used to be that all Hiram's customers talked about was the races at the old Garfield Park track. He still reminisces with some of the old-timers about the horses, but, being only 75 years old, he understands the lingo of the flaming youth trade, too. During the forty years that he's conducted business in the same block, Hiram has watched the various stages through which whiskers have passed until their almost total extinction.

A Friendly Atmosphere.

New Year's afternoon I was alone in Chicago, 300 miles from home. I went into a café and ordered their special New Year's turkey dinner. A good looking, pleasant voiced young woman waited on me — brought a well rounded, well cooked dinner with all the trimmings, in just the right quantities, and came back to my table several times to see that I lacked for nothing.

It was delicious and I cleaned the plates. Before I was through she came again to see if I wanted anything else; asked me how I enjoyed the dinner, and when I had told her, she noted my empty plates and remarked, "I always like to have a customer who eats things clean, because I know he has appreciated his meal. I think it's the best compliment a diner can pay to his dinner." She then left, wishing me a happy New Year. Needless to say, when I left there was a good tip beside my plate.

I stepped up to the desk to pay my bill. The manager in a neighborly manner, inquired how I liked the dinner; was pleased to know I did like it; wished me a happy New Year and invited me to call again. Take it all around, this was so different from the ordinary Chicago eating house attitude of "Here's your grub; take it or leave it, but hurry up and eat it and on your way," that when I'm in the city again (and I have been making it pretty regularly for the last twenty-five years) I'm going back to that place to eat.

Courtesy Appreciated.

During the February sale of wool remnants at one of the largest department stores in the city, I went to purchase some material before going to the office. I had but a few minutes in which to shop and having selected a piece of charmeen which, under the electric light seemed perfect, an elderly salesman made out the purchase slip.

As he folded the material, he inspected it closely. Then he went back to to the counter and found another piece of charmeen and taking both pieces to the window we compared them in the daylight. The piece I had selected was raveled at the edges and had the dull, shop worn color. The piece the salesman selected was an excellent piece of material and the exact shade of the color I wanted.

The average salesman at a remnant counter is indifferent to what he sells and glad to be rid of an imperfect piece of material, such as I had selected. I appreciated this man's interest in pleasing a customer and at every opportunity tell others of his courtesy.

Pleasing a Fat Man.

I had a few hours to spend between trains, so, looking in one of the big stores I discovered a golf sweater I admired greatly. Rushing in, I decided to purchase it. As I am a fat man I could not be fitted, but the floor walker and clerk, noticing my disappointment, took my name and address and a week later sent me the size sweater I wanted, C. O. D.

I had taken up a lot of their time as they had even tried to get my size at their warehouse. I've been a steady customer since.

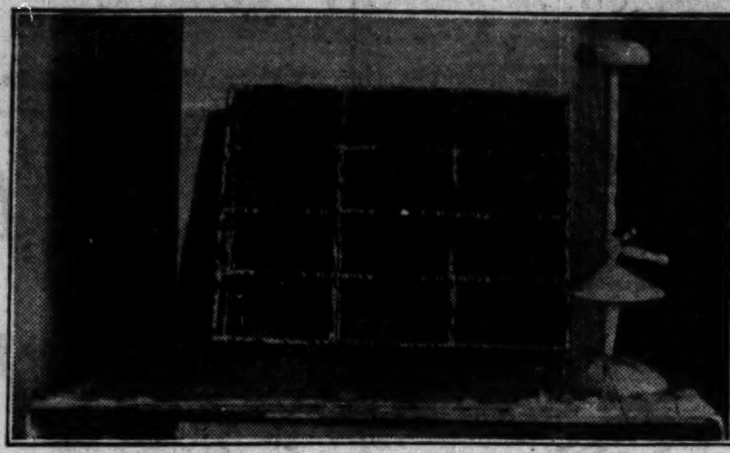
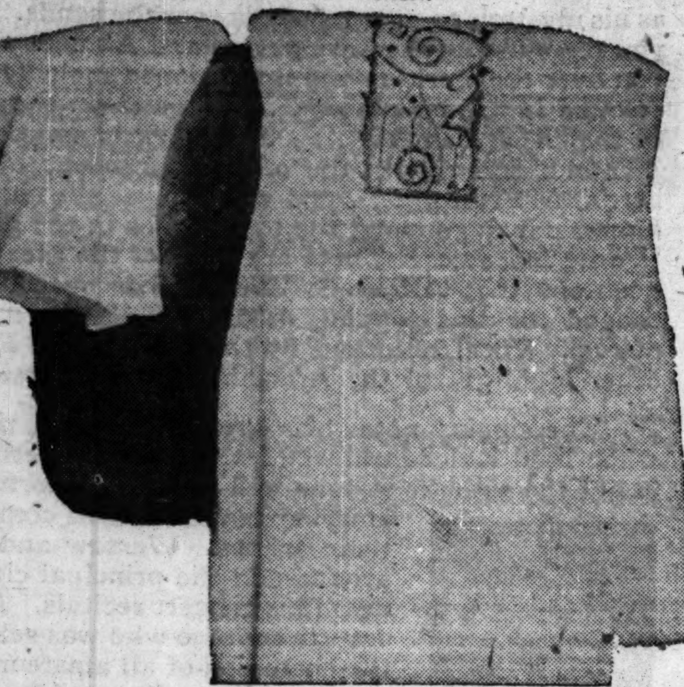
FEMININE FADS AND FANCIES

Sandals for the south are in subtle shades of tan and rose salé embroidered in raffia. The heels are a delightful, but decadent, red. They are worn by a spectator at the sports and later in the day for tea.



Two things for beauty and neatness. One is a box for milady's silken hose—a dozen pairs of them. The other is a fantastic hat stand for her closet.

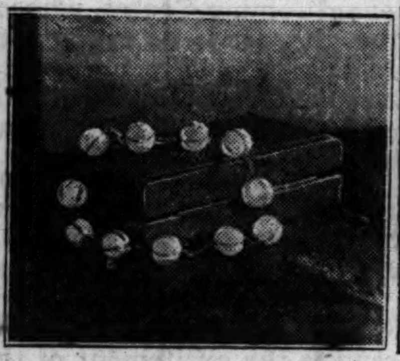
The latest in bathing caps provides earrings of gold rubber, so that there will be no danger of losing the gold ones in the sea and having them swallowed by a shark. And, of course, one must have earrings, even bathing earrings.



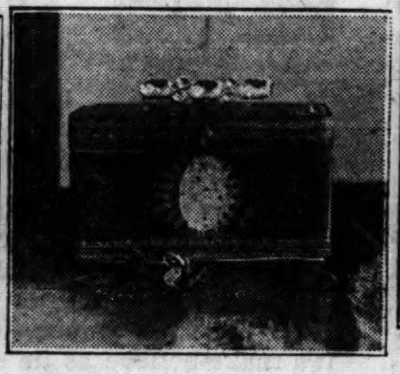
A new beach robe made of terry cloth in white with a stunning monogram and lined—of all things—in silk jersey, so that your wet bathing suit won't make it crinkle.

If one spends the day on the beach one must have a beach pillow of rubberized silk with a tiny robe for one's feet, which fits inside and is quilted. One can slip one's book, or magazine, or knitting inside, too.

Beach pajamas for lounging after the bathing hour are flurrying the designers this new season. These are of white rajah, which, by the way, is to be the last word for spring, and they are trimmed with blue.



A rose quartz necklace, so becoming with the new shade of rose salé, and the rosy beige which spring brings to us. It is set in gold and carved just a trifle, and is not prohibitive in price.



Crystal jewels are more popular than ever and will be especially good with the new frocks of white chiffon. Here is a pendant of modernistic design in crystal set with rubies and a pin as brilliant as a waterfall.

For the more practical traveler is this chaise cover which fits into a silk bag and forms a pillow when not in use. It is especially useful in Europe, where an extra light cover is so hard to procure at a moment's notice.

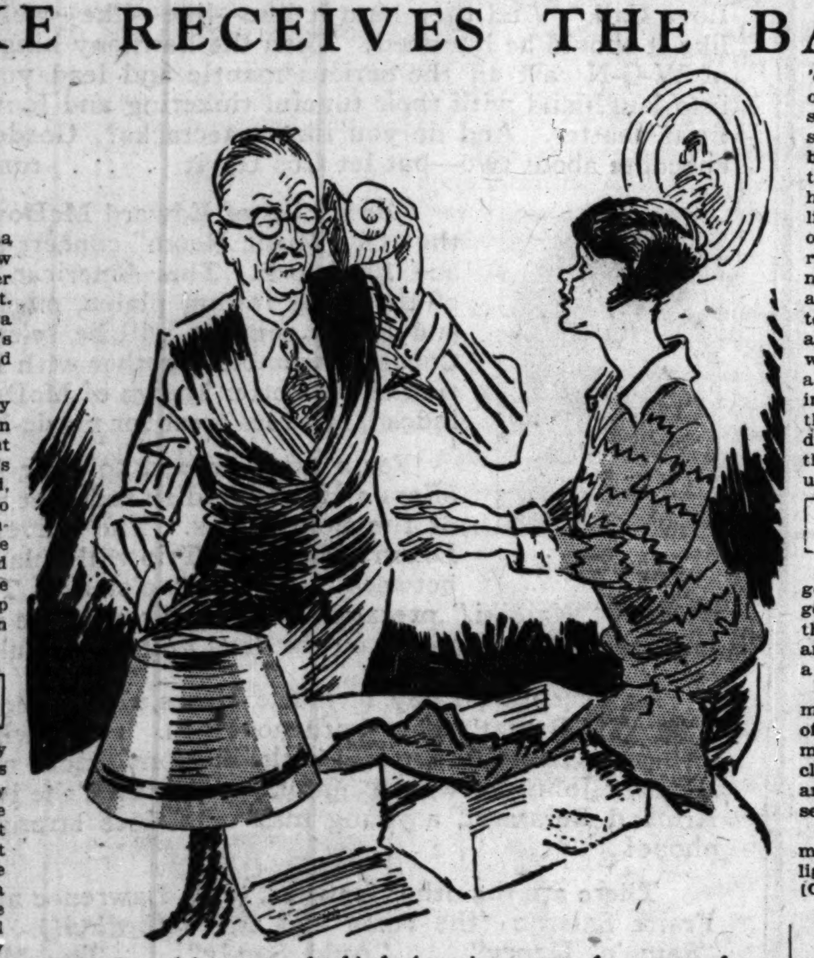
THE DUKE RECEIVES THE BAD NEWS

Final Returns on Christmas Gifts Are Discouraging

By Duke Bakrak.

COMPLETE returns from tha Xmas present primarys are now in. It just seems that whatever a guy trys to do, it ain't right. We thought we was doing a helova big thing by presenting tha janitor's kid with a tin train that winds up and runs.

From that gossip, via tha laundry route, we're tha cheapest tenant in tha building. In fact, they thought tha toy was so far beneath tha brat's dignity that they took off our card, put on one of theirs, and gave it to tha bird that hauls tha ashes and cinders. When I was a kid a train like that was my present de luxe. I told tha B. and C. that next year we oughta get him either a scholarship at Yale or a walking delegate job in tha Bank Presidents' union.



All I cood hear was tha kind of static you get thru a tunnel.

FAIR EXCHANGE

A letter what reached us yesterday from tha Mama's kid sister asks us whether it wood inconvenience us any if we exchanged her bottle of cologne for a silver flask or a sterling cigaret case. As far as I'm concerned it woodn' put us out any, providing we could get either of tha articles for a $1.19. I remember tha Xmas that we gave her a red flannel petticoat, and she wrote three letters telling us how much she adored it and how tha scallops matched those on her (well, it's none of your business).

Here's a hot one! I spent a hour and a half pickin' out a pipe for grandpaw, and he writes that he ain't smoked a pipe since 1921 and if it's all tha same to us we shood trade it for a cupple of cartons of nails. I got so damn mad at this request that I told tha B. and C. to write tha sheik and say that if he meant coffin nails we'd be more than delighted to do it, provided he'd let me do tha hammering. Next year this 86 year old sheik is gonna be presented with a pair of Oxford bag pants and a yearly pass to tha Black Bottom Night club.

WINTER COMPLAINT

Can you imagine tha old maid sister complaining about tha silk nightgown we shipped her? Her complaint is that it's not a practical gift. This I admit. She tells us that what she'd rather have wood be tha money, as she's figuring on having her face lifted. Instead of having that mug lifted, a good idea wood be to have it lowered. What I mean is lowered into about 6 feet of ground.

Aunt Abigail's letter is a bitter complaint. We sent her a knitted shawl and she's got nerve enough to tell us that anybody that lives in tha city ought to at least have sense enough to know that shawls are passé and she certainly figured that we wood of had brains enough to send her a fox throw. What this egg oughta get is a throw in tha lake. I'll never forget tha Xmas a year after we was married. She hand croquetted me a pair of wristlets which we are now using to lift hot coffee pots.

'TIS MORE BLESSED—

Tha lunkhead brother who eats 3 hours and sleeps 21 daily complains that tha military brushes are a little stiff. This got me so vexed that I simply wrote and tole him that tha clerk recommended that if they were a little stiff they'd be tha proper thing for a big stiff. Tha present what he gave us was a coat hanger that he made in manual training when he was 12 years old. After trying to figure out what it represented I came to tha conclusion it was part of a boomerang game.

I guess I tole you folks about tha grape jelly that tha ma-in-law sent us. When tha B. and C. wrote an tole her that two of tha glasses were broke she answers by saying it wasn't grape, it was quince. After puttin some on a pancake I claimed it was quinine flavor and that tha cook book reads cups of sugar instead of thimblesful.

Filling a cupple dozen complaint pages wood be a easy task for me. There wasn't a thing we received that was worth a damn. I'm not tha sort of a guy to register kicks, but I'm sure hollering on a lot of things. Whatta you suppose my uncle Newt sends me? This Bank of England cood well afford to slip me a grand and never miss it. What I get is a one dollar gold piece from tha year 1836 fixed up in a stick pin. Woodn' I look swell comin to work with a buck in gold adorning tha brown silk tie that Newts' housekeeper knits me? All I'd need wood be a celluloid collar to set tha thing off a la Podunk, Iowa.

Tha B. and C. got a gift what gave me a laff like nobody's bizness. Her cousin Sophie, whose been keeping a hope chest for 18 years, expecting that some day a goof wood grab her, parcel posts a seashell with a verse on it, something about if you put it to your ear you'd hear tha voice of your lover. All I cood hear was tha kind of static you get going thru a tunnel. This trophy is now resting peacefully under tha kitchen sink, covering up a burnt spot in tha linoleum.

MAMA'S FINESSE

Tha brown jardenier that came from Aunt Martha got itself a lower berth in our ash can. Next week I expect a letter from our garbage collector saying that we gotta quit throwing broken jugs in tha pails.

I wish some of you folks wood mail me tha address of a guy who cood use a good pair of size 11½ overshoes. These we sent to Uncle Newt's hired man Johnny, who returned them and wants spats instead. If this fertilizer specialist thinks I'm gonna run around tha loop exchanging his present he better get himself another think. I remember tha time that if you gave him a stag horn, one-bladed pocket knife, he'd of sat around Ebbett's grocery and dry goods emporium by tha hour showing an braggin about it.

Here's some dirt: Tha Mama wasn't sure whether her niece Gladys Hortense wood remember us, so she buys a pair of orchid garters, but don't mail 'em. Tha idea is that if Gladys thinks of us, tha Mama will quickly slip tha stocking ornaments in tha mail and square things. Gladys mails a set of baby pins an forgets to remove tha tag, which reads 19 cents. Well, tha hose uplifts costs us 69 and it looks like there's a ½ buck difference in opinions, so tha Mama figures she will ritz this sheba and send tha garters making tha tag read 2 dollars. Tha acknowledgement letter we get reads to tha effect that she received 18 pairs and as long as we spent two bucks she wood like to have 'em exchanged for a pair of size 8½ flesh color stockings. The only thing I had to say to tha Mama was that she's lucky she didn' make tha tag read 50 bucks as that wood give Gladys a chance to ask us to send her a grand piano instead.

FATHER'S FORESIGHT

Next year tha gift department is gonna be run by me. Everybody is gonna get just tha opposite of what tha B. and C. thinks they wood like and I'll bet four dollars there wont be a squawk.

That absent minded pa-in-law of mine sends me a personal letter to tha office yesterday and begs me not to mention tha fact to any one. He encloses 5 bucks and asks me to buy him another cigaret lighter like tha one I sent him.

Tha brainless yap, being used to matches, lights his pipe and throws tha lighter away.

HOLLERAN YELL TAKES A FLIER ON FATE

How Do Things Happen to Happen?

By Westbrook Pegler.

I OFTEN hear people say that if a thing is going to happen, you cannot stop it from happening, because if you do stop it, why then the chances are that it was not going to happen anyway.

I used to be the proprietor of a pugilist who got to thinking this way and when I would tell him to contract his neck so that his chin would not stick out, he would reply: "No, there is no use contracting my neck because if I am going to get spanked on the screamer, I am going to get spanked on the screamer, and it was all arranged way back in historical times before Noah's ark.

I used to reason with him in a philosophical way, but he stubbornly refused to contract his neck, so every time we would fight some big clumsy bum, he would leave his kisser sticking out in a careless manner and I became stoopshouldered from carrying him back to our corner in a state of unconsciousness.

AN ULTIMATUM

"Well," I would assert when I would get through resuscitating him back to consciousness, "if you had pulled in your neck you would have ducked that one."

"No," he would say, "fate did that and you cannot duck fate."

Well, physical labor is not good for me as I have weak health, so the strain of dragging this big bum back to our corner began to wear me down, and finally I had to issue an ultimatum to him.

"Either you will have to contract your neck," I stated, "or you will have to train off about fifty pounds, as I cannot stand these continual knockouts every time we fight some bum."

"No," he replied, "there is no use of my training off any pounds because fate arranged how much I am going to weigh and you can't change fate around."

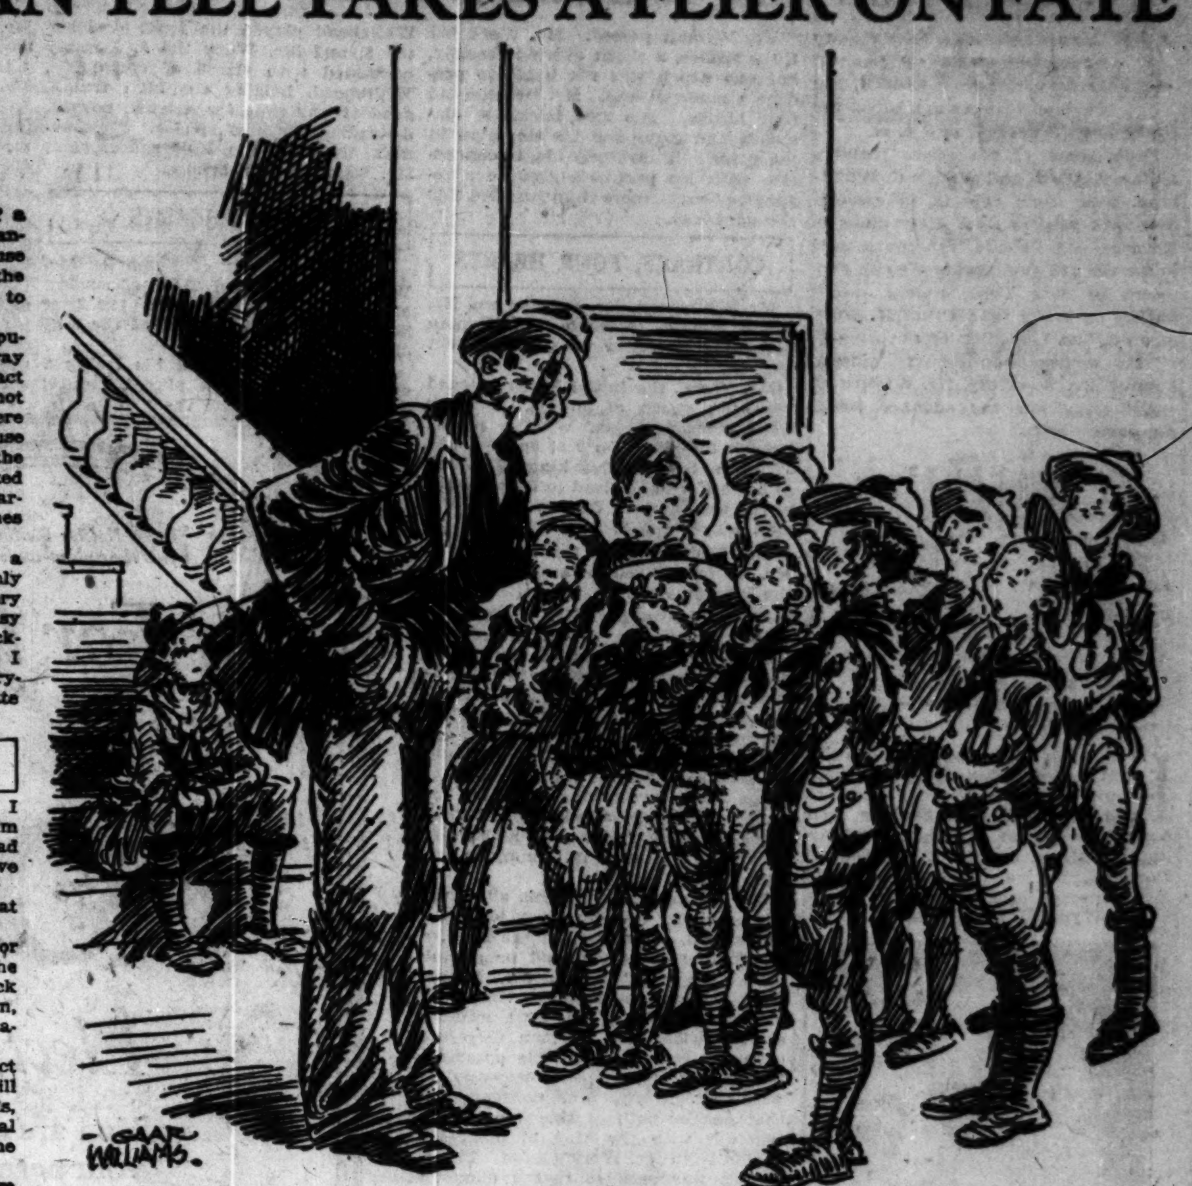
"All right, then," I stated, "I will sever our relations.

I'D LIKE TO BE FATE'S MANAGER

So I sold my bum to a friend for the sum of $200. This was not very much resources to begin life anew on, but you may be sure that I did not sit down and start wringing my head in despair; because it is always my policy to help things happen.

At this time I had a desk in the office of a gentleman who sold bail bonds to an exclusive trade and this office was right across the street from the county courthouse in our town.

Well, the day I got the $200 I was standing by the window of our office thinking of some progressive way to stimulate fate and I just happened to start counting the number of people who came out of the courthouse and turned to the right down Broadway.



GAAR WILLIAMS.

I followed them in and asked the head scout where they were going after the meeting.

Then I counted the number of people who turned to the left up Broadway.

My head is full of business schemes, so I started to wager myself a nominal sum of $100,000 on every person that turned to the right down Broadway. It was a very interesting pastime. One minute I would be eight or nine million dollars ahead and the next minute a lot of people would turn to the left and I would be wiped out again.

Finally I became tired of this so I went out to the Dairy Lunch to eat a little collation and while I was passing the courthouse I saw a troop of boy scouts going in to hold some kind of a meeting in the council chamber. This gave me an idea and I followed them in and asked the head scout where they were going after the meeting.

I HELP THINGS HAPPEN

"Why," he replied, "we are going to leave here at half past three and march down Broadway to Spruce street, where we are going to dedicate a drinking fountain."

It was half past two then. My mind was working with hair breadth speed, so I dashed back to my office and made a proposition to Mr. L'Arceny, the gentleman who owned the bail bond business.

"Mr. L'Arceny," I broached, "what about wagering some funds in a friendly little past time that I invented in one of my thoughtful moods?"

"Why, certainly," he replied, "if you wish to play strictly for cash funds."

"O, yes," I said, "I mean for cash, for I have got the sum of $200 to fritter away."

So I explained the game and laid my $200 on the window sill.

"Now," I stated, "We will play for a dollar a head and we will quit at half past three, as I have an appointment."

"I will wager on the right turn," I said, "and you can wager on the left turn."

So the wagering commenced but the traffic was pretty evenly divided and we merely exchanged our funds back and forth although I had a suspicion that just before half past three there would be a run of traffic to the right toward Spruce street.

Well, my dear sir, at ten minutes after three, I happened to see a man throw a cigaret out of one of the windows in the courthouse and it lit on an awning over the sidewalk, just to the right of the courthouse. Naturally I paid little attention to this but it just goes to show how fate will get careless at times.

"HOLD 'EM, FATE!"

The wagering continued. With only ten minutes to go the courthouse doors flew open and two juries came out guarded by Deputy Sheriffs and turned Mr. L'Arceny's way to go to the hotel for the night. That placed me $30 in the hole, but I was confident of another great rally at the last moment so I did not mind.

A couple minutes later, the doors flew open again and the chief scout came out. "Hooray!" I exclaimed. "Three cheers for the Boy Scouts of America." But just then Mr. L'Arceny grabbed my arm and let out a yell. "Look! Fire!" and when I looked, the ghastly spectacle made by blood curl in my veins because the awning was burning on my side of the entrance and a policeman was shooing the boy scouts back.

FATE FORGETS TO DUCK

While the boy scouts hesitated, the fire engines dashed up and blocked the streets with engines and hosiery and the head scout turned the whole troop to the left and detoured around the block to get down to Spruce street for the fountain dedication, with Mr. L'Arceny counting very excitedly as they marched by.

He counted 139 boy scouts and 31 civilians so quick that his sordidness simply nauseated me, as a purely sporting pastime was being debauched into a commercial business.

Then he said, "That makes it just $200 even and I thank you very much as I consider this a very pleasant pastime, indeed," and with that he picked up my $200 and, just as he said this, the clock in the court house tower struck half past three and the fire chief yelled "fire's out, boys; leave the traffic through."

Bargains! Bargains!

Send us a short and snappy letter telling the how, why, and wherefore of the best bargain you ever struck. We'll pay $2 for every letter published. Address Bargains, Chicago Tribune.

Afforded Many Laughs.

I have always had a great weakness for bargains. During the Christmas holidays about fifteen years ago I journeyed from the extreme south side to the far west side to buy my food supplies. Often at this store the management would offer dates or figs at 10 cents a package or three for a quarter. This particular day when I asked the price of dates, the saleswoman said, "Eight cents a package."

I was looking for a bargain so I asked if she would sell them three for a quarter. Se said "No."

I decided not to buy any so she asked me to wait a minute and she would ask the manager if she could sell them three for a quarter. The manager agreed. I bought six packages, and filled with the success of my ability to get a bargain, purchased a great many more things in the store.

Everything would have been all right but on the way home I kept talking about it to my little daughter who had just started to school. Suddenly the child said, "Why, mother, three times eight is only twenty-four and you paid twenty-five."

Am I sore? I should say not! I have had a laugh at least twenty times a year for the last fifteen years over my greatest bargain. A. A. M.

Canadian Money.

I was returning from a trip to Canada and the train being late, I decided to have dinner on it, instead of waiting until I got into Chicago.

They had a special chicken dinner at $1.50 which I ordered, consumed and thoroughly enjoyed.

When the waiter placed the check beside my plate, I covered it with two Canadian bills. He asked me if I had no American money, to which I replied that I had not as I had had no time in which to get my money changed. He then called the head steward, who came and started to get abusive, saying I knew Canadian money wasn't legal tender here. I stood it for a while and then said, "Look here, you're the first man that has refused Canadian money since we left the border, there is more than enough in that two dollars to cover the cost of the dinner and any exchange there might be and I haven't any American money. What are you going to do about it?"

"Give you the dinner, I suppose," he replied, and walked away.

And the joke was that several people who had overheard the controversy, told me afterward that they would have exchanged all my Canadian money at par! L. J. T.

Chinese Rug for $5.94.

In a basement department store that caters mostly to foreign trade I found a soiled blue and gold [?] Chinese rug. It was on a bargain pile marked $5.94.

I had it washed, removed the price tag of $34.50, and placed it in front of the grate, where it enlivens brightly with its gorgeous yellow and blue hues —a marvelous bargain of beauty! C. E. H.

Germans Plan First Aid Stations for Motorists

BERLIN.—(AP)—"Automobilists' Aid Company, Ltd.," is the name of a newly founded organization for technically and personally aiding automobilists who meet with an accident on the road. The work is to be carried on by emergency stations to be erected throughout the country.

The founders of the company were the Central European Automobile association, the German Industrial Automobile league, and the German Automobile Dealers' league.

All police authorities in Prussia have been instructed by the minister of interior to assist with all possible means, in the interest of public traffic, the work of the organization, and, especially in country districts where there is no postoffice, to place their service telephone at the disposal of members.

W-G-N'S WEEKLY BRIDGE LESSON

THE twelfth of a series of twenty radio auction bridge games will be broadcast from W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, Tuesday, at 9 p. m.

Each game of the series features Milton C. Work and Wilbur C. Whitehead, New York experts, in association with players from other cities in America and Canada, the contestants in the twelfth game being Wynne Ferguson of New York, widely known author on bridge, and Gratz M. Scott, also of New York, one of the keenest of the metropolitan experts, playing against Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead.

Following are the advance hands for game twelve:

Mr. Work.
Spades—K, 9, 5, 3, 2
Hearts—7, 5, 4, 2
Diamonds—6
Clubs—A, 5, 2

Mr. Ferguson.

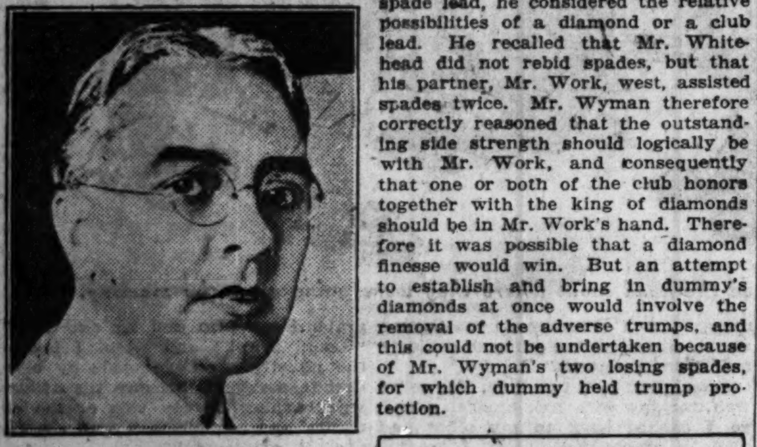
Mr. Scott.
Spades—Q, J, 10, 6
Hearts—J
Diamonds—A, Q, 8
Clubs—Q, J, 9, 8, 6

Mr. Whitehead, Dealer.
Spades—8, 7, 4
Hearts—K, Q, 10, 8, 6
Diamonds—K, 5, 4, 3
Clubs—3

IN the eleventh of the series of radio bridge games, broadcast last Tuesday from station W-G-N, Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead had for their opponents Walter F. Wyman of Arlington, Mass., and E. E. Denison of Portland, Me., a well known player and writer on bridge.

Mr. Wyman, dealer, south, held:



E. E. DENISON.

Spades, 8, 5, 3; hearts, A, K, 10, 8, 2; diamonds, 6, 5; clubs, J, 10, 9.

Mr. Work, west, held: Spades, Q, 10, 6, 2; hearts, Q, 5; diamonds, K, 9, 8, 4; clubs, K, Q, 6.

Mr. Dennison, north, held: Spades, 9; hearts, 9, 6, 3; diamonds, A, Q, 7, 3, 2; clubs, A, 8, 5, 4.

Mr. Whitehead, east, held: Spades, A, K, J, 7, 4; hearts, J, 7, 4; diamonds, J, 10; clubs, 7, 3, 2.

Mr. Wyman, the dealer, bid one heart, a sound declaration based on his five card heart suit containing two quick tricks. Mr. Work passed.

Mr. Denison also passed. Had he been the dealer, or had dealer and second hand passed, Mr. Denison would have bid a diamond. But the same strength that would have permitted him to bid diamonds would also support his partner's easier game going bid of hearts. Had he held but two small hearts Mr. Denison would have denied normal support for hearts by a bid of two diamonds.

AN INDIRECT ASSIST

Mr. Whitehead, of course, bid one spade, as his hand was strong enough even for an initial spade bid.

Mr. Wyman passed, as he had already bid the full strength of his hand. Mr. Work passed. Mr. Denison bid two diamonds. This bid, after his original pass of his partner's heart bid, told his partner three things: First, that he had exactly three hearts; otherwise he would have denied normal support on the first round of bidding. Second, that he held no more than three hearts, otherwise he would have assisted the heart bid on the second round instead of naming diamonds. Third, that he held a sound diamond bid. By this diamond bid Mr. Denison also invited his partner to continue with hearts if his holding warranted his doing so with but three hearts in Mr. Denison's hand. A bid of this kind is called an indirect assist. Mr. Whitehead passed, as he lacked the necessary values for a rebid.

Mr. Wyman read Mr. Denison's bid correctly, but as he held five hearts he returned to that suit, bidding two hearts. Mr. Work went to two spades, a sound assist based upon values held. Mr. Denison bid three hearts. Since he had been assured by his partner as to the heart situation, his side tricks called for strong heart support. Mr. Whitehead passed. Notwithstanding his partner's assist, his holding did not warrant further bidding.

Mr. Wyman passed. Mr. Work bid three spades, a slight overbid possibly, but one which was not liable to produce a material loss. Mr. Denison bid four hearts. His side tricks in diamonds and clubs and his singleton in the spade suit adversely bid, in connection with his partner's assurance regarding hearts, more than justified this second assist.

CONTRACT, FOUR HEARTS

Mr. Whitehead, Mr. Wyman and Mr. Work passed; therefore Mr. Wyman became the declarer with his contract four hearts.

Mr. Work, the initial leader, opened with the queen of spades. Dummy went down and Mr. Wyman played from it the singleton 9 of spades. Mr. Whitehead played his king of spades so as to obtain the lead to lead trumps up to weakness in dummy. Mr. Wyman played the 3.

Mr. Whitehead led the 4 of hearts. Mr. Wyman played the king; Mr. Work the 5; dummy the 3.

Before continuing, Mr. Wyman decided upon his plan of play. A thoughtless or inexperienced player would doubtless have led a spade in order to ruff it in dummy before dummy's two other trumps could be removed. Having ruffed the spade, he would then discover too late that he could not reënter his own hand for the lead of his other spade without returning dummy's last trump. Thus he would be left with a losing spade in his own hand with no trump protection in dummy to prevent its loss.

Mr. Wyman foresaw this situation. Disregarding, therefore, any idea of a spade lead, he considered the relative possibilities of a diamond or a club lead. He recalled that Mr. Whitehead did not rebid spades, but that his partner, Mr. Work, west, assisted spades twice. Mr. Wyman therefore correctly reasoned that the outstanding side strength should logically be with Mr. Work, and consequently that one or both of the club honors together with the king of diamonds should be in Mr. Work's hand. Therefore it was possible that a diamond finesse would win. But an attempt to establish and bring in dummy's diamonds at once would involve the removal of the adverse trumps, and this could not be undertaken because of Mr. Wyman's two losing spades, for which dummy held trump protection.

THE POSSIBILITIES

Considering the club suit, Mr. Wyman saw that if there were a 3-3 split of the outstanding six clubs, he could establish a long club on which to discard one of his two losing spades. As his remaining losing spade could be trumped without embarrassment, this play, if successful, would give him the number of tricks necessary for game, in case the high cards lay as assumed.

Mr. Wyman therefore led the 9 of clubs as the initial step towards the establishment of the club suit. Mr. Work played low, the 6 of clubs, in the hope that his partner held the jack or 10, which could win the trick if dummy's ace were not played. If Mr. Whitehead held neither jack nor 10, then Mr. Wyman must hold them; therefore Mr. Work risked no danger of loss by not playing his queen or king. Dummy ducked with the 4 of clubs; Mr. Whitehead played the 2.

WALTER F. WYMAN.

Mr. Wyman continued with the jack of clubs; Mr. Work covered with the queen; dummy played the ace; Mr. Whitehead the 3. Dummy returned the 5 of clubs; Mr. Whitehead played the 7; declarer the 10; Mr. Work won with the king.

Mr. Work led the queen of hearts, to remove another of dummy's trumps; dummy played the 6; Mr. Whitehead the 7; declarer the ace.

Mr. Wyman next led the 6 of diamonds; Mr. Work played the 4; dummy finessed the queen, and Mr. Whitehead played the 10. Dummy returned the ace of diamonds; Mr. Whitehead played the jack; declarer the 5, and Mr. Work the 8. Dummy continued with the 8 of clubs; Mr. Whitehead, holding the high trump, good at any time for a trick, passed, discarding the 4 of spades. Mr. Wyman discarded the 5 of spades, and Mr. Work the 6 of spades.

GAME IN HEARTS

Dummy led the 2 of diamonds; Mr. Whitehead discarded the 7 of spades; Mr. Wyman trumped with the 2 of hearts, and Mr. Work played the 9 of diamonds.

Mr. Wyman then led his losing 8 of spades; Mr. Work played the 10; dummy trumped with the 9 of hearts; Mr. Whitehead played the jack of spades.

Dummy returned the 3 of diamonds; Mr. Whitehead discarded the ace of spades; Mr. Wyman trumped with the 8 of hearts; Mr. Work played the king of diamonds. The final trick, of course, was won by Mr. Whitehead's jack of hearts.

Mr. Wyman, the declarer, took four tricks, giving him game in hearts. He scored 32 trick points and 30 for three honors.

In commenting on Mr. Wyman's skill, Mr. Work stated that it is the play of hands of this type that is most confusing to the average player, as it requires not only considerable experience but also considerable perspective to determine the correct procdure.

Canadian and U. S. Radio Hams in Annual Tests Soon

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 17.—Radio amateurs of the United States and Canada will participate in the second annual international transmission test next month.

Conducted under auspices of the American Radio Relay league, the test is held to enable communication with radio enthusiasts abroad. It is designed to promote international fellowship and good will and to permit amateurs to try for distance records.

Various prizes are to be awarded for the stations making the best transmission scores. The opening date is Feb. 6, while entries must be in ARRL headquarters by Feb. 1. The test closes Feb. 19.

Paul Kochanski and Chorus on W-G-N Tonight

Paul Kochanski, the Polish violinist, and a chorus of sixteen male voices will present the Atwater Kent hour tonight over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, and twenty-three other stations.

The singers are all members or former members of the well known New York University Glee club who were selected, organized, and directed by Reinald Werrenrath especially for radio broadcasting.

Kochanski began his musical studies early under the guidance of a father who did not believe in sparing the bow and spoiling the violinist. At nine he made his debut in Warsaw, where he studied under Mlynarski and then with Cesar Thomson in Brussels, winning the conservatory's first prize at eighteen.

He began his solo appearances with the principal orchestras in Poland, and probably no young artist has made more recital appearances in various parts of the world. He has been heard many times in the principal capitals of Europe, touring France, England, Germany, Russia, Poland, Spain, Greece, Turkey and Egypt, as well as making annual visits to the United States, Canada, and South America.

W-G-N Radio Program

(416.4 Meters—720 Kilocycles)

Chicago Tribune Station on the Drake Hotel—SUNDAY, JANUARY 15, 1928

Out of the East Comes Aladdin . . .

TO regale you in this afternoon's Arabian Nights' Entertainment with his enchanted orchestra. You'll hear the weird blending of Oriental flutes as his mysterious caravan winds over the sands. Then you relax as the shadows gather and Aladdin whisks you over the world to the impassioned melodies that resound in the far places . . . to waltz on the banks of the "Blue Danube" . . . to a glorious escape from Winter's drabness in the outdoor grandeur of Herbert's "Al Fresco" . . . and you glimpse the shrouded figures dancing among the tombstones in the ghostly "Dance Macabre"! These are some of the great compositions that Alfred G. Wathall has specially arranged for this topping 4:30 to 6 o'clock musical marvel. Vocal selections by the lyric tenor, Edwin Kemp, will be another highlight of the Arabian Nights' diversion.

Alfred G. Wathall

The singing notes of a great violin will ride on the ether tonight when Paul Kolchanski, the Polish artist superb, takes up his bow. Lovers of the esthetic in tone will find his performance distinguished by an amazing technical skill combined with an intense artistic ardour. Warsaw and Brussels were his background and the principal cities of all the world have heard his concert recitals. And Agnes Davis, the coloratura soprano who was selected by Atwater Kent as the champion of all amateurs, makes her bow tonight to the radio audience. A rousing chorus of sixteen male voices is also featured in the Atwater Kent hour at 8:15 o'clock.

Edwin Kemp

Young Tommy Coates, whose lyric baritone voice beguiles thousands of radio listeners into romantic reverie, is scheduled to appear in the late evening bill between 10:20 and 11 o'clock. And with his pleasing vocalisms W-G-N presents its unique Salon Concert Orchestra in a group of the popular light classicals.

Have you heard Quin Ryan in his sports reviews? Each week now he reproduces one of the outstanding sport events of 1927, and he does it with a gusto and a vividness that make the contest seem no less than real. The amazing thing about it is the way the inimitable Quin warms up and forgets it's make-believe as he revives the excitement of the past season. You'll catch his enthusiasm this afternoon when you tune in between 4 and 4:30 o'clock.

Paul Kolchanski

A zip and a zest go into the Sunday program when Correll and Gosden burst into song at 7:30. But these two magnetic boys do not stop at singing. They whistle the plaintive, yearning notes of the "Indian Love Call." And they hum it like—like—like—well, like it should be hummed! Then the harmony kings of W-G-N cast off the serious mantle and lead you into laughland with their tuneful tinkering and footlight chatter. And do you like wisecracks? Gosden has a whale of an anecdote about two—but let Gos tell it . . . tonight!

Agnes Davis

The genius of Edward McDowell is the theme for the "Our Music Room" concert tonight between 9:15 and 10 o'clock. This American composer's etchings of the great rolling plains, mighty forests, and vast and lonely retreats will be re-created by the Drake Concert ensemble together with Edwin Kemp's rendition of the better known of McDowell's songs. Here, indeed, is a rare treat for music-lovers!

For a tasty dessert to your dinner today W-G-N offers a Hawaiian dish redolent with the spicy aroma of the South Seas. The quivering tones of Henry Dixon's Hawaiian Trio will hula from your radio horn between 1:30 and 2 o'clock. That burst of insular melody, "Waikiki," presages a brilliant repertoire of Hawaiian and popular medleys harmonized on the steel guitars and ukulele.

An exceptional day in music closes with an hour's popular program from WLIB that's alive with novelties. There will be such stellar performers as Leon Lichtenfeld of the black mustache and his moaning cello; Herbert Johnson, whose nimble fingers flick the ivories into furies, and Armand Buisseret, a young man who does strange things with saxophone!

There are the other features, too! Lawrence and Frank Salerno (the voice and the accordion!) . . . "Sam 'n' Henry" . . . "Auld Sandy" . . . The Million—but read the details!

A half-hour of unusual music is promised at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon when Captain Frederick C. Mensing plucks his famous harp-zither. It is a quaint instrument, not at all like the ordinary concert zither, and it has been around the world and in the salons of royalty many times. Also in this period appears Joseph Zisman and his cosmopolitan String Trio. Here is a savory entree in today's radio menu!

TO SING FRIDAY

MME. MARIA JERITZA.
[Elzin Photo.]

JOHN McCORMACK.
[Russell Ball Photo.]

The promise of radio to present during the coming year the best programs ever broadcast will be partially fulfilled next Friday, when Mme. Maria Jeritza, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, and John McCormack, world famous tenor, will be heard on N. B. C.'s blue chain at 9 o'clock central time.

Interest in Mme. Jeritza's numbers centers in two selections from Bizet's "Carmen," an opera in which she makes her first American appearance only a few days before she goes on the air. In addition she will sing two other operatic arias, one from "Le Cid," by Massenet, and the other, "Voi Lo Sapete," from the ever popular "Cavalleria Rusticana."

Mr. McCormack is hurrying back to this country from his estate in Ireland in order to sing on this program. His selections will include a group of songs for children, three of the Irish folk songs which he has made so famous, and a group of favorites, among which is "Dear Old Pal of Mine."

Inside the Loud Speaker

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer

PROBABLY the listening public isn't entirely familiar as yet with the many terms employed in the radio racket. The radio has added a flock of news words and new meanings to old words, and it's only right that some of them should be set down here, on this Sabbath morn. So here's a glossary, or what do you call it:

RADIO—The cacophonic chautauqua.

ANNOUNCER—A Rubber wing-collar out for an endurance record of flagpole sitting.

STATIC—A measured compound of rats and wails and puppy dogs' tails, a charivari, New Year's eve, your mother-in-law and a barefooted cavalry charge.

BEDTIME STORY HOUR—An interval that gives mother a little time of leisure—to wash the dishes in.

TENOR—"Mother Machree," with a falsetto finish.

SOPRANO—See static.

BASSO—"Give a Man a Horse He Can Ride."

BARITONE—"Give a Man a Horse He Can Ride on the Road to Mandalay."

JAZZ—"My [Vo-dee-o-doh]—Blue [Vo-dee-o-doh]—Heaven!"

DIAL—An easy way to walk out on a sermon.

STAND BY—An old stand by.

SPEECHES—Just like speeches in the flesh, only more so.

LOUD SPEAKER—See wife.

SET—To sit.

MIKE—The only guy who has to listen to more hooey than a hotel telephone operator.

LISTENERS COMMENTS — See awful, terrible, punk, junk, drunk and codfish.

SIGNING OFF—A gesture of the announcer when he has a late date.

AMPLIFIERS—Potatoes, butter and malted milk.

CONDENSER—A street car in the rush hour.

QUARTET—Four men who sing as though they were having their pictures taken.

DID YOU ever stop to consider great moments in recent and ancient history when the radio might have been employed to greatest effect?

Think, for instance, of how universally and unanimously the public would have hung on its radio horns if broadcasting had been in vogue on the day the first draft numbers for the world war were made known. Or the armistice tidings ending the war.

Remember Presidential election nights of yore in Chicago, when gigantic searchlights played across the sky to announce the winning candidate. The newspapers announced that the beam would be red if Wilson won, green if Roosevelt won and white if Taft were the victor, in 1916—wasn't it? And we stood on street corners or craned our necks from the front porches to spy the waving searchlights, or swarmed downtown to see the returns flashed on movie screens around THE TRIBUNE building at Madison and Dearborn streets, blocking all traffic for the evening.

WHEN FUNNIER songs are written, Americans will write 'em. Everybody in America has become an amateur song writer, and everybody sends his songs to the radio stations. This month's prize of a worsted inkwell for the most unforgettable ditty presented, goes to M. Lena Beattie of Glade Spring, Va., the composer, librettist, author, and publisher of "After the Drive:"

FIRST VERSE.

A broken-hearted maiden sat on the porch with me,
Told me her story amid the gentle breeze.
"Why are you sad, dear? Why seem alone?
Have you no sweetheart? Is that why you moan?"
"I had a sweetheart a few days ago;
Where he is now, dear, never shall I know.
List to my story; to tell you I'll strive.
I believed him faithful 'till after the drive.

CHORUS.

After the drive was over, when the stars began to shine;
After my love had vanished and he is no longer mine,
My poor heart was aching—the story I can't revive—
I'll tell you some other time, dear, but not right after the drive.

SECOND VERSE.

Long years will pass, dear, but I shall never wed,
True to my lost love! O, that I were dead!
He tried to tell me, tried to explain!
I would not listen, pleadings were in vain.
Some day a letter may come from that girl,
She will say, "We are married"—it makes my head whirl!
That's why I'm lonely and just alive,
For my heart was broken after the drive.

(INTO THE CHORUS AGAIN.)

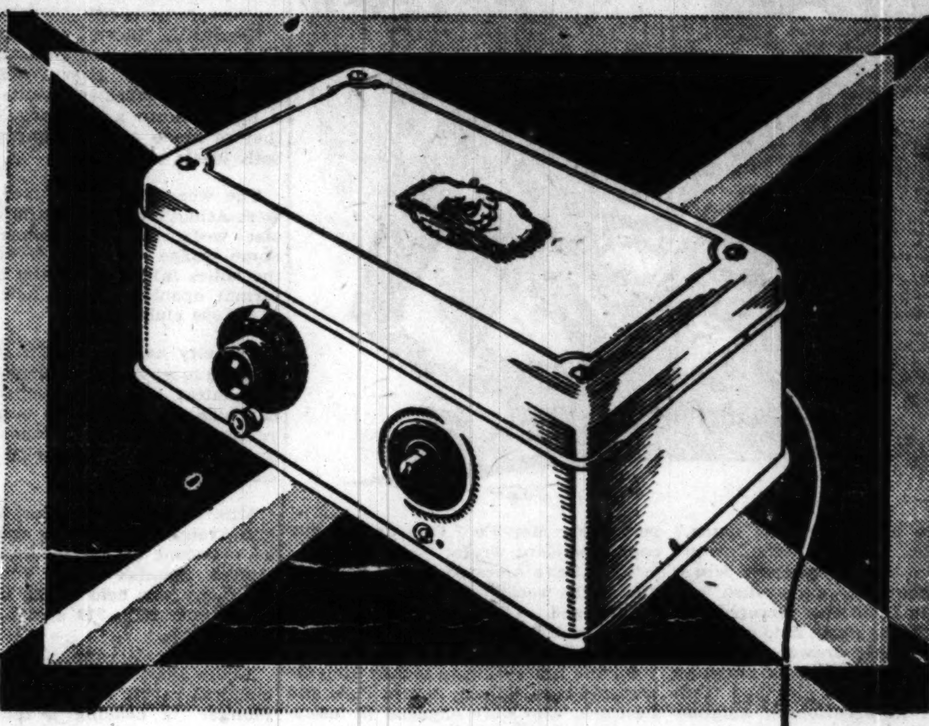
THE new! A·C·set
ATWATER KENT RADIO



IT'S NEW! New in appearance, new in engineering, new in ease of operating!

New in appearance.

With its exquisite color combinations, and with the soft sheen of its satin surface—a finish like the richest and loveliest fabrics.

New in engineering!

Look inside. See how ingeniously Atwater Kent engineers have developed a self-contained A. C. Receiver. A powerful, full-voiced, six-tube set, but simple, small, convenient—everything condensed in a shielded cabinet, only 7⅛ inches high, with no waste space.

Listen. You know real tone when you hear it. Here it is, without disturbing power noises, with its superiority assured by the shielded cabinet and the doubly shielded built-in power supply. This little shielded case, just back of the tubes, is no larger than a jewel case. Yet it takes the place of all the old-style batteries and charger.

Here is accuracy—assured by the precise manufacturing and testing methods of the Atwater Kent factory, where every Model 37 has to pass 222 tests and inspections before it is permitted to leave. Here is durability—assured by these tests, by the material of which every part is made and by the protection of every part against deterioration. Here's a lifetime of enjoyment for you in the new A. C. set.

Here are many features which cannot be copied without infringing on Atwater Kent patents, including innovations which make the single dial control so marvelously efficient.

New in ease of operating!

When you bring in a station with the Atwater Kent ONE Dial you will readily appreciate its advantages—it is a full-vision dial, you see it all at a glance. A touch of the fingers selects the station you want without fumbling or delay. This speed and ease in selecting stations is due to this full-vision dial—one of the features of Atwater Kent Receiving Sets.

Model 37 The astonishing price of the new, six-tube, full-vision ONE Dial, self-contained A. C. set includes everything except tubes and a speaker. No power accessories required—no batteries, no charger. For use only with 110-115 volt, 60-cycle, Alternating Current. Uses six A. C. tubes, and one rectifying tube.

without tubes

Beside the dial is the volume control. Try that, too, and see how easy it is to change from soft music to loud and back again—as you like.

And here is the price—$88! (without tubes).

If you are not already familiar with the Atwater Kent price policy, this may help you to understand that figure—$88!

We never make anything to sell at a certain price. We make it as well as it can be made and then let the cost determine the price. The price of the Atwater Kent 37 is low because many people buy it and because the demand has enabled us to put into effect the economies of very large production. If only a few people wanted our sets, they would be expensive. That's the whole story.

In the Model 37 we offer a really extraordinary A. C. set—a perfected set—a set that will please you in every way.

When you try this set—and raise the lid to see how it's made—at an Atwater Kent dealer's, forget the price until you are satisfied on every other point. Then you'll know the price represents the greatest value we have ever offered.

CLOSING IN ON FRENCH ANARCHISTS

"Vile Melville" of the Scotland Yard Effects Two Spectacular Captures

Walking Into The Trap Set By the Detective

By George Dilnot.

(William Melville sets out to capture two notorious French anarchists and a woman, all suspected of complicity in a Paris bombing. He plans to storm the house occupied by Francois and his wife. Concluded from last Sunday.)

THIS desperate venture in cold blood did not, as events turned out, prove to be necessary. On the very night selected for the arrest the oil for the lamp which was the solitary illumination of the room gave out. The man and woman peered into the street. It was as quiet as death. There was not a soul to be seen. François determined there was nothing to fear. He stole silently out and was quietly shadowed to a small general shop by one detective while another maintained the vigil on the house.

This was a few minutes before the time that had been fixed for the raid, and Melville himself was taking a few hours' rest. He came ere François had returned from his mission and instantly followed up the opportunity.

As the anarchist emerged from the shop detectives flung themselves upon him and a fierce struggle began. With dynamic fury, and mouthing strange French oaths, François wrested himself free and drew his revolver. Melville knocked it up just in time and it exploded harmlessly.

Again the beset man fired with deadly purpose, and this time the bullet whistled among the detectives. Someone twisted the weapon from his hand and in a twisted, snarling heap they struggled on the ground till numbers told and a pair of handcuffs were forced upon his wrists.

A TRAPPED BEAST

Overcome, but still defiant, like a trapped beast, he was escorted to the nearest police station. Melville was not among those who accompanied him. The inspector—for he had not yet become a superintendent—still had work to do. There was Madame François to deal with.

Back, accompanied by a single colleague, he went to the house where she was waiting. It was in his mind that she would be expecting the return of her husband and that so there was a chance of taking her by surprise.

Only the footsteps of a single man sounded on the stairs as they crept up to the apartment in which she was waiting. Madame heard a tap at the bolted door and a guarded voice calling to her in French to open. For once thrown off her guard, she stole to obey.

In the gloom she had no opportunity of recognizing the intruders before their grip was upon her. Even then, with the arms of the burly Melville encircling her, she managed to pull herself within reach of the table and seize the pistol and dagger. It was no time for mistaken chivalry. Before she could do any damage she was thrown to the ground and the weapons taken from her. Then she was held while she was securely manacled.

DEPORTED, DISGUSTED

This part of the story may well end here. Both François and his wife were extradited to France—to the consternation of others of their kidney who had come to look upon England as a safe sanctuary for murderers. François was chiefly disgusted because he had been afforded no chance of "immortalizing" himself by some act of assassination.

For some reason they escaped the scaffold, and instead were sent to penal servitude for life. But that did not concern Melville. His part of the business had finished when he arrested them and handed them over to the French police.

There remained Meunier. He was a less slap-dash type of villian than François, but he had a greater fund of cunning, and he covered his trail with considerable cleverness. As soon as one retreat had been discovered he would bolt to another. He was as suspicious and elusive as a fox and he had a resourceful capacity of disguise.

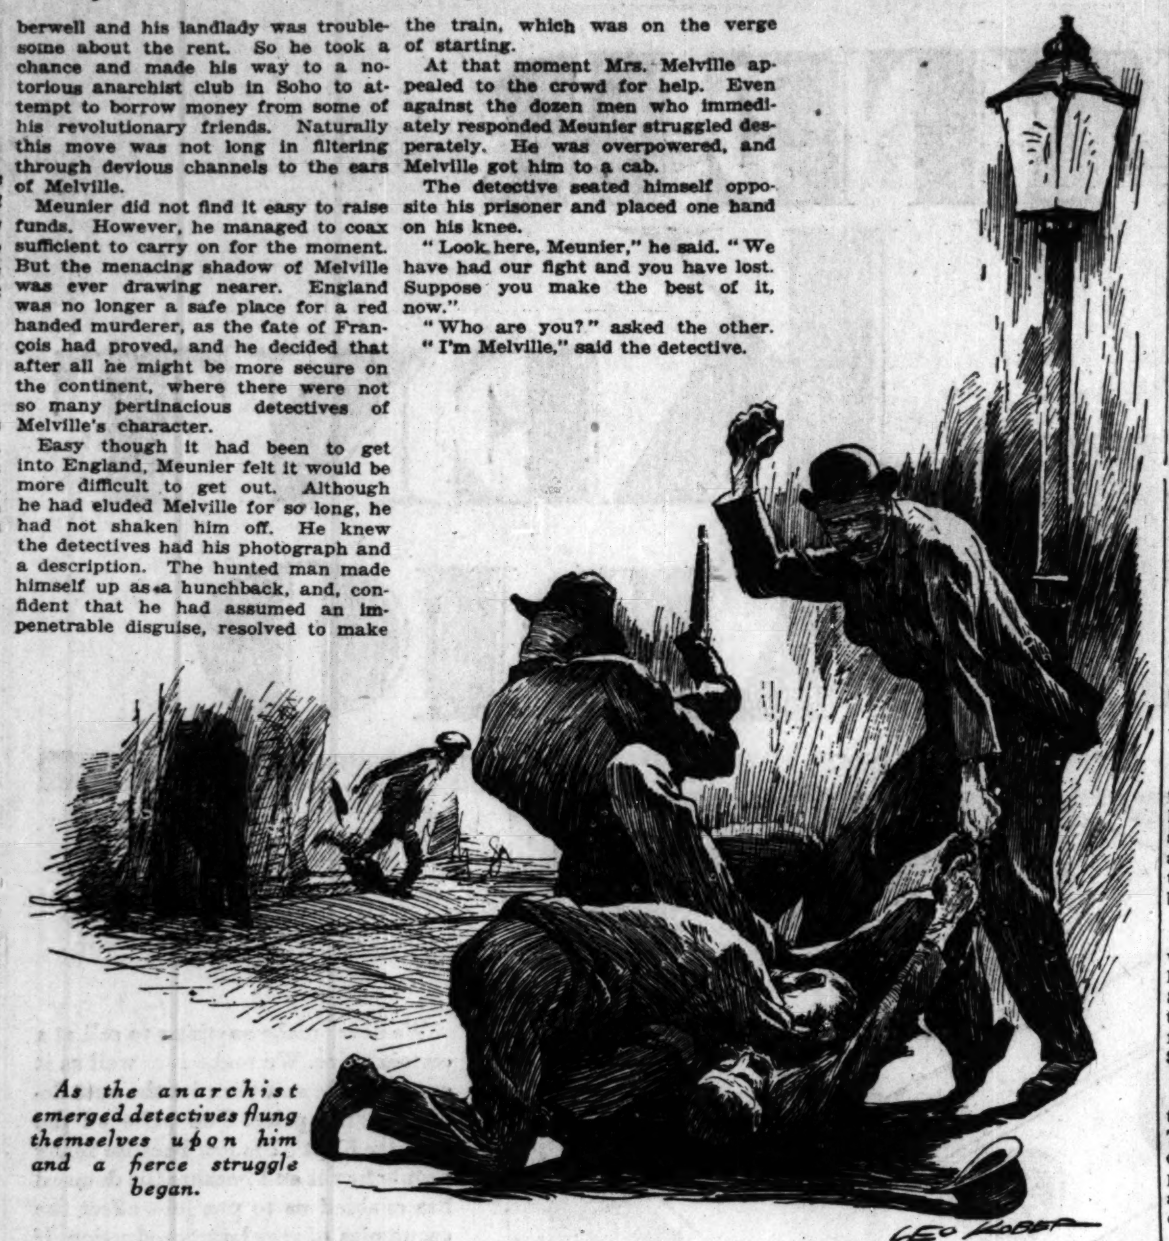
Patiently, unhurriedly, Melville kept him on the move. Time was on his side. He had a photograph of his quarry always before him on his desk and he knew that one day they would meet.

SHADOWED

Time came when Meunier ran short of funds. He was then living under an assumed name in rooms at Camberwell and his landlady was troublesome about the rent. So he took a chance and made his way to a notorious anarchist club in Soho to attempt to borrow money from some of his revolutionary friends. Naturally this move was not long in filtering through devious channels to the ears of Melville.

Meunier did not find it easy to raise funds. However, he managed to coax sufficient to carry on for the moment. But the menacing shadow of Melville was ever drawing nearer. England was no longer a safe place for a red handed murderer, as the fate of François had proved, and he decided that after all he might be more secure on the continent, where there were not so many pertinacious detectives of Melville's character.

Easy though it had been to get into England, Meunier felt it would be more difficult to get out. Although he had eluded Melville for so long, he had not shaken him off. He knew the detectives had his photograph and a description. The hunted man made himself up as a hunchback, and, confident that he had assumed an impenetrable disguise, resolved to make a dash for the boat train at Victoria station.



As the anarchist emerged detectives flung themselves upon him and a fierce struggle began.

THE HUNCHBACK

Now it may be taken as certain that there were few continental boat trains at that time at which Melville or some of his staff did not take a glance. It was unlucky for Meunier that at the particular hour he had selected Melville himself should be at Victoria by the merest chance. He was, in fact, escorting his wife to a theater.

The detective caught a glimpse at the face of a well dressed hunchback at the ticket office and with a quick word of explanation to Mrs. Melville slipped after him.

"As I drew nearer and nearer," he said, "doubts increased as to whether he really was Meunier. But he headed for the continental departure platform, and that circumstance, flimsy as it was, renewed the confidence of my first impression."

The detective saw the other take his seat in the corner of a first class compartment. One final glance and he was sure.

Now, he knew Meunier was armed, and that he would not hesitate to use his weapon. Melville had left his pistol at home. He did not even carry a walking stick. To enter the small apartment in an endeavor to make the arrest would give Meunier such an advantage as to make the attempt almost suicidal. He would have to be lured into the open.

Melville walked nonchalantly on and summoned a railway official.

THE CLASH

"I am a police officer," he explained. "There is a hunchback in the fifth carriage from the engine. I want to get him out of the train without arousing his suspicions. Will you inspect his ticket and tell him he is on the wrong train?"

The ruse worked. Meunier, a little concerned at the mistake he had made, sprung hurriedly for the platform. As he emerged the detective leaped at him.

With a swift movement the anarchist drew a pistol, but Melville gripped it by the muzzle, and then they toppled to the ground, the anarchist underneath, fighting like a mad dog. Amazed passengers gathered round while the two men writhed and twisted for mastery.

Strong man though Melville was, he had all he could do to retain his grip. As the other found he could not loosen it he strove with all his strength to drag his captor under the wheels of the train, which was on the verge of starting.

At that moment Mrs. Melville appealed to the crowd for help. Even against the dozen men who immediately responded Meunier struggled desperately. He was overpowered, and Melville got him to a cab.

The detective seated himself opposite his prisoner and placed one hand on his knee.

"Look here, Meunier," he said. "We have had our fight and you have lost. Suppose you make the best of it, now."

"Who are you?" asked the other.

"I'm Melville," said the detective.

"The mere mention of the name," said Melville, telling of the arrest, "whirled him into a passion which made his assume a more fiendish look than anything I had ever pictured possible. His hideous stare, livid complexion, and the tightly drawn muscles of his face gave him a look of startling ferocity. Beneath his clenched teeth he muttered imprecation of singular power and fluency; and then in tones of deep mortification he added:

HIS SORRY FATE

"'What a sorry fate, to be sure! I had a haunting suspicion I should fall into your net. I hated that thought more than anything else, because I loathed you for your past successes against my friends. To prevent the possibility of falling into your clutches, I had you pointed out to me just after I came to England, and I felt sure that I should know you anywhere. I had your photograph. I knew the clothes you wore.

"'Furthermore, I carried a pistol, so that in the event of an attempt to take me I might end your career and the life of everyone else within shooting distance who tried to interfere. When I saw you in the station, I only half realized who you were. If you had come into the carriage I should have killed you for certain. Think of it—after all my measures of precaution here I am like a common felon, taken as though I were the tamest of tame criminals!'

"He was genuinely despondent—not because he was captured, but because he had not murdered a dozen or more people in the process! He afterwards became more resigned, and took me into his confidence concerning the many diabolical deeds he had committed. He cherished the thought that he had plumbed the depth of malicious wickedness, no horror being too terrible for his evil genius."

THREATENED

In the inner councils of anarchy the arrest of Meunier provoked a violent outburst of rage. Shoals of threatening letters descended upon the imperturbable Melville. One anonymous courrespondent wrote:

"You have arrested one of the best men in the world, and his capture must be avenged. I have set myself to do it, and will effect my purpose on the thirteenth."

On the ninth of that month Melville arrested two Italians, named Polti and Farnara, who were engaged in manufacturing bombs with which they proposed to blow up the London stock exchange. On Polti was found a dairy in which he had written:

"The thirteenth is an unlucky day. I was born on the thirteenth and have ever been unlucky. I was married on the thirteenth—another piece of bad luck. However, on the thirteenth I am going to kill Melville and perhaps that will balance matters."

His intentions were postponed, by the intervention of Melville, for a matter of twenty years, which was the sentence imposed upon him by a judge at the Old Bailey.

FINALE

As for Meunier: he was sent back to France. Murderer though he was, he, like François, managed to escape the scaffold. He was sent to imprisonment for life, but one morning while serving his sentence he was found strangled in his cell. The theory was that, rightly or wrongly, some of his fellow convicts suspected him of being a spy in the employ of the warders.

Melville, the most threatened man of his time, died peacefully in his suburban bed toward the close of the world war.

"Why don't you take me?"

"'Cause yo' ain't ast me."

"Well, now I asts yo'."

"Well, now I has yo'."—Los Angeles Times.

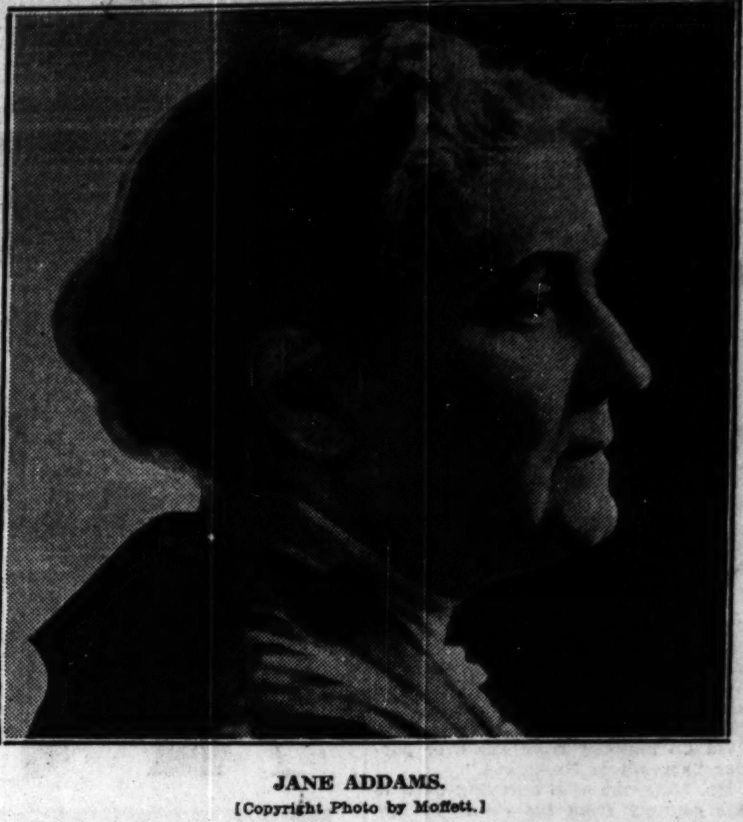
FAMOUS WOMEN OF CHICAGO



JANE ADDAMS.
[Copyright Photo by Moffett.]

FAMOUS not only in Chicago, but one of the most famous women in the world is Jane Addams, head of the Hull House social settlement, which she helped found back in 1899. Leader of the woman's movement in the United States, a pioneer in social settlement work in this country, a keen student of sociology, she was once described by President Roosevelt as "Chicago's most useful citizen." Born at Cedarville, Ill., in 1860, Miss Addams, a frail and sensitive girl, caught her first glimpse of real poverty during a European visit. She is the author of a number of books on sociological and philanthropic subjects. In April, 1914, she organized the Woman's International Peace conference, held at The Hague.

Scotland's Haunted Castle Above Bay Is Demolished

ABERDEEN, Scotland.— (AP) — Slains castle, lashed at its base for centuries by roaring waves which in their time have kept such notables as Samuel Johnson awake all night, is being demolished.

It became too old and spooky for any earthly use. The last items of furniture, oak beams, and the like were sold at auction some time ago.

For centuries Slains castle, built sheer on the cliffs jutting above Cruden bay, was the seat of the Earls of Erroll, lord high constables of Scotland. In 1916 the estate was sold to Sir John Ellerman, ship owner, who disposed of it in 1923 because of what he considered exorbitant taxation, and it has been empty ever since.

The last tenants were Lord and Lady Oxford, several summers ago, and it was there that Lady Violet Bonham-Carter, then Miss Violet Asquith, had an exciting adventure when she became lost among the crags in a heavy mist.

Residents in the neighborhood for years have never gone near the old castle at night, especially in winter, because of the eery sounds emanating from the structure as the North sea winds whistled through the floorings of its numerous ghostly chambers.

Dr. Johnson and Boswell were regally entertained at the castle on their tour of Scotland in 1773 and Johnson greatly admired its noble site, but the famous writer and lexicographer complained bitterly that he did not sleep a wink at night because of the dreary pounding of the waves below his bedroom window.

Hair Removed PERMANENTLY

Superfluous Hair Removed Forever

By the New Tricho Electric Wave Method

Patient Receiving Treatment on Cheek

The Tricho System employs the new wave length method which has won the approval of the scientific world. Hair on the face, arms and legs can now be removed painlessly, without further recurrences in growth. No needles are used in the Tricho System—nothing but the vibratory wave which cannot be heard or felt. No matter what the condition of a growth may be, we will remove it harmlessly and painlessly.

Hair on Face, Arms, Legs Painlessly Removed

Our treatment for men with heavy black beards reduces the growth. From 60% to 90% of the hair can be permanently removed, making it necessary to shave only once a week.

Unsightly hair showing through expensive silk hose, or hairy legs exposed at the beach, are a hindrance to every woman's beauty. The Tricho System of hair removing can easily remedy this.

Hair on the upper lip can be easily removed without any pain whatsoever. Only a few treatments at a moderate cost will banish lip growths forever.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Indoor and Outdoor Costumes for the Winter Resort are Now in the Limelight of Fashion.

By BETTINA BEDWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Guy-sabran. paris. 27.

Fashion wears, 'mid snow and ice, the simple sports suit of blue gray woolen, collared and cuffed in gray astrakhan, and having a circular godeted skirt. Shown on the figure at the extreme left.

Red and beige plaid lame chiffon is the latest material for the dance dress. A spangled helmet covers entirely the close cropped hair. Second figure.

Third, the newest idea in the period frock is shown in this Martial et Armand model of black taffeta with panniers that decrease toward the hem line, and a petticoat of lace.

The skiing costume is made in two tones of green woolen, worn with an orange turtle necked sweater and gloves. The jacket is banded and embroidered in orange wool, and the cap is green and orange. Shown last.

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—This is the season of the year when fashions migrate. They begin their young lives in Paris, but the rigors of a rainy winter drive them to other climates for growth. The more hardy styles go to snowbound Switzerland for the midwinter sports and the ephemeral springtime clothes go south to the Cote d'Azur and Palm Beach.

At the moment Paris is being deserted. Everybody who is somebody is going to St. Moritz and the newest sartorial fancies of the Paris grand couture are going along. At St. Moritz the smart world goes in for strenuous sports of the kind that the high Alps encourage, skating, skiing, and so forth, for out of doors, and dancing every evening for indoors. Here all women are young, in pep and spirit at least, and there is little of the idling that passes the hours in the south. Clothes are correspondingly youthful, so that the styles that come out of St. Moritz are youthful sports fashions, whether they are created for the outside or the in.

Outdoor costumes are warm, simple, and essentially practical for wear anywhere that the snow falls in winter. For a number of seasons it has been smart, and a bit snobbish, to wear no fur on outdoor sports clothes designed for zero weather. Women bundled themselves up in all sorts of "woolies," as the English quaintly call them, but they would rather die from exposure than appear with an ounce of fur visible anywhere on their chic clothes.

This season sees a return to normalcy, for the smartest of winter sports outfits are at least fur trimmed, particularly the skating ensembles. Fur coats are not worn, but fur lined coats are permitted, and fur is of the simplest and most practical variety, being clipped rabbit, chevrette, and astrakhan, usually.

Very thick, lightweight woolens, usually the English types, are used to make the skating costume, of which our first sketch shows an excellent example. This ensemble from Drecoll makes walking or skating in the coldest weather a pleasure. It is designed to give the maximum of freedom with the greatest comfort.

In color it is a dull blue, about the shade of the January sky, the horizon blue of the French poilu. The fabric is a lightweight woolen which is at the same time thick, being made entirely of angora. The jacket is very straight in line, buttoned up to the neck at the left side front, and fitted snugly at the hips and around the shoulders to keep out the cold. An enveloping collar of gray astrakhan and large flaring cuffs of the same fur make the jacket more chic and also more snug. Bands of this fur top the deep pockets which are roomy enough to give plenty of parking space to frosty hands.

The skirt is almost completely circular, made so by the circular godets that are placed all around it from hips to hemline. Under this skirt is worn a pair of knickers of the material of the costume, and under the jacket a heavy, coarsely knitted pull-over sweater, in tones of blue and gray.

A small hat of knitted wool, painted in the costume colors, accompanies it, and heavy ribbed stockings and half socks are worn with the skating or walking shoes of calfskin.

On the opposite side of our sketch is illustrated the skiing costume which is worn from morning to night by those women who go in for this most active sport. There is argument about, or place, for the skirt in this type of costume. Long, loose trousers are invariably worn, and they are just as inevitably tucked into chaussettes knitted like a man's sports socks in heavy ribbed woolen.

This skiing suit is made of dull green overcoat woolen, the trousers of darker tone than the jacket, which Drecoll leaves collarless so that the turtle necked sweater of orange wool may be seen. Three huge patch pockets of the material are placed on this jacket, outlined and embroidered with orange. The buttons are of orange colored leather, and the gauntlet gloves are of orange wool. The cap is made of orange and green wool knitted in stripes.

These are the costumes that are seen during the daytime, and for dancing in the evening the frocks worn also have a sports feeling, in most cases. One of the new style ideas for the dance frock, which comes from St. Moritz, is the dress of plaid chiffon, a sketch of which is shown on our second figure.

J. Suzanne Talbot, who created this model, makes it of red and beige plaid, with a thread of lamé to increase its brilliancy. The jumper blouse has a daytime, square decolletage, and is given charm and chic by the unusual drapery over the right arm, which ties in a knot at the waistline. There is a suggested bolero on this blouse, lifted in front to suggest a high waistline, and the very deep band below is tightly fitted over the hips.

With this blouse Talbot places a skirt of plaited plaid chiffon, and the smart helmet hat is also specially designed by her to accompany the toilette. The shape and the red spangled embroidery of this cap remind you of the armored helmets of olden days. A number of fashionable women are covering their bobbed heads with these decorative helmets when they go to dance or theater in the evening.

The taffeta dance dress shown on our third figure is one of the new models from Martial et Armand, and also one of the latest and most original of the new evening silhouettes. Madame Vallet has given to this frock a panniered effect, in harmony with the trend of styles toward the romantic, and at the same time with real genius kept it entirely modern in feeling.

The fitted bodice has the novelty of wide shoulder straps, the left one tying in a stiff bow on the shoulder. The skirt is somewhat like an inverted maple leaf in outline, being very bouffant over the hips and descending to a narrow half circle at the hem in front and back. To leave this hem amply wide for dancing it is cut up at the sides and a finely plaited petticoat of lace is worn beneath, showing below the cut-out portions at the sides. This petticoat also furthers the period idea of the frock.

It is the frock or coat with some sort of past period inspiration which forecasts the trend of the mode of Paris. We have already observed that the Victorian and Spanish influences are at work to change the cut of our clothes, and now this idea of the panniered evening gown brings in still another.

My Dear Mr. Larson:

I find that my left shoe (Good Foot) has become somewhat worn, while the right shoe (Bad Foot) is in good condition and I would like you to make me a left shoe (Good Foot) and also the inner sole. Please use the same kind of leather. My reason for not ordering both shoes is that I expect to drive to Chicago in the spring and have you make a few changes of the shoes.

Suppose you have had a successful year and I hope a happy one, as I feel that you have made so many happy that I know it reacts to you.

Remember me to your wife and tell her my sisters and I are still watching the trains for that visit of hers.

Wishing you the greetings of the season, I am,
Yours very truly,
FRANK L. WARFIELD.

HISTORICAL AMERICA by CLIFFORD RAYMOND

Mad Anthony Wayne at Stony Point

THE ROMAN wall of the American revolution was in the Hudson river Highlands. These mountains were the ramparts by which not only upper New York but also the New England states were defended, and upon which Washington based much of his strategy for operations in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware.

Possession of the Highlands was the condition upon which he campaigned. They held the line of communication with New England. The British regarded the American positions on the heights and in the passes as virtually untakable, at least after 1778, and therein lay for them the importance of Arnold's treason and proposal to sell West Point, the key position.

The Britishers' Lost Opportunity.

Very likely in 1777 Howe could have forced his way up the river from New York City and could have joined Burgoyne. Clinton, undertaking what Howe should have done, had reduced some of the forts, but Burgoyne could not hold out and the object of the relief was lost.

Howe had been lured away from the Hudson by an ambition to take Philadelphia, the continental capital. Washington had followed him and fought the battle of Brandywine and Germantown in an effort to keep the city. He failed, but he proved two things: that he had an army and that he had learned to command it in attack.

After the announcement of the French alliance, the British decided that Philadelphia must be given up and their forces united in New York. Clinton was in command then, and Washington followed him on his march to New York, offered him a fight, and had it at Monmouth.

In 1779 there was little action. In 1778 the British peace commission had come over with terms and negotiations had been refused in circumstances which were regarded in London as humiliating. Washington was at Middlebrook, N. J., in a strong position, with great freedom of movement. Patriot stores were at Easton, Pa. Clinton was instructed by his war office to draw the American into a position unfavorable to him, and in consequence he began feinting to accomplish this. If Washington made a false move Clinton would get the stores at Easton or he might get Washington himself. A water and land attack was made on the approaches to the Highlands and an American line of communication was broken.

The American Line.

It was the most convenient one between New England and Washington's position in New Jersey. It crossed the Hudson at King's ferry, from Verplanck's on the east side to Stony Point on the west. Both places were taken by the British and garrisoned. Washington had been apprised of the plan and he moved from Middlebrook toward West Point. The change of position had not bettered Clinton, and in another attempt to draw Washington into a false move an expedition was sent against the Connecticut coast and nearby towns. That was in the hope that the cries of defenseless New Englanders would attract a military blunder. The work was ruthlessly done and many towns were burned, but Washington did not move from his Roman wall. Clinton decided against further penetration of the Highlands and returned to New York with his main body, leaving Stony Point and Verplanck's strongly held.

This was opportunity for a bit of military drama which Washington apparently loved. He knew what the effect of it would be if successful even if material improvement seemed obscure or locking. He decided to take Stony Point by storm. It would be of a piece with Trenton and the capture of the Hessians.

Stony Point.

Stony Point at its greatest height was about 150 feet above the river. It was a bold promontory reaching out a half mile into the river from the shore line, rocky and wooded. Inland its slopes ran down to a marsh. To the east, where there is now a government lighthouse, was a natural stone bastion, which the British had fortified. The inland slopes toward the swamps were protected by two lines of abattis. On the summit there were seven or eight batteries with communicating trenches. It was reasonably regarded as safe from assault, and to the Seventeenth regiment of British infantry, under Lieut. Col. Henry Johnson, it was known as Little Gibraltar. With artillerymen, a grenadier company of the Seventy-first regiment and some loyal Americans, the garrison numbered over 600 men.

Washington decided on a night attack, and he selected Anthony Wayne and the light infantry for it. Wayne was a great soldier. He was distinctly an assault man. He knew the full composition of infantry morale. He believed in smart uniforms and smart soldiers. He knew that a trim soldier, polished, shaved, and powdered, had something in him that a ragged soldier missed. He knew that the Americans put too much reliance on rifles and marksmanship. He wanted bayonets. That was his greatest emphasis, and Washington agreed with him.

Von Steuben's Pupil.

Von Steuben had taught him the proper use of the bayonet, and he was a thorough convert. He wrote to the secretary of war in 1777: "I don't like rifles. I would almost as soon face an enemy with a good musket and bayonet as with ammunition without a bayonet, for although there are not many instances of bloody bayonets, yet I am confident that one bayonet keeps off another, and for want of which the Chief of Defeats we have met with ought in a great measure to be attributed. The Enemy knowing the defenseless state of our riflemen, rush on. They fly, mix with or pass thro' the other troops, and communicating fears that is ever incident to a retiring corps. This would not be the case if the riflemen had bayonets."

On another occasion he said that he would prefer to lead men with bayonets and one charge of powder than risk his life and his effort with men with forty rounds and no bayonets. He knew that military advantage was not complete in defending breastworks. The soldier had to be given some incentive and some weapon to gain the enemy position. It wasn't enough to fight well with legs covered.

Wayne had been a brigadier in command of the Pennsylvania line, doing the work of a major general without the rank. St. Clair had been placed above him, and Wayne had asked Washington for another command. The light infantry was being formed as a separate corps, destined to provide the chosen assault troops of the army, and Washington was glad to give Wayne the command as a soldier fitted for it by temperament, military philosophy and experience.

Plans for Surprise Attack.

The morning of July 14, 1779, the light infantry battalions with 1,350 men, were ordered out for parade and inspection, all to be "fresh shaved and well powdered," with rations and full equipment. The infantry was without suspicion that there was to be anything else, but inspection was followed with orders to march south. They went down to Fort Montgomery, turned west and went through the pass between Bear mountain and Torn mountain.

For days American scouts had been preventing communication between the countryside and the Stony Point garrison, intercepting farm supplies and cutting off opportunities for gaining intelligence. The march passed southwest of Donderberg mountain, and at 8 o'clock at night the corps was at the farm of David Springsteel, a mile and a half from Stony Point. There the men got their orders.

There were to be two main assaulting columns, and in them no musket was to be loaded. If a man attempted to load a musket or fired one, the officer nearest to him was to kill him instantly. If a man faltered or made a backward step, the nearest officer must kill him. Wayne said to his men he had no idea this punishment would be deserved in any instance, but such were the orders and must be understood. They would be enforced.

One detachment was to have ammunition, but this was only for the purpose of hiding the real attacks. Maj. Murfree commanded this small outfit, and as soon as the silent columns came under fire, not returning it, the detachment with loaded muskets should fire as rapidly as possible to deceive the garrison into thinking that the main danger was in the front and center of their works at the foot of the slope.

Other Commanders.

Col. Febiger, a Danish officer, attached to the patriot cause by sympathy at the beginning of the war, was to lead a column up from the southern end of the swamp, and Col. Butler was to attack from the north. Both columns were to have selected men in advance with tools for cutting a way through the abattis. All were to wear something white, paper, a cockade, or a feather in their hats, to be distinguishable in the dark, and the height was to be taken without firing a gun except as indicated; the firing was for deception and not for execution.

Washington had chosen midnight as the hour, on the assumption that the sentries and officers would be less on the alert then. The favorite time for a night attack was in the later morning darkness, and then a careful garrison took extra precautions. The tide had come in and the sandbars which had to be crossed required deeper wading than had been anticipated. A British sentry heard a splash in the water and opened fire. Murfree's men at that signal began to fire, bringing the British commander, Col. Johnson, down to the center as it was intended.

The Battle.

The garrison was bewildered, but sprang to the defense of earthworks and guns. The assault tore its way through the abattis and took the lower lines of works, plunging up in the dark under a fire to which the response was only with steel at close quarters. Wayne received a flesh wound in the head. Febiger had his nose seared by a bullet. Capt. Selden of Meigs' regiment was shot in the side. Capt. Phelps, Lieut. Palmer, and Ensign Hall of the same regiment were wounded.

The two columns storming from opposite sides had timed the movement so well that they were only a few minutes apart in reaching the crest. A French officer, Lieut. Col. Fleury, was the first into the flag bastion and lowered the flag. The British were surrendering in squads. Johnson, returning up the slope, saw that his situation was hopeless and surrendered to Febiger. The Point was taken with a loss of fifteen killed and eighty-three wounded. The British had sixty-three killed and seventy wounded and 543 were prisoners. One man escaped, Lieut. Roberts of the artillery, who got away by swimming to the British ship Vulture in the river.

Yanks Lauded by Foes.

Later the British were freely complimentary, and they conceded that there had been an exceptional generosity in the quarter given when asked. The practice of war permitted a denial of mercy in such an assault, but the attack had been as conspicuous in humanity as it had been in courage. The marked effect which Washington sought had been produced, although Stony Point was not retained, and no attempt was made to hold it when Clinton came back up the river to retake it.

Wayne's report to Washington of the success said: "Our officers and men behaved like men determined to be free." He had led what he believed to be an attack in perfect conditions, the men without ammunition. Incidentally, the last attack of the war, that of the light infantry on the Yorktown redoubt, was executed likewise with unloaded muskets.

For the successful and celebrated soldier who commanded in the assault, Stony Point fixed a descriptive title. Thereafter he was Mad Anthony.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Pork Furnishes Fundamental Meat for Men of Every Fashion

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington

ONCE upon a time there was a "plum pudding pig." Needless to say, he was an English pig and not a Chinese pig (the Chinese are supposed to have learned how to roast pig so as to get a divine flavor, and they still use pig meat enormously), nor a Poland-China pig of the U. S. A. In fact, we do not know what kind of a pig he was from English denominations, whether a Yorkshire, Hampshire, Berkshire, or a Sussex, Dorset, Leicestershire, Northamptonshire, Oxfordshire, Cambridgeshire, Cumberland, Welsh, or Essex, or whether they imported him from Naples or brought him over from Germany.

All of which suggests, we guess, that there have been many varieties of pigs, yes, and styles, too, to suit localities, the manufacturing modes of the time, a country at large (suppose it is a pork packing country), and a change in customs, perhaps, the world around. In other words, styles in pigs and changes of styles in pigs have come about because of admirations for some special breed, and sometimes have come about because of belief in the greater utility of one breed as compared with another, and so forth, and so forth.

Great changes in styles have come about, as changes in other styles have come about, because of changes in styles of living among residents of town and country and because of such a change as that of the mild curing of bacon and ham, saving many a cut of pork from a continuous bath in salt brine. Terrible names have been given to salted pork, mainly, probably because terrible things have been done to it in the cooking. But think what it has been with beans, and men in the Arctic cold have eaten raw salt pork and thought it as sweet as sugar! Swines' meat, indeed, has been a principal food among most early peoples, and the acorns and beechnuts of the great primeval forests seem to have been largely a provision for the pigs' upkeep.

Pig as Food.

Pork is food. Pork has justified itself as a food for the races of men because it has been the means of securing, inexpensively, to impecunious people a food element (fat), without which they could not live with any degree of comfort and efficiency. The more wintry the climate, or farther toward the north or south pole anybody goes, the more indispensable does fat in the diet, and plenty of it, become. It is something that "sticks to the ribs." The process of digestion is slow but sure, like the burning of hard coal.

The old time idea that it was indigestible merely because it was slowly digested has lost its force. It is only when pork is wrongly cooked that it is indigestible, and any fat may easily be rendered indigestible by poor cookery. The fat of pork can be cooked so as to be appetizing and not the least bit coarse or greasy, when one chooses to do nice work with it.

Cuts of Pork.

No animal seems to yield meat in so great a variety as the pig. The differences between different cuts, enhanced by different treatment, is so great as to make them seem almost like unrelated meats. This fact is especially brought out with the curing of the meat, and the cured parts have a greater variety of names than most people notice.

The fresh cuts give primary meat dishes, like roasts and chops and sausages, while what are called the secondary parts, like pigs' feet, the head, tongue, lips, liver, heart, brain, and even the tail, are now handled with great expertness by the packing houses and presented in most undeniably attractive ways in wholesale quantities.

One may see pigs' feet, pigs' ears, pork pluck, and so forth, packed to look as uniform as dates in a box. More than this, these are labeled "fancy meats," and the packers have had recipes prepared for their cooking, some of which have labels that entitle them to be called epicurean.

If we go to the English practices, we can find names that seem most interesting for all these secondary parts and for small cuts of the main carcass of the pig. Some of these names have never been used in the United States.

Inexpensive Cuts of Meat.

Not only the spare ribs, but many other pieces of pork can be used for exceedingly inexpensive dishes of a good deal of worth and attractiveness. Even the neck bone of the pig has on it both fat and lean, though some butchers profess to have great scorn for this piece and will not sell it because they can buy a whole barrel of neck bones for $1, or have been able to do so in the past.

People who know how use scraps of pork in making chop suey or even the elegant soufflé. One dollar can be made to do the work of three by buying such parts. Almost everything now is cured, so that we have blades and cheeks and other parts in that condition and they would be just as well worth while cooked fresh.

Imitation Chicken.

For this dish one may use either an inexpensive piece of pork or the expensive loin. In the latter case you choose a pound of the best roast or buy what would be cut into chops, but do not have it separated, or, for the inexpensive cut, have the shoulder piece without the bone. It is likely to have more fat because today the loin is so closely trimmed. Besides that use one carrot, four or five cups of cold water, two onions sliced, some celery leaves, green pepper and any other seasoning to suit. Perhaps we should emphasize the fact that the loin is superior for this dish.

Make the piece of meat immaculate and put in with the prepared vegetables in the cold water, bring to a boil slowly, and then cook it gently for one hour, skimming at the start if necessary. Leave the pork in the liquid, but cool it rapidly. When cooked in this fashion it should be as tender as possible; in fact, no meat is more tender.

Pork Soufflé.

Put through the food chopper enough of the pork cooked in the imitation chicken style to make one cup. Strain the liquid in which the pork was boiled and take two cups of it for a gravy. There ought to be another cup which one can use with the soufflé that is made.

Thicken the two cups of liquid with four level tablespoons of flour, mixing them with two level tablespoons of butter, cooking them till smooth; then add the liquid and stir and cook until it thickens. With care one may add a cold liquid to the hot combination, but if inexperienced it is best to have the liquid hot, or cool the other.

Add the chopped meat to this cup of gravy with salt to taste, if the meat was not salted in the first cooking, as it may have been when it had been cooked till tender. Also add a few grains of cayenne pepper. Stir into this mixture one or two beaten egg yolks, then fold in two egg whites carefully, keeping the mixture as fluffy as possible.

Pour this mixture into a buttered earthen baking dish, sprinkle with bread crumbs, and bake until it puffs. Then serve immediately.

To vary this dish have in the baking dish an inch layer of cooked spaghetti, pour the soufflé mixture over it, cover with crumbs and a bit of grated cheese, and bake like the soufflé, and serve at once. This may be served with a gravy made of the liquid in which the pork was cooked first. This may also be baked in individual portions and it is not half bad when cool.

Creamed Pork.

Prepare the gravy as for the soufflé, but make it a little thicker and add a little cream to it when it has cooked up, till thick. Cut up the cooked pork in dice or slivers and heat it thoroughly in the gravy.

A little green pepper chopped fine and a little sweet pepper or pimento in slivers cooked first in butter, and even some mushrooms may be added to this to make it like chicken à la king.

Creamed Fresh Pork.

Cut one chop or one slice of pork into as thin slices as possible, leaving them the full length of the piece, or make them into just mouthful sized pieces. For one chop use two tablespoons of flour, with a level teaspoon of salt and a little pepper. Roll the thin slices thoroughly in this seasoned flour.

Melt two tablespoons of butter in the frying pan and when it is hot enough to brown, put in the pieces of pork and cook them about one minute to a side. Then stir in the left-over flour, let the whole partly cool, add a cup of milk or a cup of half milk and half cream; then put this over the fire and stir until it thickens, after which stew gently for twenty minutes. This must be cooked gently, because of the milk, which will easily boil up, get too thick and also have a little skin over it—three undesirable effects. To have it cook in the gentlest possible way it may be covered and stand where it barely simmers.

This may seem remarkably like fried chicken in a creamed gravy. It is something of our own devising and we have before now enlarged considerably upon its attractiveness. We think immaculate fat from a pork chop, when browned and seasoned and served in a cream gravy, a good rival for the delicate marrow of French cookery, while when it is not treated in the right way it is barely edible, and a large number of people will reject it in eating a chop. In gravy of one sort or another, or in a pork pie, one will not even recognize it as fat.

An inexpensive piece of lean fresh pork can be cut up and fried and furnish seasonings for the excellent cream gravy of this sort, and it has other possibilities.

Fried Spareribs.

In this dish we also used milk in making a gravy. Other nations than ours understand how milk with pork fat changes it into something dainty and quite different from what we ordinarily get in pork dishes. In this case use spareribs instead of chops for frying.

Make them immaculate, cut the bones apart—about four inch bones are best—roll them in seasoned flour, put them into a hot frying pan in which there is a little butter, cover the pan and let the spareribs cook gently twenty minutes to a side, take them up and add milk to the pan, stir until it thickens, then bake the spareribs and simmer for ten minutes.

You can gnaw these bones without getting the slightest odor of pork fat, and we recommend trying the gravy on crackers, because we tried this combination on someone and got "Yum, yum."

The wish to make this dish on my part was inspired because, in a rather nice place at a good price, I had pork tenderloin that was dry and distorted from being cooked with too much fire, which also made it greasy. No gravy was served with it and there was no complementary relief like fried apples or applesauce or greens, therefore I turned from this most expensive pork meat to see what I could do with less expensive.

Stuffed Spareribs.

Spareribs rolled, skewered so the piece will stand like a basket, then filled with sour stuffing over which slices of bacon may be skewered, will be deliciously flavored if baked, and some people will like the dressing while others will not. Pork, at any rate, yields some of the best flavors baked of any meat we have, and the tiny bit of meat on the sparerib is no exception.

The apples in the dressing may make it too wet, but because of the tiny bit of meat they need to be protected by wetness, though not too thoroughly, in which case they will not get the browning that makes them delicious.

Boiled Spareribs.

Boiled spareribs are salt spareribs and a man's dish when cooked. Wash off the salt thoroughly from both sides of the meat, then soak for about three hours. Put them on to cook in cold water and when this boils skim it, if it is necessary.

Simmer for three hours. Prepare vegetables separately and serve on the same platter as the meat. To have them flavored like the meat, partly cook them, then add to them some of the cooking water around the spareribs. When the water cools in which the spareribs are boiled, skim off the goodly portion of fat which arises and use it as dressing.

Salt spareribs are among the most inexpensive of meats and are boiled with vegetables, but we do not recommend this because it spoils the vegetables, both from the flavor and nutriment standpoint. They lose their own good flavor and acquire one quite different when cooked with salt meats and do not balance the objectionable side of the meat as they otherwise would.

Frying a Pork Chop.

First we recommend that you buy your chops from a butcher who knows how to cut them; otherwise get a board and cleaver and learn to cut them yourself, buying a block of loin. A careless butcher will give you one chop thick and one much thinner, sometimes a whole third thinner, which makes the cooking difficult. At any rate, pork chops need trimming at home in order to remove weathered edges of bone in particular, as well as to take off fat that has been handled and is far from immaculate.

A little of this fat, tried out, is best to have in the pan when frying the chops, but butter can be used. One tablespoon of fat is enough for six chops. Have it genuinely hot in the pan when the meat is put in, after which immediately lower the fire so that they may cook eight or ten minutes to a side, according to their thickness, without a sign of burning.

If they are in a shape to flatten they may be cooked in a shorter time. In addition to the fats there should be some seasonings like salt and pepper, and some people like to add a teaspoon of vinegar. When ready to turn the chops, turn up the fire for half a minute and then quickly down again. The fat will have been increased by what was cooked out from the chop and with seasoning is excellent with boiled potatoes or with greens, or it may be left in the pan and potatoes may be cooked in it. Pan fried potatoes in this fat are extra crisp and palatable.

Too much explaining can hardly be given in reference to the correct cooking of a pork chop. It is necessary to remember that the water in the lean part of the pork is not as well protected as in beef streaked with fat, so it can be easily dried out from a pork chop in about two minutes, in which case the chop necessarily shrinks, and after that, although more cooking is required, it cannot be well done. The juices must be kept in the meat and when you see them come out in the pan and harden to look almost like the white of egg, the chop is being cooked in the wrong fashion.

A DOLLAR FOR YOUR DREAMS

Friday night's dreams on Saturday told
Are sure to come true be they never so old.
—Old Saying.

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? We're not referring to the day dreams which build castles in the air; we're interested in the nocturnal variety which beguile or disrupt slumber. If you'll mail us an account of your prophetic dream we'll pay $1 for every letter published. Address Dreams, Chicago Tribune.

The Ruined Church.

Do dreams come true? Yes, I know they do, for several of mine have. One peculiar one occurred years ago. I was devoted to my church and wanted to go to the evening service, but did not.

The next morning my young nephew said to me, "Aunt Marion, your church burned last night."

I replied at once, "O, no, it was only damaged." I had dreamed that I went to the church, and as I was to enter the body of a tonsured priest was borne out of the door in an open casket, and it was turned on the side. Low, sad music was heard.

As soon as possible I went to the church and found its walls standing. The door was broken, but closed, and an officer was guarding it to keep out the curiosity seekers who wanted to get inside. I turned away and went into an alley to look in a window, climbing up on a pile of ashes to get there. As I did so I saw an envelope box, with a cover, on the dump, and, glancing into it, saw a Japanese doll, with tonsured head, lying on its side. Here was my tonsured priest, of whom I had dreamed. Strange to say, the organ, an unusually fine one, had been battered to pieces, the fire having started in it. Here was the sad music of my dream. M. A.

A Strange Visitor.

In my dream I distinctly saw a man. Every detail of his face made an impression on my mind, and in the morning when I awoke, a sense of fear possessed me. I knew positively I was to see this man.

Two days later someone rapped at my back door. I started toward the door, but before I could reach it, it opened and, horrors! it was the man of my dream.

I was paralyzed with fear. When he walked past me and sat down at my kitchen table and said, "Lady, some food."

Needless to say, I hurried to do his bidding, as I was all alone in the house with my small boy. I put everything on the table that I could find in the pantry and made him a cup of hot tea, as it was a bitter cold day.

After eating, he moved back his chair, commenced to rise, while I felt as if my last hour had come.

When he got to his feet he made me a curtly bow and said, "Lady, I thank ye from the bottom of my heart," and quickly turned and went out, closing the door behind him.

Needless to say, after that episode my doors were always kept locked.

A. J. B.

A Friend in Danger.

Many of my dreams have come true but recently I had a rather horrid one concerning a dear friend of mine. I saw her standing in her living room as though listening intently. She seemed to hear a noise and turned to find a man confronting her with a pistol. She screamed. He fired and fled through the window. She fell across a couch, her blood dyeing a Spanish shawl I had given her as a Christmas gift. The next day I warned her but she treated the whole matter as a huge joke, and would not take me at all seriously.

Exactly three weeks from that date, a burglar entered her home and my dream came true verbatim. The man was never caught, though my friend recovered and everything turned out well, except the shawl, which is ruined. K. K.

Care of Babies

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good. And it is so pleasant to take. Taste it yourself, and you'll know why "Children Cry for It."

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or when you even suspect the approach of constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. See how quickly all fretfulness or wakefulness will cease!

Only one word of warning: the above advice is true of genuine Castoria.* The kind called Fletcher's bearing Fletcher's signature is genuine—and does not contain opiates or any other drug that can harm your baby. Other preparations may be just as free from harm; the writer does not know as to that, but does know one family whose children will never make the experiment!

*SPECIAL NOTE: With every bottle of genuine Fletcher's Castoria is wrapped a book on "Care and Feeding of Babies" worth its weight in gold to every mother or prospective mother.

GOODBY TO EXTRA POUNDS

by Antoinette Donnelly

This Is the Third Week in the Reducing Program. Are You Growing Slimmer?

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—At dinner the other night the conversation turned on reducing, as it undoubtedly did where you dined the other night. Dinners sure do inspire that topic, don't they? I suppose because a woman can't escape her conscience for one single dinner hour any more. The cream soup gives it a jab [the conscience, I mean]. The scrumptious looking meat course with the creamed 'taters, creamed cauliflower gives it a few more jabs. The salad with the tasty mayonnaise dressing stabs it outright, so that when the baked Alaskan dessert comes in it's for crying out loud about how you can keep a figger respectable with meals like that!

At this dinner was a young woman worried, as a goodly number of us are, about a fat rash breaking out somewhere on her person. A bright young person, she, under ordinary circumstances. But there's something extraordinary about the gullibility of the most intelligent people on reducing cures. She backed me off in a corner after the meal to whisper the good news. It seems her sister-in-law's aunt's daughter had just heard about it. You mix castile soap and epsom salts and rub it on your stomach and lo! before the new moon is out you haven't got anything so vulgar as a stomach.

You might just as well rub the mixture of soap and epsom salts on the back porch for all the good it's going to do your figure. So I told the bright young woman, but her defiant glance convinced me she'd go home and try it once, anyway. It won't do her any harm. Soap never did anybody harm so far as I've been able to make out. But it certainly won't help her by half a pound to get into her last year's wedding dress.

And so it goes with all these magic potions for going to bed fat and waking up thin. I never mind people asking them. I just sit back and bide my time. I don't even say "I told you so." And I've seen and heard a lot of crazy suggestions tried and found wanting. Some of them are harmless, some of them not. Diets, like the tomato and egg diet, the lamb chop and pineapple, the skimmed milk and baked potato, and so on, continued over a long period, have undermined many a good constitution. Some of these freak menus, I will admit, reduce, and quickly, but there is not a sufficient number of calories, nor do they contain the mineral elements, vitamins, proteins and carbohydrates necessary for a healthy reducing program. They average about 600 calories, which is not sufficient for the day.

The Third Week.

This is the third week of our safe and sane reducing course.

Tell me, how are you getting along? Has anybody been telling you lately that you're looking better? Wait till you hear what they'll say when you get through with this course. That is, if you're playing it on the level. No cheating between meals, or at them! You're on your honor, as I told you!

Did you walk that hour, daily, every day last week? Did you follow the diet I carefully worked out for you? I did that to save you the trouble of counting up your calories, believing you would show your appreciation by sticking closely to the menus prescribed. Good things to eat they were, too, weren't they?

This week I'll work out another food program for you. And if there are any last minute applicants who want to get in on the class work, they can start right in. If they want to catch up, they can put themselves on a liquid diet for three days. Three days of liquid [nonalcoholic] is a good thing for the stomach. One day, in fact, of liquid and no food is recommended by physicians as a rest system for this vastly overworked organ. Some authorities think the three day liquid diet an excellent method of controlling the appetite for the regular reducing diet to follow.

It is also advised for its beneficial effect of ridding the system of poisons that have accumulated from excess food intake. A business woman I know puts herself on one of these three day liquid diets every time she feels she is putting weight on again. From Friday to Monday is the time she chooses, and she loses five pounds each time. Also, she reports a grand sense of general well being.

We wouldn't recommend it for a longer period because the weight loss would be too quick, and there aren't enough of the food elements needed to maintain health. It would be classified as one of the freak diets if continued indefinitely. But as a prelude to a reducing régime it is all right, or as a weight regulator, as with my business friend, orange juice is the preferred liquid.

More Exercise.

About exercise. The first week I let you off without any; the second with an hour's brisk walk daily. Now with this, the third week, I want you to do some trunk exercises and keep up the daily walks. Any games, outdoor or indoor, skating, swimming, basketball, and so on, that you can take advantage of—so much the better. Now that your reduced diet is shaking the fat loose, you need exercise to strengthen the flabby muscles, and to stimulate the blood so that it can wash out the tissues. Exercise helps break down the fat. So that you really need now, at the very least, ten minutes workout morning and night. It is better to take it in two ten minute sessions than one twenty. If there is great overweight, your doctor should be consulted. He may advise against exercise until the heart has been relieved of its fat burden.

1. Here is that good old timer—keeping the knees straight and touching the toes with the finger tips. Begin with the hands raised over the head.

2. Same exercise, practically. But touch the left toes with the right hand and the right toes with the left hand. Feet wide apart. Begin movement with the arms spread full length from the shoulders; not overhead.

3. Spread the feet wide. Hands clasped overhead, swing like a woodchopper down between the legs and bring the clasped hands back over the head, going back as far as you can comfortably. Do this same woodchopping movement with the hands clasped together over the right shoulder and swing down outside the left hip. Reverse and swing down over the right hip.

4. Lie on your back on the floor, hands at sides, feet together. Try to bring the feet up over your head. This you may practice in bed and bring the feet up to touch the head board. Don't strain on this exercise. Just come up as far as you can comfortably and let it go until another day. Tomorrow you'll do it a little better and easier.

5. Still in a prone position, keep the heels tight to the floor with the hands extended overhead. Pull yourself up at the waist and carry the upper body forward trying to touch the toes with your hands. Don't strain. Take it easy at first.

6. Now sit up on the floor. Cross your legs and draw them up fairly close to the body, but not too close. Grasp the ankles with the hands and rock the body forward and back.

Those are six exercises for you, morning and night. Go through them with each movement repeated ten times. If you find at first exercises 4 and 5 strain, do them no more than five times. Gradually increase.

Menus for the Week.

Now for this week's menus:

Monday — Breakfast: Grapefruit, poached egg on thin toast, coffee with half cup hot milk.

Luncheon: Celery and apple salad, bran muffin, a gelatin dessert, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Clear beef broth, roast lamb, stewed tomatoes or brussels sprouts, romaine salad with vinegar dressing, prune whip [no cream].

Tuesday—Breakfast: Stewed prunes, two strips broiled bacon, whole wheat bread [thin slice toasted], coffee with hot milk.

Luncheon: Small serving minced meat on slice unbuttered toast, vegetable salad, three crackers, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Vegetable soup, 1 serving lean meat, medium serving mashed potatoes with little milk but no butter, large helping carrots, raw fruit.

Wednesday — Breakfast: Orange juice, small serving oatmeal with a little milk, a hard roll thinly spread with butter, coffee.

Luncheon: Clam broth, asparagus on toast [unbuttered], baked apple, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Broiled lamb chop, spinach, large serving; medium baked potato with dash of butter, half grapefruit.

Thursday—Breakfast: Apple sauce, 1 piece toast lightly buttered, 1 slice crisp bacon, coffee with hot milk.

Luncheon: Scrambled egg on toast, whole wheat muffin, lettuce and tomato salad with salt and vinegar dressing, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Fruit cocktail, slice of liver and bacon, well done boiled potato with salt only, turnips, small serving custard.

Friday—Breakfast: Orange juice, cereal with ¼ cup milk, toast and coffee with hot milk.

Luncheon: Cup of cream soup, large bowl lettuce salad, 1 slice bread, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Halibut, trout, or cod; baked potato, string beans, endive and watercress salad, tea.

Saturday—Breakfast: Grapefruit, 1 strip bacon, bran muffin, coffee.

Luncheon: Omelet [1 egg], slice toast, fruit cup.

Dinner: Vegetable soup, lean meat, cabbage, sliced tomatoes, canned peach or pineapple.

Sunday—Breakfast: Orange or other fruit, small serving cereal with ¼ cup milk, egg, slice toast, coffee.

Dinner: Medium serving roast beef, small browned potato, string beans, vegetable salad with vinegar dressing, fruit dessert.

Supper: Slice lean meat, sliced tomatoes with salt dressing, three graham wafers, and glass of milk.

Keep the menus, please, to guide you. Next week I shall tell you more about foods and let you try and work out your own menus afterward, as you must get familiar with their values.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

V. McG.: THE FINE LINES UNDER and around the eyes are due to the tissues being very soft. Discontinue massaging them with creams and apply compresses of cotton saturated in cold salt water. Do this morning and night, and, if possible, during the day.

D. F.: HERPES IS COMMONLY known as cold sore. Where cold sores appear frequently there may be digestive disturbance which should be corrected. Camphor ice may be applied. It is well to soften the lips with cold cream several times during the day.

S. S.: IF THE BIRTHMARK IS indistinct it may be disguised by the use of stage paint, getting the shade which blends with your skin. Birthmarks are treated by skin specialists.

R. H.: THE WAY TO TREAT whiteheads is to soften the skin with hot towels, then open each blemish with a sterilized needle and press out the contents. Daub on a little peroxide of hydrogen and gently massage with cold cream. Send a stamped addressed envelope for my booklet on the skin.

C. D.: YOU WISH EXERCISES for constipation? Try these: Jump rope, just as the children do, for five or ten minutes, morning and night. Stand with the feet together, hands on hips, bend forward as far as possible. Keep the knees straight. Return to erect position. For other exercises send a stamped addressed envelope.

CHERIE: IF YOUR HAIR IS TOO thick you may have it thinned out by a hairdresser, and brushing it every day for five minutes will make it glossy. When the hair is dry it is lusterless, but by brushing it the fat of the sebacious glands is distributed, giving it a silky appearance.

I. B.: YOU MAY BLEACH THE under arms with a teaspoonfull of peroxide to which a drop of ammonia has been added.

LEAP YEAR PROPOSALS

The year 1928 spells hope for the aggressive maiden who wants to change her name. Given the time, the place, and the man, all she needs is the courage to pop the question. Do you know of any girl who invited a man to leap into matrimony with her? Was her proposal met with eager acceptance or graceful refusal? What was the aftermath? If you'll send us a brief account of the affair we'll be glad to pay $1 if we print it. Address Leap Year Proposals, Chicago Tribune.

Blonde and Brunette.

It was in leap year when little colored ribbons accompanied by poetry was sent to a man by the girl who wished to propose to him that this proposal took place.

In our office there were two girls, a blonde and a brunette, who adored the same man, secretly.

One day the blonde said to me, "I believe I'll send Mr. Smith a leap year letter, signed 'Blonde,' and perhaps he'll find out who sent it."

A few days later Mr. Smith walked into our office and said, "You know, girls, I received a leap year letter and I don't know who is proposing to me."

Before one could say "Jack Robin" out walked the brunette from her files and said, "I sent the letter to you, Mr. Smith," just as though she were handing him a letter from her files.

He was stunned for a moment, but finding himself, quickly said, "Well, what ribbon would you prefer?"

Brazenly, "The white, of course," ["If you want me for your wife, send me back my bow of white"].

From that day friendship sprang up and within six months they were married. Mr. Smith seemed very happy and told the girls how his wife proposed and how glad he was she did it. M. C.

Accepted the Hint.

She was a pretty little first grade teacher and he, the father of one of her pupils, was a young and attractive widower. For some reason he had formed the habit of dropping in at the school to inquire about his daughter's progress.

One afternoon he remarked to the little teacher: "You have been very good to Helen Ann. I appreciate your interest in her."

The little teacher was fussed: "I think a great deal of Helen Ann," she said. "I wouldn't mind taking care of her always."

Then, realizing what a shocking admission she had made, she was overcome with confusion.

"We'll discuss that more some later time," he answered briefly. From his attitude she could not tell what he really was thinking. And, O, how much she wanted to know! A few weeks later she found out.

And we've lived happily ever since. C. S. A.

Surprise for Mother.

It was back in the good old days when a fraternity pin on a shirtwaist meant something.

He never knew how much guile there was in the loss of her collar pin. Quite innocently he suggested his fraternity pin as the only fastener in the emergency.

Imagine his consternation at her gleeful chuckle, "O won't mother be surprised," as she transferred the pin from his vest to her shirtwaist. C. B. T.

In Need of Help.

Four years ago my girl chum and I had a girl's bachelor apartment in Chicago. We always had our boy friends in for Sunday dinner.

My beau had always had his mother to look after his clothes until he came to Chicago, so naturally he wasn't very prompt in sewing buttons back on.

Every Sunday when he came I would sew on a button or maybe mend a pocket.

One day I was standing in front of him sewing buttons on his vest, when I said to him, "I think I will have to marry you and see that you are taken care of."

"Gee! will you?" was his surprised answer.

I did, and the outcome? It is too early to tell. We have only been married four years. F. A.

Preparedness.

I had been attentive to a young woman for several months and we were invited to a turkey dinner on New Year's day at her uncle's home. Her uncle was a preacher.

During the meal my sweetheart came upon the wishbone, so we each made a wish, and, in "turkey wishbone parlance," I got the major part of the bone and therefore I was to get my wish. I told her my wish was that she would marry me. To my utter astonishment she produced a marriage license and two wedding rings and our marriage immediately followed the dinner with the double ring service, her uncle performing the ceremony.

Our honeymoon was a five mile ride in a cutter. A. M. M.

The Strange Adventures of Young Robinson Grewso

By KEMBLE

His ma called him Robin; his dad called him son.
He grew like a weed and thought it great fun,
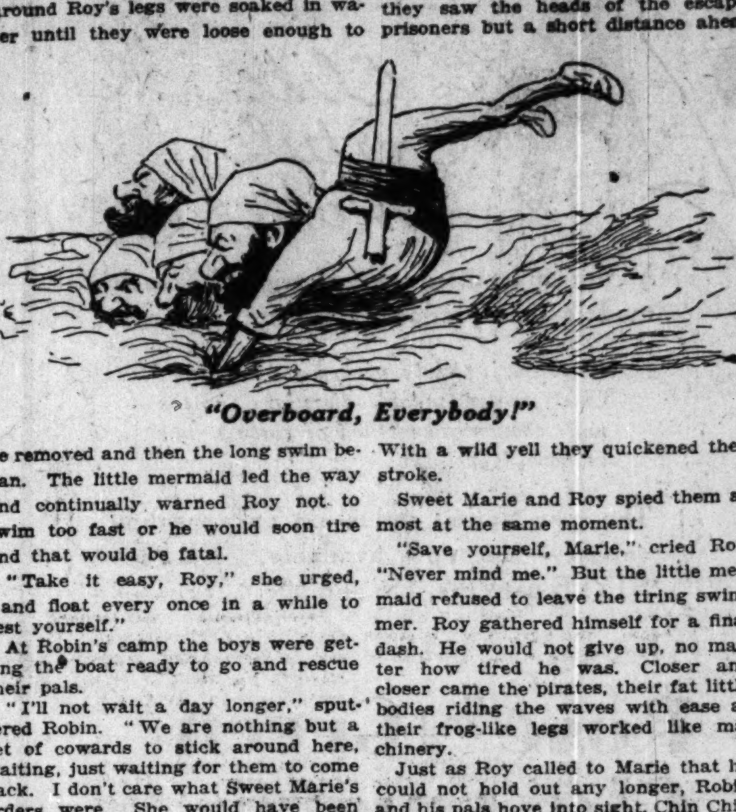
So—he called himself Robinson
Grewso.

ONE sunny morning after the pirates had gone into the woods, Sweet Marie and Roy prepared for their escape. The bands around Roy's legs were soaked in water until they were loose enough to be removed and then the long swim began. The little mermaid led the way and continually warned Roy not to swim too fast or he would soon tire and that would be fatal.



"Overboard, Everybody!"

"Take it easy, Roy," she urged, "and float every once in a while to rest yourself."

At Robin's camp the boys were getting the boat ready to go and rescue their pals.

"I'll not wait a day longer," sputtered Robin. "We are nothing but a set of cowards to stick around here, waiting, just waiting for them to come back. I don't care what Sweet Marie's orders were. She would have been back long ago if Roy had been able to get away from those fat rascals. Come on, get your jab poles, pile in and let's get going!"

Away they sailed, a slight breeze helping them along, Chin Chin at the mast head shading his pop eyes with his stubby wing. Little did they know that Sweet Marie and Roy were swimming steadily toward them.

The pirates came marching through the woods at noontime shouting their song—

Hail, hail the gang's all here,
A bunch of little sinners,
We want our dinners, yes, we want
our dinners.

They stopped short when they reached the beach and found it deserted.

"Where are they?" screamed the pirate chief, and picking up Roy's leg bands, he fairly foamed at the mouth.

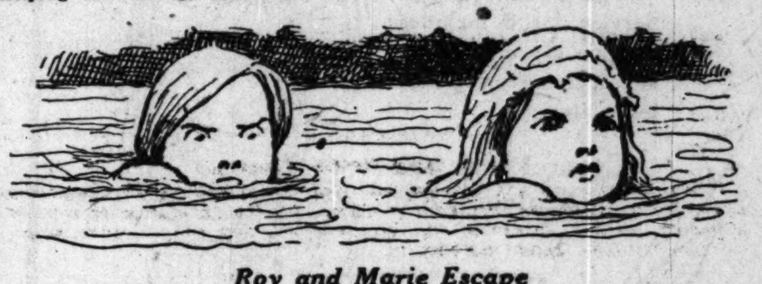
"Gone! Gone!" he howled. "Not a moment to lose. Overboard everybody!" Grabbing their swords they stuck them in their belts and plunged into the lake. They were fast swimmers, all of them, and clipping through the water at a great rate, they gained rapidly on Roy and Sweet Marie. Soon they saw the heads of the escaped prisoners but a short distance ahead. With a wild yell they quickened their stroke.

Sweet Marie and Roy spied them almost at the same moment.

"Save yourself, Marie," cried Roy. "Never mind me." But the little mermaid refused to leave the tiring swimmer. Roy gathered himself for a final dash. He would not give up, no matter how tired he was. Closer and closer came the pirates, their fat little bodies riding the waves with ease as their frog-like legs worked like machinery.

Just as Roy called to Marie that he could not hold out any longer, Robin and his pals hove into sight, Chin Chin screaming, "I see them, I see them!"

The pirates heard the bird's voice and turning, they beat it for home. Soon Roy and Sweet Marie were helped into the boat and the chase after the bandit crew commenced. Jab poles were made ready and just then a stiff breeze bulged the sail and with a triumphant cheer Robin and his pals bore down on the panic stricken outlaws.



Roy and Marie Escape

"Poke them! Sink them! Shove them under," screamed Chin Chin.

The pirates slashed with their swords only to get jabbed as they kicked and plunged. Sputtering and howling, they begged for mercy.

"Not a bit of it," called out Roy. "We are going to drive you to our camp and put leg bands on you. We need a gang to do some work for us and you are just the ones to do it."

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the humble dandelion, hugging the earth, should turn out, upon examination, to be one of the most efficient of all living creatures and one that is constantly extending its domain while holding its own in old time haunts!

Whoever has a lawn is likely to know the dandelion. It has traveled around the world and established itself in every nook and cranny. Examining the plant on the lawn, one would find a rosette of sturdy leaves flat on the ground. The lawn mower runs over it and does no harm. Man or beast may trample it to no avail. Cut it off and it grows again. Come rain, come drought, it survives. Examine its roots and they are found to be big, strong, and deep. They are able to dispute possession of the soil with all comers.

The dandelion makes itself obnoxious to grazing animals, and so they do not eat it. Chop it off every month of the spring and summer and it grows again. Some time before frost it is likely to find a chance to burst into its yellow bloom and ripen seed.

And when its seeds appear it does not have to depend for planting as does the apple upon the fancy of the boy who throws away the core. It does not need to coax the squirrel to bury it, as does the acorn. The dandelion puts wings on its seeds and they ride away on the winds to new homes.

The white globe of dandelion seeds is little less beautiful against its background of green than the yellow flower itself. Many a child has plucked a stem bearing one of these globes, held it high, and exploded it with a puff of his breath. When he does so a hundred seeds have been released that will scatter far and each bear the chance of starting a new plant. The foot of a cow, hitting this globe, may start these seeds traveling. A mere puff of wind may do it. One way or another, the chance of their being planted is most excellent.

There is efficiency from cradle to the grave for the dandelion. "Dent de lion" was its name in the beginning, which means "tooth of the lion," a stern name but not a misfit when the real character of this plant is known.

Mother!

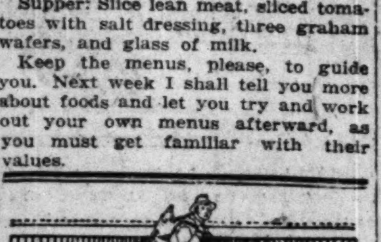
Look at Child's Tongue if Sick, Cross, Feverish

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! See if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhœa, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easily after giving this harmless, "fruity laxative" because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup"; then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."



Lesson No. 3

Question: How does emulsified cod-liver oil help protect grown people from coughs and colds?

Answer: Its easily assimilated cod-liver oil plus its wonderful vitamins builds resistance by keeping the body vitamin-nourished.

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

Recently I received a letter from an old school friend, telling me she would be in the city on a certain date and would like to spend the evening at my home. I answered her letter immediately and urged her to to call, then I remembered that I had already set that evening aside for my son's scout club to have a party at our home.

I said to my son, "I think I will change my mind about your party and put it off for a week."

"You can't do that, mother, you can't do that," he cried in a panic. "You can't help changing your mind, but you mustn't change your promise." M. T.

The children of a family brought a stray dog home with them and earnestly hoped for his adoption into the fold.

Discussions were usually held at the dinner table, and at this hour the poor creature stood forlornly on the porch just outside the dining room window. The older children of the family had presented their arguments in the dog's behalf, while Jamie, aged 4, silent thus far, very concernedly said: "You're talking louder and louder and pretty soon the doggie will hear everything you're saying about him." DRINK WATER IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

To help neutralize these irritating acids; to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

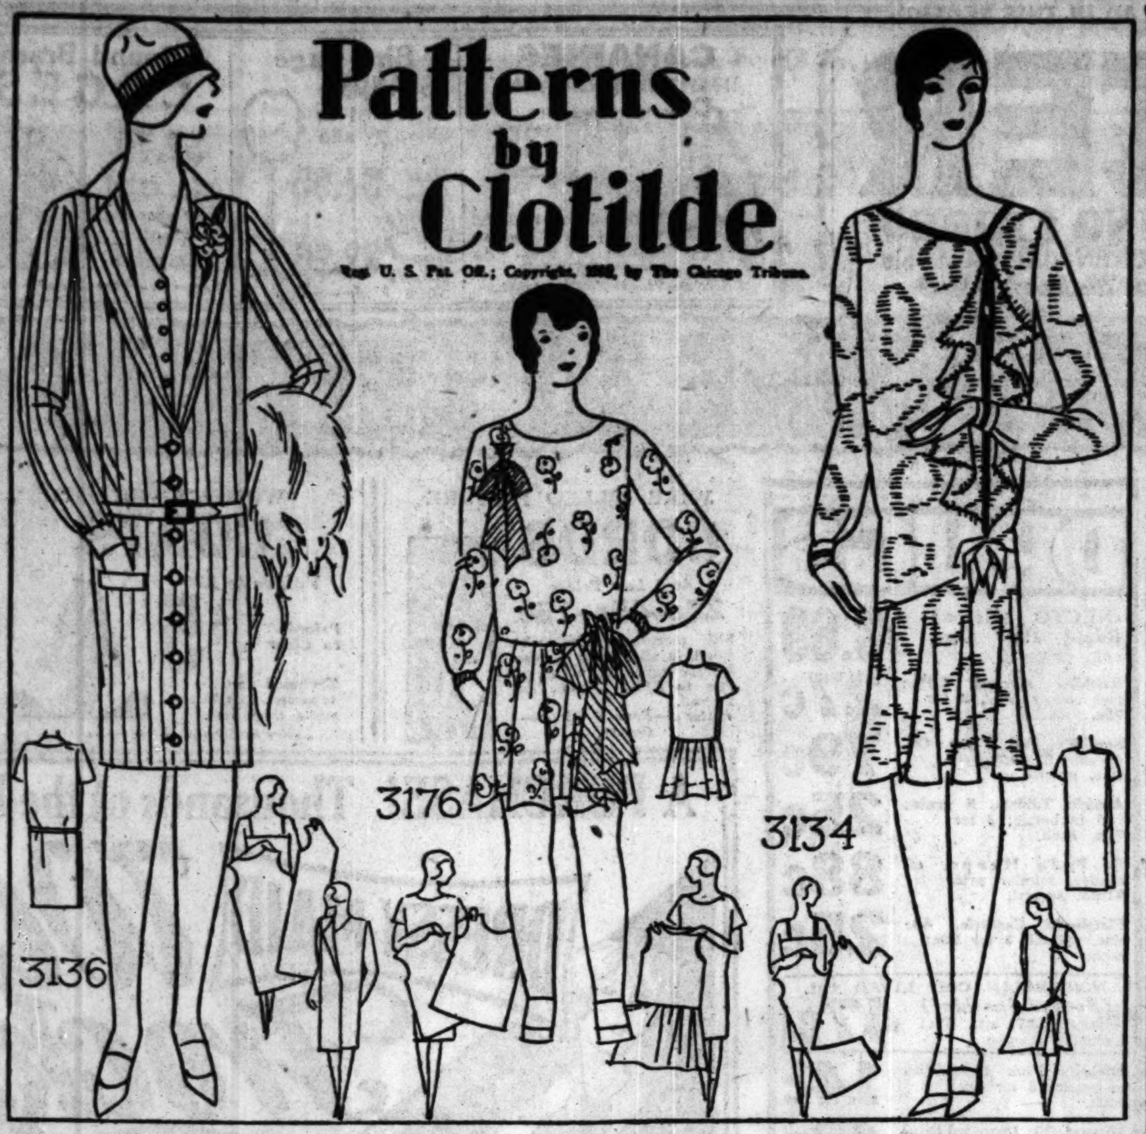
Patterns by Clotilde

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.; Copyright, 1928, by The Chicago Tribune.



3136—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2⅞ yards of 40 inch material with ¾ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

3176—Girls' dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1⅞ yards of 40 inch material with 2⅝ yards of ribbon.

3134—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅛ yards of 40 inch material with 5 yards of binding.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

FOR the woman who desires something different and smart, pattern No. 3136 will be just the thing. It is an excellent design for travel, business or general daytime wear and can be made of one of the novelty silk crêpes, silk twill, crêpe satin, flat silk crêpe, printed sheer velvet, angora jersey or kasha.

The dress buttons the entire length of the front and opens at the top over a vest of a contrasting color and fabric. The full length sleeves are gathered into fitted bands at the wrists, made of the same material as the vest, and if you like, the collar across the back may be made of this same material. Two inserted pockets at the left side of the skirt with welts made of the vest material complete this good looking dress.

A good many buttons are finished with shanks, and if you use this kind on this dress punch the eyelets exactly opposite each button hole. After the hole is punched, take a very shallow over and over stitch having the stitches as close together as possible, all around the punched hole. Use a stiletto to keep the eyelet in shape.

Button holes in a dress of this kind should always be overcasted from the wrong side. Use button hole scissors, and try first on a piece of paper to see that the size is correct.

Pattern No. 3176 is a design any young girl will delight to have used for herself. It is suitable for the classroom, or for afternoon wear, depending largely on the materials used. The long waisted bodice is cut in two pieces and has set-in sleeves. The sleeve pattern is perforated for short ones and the full length sleeve is gathered at the wrist into fitted bands. A straight, two piece skirt is gathered at the top and set on to the bodice.

A dress of this kind is very easy to cut and make, and no trimming is needed other than the bows shown in the sketch. Be sure to allow a sufficient hem at the bottom of the skirt and then divide the upper edge into quarters before gathering. Put pins in the middle back and front of the bodice edge and pin the skirt at each of these places and at the side seams. Of course, you will have the skirt seams come at the side seams of the bodice, and the center of each piece will be pinned to the center front and back of the bodice.

Baste and stitch in a wrong side seam; or, if you choose, you may take a right side seam and cover this with a narrow bias strip, stitched close to each edge. If you prefer, the bottom of the skirt may be finished with a binding, and the neck should have the same finish.

For class room wear a tan wool jersey with brown velvet ribbon, navy blue wool crêpe with bright red velvet ribbon, or a novelty plaid cashmere will be serviceable and inexpensive. And if you wish something a little dressier, choose a printed velveteen, and make the shoulder and waistline bows of faille silk crêpe.

The diagonal treatment of the neck and waistline, with the circular skirt fullness in the front, is the latest and most important movement of fashion. You will enjoy making a dress by pattern No. 3134, and won't find it difficult. The back is cut in one piece and is plain and straight. It will be pretty to join the circular part to the bodice with a piping of a contrasting color and this same material should be used to bind the bottom of the skirt and the neck.

The attractively shaped cascading jabot at the left side of the bodice is another smart feature of this dress and may be made of the dress material. Printed silk crêpe, crêpe Roma, crêpe de chine, chiffon, georgette crêpe, and crêpe satin or crepella are all effective materials for this design.

The full length sleeve is gathered into a narrow band at the wrist. Always transfer all notches, perforations and all other marks to your material when cutting out, and in setting the sleeves into the dress be sure that the notches front and back, as well as the perforations for the shoulder, come where they should. All the seams of any of the crêpes can be made French seams, even setting the sleeves in; but if kasha or other wool fabrics are used, press the seams open and finish with binding ribbon.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

YOU CAN MAKE WINTER FUN FOR YOUNGSTERS

THE joy of winter is in winter sports. When we can skate and go coasting January and February change from months of cold and hardship into months of robust outdoor exercise, that gives red cheeks, glowing health, and new vigor for everything.

This gives us our chance to do a world of good without trouble or expense. We know, of course, that poor children face winter without the means for enjoying it. To them it is often a season of hardship and sickness to be lived through as best they can—unless we give them the means to take advantage of all its health giving sports. And we can do it so easily!

Christmas has come and brought its harvest of new skates, new sleds, new clothing for the children, and meantime the old articles are lying around—outgrown, discarded by our own little ones, but still able to provide a world of fun for poor children who need all the outdoor exercise they can get. Why not get these articles together, and give them an entire new life of usefulness, serving children who will have nothing except as we think of them?

Warm clothing in particular is needed—suits, caps, dresses, mittens, mufflers, capes, and sound shoes. These are discarded by growing children while there's still lots of wear left in them. Almost every one of us can help. And we will, I know, when we realize how much good we can do!

Offers Morris Chair.

"I have a morris chair we are no longer using. I shall be glad to give it to any of your readers who would care to have it. MRS. M. P."

Here's a comfortable place to rest your weary bones at the end of a hard day. Write me if you'd like to have the chair.

Bathrobe Will Bring Comfort.

"I have a woman's bathrobe, size 36, which I no longer need. It is in good condition and any one who can use it may have it. MRS. L. F."

Cold, wintry mornings you'll find this wooly robe a great comfort. If this will fit you and you'd like to have it, let me know.

An Old Recipe to Darken Hair
By JANICE RANDALL

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

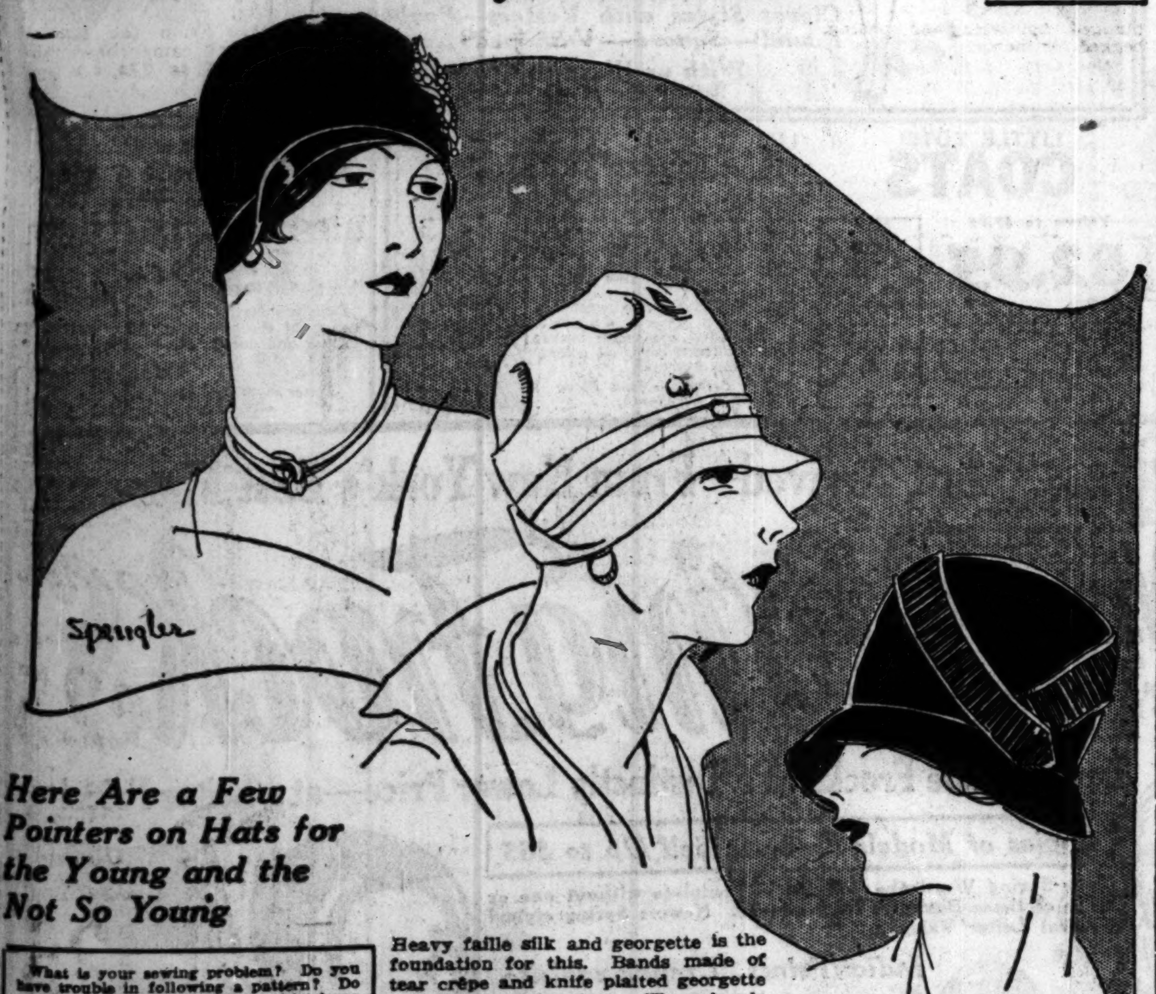
Practical and Fancy Needlework . . . By Clotilde



Here Are a Few Pointers on Hats for the Young and the Not So Young

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

THE hats that are being worn at this time of the season are either all satin or satin and bengaline combined. Heavy faille silk is also in great favor, in black and all the brilliant colors.

The debutante is wearing small, close fitting hats and the trimmings of those hats are the least of the designer's worry. Small flowers or a strap of the felt, just to give it a finish, are used, as it is quite the smart thing after purchasing the hat to remove the trimmings and substitute a diamond pin or pendant.

Matrons' hats have decidedly more brim these days. The crowns are higher, but draped into soft puffings and folds to give a soft line to the face. Pearls and brilliants in dart shapes, or bands of sequins or metallic cloth are used for trimming. A word about brims: a two inch brim with a slight mushroom across the face rolling to the back of the brim which is turned up so that it fits snugly to the back of the crown is typical of the form that goes with these soft crowns.

Mourning is standing in high favor for the first time in several years. It is worn by both young and old women. Heavy faille silk and georgette is the foundation for this. Bands made of tear crêpe and knife plaited georgette are used for trimmings. These bands are fitted to the crown, beginning down low on the right side and are brought up high across the crown in front and down again on the left side, and to the bottom of the crown in the back, finished off on the right side. They are two and one-half inches deep and are completed with a small cording of the same material all the way around the band.

Other attractive trimmings on mourning hats are ornaments made of all widths of black grosgrain or bengaline ribbon. No. 9 ribbon is the most popular width to use in making these.

WHAT'S NEW?

By Walter M. Schwimmer.

I've roamed about this hemisphere
And met some bimbos who are queer,
Yes, I've abhorred and oft been bored
by irritating pests;
But there's a mortifying gink
Who is so asinine I think
That he's a sap whom ev'ry chap quite heartily detests.
For when by accident you meet
This nincompoop upon the street
He strains his vocal cords to bark
This masterful, inspired remark—
"What's new?"

Now, ev'ry time I see this chump
He gives my tender back a thump
And soon he'll slip a crushing grip that
dislocates my hand;
He wears a vapid grin on his
Insipid, idiotic phiz,
Then starts to whine the hackneyed line
he has at his command.
No erudite, sagacious speech
Does this dull ignoramus preach,
For when I greet this gawky guy
He makes this scatterbrained reply—
"What's new?"

I'd like to write the epitaphs
For all the human phonographs
Who still maintain this trite refrain and ever ask, "What's new?"
And here's a frank and fearful fact,
These imbeciles will make me cracked
Unless we balk this inane talk and have
it judged taboo.
Now, I am just a mild gazook,
I rarely censure or rebuke,
But, folks, some day I will conspire
To kill the ninnies who inquire—
"What's new?"

WANDERLUST.

Ship me somewhere east of Tampa
Where they barbecue the wurst,
Where the maximum temptation,
Opportunely, meets your thirst;
Where quick cameras click coyly
At the orange laden trees,
And the naughty gulf winds tamper
With some most exclusive knees.

On the sands of any bay
In expensive F L A
Lies a rotogravure heaven
Where plump golf bugs swarm to —pay.
On the coast of F L A
You can see if feet are clay.
And while gossips buzz like thunder
There the tan goes all the way.

INDEPENDENCE.

From "shorties" out to dance frocks,
What pleases proud Paree,
I wear. All styles are rigid,
For dubs—the like of me.

But on the up an up, bo,
Atop the social stair,
No "ham and" fashion writer
Could tell me what to wear.

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MAMIE HICKEY LOOKS BACK.

[Mamie knows she is an A1 stenographer and a B1 chorus lady, but she can find no glass partitioned cozy corner in an affluent corporation. Clothes chosen to knock a booking agent off his swivel chair prevent her from getting by an office manager's outposts.]

How memory makes the dead days dear!
I drop a salt and homesick tear
Recalling our old firm's cashier.

How could I ever think him crude
And kid him for the office prude,
When he, on pay day, would intrude?

That weekly check! I scorned it then,
And snubbed that dub for lesser men.
Ah, could I meet him once again!
My clothes, designed to smite the eyes
Of hard boiled Broadway booking guys,
Aren't what a secretary buys.

No office manager who's sane
Would credit me with half a brain.
Each man believes his eyes, 'tis plain.

But if in tasteful office guise
I sought a job with those called "wise,"
I'd meet as sceptical surprise.

To break her luck a girl despairs
When she is judged by what she wears.

THE YOUNGEST BOOK SHELF

by Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevans

In offering suggestions for the selecting of children's books, as I have been asked to do, it is necessary to make some sort of general grouping according to age. Of course, these lines drawn between ages can never be hard and fast ones, because some children develop more rapidly than others in their love and interest in books. Some times this is due to an innate love for them, some times to the influence of their parents.

However, there are certain underlying principles that can govern us in our choice of reading matter for the children, and there are certain facts that we have learned about the tastes of children at different ages.

Since, on the whole, books for the very little children are apt to be less thought about in the buying than those for any other age, we might begin by considering how we shall choose books for the littlest bookshelf.

From the time a baby is a toddler until he is, say, 5 years old, all his books must be chosen with two things in view—that he will look at the pictures, but the text will be read to him. So we must judge a book's suitability by its illustrations and its subject matter for reading aloud.

Forming His Taste.

In some ways, for the very young child's book the illustrations might be considered the more important, because the child sees the pictures but you can doctor up the text a little as you read. So what we want to look for in the way of pictures is not only something that will appeal to the child, but also something that will help to form his taste.

First, the pictures should be clear and full of action. They should be simple in technique and without too much detail. A mass of detail is very confusing to a child. Simplicity is a desirable thing. And it is a lack of this quality that we find in many illustrations that are so decorative that they overstep the mark as far as the children's interest is concerned.

In the second place, the pictures should measure up to some sort of artistic standard. By this I don't mean that they need be "arty" or of the over decorative type, but they should be well drawn or well painted. We don't want to place before our children's eyes the cheap and the garish, nor the frightening, nor the grotesque.

Reading Matter.

Now, as to the reading matter. In his very first books a child doesn't need much story—in fact, a long story or poem tires him. As he grows a little older he can stand more and more in quantity of text. Also, as a rule, he requires that a story be about pleasant things. Little children don't like ugly or unpleasant happenings, nor unhappy endings. My little boy couldn't stand Mr. McGregor in dear old "Peter Rabbitt," just because he put Peter's father into a meat pie! And I know of lots of other children who were made miserable by similar little things—and even asked their mothers to hide the books containing them.

Where all of the book is good except a page or a sentence it is better to skip the picture they don't like and delete parts of the story to suit their taste than to take the book away entirely. Because the time will come when they'll pass this tender hearted stage and not notice this part at all —when, in fact, they will enjoy all sorts of gory and melodramatic happenings. But not when they're at this youngest book age.

The subjects that the little children like their stories and poems to be about are pretty well defined. They adore animals, either as they naturally are or dressed up and doing half human things. They are interested in a story about all sorts of homey, familiar activities that come within their own experience, and they like to have read to them the adventures and doings of everyday children like themselves. Fairy tales really belong in a later period, being, after all, a more sophisticated type of story, though a few exceptions are to be found in some of the very simple folk tales that are being put out in charming book form today.

Two Periods.

It would be fascinating to have side by side, if it were possible, a collection of children's books of two periods—one representing those of today and the other the output of a time no longer ago than the childhood days of Kate Greenaway. Books for the children of even so recent a date were considered of such little importance that, illustrated, they were sold for a few pence a copy in England. What dreadful things they must have been! While today some of the finest artists of the world are lavishing their talent on the illustrating of books for children.

When it comes to buying books for the younger children, it is rather staggering to discover how much the fine ones cost. Many people feel it is a waste to spend money that way, thinking that little children are too destructive to own expensive books. They are really not so, if they have any sort of intelligent training. They can readily learn how to handle books, though their greatest difficulty when very tiny is in the turning of pages. Even a deft child has trouble with this at the beginning. So when he is learning, just don't give him books with brittle paper to practice on. But where it is feasible from the expense end, he should have some of the amusing and beautiful books of today given to him to use and to own.

But all the children's books need not be of this class. There are many inexpensive ones which are good and become dear to their hearts. These are books in which the illustrations may not measure up to the highest canons of art, but which are so quaint, so clear, so delightful that they deserve a place of their own in the littlest library.

List of Favorites.

A booklet is being prepared containing a selected list of the names and publishers of books for the littlest children, but a few are noted here for immediate use. This little list is made up of a few tried and true books—not books that look charming to the adult eye—but books little children really love to have read and re-read to them.

Women the World Over

The national bureau of economic research finds that the average wages of women are about three-quarters those of men.

Women in Russia are the freest in the world, according to members of the American investigation committee on Russian women.

Club women in London are making an earnest endeavor to break into the exclusive men's clubs there. So far they have been denied membership.

More than 60 per cent of all the women in Germany are now earning their own living and many of them are the sole support of whole families.

Mme. Paul Claudel, wife of the French ambassador to the United States, is a good cook and an excellent housekeeper.

A chain of 40 restaurants located in the principal cities of England is managed by a woman, Mrs. Hannah Mendelssohn.

It is estimated that from 19 to 24 per cent of the working girl's income must go toward being "well dressed and well groomed."

From paying teller to president is the record of Miss Hattie S. Bordewich, recently elected chief executive of the Oliva, Minn., State bank.

Following the footsteps of the younger women, the older women of Turkey are now beginning to have their hair bobbed as well as substituting modish hats for the silk scarfs of harem days.

In Tonga, the only independent nation in the south seas, a woman actually occupies the throne. Her majesty, Queen Salote, is absolute boss, not only over subjects, but over her prime minister as well.

Mrs. Leonard Wood, widow of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, first governor of Cuba, has been granted an annual pension of $6,000 by the Cuban congress.

The average wages of women are about three-quarters the amount paid to men, according to the National Bureau of Economic Research.

The chief occupation of the peasant women in soviet Russia is the weaving of rough cloth for husbands and children on hand spindles.

Best Way to Loosen Stubborn Cough

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, throat tickle, bronchial asthma, or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2⅓ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love it.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2⅓ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Sickness comes from germ-laden hands

Why risk family health when this purifying toilet soap removes germs as well as dirt?

ISN'T IT puzzling at times how children get sick?

Perfectly well one day—tearing around with their playmates—handling everything —pets, games, trash—just reveling in dirt and germs.

Then, perhaps, too long a wait before hands are washed—a chance for germs to enter the system—a little fatigue or exposure—and before you know it—sickness!

Germs—a constant menace

Children's hands, as well as grown-ups', are always in danger of disease germs, say health authorities. Hiding unseen on toys, books, pencils, money—and many other things we all must touch—these germs get on our hands and menace health. The Life Extension Institute lists 27 germ diseases hands may spread.

For health's sake, children in over 63,000 schools have been taught to use Lifebuoy—especially before eating. In millions of homes—for greater safety—everyone washes with Lifebuoy. Its antiseptic lather removes germs.

Note its clean scent

Children, men and women too, quickly learn to love Lifebuoy's clean scent—your proof that Lifebuoy purifies—yet which quickly evaporates after rinsing.

And the same gentle, antiseptic Lifebuoy lather that removes germs—purifies pores —keeps skins fresh, clear, healthy. Prevents embarrassing body odor, too.

Can You Believe It? CONSTIPATION of 40 Years Gone!

HERE IS, probably, the most remarkable statement ever made by anyone who has suffered from constipation and stomach trouble. But read for yourself what Mr. Allen says:

"I was troubled with chronic constipation for more than 40 years. Gas on the stomach often made me dizzy and bothered my heart. Nothing I used gave me more than temporary relief. I was told that there was nothing that would help much. But I tried Adlerika and am happy to say that my bowels are now very regular, and a slight case of piles is gone, too. Thanks to Adlerika I feel younger and happy again."—Geo. A. Allen, Westboro, Mass.

Quick Action Surprises

AS GENTLY and naturally as taking a drink of water, Adlerika acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowels, bringing immediate relief from gas bloating, intestinal stasis and chronic constipation.

The very FIRST dose of Adlerika often brings out astonishing amounts of old waste matter from the intestinal canal. This poisonous matter may have been in the intestines a long time, causing gas, headache, sleeplessness and many other symptoms. A treatment of a few weeks with Adlerika often corrects chronic constipation and intestinal stasis, so that just a small dose, now and then, keeps the intestines and stomach in a most satisfactory condition.

What Doctors Say

DR. H. LOUIS SHOUB, B. Sc., well-known New York pathologist, after laboratory tests on living subjects, states: "Adlerika very markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli. This feature increases the therapeutic value of Adlerika, because, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action, it inhibits the growth of these intestinal bacteria."

Dr. A. J. Lancaster, a physician of over a quarter century's active experience, makes this statement: "In the treatment of gastro-intestinal disorders, (where thorough evacuation is indicated), Adlerika has no equal."

Dr. Carl Weschcke, a graduate of the world-famous medical University of Heidelberg, Germany, in his private practice, first perfected the intestinal cleanser and carminative now known as Adlerika. It is a compound of a specially processed saline intestinal evacuant with buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other ingredients which expel gas and have detergent action.

Adlerika, unlike most other medicines, acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowels. It is recognized by many physicians as the one dependable remedy for gas, intestinal stasis and chronic constipation, or whenever real intestinal cleansing is needed.

Even if your bowels move every day, Adlerika may surprise you by bringing out poisonous, gas-forming matter which you would never believe was in your system.

In just a single month, over one thousand men and women wrote that they obtained wonderful relief from even a short treatment with Adlerika. Many of them said that now, after all other treatments and medicines had failed, they are at last rid of gas, indigestion, sour stomach, sleeplessness, nervousness or other trouble due in their cases to intestinal stasis. And now, these folks say, they are again able to eat and enjoy the foods they like.

No matter what you have tried for the bowels and stomach, Adlerika will surprise you.

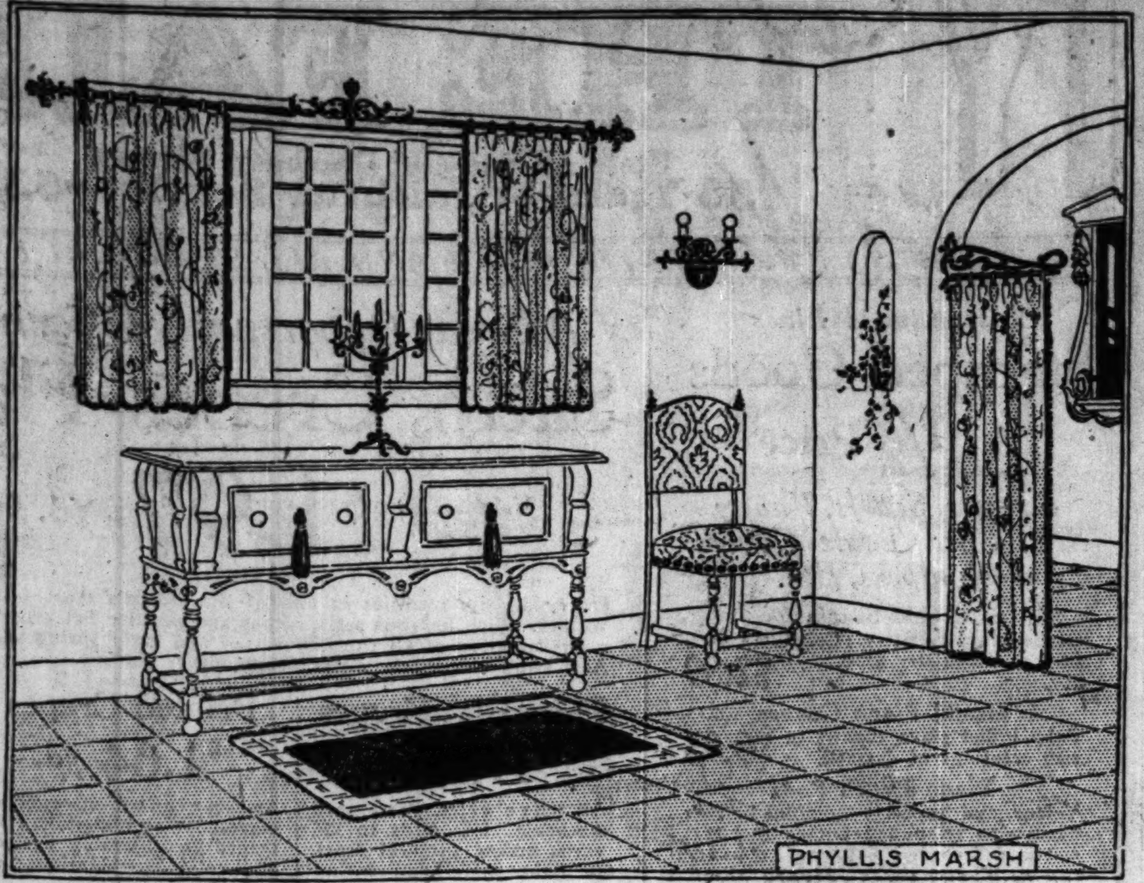
The HOME HARMONIOUS

The Furnishing of the Spanish House Is an Interesting and Worth While Task

By Phyllis Marsh



Interesting arrangement of Spanish furniture in a modern dining room.

AT the present time there is much interest in the home of Spanish architecture. The actual development of this type in this country took place in California and in Florida and has spread rapidly within the last few years.

From the standpoint of both climate and scenery these two states present an ideal setting for the Spanish home with its colored exterior, patio, wrought iron grilled windows, and rambling dimensions. Nevertheless, this same architecture and its appropriate landscape gardening may be transplanted to almost any state today with most charming results. The modern architect, like the modern furniture designer, is gifted with a keen understanding of properly applied adaptation. It is to him that much credit is due.

Rough plastered walls, beamed ceilings, arched windows, luxuriant and colorful fabrics, heavily carved and rather massive furniture, intermingled with wrought iron, are characteristics of the Spanish interior. The floors of the Spanish home may be of decorative tile, wide oak flooring boards, tile effect in linoleum or rubber composition, etc. For this home in a northern environment the wood or linoleum floor is best and will be found much warmer in winter than a tiled one. The rugs used may be confined to those of oriental character, of rather bold geometric pattern, Spanish Alpujarras, which take their name from the district from whence they come, or other rugs of Spanish origin, as well as some of our own country's Navajo rugs.

Damask and silk velour play the principal rôle as drapery fabrics in the home of Spanish feeling. However, it is possible to use other suitable and decoratively effective fabrics, such as heavily embroidered Crewel panels, hand blocked linen in the heavy style of Jacobean pattern, wide, colorfully striped antique satins, brocatelles, machine made Sardinian embroideries, which are comparatively new, and materials of similar character.

The walls, which should be done in a rough plaster glaze finish, may be tinted in a neutral tone or may boast a tint of any color suitable to the exposure of the rooms. Walls of this type act as a sort of foil for the lovely, richly colored drapery fabrics and wall hangings of tapestry and other materials which may be used.

In various ways wrought iron plays an important part in achieving some of the decorative and characteristic charm of the modern Spanish home. For the side lights or wall sconces there are many suitable styles from which to make a choice. Then there are many styles of appropriate wrought iron drapery poles which can add so much to the distinction of a Spanish interior. For the arched in-swinging Spanish window or the arched doorway between rooms there is a new treatment being used in the form of wrought iron swinging curtain cranes. They are proving a wonderful boon to the perplexed home decorator who is so often at a loss to know just how to treat the in-swinging arched casement window and archways.

There are also separate table and floor lamps, as well as candle holders of various types to be considered. Some of these should be of wrought iron, while others should be of pottery of suitable contour, design and color, with parchment shades to correspond. If there is a fireplace [and we hope there is] wrought iron again enters into the decorative scheme of the Spanish interior, for andirons, fuel basket, and fire set must be of the same metal. Arched planked doors should be elaborately hinged with wrought iron, while an opening or two, between hall and living room, may display an attractively designed grille or wrought iron gate.

Last, but not least, comes the selection of furniture which may be of authentic or adapted reproduction. It should be chosen carefully, and should consist only of those pieces which are both useful as well as decoratve. If the room is not extremely large, it is always wisest to select a less elaborate or sumptuous style of Spanish furniture than that which one would choose for the room of large dimensions. However, in either case color must be introduced in characteristic style and to be typically Spanish must consist of bright reds, yellows and greens. These can be worked out in the draperies, wall hangings, rugs and upholstery and if carefully done will be capable of producing a room of unusual charm.

In selecting the furniture and in its placement, care must be exercised in order to achieve a certain amount of austerity and dignity which is characteristic of the Spanish interior. Much of this feeling can be relieved, however, by the use of colorful wall hangings, warm toned wall tapestries, and rugs, colorful draperies and upholstery fabrics. Often hanging wall-pockets for trailing ivy add a softening touch to the severity of the rough plastered interior of a Spanish dwelling. Small niches and recessed book shelves, gayly colored, contribute their share to the decorative scheme, with their colorful books and ornaments of various kinds.

The massive and elaborately carved construction and the sumptuousness of the upholstery of much of the Spanish furniture necessitates economy of use. For the average sized living room of modern Spanish adaptation, the following pieces of "period" style furniture will probably suffice for both comfort and a homelike attractiveness. An overstuffed davenport, upholstered in either a linen frisé, linen, ramie, or cotton velour or mohair, preferably in red, is the essential piece of furniture. Next, there should be two or three carved arm chairs of different designs, upholstered in silk or cotton velour, "cut" or brocaded velvet, or a small geometrically patterned linen frisé.

A couple of these chairs might be trimmed with heavy wool tassel fringe while the third one could be adorned with fancy antique finished large brass headed nails, and each chair upholstered in a different fabric. A side chair could be included to match one of the three chairs, which might be used for a cabinet desk when needed.

In like manner the dining room must, of necessity, be furnished in equally characteristic style. If more color is desired here the draperies should be of a colorfully patterned hand blocked linen in a bold design, possibly of Jacobean inspiration. Red and gold brocatelle, green and gold antique damask, plain tapestry, mohair, or any other fabric of similar character and texture suitable to the style of the furniture may be chosen for the chairs. The floor, whether covered in tiled linoleum, genuine tile, or in wood, may boast several small or one large Spanish or Oriental rug of suitable pattern and coloring.

The wrought iron wall sconces and the suspended central ceiling fixture should be fitted out with amber colored frosted bulbs to mellow the general tone of the room. Suitable buffet, serving table and between meal scarfs may be of brocade, velvet, damask, etc.

Massiveness and ornate carving are characteristic of the bedroom furniture of Spanish style. Therefore, let the selection of fabrics here be confined to those of proper color and texture. For a sumptuous effect damask lends itself best for both the draperies and the spread. If a less elaborate treatment is desired, let the hand blocked and printed fabrics of bold design and gay colorings substitute.

HAS FILIAL LOVE DISAPPEARED?

From the True Stories Recounted Today It Seems to Be a Very Rare Trait for the Modern Child to Possess

BY DORIS BLAKE.

A STORY was related to me of a couple who had reared two sons, each married now. Mr. and Mrs. Stone, we'll call them, had a lifelong dream. They lived on the east coast. Their dream was to spend a winter in California. Mrs. Stone had a sister living out there. Mr. Stone suffered periodically from rheumatism. He bore it with fortitude, smiling at Ma Stone when she'd say: "Never mind, daddy; when we get out to California you'll forget all about it."

For years, more than either could remember, when anything went wrong the panacea was: "Well, never mind; we'll go to California some day."

That thought cheered them. It cheered them through the measles and the chicken pox, croups, cold, flu, and through the afflictions common to the ordinary business of family rearing.

Mr. Stone was a moderate wage earner. Mrs. Stone, though not a native down east Yankee, had become inoculated with enough of the thrift germs to make every dollar account for its full value. No work was farmed out that her own willing hands could perform. The result was that there was a tidy little home free from mortgage and enough in the bank after the second son's marriage to permit of the long dreamed of trip to California.

They reckoned their "spree" would eat a considerable hole in the $2,000 they'd take along. But there was the insurance on which they'd met the payments with religious regularity. There were three other thousand dollars in the bank and Daddy Stone's lifelong employer dared him not to come back after his three months' leave.

The future optimistically bright, Mamma and Daddy Stone set about getting travel literature for the ideal route to their promised land. And Ma Stone set about getting her wardrobe. About a week later, she came home from the dressmaker's one evening. Her first born was sitting in the living room. His wife was with him. An untidy little fellow of 4 was propped on Grandpa Stone's knee.

A Dishonest Son.

To make a painful séance as short as possible, the mission of the first born and his selfish wife was to get the lifetime savings out of the old couple. They wanted to go to California and set up in business out there. The son had heard of a great opening there for a fellow with a few thousand. Ma and pa were old. The son and his wife would go out and make the fortune and then send for them to come and live with them.

The little fellow had been primed for his part in the game. He begged grandma and grandpa to let him go to California, telling them with hugs and kisses how much he loved them.

The younger son, somehow, got wind of the transaction before the money was turned over. He went to his brother and among other things the older son emerged with after the combat was a couple of black eyes. The older son, he found out, was going in on some wildcat gambling scheme and had no intention whatever of leaving for California. The wife, it seems, was the inspiration behind the get rich plan and the threat of exposure of some early associations of hers was the final means of saving the old couple their savings and their trip to California.

A note was received a few days after the encounter of the brothers by the old folks, which read to the effect "that on further investigation of that California matter they found it inadvisable to consider it." So Mom and Daddy Stone set off in blissful ignorance of the real story of their regained fortune, and from recent postcards they are having the proverbial good time and wish we were all along.

That was a happier ending than the tales many parents might tell of sacrifices demanded of them by selfish children. Behind many a mother-in-law story in which she is related as the offensive and offending party is another tale that would quickly turn the tide of sympathy to her were she as ready to broadcast her wrongs.

Unjust Treatment.

One within my direct knowledge is the presence in the home of a mother-in-law who deeded over her house and her small savings on promise of being lovingly tended for the rest of her life. The money has long since been dissipated in an unsuccessful business venture, and the poor old woman is submitted to treatment no servant would stand for.

Another display of the injustice shown by children to their parents is that of a daughter and mother of three who bitterly resents the slightest intrusion of her parent in the conduct of her home. Yet that mother is constantly being subjected to innuendoes and on more than one occasion open criticism, because she goes along without asking her daughter's advice in the conduct of her life. This mother was upbraided by her daughter for not asking somebody's advice about what she should do with her money. If mother, on the other hand, had said that a dollar a week was too much pin money for the oldest of her daughter's three boys there would have been a bitter retort about whose business that was.

Children too often are given to thinking of their parents as inexhaustible sources of supply. Theirs is but to ask and they should receive. That parents are individuals with rights and preferences is a fact that should be more generally respected.

There are daughters who seem to think simply because their mothers have reached the grandmother age that pleasures of their own are almost expressions of indecency. They turn over their children for mother to look after while they lunch, dine, shop, or go on vacations. And a paid nursemaid would get more thanks for the duties performed, or less criticism, at least, if the instructions as to diet and clothes were not carried out to the letter.

There are other children who would take the last dollar from parents, caring little whether or not the old folks would like to look forward to the day when they might take things a bit easier. These, of course, are social outcasts, or should be branded as such in fiery letters.

Shirking Responsibility.

And there are children who run off and get married, bring home child, husband or wife, as the case may be, and expect their parents to assume their matrimonial burdens. And girls who find they can't, or won't get along with their husbands, run back home with their children, believing it is their divine right to be protected and provided for by mother and father, who may have all they can do to take care of themselves. That they may be eating up the old-age fund of their parents concerns them very little, if at all. They are the first to resent the burden of mother or father should the tables be turned later.

Parents, no doubt, will be mothers and fathers always—at least, the kind that are grafted on. They'll give their last dollar; they'll sacrifice their own desires, their own comforts, their well-deserved years of ease for parasitic sons and daughters. But if every grafting son and daughter would realize that they are parasites, and parasites of the lowest order, it might help them to see that after a couple has worked for, supported, and raised one family they are entitled to a few of the pleasures they have had to deny themselves throughout the years. Also, that they have rights entitling them and them only to the money they have managed to scrape together during their lifetime. Also, since it is their savings, they are entitled, as human beings, to spend those savings as they see fit.

And they are wise parents who make their children understand that they have rights to be respected. Parents who are not too sacrificial are in little danger of becoming burdens or of being burdened with the support of their children and their children's children.

Do the Same Thing.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a girl dearly and I know she loves me, but every time I take her out she is always talking about another fellow. Do you think she is trying to make me jealous? BILL."

Don't let her get away with it, Bill. Make up a few fanciful yarns about some beautiful blonde who thinks you're pretty nice. She won't like it and it will open her eyes to her mistake.

Keep Her Busy.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am in love with a girl who loves me, but lately a friend of mine is interfering—flirting with her. Do you think I'll lose her? What can I do to keep her? J. D. K."

You needn't lose her if you're on the job, J. D. K. Make it a point to be more attentive than usual and keep her so dated up she won't have time for flirting with others. It's up to you.

Too Old for Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 17 and like a fellow who is 29. I believe he is too old for me. HOME GIRL."

You would have little in common with a man so much older. He is ready to settle down and you are just beginning to taste the good times of youth.

Parents Know Best.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 15 and am in high school. All the girls in my room go out with fellows. A fellow from my room asked me to go out with him but my parents disapprove. What shall I do? Is it correct for my parents to disapprove? He is a very nice boy. Please advise. CUTY."

If your parents disapprove, do not accept his invitation, Cuty. They feel you are still young and that it is for your best interests to wait awhile before going out with the boys, as it might interfere with your studies.

Taller than He.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am writing this for my girl friend. Her boy friend says if she gets any taller he won't go out with her because she is now a trifle taller than he is. ROSE."

Boys like to feel they are strong and manly, that girls look up to them and depend upon them for protection. It's difficult for a boy to have this confidence in himself when he must look up to the girl, Rose.

Nice to His Friend.

"Dear Miss Blake: I introduced my girl to a friend of mine. Since then she does not seem to pay much attention to me. When I am alone with her she acts differently and does not seem to have changed. Please advise. "PUZZLED."

Aren't you allowing jealousy to creep in, Puzzled? The young man is your friend and naturally she wants to be nice to him for your sake.

What Dr. Caldwell Learned in 47 Years Practice

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their systems. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

Intimate Bits Concerning Busy Chicagoans, North, South, and West Siders

By Edward Burns.

ART LUEDER, the w. k. postmaster, says he has run his business up higher than ever. Well, competition isn't so strong in his line.

Many business men on the near west side have become volleyball bugs. T. I. Foster, box manufacturer, of 1553 West Madison, has become so pleased with progress that he's booked a game for Tuesday night in Elgin with a team of Kane county men.

Lou Barbour Sr., 8053 South Throop street, is a water widower. Mrs. Elsa is a member of the Sinai swimming team and Lou Jr. is an aquatic star at Englewood High. Mother and son plunge almost every night, but pap is afraid to get into even the family tub without water wings.

Charles Ehegartner, the big fish and lobster man of 4021 Broadway, plans to close his pinochle season early and go to New Orleans. "If the railroads don't get the money the doctors and pinochlers will," says Mrs. E.

Mrs. Mabel Lunde, 3467 West Madison street, who was hit by an auto as she alighted from a taxicab on New Year's eve, was able to return to her shop several days ago.

William L. O'Day, 4008 Washington boulevard, the distinguished private detective, has a new wrinkle for trying out applicants for sleuthing jobs. He sends them over the west park system to see if they can find an intersection with no stop light.

Sergts. William Shanley and William O'Donnell of the East Chicago avenue station are involved in the Kegel-Bundesen controversy. Shanley has a four months old offspring he's training under Bundesen rules, while O'Donnell, whose baby also is four months, has switched to the advice of a motorman, father of eleven.

John Hertz's polo ponies are not getting the winter lay-off enjoyed by Reigh Count, Anita Peabody, et al. Mr. Hertz shipped his entire stable of polo performers to Miami, Fla., last Wednesday.

Our Mayor Bill Thompson says the best old sea chanty he has heard in years was "Gumbo Sal" on board the schooner Elsa at the Boston Tea wharf. Get him to sing it for you.

Ald. Donald F. McKinley of the 19th ward and some of his south side colleagues are all steamed up over the idea that their section of town is not going to cut in adequately on the $100,000,000 about to be spent for city improvements.

Rob Crowe, the king's counsel, so to speak, says h—l can't be such a mean place when you've got a cold like his'n. That's a harsh thought for the curly-headed lad whose picture you see above this item, but the lad is the same Rob. He looked like that when he was 3 years old.

DR. O. G. WERNICKE, 3532 West Adams street, who, unlike Achilles, found his heel his most vulnerable spot, after he had broken it four months ago, is able to be out again despite the fact that broken heels usually rate from one to two years' confinement.

Smiling George Eldridge, 555 North Austin boulevard, an invalid for five years and destined to spend his life in bed, is apace with the revived popularity of "hooked" rugs. Mr. Eldridge last Tuesday, completed the weaving of his fifty-ninth rug.

Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom has been invited to speak at the dinner-dance to be given next Thursday evening by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce at the Swedish clubhouse, 73d street and Cregier avenue. The affairs is in honor of newly elected officers of the chamber.

MASTER IN CHANCERY JAMES J. KELLY, 6859 Jeffery avenue, sister, Miss Nona Kelly, and niece, Miss Gertrude Kelly, have left for a four months' visit on the west coast.

Frank P. Ross, 531 North East avenue, Oak Park, who made his several millions in a score or more different manufacturing enterprises, is just plain "capitalist" now. He sold his last factory interest, a soap works in Dayton, O., last week.

Congressman M. A. Michaelson has been in Havana relaxing a bit. Whether Congressman Michaelson is on a business mission is not known, nor is it known whether he has been picking the winners' consistently at Oriental park.

A prohibition agent, getting measured for a snappy set of patent teeth, confided to Dr. Lewis A. Dyer, Ashland and Madison, that "most prohibition agents now are starving to death. Joke on Doc: He thought the agent was talking about food shortage.

Col. Matt Winn, the famed public benefactor, has just returned from a visit to New York, where he entreated leading hoss men to do right by our village by not keeping all the good nags in the east, come this summer.

Mrs. Wendell Hall and Miss Flora Martin, 4351 North Paulina street, who last week organized the Ravenswood Rotund Ladies' Walking society, have dissolved the organization after one meeting. The abandonment was caused by "fretting dogs."

Some of this town's most eloquent orators are billed to say a few kind words at the opening of the handsome new Chelten theater, 79th street and Exchange avenue, next Friday evening. There also will be a comedy and other things for those who don't care for speeches.

Friends gave Henry Busche, 100 Washington boulevard, Oak Park, a jade cage for his canary. Mrs. B. was a bit miffed when Henry required her to postpone entertainment of her club until he had the front room done over in green to harmonize with the cage.

Honest John Alger, 1523 Dearborn parkway, has announced that he positively is not a candidate for the United States senate, no matter what final action may be taken in the case of Frank Smith, senator elect.

The family physician has ordered Mrs. Irene Blum, 1101 Independence boulevard, to quit feeding those big medium-rare porterhouses to her husband, Albert, the rubber broker. Mr. Blum has rheumatism and sits and reads the cook book for hours at a time.

U. S. Commissioner Henry C. Beitler, 4641 Dover street, though in a weakened condition from several weeks' illness, appeared in his court Wednesday and bravely listened to bootleggers tell how the whisky found behind their bars was planted there by their mothers-in-law, etc.

Mrs. Gertie Waterfall, who opened a candy store on Randolph street a year and a half ago "to occupy her time," has sold the place and now is spending her spare moments bossing the servants in one of those elegant new residences at Grace and Sheridan.

Principal Benjamin F. Buck of Senn High, 5900 Glenwood avenue, says that response of citizens to the invitation to sign petitions for an addition to the school buildings has exceeded the expectations of persons sponsoring the action.

The Rev. F. E. Davison, pastor of the Austin Boulevard Christian church, after conducting a radio series of religious services at 7:30 mornings, says the response leaves him with no regrets at having got up before daylight each morning during the zero snap.

Mabel G. Reinecke, collector of internal revenue, with income tax scheduling two months away, is organizing

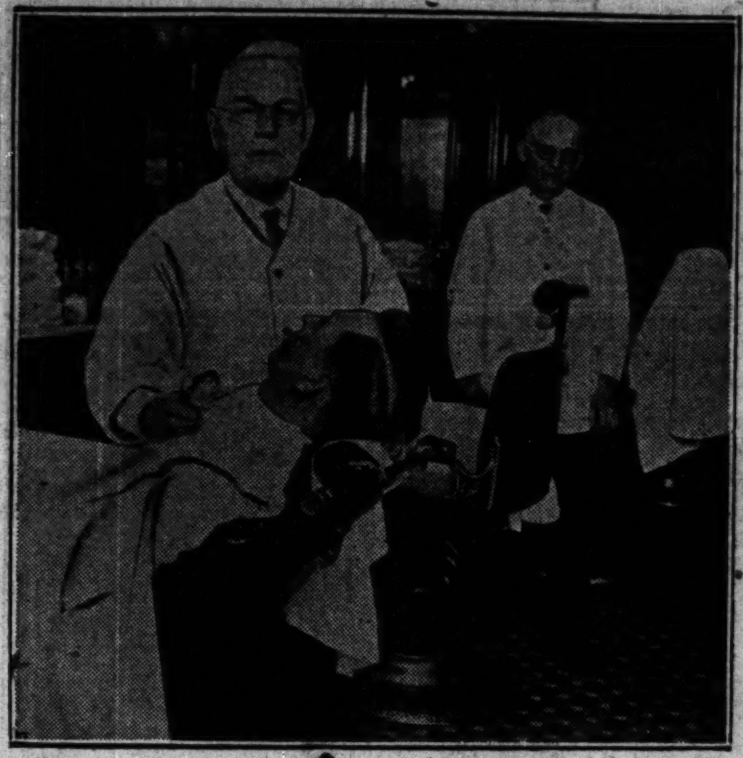
"YES, THOSE WERE THE DAYS."



THE days are just as busy as they ever were for Hiram Harmon in his barber shop at Madison street and Sacramento boulevard. Conversation and the style of haircuts have changed in forty years, that's all. Used to be that all Hiram's customers talked about was the races at the old Garfield Park track. He still reminisces with some of the old-timers about the horses, but, being only 75 years old, he understands the lingo of the flaming youth trade, too. During the forty years that he's conducted business in the same block, Hiram has watched the various stages through which whiskers have passed until their almost total extinction.

West Side Cafeteria Cashier Collects $50 for Politeness

But the Reporter Finds Many Close Rivals

By the Politeness Reporter.

WHEN I started out the other day on THE TRIBUNE'S quest I had no idea that such a person as Mrs. May Prutsman existed among the city's millions. It was by mere chance that I swung off a street car into the particular west side neighborhood where she was employed. Certainly, to her, I was just one of the mass whom she had never seen before and might never see again. Had she been less willing to go out of her way during those minutes when I was in her presence she would not now be planning on making use of the $50 award that has fallen into her lap.

I cannot say Mrs. Prutsman's politeness impressed me that day because of contrast with experiences in which I had been shown marked discourtesy. Maybe the weather had something to do with it—a January thaw day with the sun shining and the results of a bygone blizzard trickling off to the gutters. In fact, the first person I met with whom I sought to pass the time of day was a man in a shabby coat and a leaky pair of shoes. He was shoveling the snow from the walk in front of a drug store.

"And what," I butted in, "do you think you're doing?"

HIS LIFE AMBITION

And John Kessler, with a room at a West Madison street hotel when he can scrape up the 25 cents to pay for it, leaned on his shovel and smiled a toothless smile. No, I wasn't bothering him. When he finished the task he was to be paid enough to buy a meal. Beyond that, nothing in life was certain. Really, he wanted to talk. He had come from Russia. He was 40 now and he had an ambition. It was to get a regular job as a dishwasher. He seemed reluctant to have me go my way.

John could have been no more polite had we met on the street of a lazy southern village rather than with the roar of Chicago about us. But I judged that in that roar it had been a long time since John had heard a "how-do-you-do" intended for his particular ears. His politeness, I told myself, was mingled with appreciation. It wasn't exactly the thing I sought.

At the corner of Grand avenue and Ashland boulevard stood a man well dressed and of dignified mien. A man absorbed in the business at which he was about. Competition was keen and to meet it required energy, and to answer the fool questions of insignificant strangers meant a drain on that energy needed for conversations that would bring something into the pocketbook.

He was waiting for the Ashland car and I stepped over to him and fired a string of questions. It took him a moment or two to change his mental processes so as to enable him to give me consideration.

"No, I wouldn't say Ashland was the main business section on the west side," he corrected kindly, following my misquoting of part of his information. "I didn't say exactly that. There's Western and Kedzie and Crawford."

IT'S THE CLIMATE!

The car came and we climbed aboard. Instead of going on to a seat, he remained with me on the back platform, taking up the conversation where he had left off.

"You'll find the west side a great district if it's new to you," he went on. "There was a time when I could have bought lots for $40 a front foot on Ogden and now it's a thousand. Did you ever see a nicer day?"

I had to pinch myself to make sure I wasn't in California on account of his climate and real estate booster talk—rare in take-it-for-granted Chicago.

"Seems so everybody's out trying to sell something these days," I remarked with intended tactlessness, noting the leather case he carried.

He handed me his card—E. H. Hendrix, 12 South Winchester avenue. He wasn't in the real estate line. It was the polite effort at self-introduction, and he said nothing more about his own business. A tall, middle aged man who had brushed up with life at every angle.

"Madison and Ashland would land you pretty much in the heart of things," he suggested. "It's just a block or two now."

And he bade me a friendly "goodby" as the car clanged on and ended the one occasion in our lives when our paths probably would ever cross.

I had his card. He hadn't asked mine in return. He had simply made an effort to make my day a bit brighter instead of resenting my bothering. Yet, I pressed on with the magic card.

Mrs. Mary Prutsman of 1633 Jackson boulevard, west side cafeteria cashier, who finds politeness pays.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

BRIGHTENING THE CORNER

Confining my activities to the stretch of Ashland boulevard between Madison and Van Buren street and west on Van Buren, I dashed in and out of stores, testing dispositions and seeking for some one who would impress me with his politeness to a point where the magic card would pop out of my pocket.

I haggled with a clothing store clerk about the neckties he had for sale, I accused a messenger boy of loitering, I complained to the proprietress of a beauty shop that her establishment was not the one I sought. The clerk agreed that, after all, the choosing of neckwear was a "matter of taste" and, while he felt his assortment covered about everything there was in the market, it was possible the particular one to suit my whims was missing. The telegraph boy gathered up a snowball and threw it in another direction. And the beauty parlor woman, all in white, left the hair of her customer back in the booth to frizzle in its permanenting process to

"CHICAGO MAY," QUEEN OF THE UNDERWORLD

Launched Equal Rights for Women Among the Rogues and Swindlers

Cleverest of Female Crooks Will Be Bride

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick.

THE next time Englewood Edna, or the Tiger Lady, or the Baby Bandit takes a curtain call as as something new in lady criminals, with a superlative technique, don't bother to toss too many bouquets.

Just recall the name and fame of "Chicago May." And you'll recollect that, criminally speaking at least, the good olds days were indeed the good old days.

For just as Holinshed's Chronicles furnished the foundation for Shakespeare's historical plays, so is "Chicago May" the source book for the girls who today get their names scratched across the police blotters. Only "Chicago May" made the front page of newspapers oftener than she made the desk sergeant's entry book.

BACK ON PAGE ONE

She was called the world's cleverest woman crook, back when the century was turning. And the distinction was not unmerited.

Recent report that this one-time queen [she's now 52] of beauty, blackmail, and burglary is soon to marry Netley N. Lucas, 26, British author and criminologist, has brought her back to the news columns, where she once figured so prominently.

For in the Chicago world's fair days it was this good looking girl, with the baby stare, the fluffy hair, and the innocent eyes, who was heralded as the country's first shoplifter. A dreamy smile beguiled the salesmen. A voluminous but modish skirt with inside pockets housed the plunder. And enchanting eyes covered the get-away.

THE TRAIL BLAZER

She was really a pioneer in woman's rights in a world of crooks. In Chicago, too, she is credited with having perfected the fainting fit, during the agonies of which she would revive sufficiently to steal watches and scarfpins of the men who were helping her.

In London, later, she went busily along this same highway of invention. It was she, they say, who introduced the camera into the art of blackmail. A confederate, concealed behind the arras, snapped the pictures. And they do say that British barristers, members of parliament, and even a knight or two paid no end of money to gain permanent possession of these photographic plates.

Then there was her hansom cab trick. She dearly loved to lure men into cabs with her. Once in the cab, she always liked to have their arms about her trim waist, her blonde head on their shoulder. This loving position gave her opportunity to bury her lips in his scarf and deftly to bite out the scarfpin. She always, of course, chose a man with a diamond pin, and the diamond was real.

Occasionally her companion called the police. Not often. But there never was evidence, and the prosecution always failed.

LIFE'S UPS AND DOWNS

It was in the spring of 1901 that she started, first up to dazzling splendors of wealth and excitement, and then down to prison sentences. For it was then that she met Eddie Guerin, Chicago's famed "Cockney Eddie," who was later to rob the American Express company in Paris, then to be sent for life to Devil's Island, that direful penal colony in French Guiana which earlier had held Capt. Dreyfus.

She, as an accomplice of Guerin's, was sentenced to five years at the French convent prison at Montpelier, and got out just about the time Guerin made his way to fame and freedom as the first, and some say the only, prisoner ever to escape from Devil's Island.

But more of "Chicago May."

She was born Mary Vechs, the blue-eyed, golden-haired daughter of a German baker on the east side in New York. She soon changed the name to May Vivienne, and her favorite last name was Latimer. But as she went from adventure to adventure she had many others. Some of them were May Fletcher, Katie Fitzgerald, Mary Guerin, and Mary Miller. But "Chicago May" Churchill was the name that lasted.

As a young girl she came to Chicago and put herself through a rigorous apprenticeship as a smart shoplifter before going back to New York for a career as a blackmailer. In New York her sweet face and her large eyes [victims were wont to swear they were hypnotic eyes] won her a place in the "Salvation Army" chorus of a musical revue. It was about this time that she made the acquaintance of a crook called "the king of the badgers."

Tiring, presently, of the gay and uncertain life, she married a man named Sharp. He is supposed to have committed suicide in despair. "Chicago May" went on to London, where she fell in love with a drill master. He was ordered to South Africa, in the Boer war. She tried to follow him as a nurse. Refused permission, she thought of taking her own life. But she didn't.

Instead, she rented a house in Montagu place and began to mystify police and Scotland Yard with her stunts. Her score in blackmail includes one earl, a knight, half a dozen canny barristers, and a number of wealthy clubmen. There was rarely a prosecution; never a conviction. Her camera technique was said to be perfect. Most of her accomplices landed in jail, and she went to Paris for a rest and some new clothes. She came back to a house in Bloomsbury.

EDDIE ENTERS

In the spring of 1901, in the Horseshoe tavern—a rendezvous for crooks and adventurers and Bohemians—situated in Tottenham Court row, she met Eddie Guerin.

Eddie, member of a respectable Chicago family, had left this city when he thought he had killed a detective in a quarrel over a woman. In 1882 he robbed the Mechanics' bank at Galesburg, and escaped. Next he turned up in Pittsburgh, where he robbed a ticket office and was sentenced to the Allegheny City Western penitentiary. He escaped and went over to London. In May, 1889, he went down to Lyons, dressed up in a frock coat and fawn colored gloves, robbed the bank, and was sentenced to ten years at hard labor in the Auvergne mountains. Then back to Chicago, to work on the west side at his trade of a tailor, just about the time "Chicago May" was leaving the city. But the two never met until that night in the Horseshoe tavern. Let Eddie Guerin tell it in his own words:

"There I met a woman; a goddess, I should say.

UNITED

"Tall and beautifully proportioned, with an abundance of golden hair; the real thing, not the peroxide variety, and a complexion of delicate pink and cream, large blue eyes shaded with long, dark lashes, and a mouth the upper lip of which formed a perfect cupid's bow, while the lower was straight and full and ripe. Such was the vision of loveliness I beheld and instantly coveted."

The two former Chicagoans exchanged reminiscences. She said she had reformed. He said he had. He had been serving as an interpreter at the Paris exposition and so three days later, the two of them went to Paris, as Mr. and Mrs. Brown. Mrs. Brown was "radiant, lovely, elegantly attired, blazing with valuable jewelry."

But they both went to bad luck: he, to a life sentence on Devil's Island; she, to the isolation of a French female prison.

For, in spite of their resolutions of reformation, it wasn't long—April 16—before the American Express company in Paris was robbed of 30,000 francs. A man called "Dutch Gus," whose real name was George Miller, a former sweetheart of "Chicago May," was immediately arrested. Guerin and "Chicago May" took the first train for Calais, hopeful of getting into England. On the train Guerin was arrested. His companion tried to act the grand English lady, but she protested too much, and her haughty ways were overdone. The French detective turned to her and said:

"All right, Chicago May, we know you. It's better you go to London, don't you think, while you are safe?"

SEPARATED

She went to London in safety, but returned for the trial; whether to help Eddie or Dutch Gus no two stories agree. The most romantic version is that she came back to help Eddie, got ensnared, and received her five years' sentence. When she heard his life sentence she is said to have implored the judge to give her a similar one. Anyway, she kissed her hand to the judge as they led her away.

Women interested in her case got her out of jail after she had served three of her five years. She bought some new clothes and sailed down to Brazil, where she caused an English nobleman to fall in love with her and then, distracted at the revelation that she was "Chicago May," to kill himself.

Then back to London and the Horseshoe tavern in the spring of 1906. Guerlin had bribed jailers, wooed a warden's wife, suffered unspeakable privations, had starved and fought and sickened, and finally had made his miraculous way back to Chicago to the home of his sister, 125 St. Louis avenue. But he grew restive and went to Canada, across to England, and back to the tavern.

WHEN LOVE GROWS COLD

Here again the stories differ. He says "Chicago May" had never loved him and wanted revenge for having been sent to jail. Others say she had risked everything for him and now he repudiated her for an Emily Skinner. He says she said: "I'll send you back to Devil's Island, to die like a dog." She says she never said it.

"Chicago May" and a new friend, "the man from nowhere," who was in reality a Charles Smith, got him tossed into Brixton jail and held for thirteen months pending extradition fights. He grew suddenly British, swore he had been born in Hoxton, England, and that the only reason he hadn't tried to prove citizenship before was that it would have meant that his aged mother [and he said he was her favorite child] would have been dragged into the controversy. He won his point and was not sent back to France.

But four days after his release from jail a mysterious man shot at him. The bullets merely crippled his foot. "Chicago May" was found hiding down an alley, and Charles Smith had the gun. They were tried.

TRUE CONFESSIONS

And once again, on a hot July morning in 1907, "Chicago May" stood in court, this time in New Baily, and heard a judge pronounce sentence on her. This time it was for fifteen years in prison at Aylesbury, England. But she was still able to smile at the judge. She served ten of the fifteen years and came out, reformed and autobiographical. She began to write her confessions.

But Eddie, too, had written his confessions. As a note to the prospective bridegroom we offer this sentence from Guerin's memoirs:

"O, woman, woman! You have much to answer for. Look at my own case, for instance. Ah, if I had never known Chicago May!"

YESTERDAY morning I decides that it might be a good idea to have a pint bottle of Liquid Lightning around our shack in case of sickness, unexpected company, expected company, or the blues. Therefore I grabs the telephone and calls a certain number.

"Hello," answers the party.

"Hello," says I; "is this Clarence?"

"No," says the voice. "Clarence ain't here no more. He has went away and left no forwarding address."

"This is Al," says I.

"O, hello, Al," says the voice; "this is Clarence."

"Gallop over here with a pint," says I; "and don't add too much Lake Michigan to it! The last bottle I got from you must have contained at least three spoonfuls of booze. You should have stuck one of those 'Shake Well Before Using' labels on it."

"All right," says he; "what brand do you want?"

"I really hadn't given that any thought," says me.

"Well," says Clarence, "I'll bring eight different labels with me, an' in the meantime you can be making up your mind about it."

THREE IN ONE

A half hour later he rang my doorbell. Clarence is an ornery looking hombre what weighs 285 pounds. He's built like a cross between Strangler Lewis and a ferry boat. He has a complexion like a girl—an Indian girl. I wouldn't exactly call him handsome; in fact, his mug always reminds me of a train wreck. He's one of them bozos what cracks cocoanuts between his teeth and swallows billiard balls to relieve a headache. The city ought to hire him, because he would make three good traffic cops. Or, if they could make him promise not to get too rough, they could always send him out alone to quell a riot. He claims that, aided by the rest of the United States army, he won the war.

"Come right in, Clarence," says I, so he parks his carcass on the davenport in the parlor and hands me the pint I ordered.

"I've got another bottle with me for a customer in this neighborhood," says he, "an' he wants quick delivery on it, so I can't sit here very long."

Then he stared out the window and sighed. Clarence has the most odoriferous sigh what ever perfumed the air in a parlor. He has so much booze on his breath that he can murder a canary bird accidentally, just by standing near its cage and gazing at it. Whenever he enters a room the poor little flies fall off the ceiling and do tailspins to the floor. He's already embalmed, but he don't know it.

MATRIMONIAL BLUES

"What are you sighing about?" asks I. "Don't you feel good?"

"I feel blue," says he; "terribly blue! O, dear; O, dear; O, dear! My wife bawled me out this morning. I don't mind being bawled out by the cops and et cetera, but it just busts me all up to have my dear little wife call me names! I'm too tender hearted, that's the trouble. It just makes me feel blue all day."

"Why did she bawl you out?" asks me.

"Because I socked her in the snoot," says Clarence. "O, dear; O, dear! I feel rotten. I wish I had a drink of Funny Fluid."

He gazed longingly at the bottle which I just bought from him. Well, I begins to feel sorry for the poor simp, so I pulls the cork and slips him the Giggle Grease. He took a gulp that damn near wrecked the pint, so I figured I better get my share right away. Therefore, I did a little gulping myself.

"Yup," says Clarence, "I'm too tender hearted, that's the trouble," and he begun wiping big tears from his eyes; "I'm getting bluer an' bluer!"

"Have another shot," says I, passing the bottle back to him. So we finished the pint, and this dumb bimbo got bluer than ever; in fact, his whole framework shook with suppressed sobs. All at once he grabbed the other bottle and started pulling the cork.

"Hold on, Clarence," says I, "you said that bottle is for your other customer in this neighborhood!"

"Aw, to hell with 'im," sobs Clarence; "when I gets the blues, I gets them bad!"

HEART-RENDING

Me, I'm a sympathetic guy, so within another half hour we was both balancing very unsteadily on the edge of a Blue Breakdown. Then my phone rang. It was my wife.

"Listen, Creature," says her to me, "when I left the house this morning I noticed that there was a bunch of little sparrows looking for food in the alley behind our building. I imagine that it's awfully hard for the poor little things to find any food in this cold weather, so why don't you throw them some crumbs the next time you go outside?"

"Yes, Dear," says I, hanging up. The tears was galloping down my face as I told Clarence what she said.

"Aw, the poor little sparrers!" squawks Clarence, sobbing as if his heart was busted. Ah, at last! At last, here was something worth crying about! We sat on the davenport and wept wildly for a half hour. The more we thought about it, the more we cried.

"Could anybody be so cruel as to forget the hungry little birds?" weeps me, going to the bedroom to find another dry handkerchief. I found the handkerchief and part of a bottle of gin which I had forgotten about.

Well, by the time the gin was gone the grief was becoming so terrible that we couldn't stand it any more, so we crawls into our hats and coats, grabs a loaf of bread from my pantry, and goes outside to do a twin act on the Good Samaritan stuff. We couldn't find any sparrows in our alley, so we walked around the block about six times, but there wasn't a sparrow in sight. All the little customers had disappeared.

HIS NOSE KNOWS

"Let's take a taxi an' go looking for 'em," says Clarence, so we falls into a cab and tells the chauffeur to drive around till he sees some sparrows. The driver gives us a nasty look, sniffs the air a couple times in a suspicious manner, and then says:

"Is youse guys got any money?"

"Certainly," snorts Clarence, "we have dozens of money. Giddap!"

"Well," says the Gasoline Bandit, after a couple minutes of hesitation, "all right. Youse sound to me like a couple Flat Tires, but youse smell like a couple millionaires; in fact, your breath comes highly recommended, so I'll take a chance. Let's go!"

We drove three dollars west and two dollars and seventy-five cents north, but we didn't see one damn sparrow. We stopped several times to ask people if there was any in their neighborhood. They all told us "no," but advised us that there was lots of squirrels, and suggested that we drive fast as hell. At last we sees an old guy with chin whiskers which flopped back and forth against his knees. He looked like Father Time's grandfather.

"Aha," says I to Clarence, "we'll stop an' question this dear old gentleman. He looks like a chiropodist."

BEHIND THE BUSH

"What's a chiropodist?" asks Clarence.

"A chiropodist is a bimbo what has made a study of birds," says I, so we hails the old geezer, and Clarence says to him:

"Listen, Audubon, or King Ben, or Diogenes, or whatever your name happens to be: We are looking for sparrows. Yuh got any around here?"

"How dare you take up my valuable time with such silly questions!" howls the old bozo; "you intoxicated idiots!"

"Your valuable time!" yells Clarence; "why, you poor goat, you ain't done anything for the last ninety years except grow older! Shake your whiskers a few times—I'll catch any rabbits that come this direction."

"$@$@$@$@$@$@$!!" says the dear old gentleman. So we drove on, because if there is anything we detest, it's profanity. Well, by this time the blues had left us and we was beginning to feel much more sensible.

"I don't know why we hired this damn cab anyhow," says Clarence, "because I have got my own car parked right in front of your place. We probably was leaning against it when we hailed this driver."

"I," SAID THE SPARROW

So we told the Gasoline Bandit to drive us back to my place. We still had the loaf of bread. Just as we stepped out of the cab we saw the cutest little sparrow sitting about ten feet away, looking right at us! He was the prettiest little thing you ever saw! He had little bright eyes and a cheerful voice. Furthermore, he looked real hungry.

"Well," says Clarence, "look who's here! Aint he cute?"

"He's too cunning for words," says I; "just think, we spent twelve dollars cab fare looking for him an' he was here all the time, the little darling!"

So we slammed the loaf of bread at the dirty little bum and killed him.

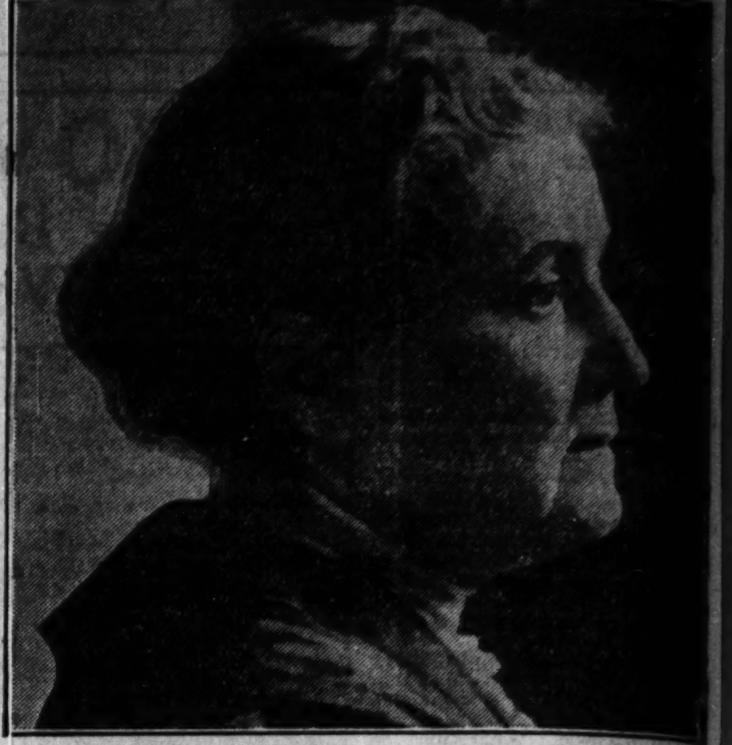
FAMOUS WOMEN OF CHICAGO



JANE ADDAMS.
[Copyright Photo by Moffett.]

FAMOUS not only in Chicago, but one of the most famous women in the world is Jane Addams, head of the Hull House social settlement, which she helped found back in 1899. Leader of the woman's movement in the United States, a pioneer in social settlement work in this country, a keen student of sociology, she was once described by President Roosevelt as "Chicago's most useful citizen." Born at Cedarville, Ill., in 1860, Miss Addams, a frail and sensitive girl, caught her first glimpse of real poverty during a European visit. She is the author of a number of books on sociological and philanthropic subjects. In April, 1914, she organized the Woman's International Peace conference, held at The Hague.

Bargains! Bargains!

Afforded Many Laughs.

I have always had a great weakness for bargains. During the Christmas holidays about fifteen years ago I journeyed from the extreme south side to the far west side to buy my food supplies. Often at this store the management would offer dates or figs at 10 cents a package or three for a quarter. This particular day when I asked the price of dates, the saleswoman said, "Eight cents a package."

I was looking for a bargain so I asked if she would sell them three for a quarter. Se said "No."

I decided not to buy any so she asked me to wait a minute and she would ask the manager if she could sell them three for a quarter. The manager agreed. I bought six packages, and filled with the success of my ability to get a bargain, purchased a great many more things in the store.

Everything would have been all right but on the way home I kept talking about it to my little daughter who had just started to school. Suddenly the child said, "Why, mother, three times eight is only twenty-four and you paid twenty-five."

Am I sore? I should say not! I have had a laugh at least twenty times a year for the last fifteen years over my greatest bargain. A. A. M.

Canadian Money.

I was returning from a trip to Canada and the train being late, I decided to have dinner on it, instead of waiting until I got into Chicago.

They had a special chicken dinner at $1.50 which I ordered, consumed and thoroughly enjoyed.

When the waiter placed the check beside my plate, I covered it with two Canadian bills. He asked me if I had no American money, to which I replied that I had not as I had had no time in which to get my money changed. He then called the head steward, who came and started to get abusive, saying I knew Canadian money wasn't legal tender here. I stood it for a while and then said, "Look here, you're the first man that has refused Canadian money since we left the border, there is more than enough in that two dollars to cover the cost of the dinner and any exchange there might be and I haven't any American money. What are you going to do about it?"

"Give you the dinner, I suppose," he replied, and walked away.

And the joke was that several people who had overheard the controversy, told me afterward that they would have exchanged all my Canadian money at par! L. J. T.

"Houses That Kill" to Be Demolished

PARIS.—(AP)—"Houses that kill" are slowly being demolished in Paris, but there still remain several score buildings where there are hundreds of bedrooms without ventilation or sun light.

Grouped along the ancient "street of the ovens" are tenements that soon are to be torn down.

There were 5,000 such buildings thirty years ago when the city began collecting reports on each separate house. These were reduced to a few score before the war, but the housing shortage has delayed further action.

Shell Fish Play Role of Pied Piper in War on Rats

DONEGAL, Ireland.—(AP)—If the Pied Piper of Hamelin could only come to Donegall [illegible] make a good war correspondent in the battle raging here between the limpets and the rats.

Thus far the limpets have had by far the better of it, thousands of rats having fallen in the unequal struggle, to the great joy of all [illegible].

A limpet, for the benefit of those who have not taken a degree in zoölogy, is a small, edible shellfish which sticks close to a rock.

The armies of rats which infest the islands on the northwest coasts of Donegal have been adventuring to the waterside in quest of food.

When the tide recedes, the rats insert their noses between the partly raised shell of the limpet, hoping to make a meal off the edible fish. But the limpet is a wist bird—or fish. Exceedingly sensitive to the slightest touch, he—she, or it—instantly closes on its prey with a viselike grip.

The rat is held tight. He stays put until the relentless encroachment of rising waters claims him.

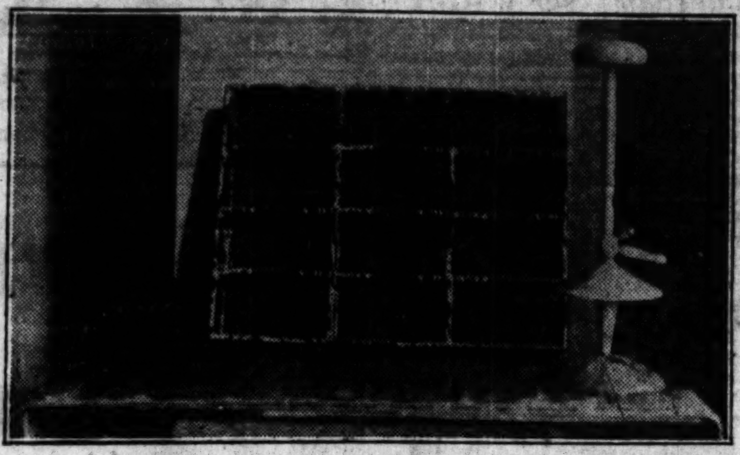
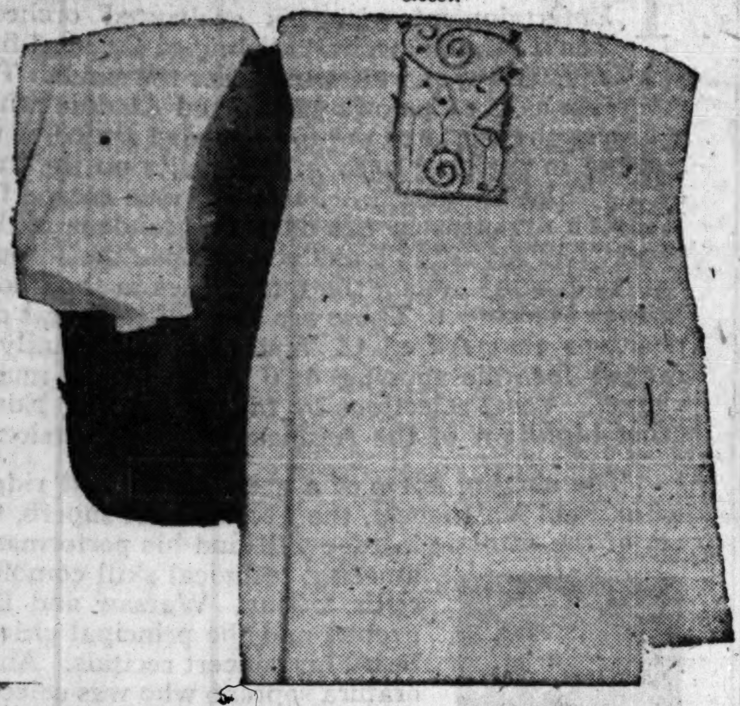
FEMININE FADS AND FANCIES

Sandals for the south are in subtle shades of tan and rose salé embroidered in raffia. The heels are a delightful, but decadent, red. They are worn by a spectator at the sports and later in the day for tea.



Two things for beauty and neatness. One is a box for milady's silken hose—a dozen pairs of them. The other is a fantastic hat stand for her closet.

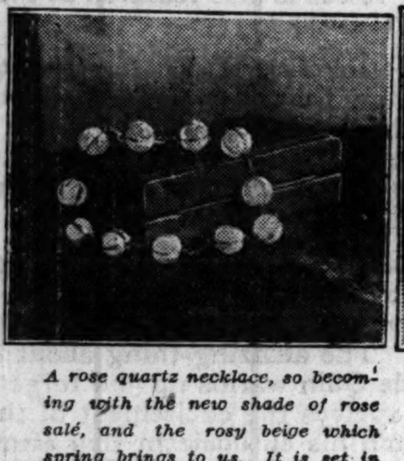
The latest in bathing caps provides earrings of gold rubber, so that there will be no danger of losing the gold ones in the sea and having them swallowed by a shark. And, of course, one must have earrings, even bathing earrings.



A new beach robe made of terry cloth in white with a stunning monogram and lined—of all things—in silk jersey, so that your wet bathing suit won't make it crinkle.

If one spends the day on the beach one must have a beach pillow of rubberized silk with a tiny robe for one's feet, which fits inside and is quilted. One can slip one's book, or magazine, or knitting inside, too.

Beach pajamas for lounging after the bathing hour are flurrying the designers this new season. These are of white rajah, which, by the way, is to be the last word for spring, and they are trimmed with blue.



A rose quartz necklace, so becoming with the new shade of rose salé, and the rosy beige which spring brings to us. It is set in gold and carved just a trifle, and is not prohibitive in price.

Crystal jewels are more popular than ever and will be especially good with the new frocks of white chiffon. Here is a pendant of modernistic design in crystal set with rubies and a pin as brilliant as a waterfall.

For the more practical traveler is this chaise cover which fits into a silk bag and forms a pillow when not in use. It is especially useful in Europe, where an extra light cover is so hard to procure at a moment's notice.

THE DUKE RECEIVES THE BAD NEWS

Final Returns on Christmas Gifts Are Discouraging.

By Duke Bakrak.

COMPLETE returns from tha Xmas present primarys are now in. It just seems that whatever a guy trys to do, it ain't right. We thought we was doing a helova big thing by presenting tha janitor's kid with a tin train that winds up and runs.

From that gossip, via tha laundry route, we're tha cheapest tenant in tha building. In fact, they thought tha toy was so far beneath tha brat's dignity that they took off our card, put on one of theirs, and gave it to tha bird that hauls tha ashes and cinders. When I was a kid a train like that was my present de luxe. I told tha B. and C. that next year we oughta get him either a scholarship at Yale or a walking delegate job in tha Bank Presidents' union.

FAIR EXCHANGE

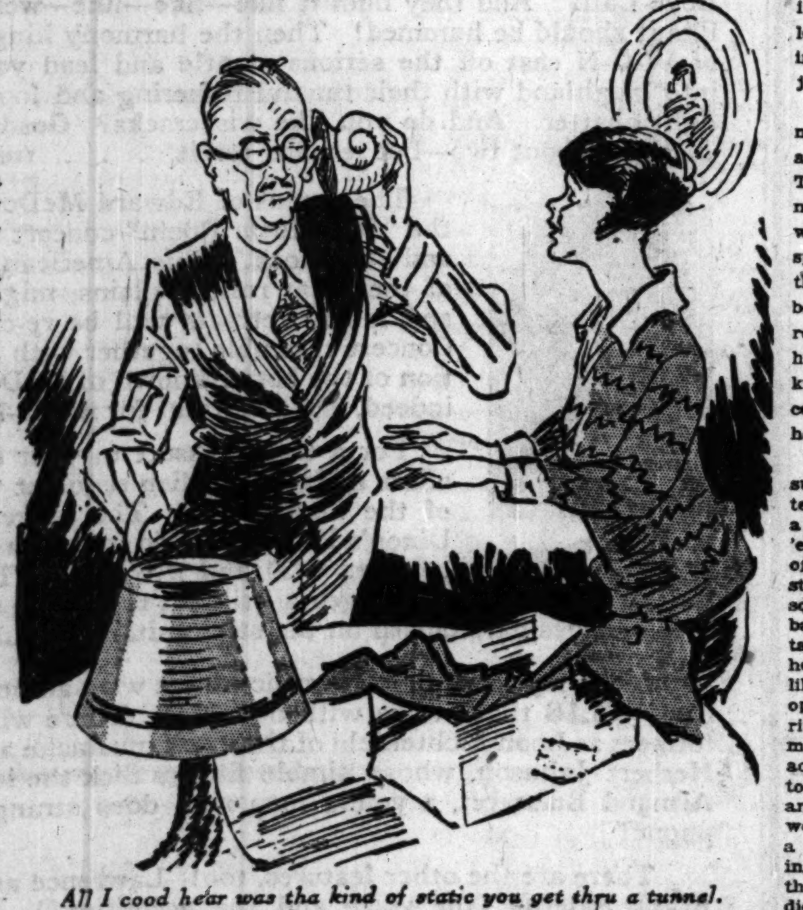
A letter what reached us yesterday from tha Mama's kid sister asks us whether it wood inconvenience us any if we exchanged her bottle of cologne for a silver flask or a sterling cigaret case. As far as I'm concerned it woodn' put us out any, providing we could get either of tha articles for a $1.19. I remember tha Xmas that we gave her a red flannel petticoat, and she wrote three letters telling us how much she adored it and how tha scallops matched those on her (well, it's none of your business).

Here's a hot one! I spent a hour and a half pickin' out a pipe for grandpaw, and he writes that he ain't smoked a pipe since 1921 and if it's all tha same to us we shood trade it for a cupple of cartons of nails. I got so damn mad at this request that I told tha B. and C. to write tha sheik and say that if he meant coffin nails we'd be more than delighted to do it, provided he'd let me do tha hammering. Next year this 86 year old sheik is gonna be presented with a pair of Oxford bag pants and a yearly pass to tha Black Bottom Night club.

WINTER COMPLAINT

Can you imagine tha old maid sister complaining about tha silk nightgown we shipped her? Her complaint is that it's not a practical gift. This I admit. She tells us that what she'd rather have wood be tha money, as she's figuring on having her face lifted. Instead of having that mug lifted, a good idea wood be to have it lowered. What I mean is lowered into about 6 feet of ground.

Aunt Abigail's letter is a bitter complaint. We sent her a knitted shawl and she's got nerve enough to tell us that anybody that lives in tha city ought to at least have sense enough to know that shawls are passé and she certainly figured that we wood of had brains enough to send her a fox throw. What this egg oughta get is a throw in tha lake. I'll never forget tha Xmas a year after we was married. She hand croquetted me a pair of wristlets which we are now using to lift hot coffee pots.



All I cood hear was tha kind of static you get thru a tunnel.

'TIS MORE BLESSED—

Tha lunkhead brother who eats 3 hours and sleeps 21 daily complains that tha military brushes are a little stiff. This got me so vexed that I simply wrote and tole him that tha clerk recommended that if they were a little stiff they'd be tha proper thing for a big stiff. Tha present what he gave us was a coat hanger that he made in manual training when he was 12 years old. After trying to figure out what it represented I came to tha conclusion it was part of a boomerang game.

I guess I tole you folks about tha grape jelly that tha ma-in-law sent us. When tha B. and C. wrote an tole her that two of tha glasses were broke she answers by saying it wasn't grape, it was quince. After puttin some on a pancake I claimed it was quinine flavor and that tha cook book reads cups of sugar instead of thimblesful.

Filling a cupple dozen complaint pages wood be a easy task for me. There wasn't a thing we received that was worth a damn. I'm not tha sort of a guy to register kicks, but I'm sure hollering on a lot of things. Whatta you suppose my uncle Newt sends me? This Bank of England cood well afford to slip me a grand and never miss it. What I get is a one dollar gold piece from tha year 1836 fixed up in a stick pin. Woodn' I look swell comin to work with a buck in gold adorning tha brown silk tie that Newts' housekeeper knits me? All I'd need wood be a celluloid collar to set tha thing off a la Podunk, Iowa.

Tha B. and C. got a gift what gave me a laff like nobody's bizness. Her cousin Sophie, whose been keeping a hope chest for 18 years, expecting that some day a goof wood grab her, parcel posts a seashell with a verse on it, something about if you put it to your ear you'd hear tha voice of your lover. All I cood hear was tha kind of static you get going thru a tunnel. This trophy is now resting peacefully under tha kitchen sink, covering up a burnt spot in tha linoleum.

MAMA'S FINESSE

Tha brown jardenier that came from Aunt Martha got itself a lower berth in our ash can. Next week I expect a letter from our garbage collector saying that we gotta quit throwing broken jugs in tha pails.

I wish some of you folks wood mail me tha address of a guy who cood use a good pair of size 11½ overshoes. These we sent to Uncle Newt's hired man Johnny, who returned them and wants spats instead. If this fertilizer specialist thinks I'm gonna run around tha loop exchanging his present he better get himself another think. I remember tha time that if you gave him a stag horn, one-bladed pocket knife, he'd of sat around Ebbett's grocery and dry goods emporium by tha hour showing an braggin about it.

Here's some dirt: Tha Mama wasn't sure whether her niece Gladys Hortense wood remember us, so she buys a pair of orchid garters, but don't mail 'em. Tha idea is that if Gladys thinks of us, tha Mama will quickly slip tha stocking ornaments in tha mail and square things. Gladys mails a set of baby pins an forgets to remove tha tag, which reads 19 cents. Well, tha hose uplifts costs us 69 and it looks like there's a ½ buck difference in opinions, so tha Mama figures she will ritz this sheba and send tha garters making tha tag read 2 dollars. Tha acknowledgement letter we get reads to tha effect that she received 18 pairs and as long as we spent two bucks she wood like to have 'em exchanged for a pair of size 8½ flesh color stockings. The only thing I had to say to tha Mama was that she's lucky she didn' make tha tag read 50 bucks as that wood give Gladys a chance to ask us to send her a grand piano instead.

FATHER'S FORESIGHT

Next year tha gift department is gonna be run by me. Everybody is gonna get just tha opposite of what tha B. and C. thinks they wood like and I'll bet four dollars there wont be a squawk.

That absent minded pa-in-law of mine sends me a personal letter to tha office yesterday and begs me not to mention tha fact to any one. He encloses 5 bucks and asks me to buy him another cigaret lighter like tha one I sent him.

Tha brainless yap, being used to matches, lights his pipe and throws tha lighter away.

HOLLERAN YELL TAKES A FLIER ON FATE

How Do Things Happen to Happen?

By Westbrook Pegler.

I OFTEN hear people say that if a thing is going to happen you cannot stop it from happening, because if you do stop it, why then the chances are that it was not going to happen anyway.

I used to be the proprietor of a pugilist who got to thinking this way and when I would tell him to contract his neck so that his chin would not stick out, he would reply: "No, there is no use contracting my neck because if I am going to get spanked on the screamer, I am going to get spanked on the screamer, and it was all arranged way back in historical times before Noah's ark.

I used to reason with him in a philosophical way, but he stubbornly refused to contract his neck, so every time we would fight some big clumsy bum, he would leave his kisser sticking out in a careless manner and I became stoopshouldered from carrying him back to our corner in a state of unconsciousness.

AN ULTIMATUM

"Well," I would assert when I would get through resuscitating him back to consciousness, "if you had pulled in your neck you would have ducked that one."

"No," he would say, "fate did that and you cannot duck fate."

Well, physical labor is not good for me as I have weak health, so the strain of dragging this big bum back to our corner began to wear me down, and finally I had to issue an ultimatum to him.

"Either you will have to contract your neck," I stated, "or you will have to train off about fifty pounds, as I cannot stand these continual knockouts every time we fight some bum."

"No," he replied, "there is no use of my training off any pounds because fate arranged how much I am going to weigh and you can't change fate around."

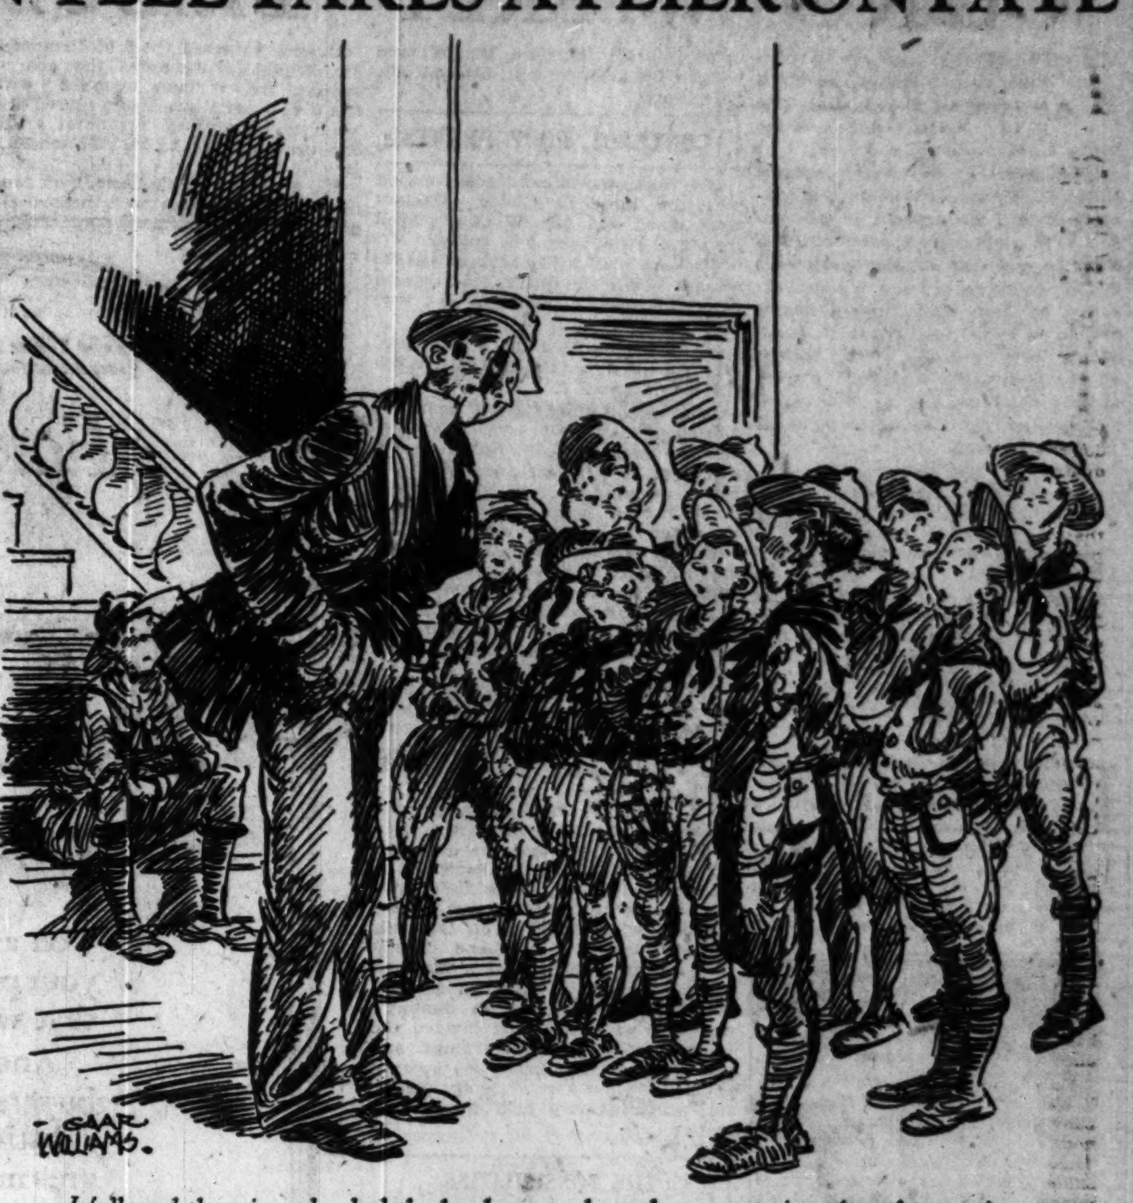
"All right, then," I stated, "I will sever our relations.

I'D LIKE TO BE FATE'S MANAGER

So I sold my bum to a friend for the sum of $200. This was not very much resources to begin life anew on, but you may be sure that I did not sit down and start wringing my head in despair; because it is always my policy to help things happen.

At this time I had a desk in the office of a gentleman who sold bail bonds to an exclusive trade and this office was right across the street from the county courthouse in our town.

Well, the day I got the $200 I was standing by the window of our office thinking of some progressive way to stimulate fate and I just happened to start counting the number of people who came out of the courthouse and turned to the right down Broadway.



GAAR WILLIAMS.

I followed them in and asked the head scout where they were going after the meeting.

Then I counted the number of people who turned to the left up Broadway.

My head is full of business schemes, so I started to wager myself a nominal sum of $100,000 on every person that turned to the right down Broadway. It was a very interesting pastime. One minute I would be eight or nine million dollars ahead and the next minute a lot of people would turn to the left and I would be wiped out again.

Finally I became tired of this so I went out to the Dairy Lunch to eat a little collation and while I was passing the courhthouse I saw a troop of boy scouts going in to hold some kind of a meeting in the council chamber. This gave me an idea and I followed them in and asked the head scout where they were going after the meeting.

I HELP THINGS HAPPEN

"Why," he replied, "we are going to leave here at half past three and march down Broadway to Spruce street, where we are going to dedicate a drinking fountain."

It was half past two then. My mind was working with hair breadth speed, so I dashed back to my office and made a proposition to Mr. L'Arceny, the gentleman who owned the bail bond business.

"Mr. L'Arceny," I broached, "what about wagering some funds in a friendly little past time that I invented in one of my thoughtful moods?"

"Why, certainly," he replied, "if you wish to play strictly for cash funds."

"O, yes," I said, "I mean for cash, for I have got the sum of $200 to fritter away."

So I explained the game and laid my $200 on the window sill.

"Now," I stated, "We will play for a dollar a head and we will quit at half past three, as I have an appointment."

"I will wager on the right turn," I said, "and you can wager on the left turn."

So the wagering commenced but the traffic was pretty evenly divided and we merely exchanged our funds back and forth although I had a suspicion that just before half past three there would be a run of traffic to the right toward Spruce street.

Well, my dear sir, at ten minutes after three, I happened to see a man throw a cigaret out of one of the windows in the courthouse and it lit on an awning over the sidewalk, just to the right of the courthouse. Naturally I paid little attention to this but it just goes to show how fate will get careless at times.

"HOLD 'EM, FATE!"

The wagering continued. With only ten minutes to go the courthouse doors flew open and two juries came out guarded by Deputy Sheriffs and turned Mr. L'Arceny's way to go to the hotel for the night. That placed me $30 in the hole, but I was confident of another great rally at the last moment so I did not mind.

A couple minutes later, the doors flew open again and the chief scout came out. "Hooray!" I exclaimed. "Three cheers for the Boy Scouts of America." But just then Mr. L'Arceny grabbed my arm and let out a yell. "Look! Fire!" and when I looked, the ghastly spectacle made by blood curl in my veins because the awning was burning on my side of the entrance and a policeman was shooing the boy scouts back.

While the boy scouts hesitated, the fire engines dashed up and blocked the streets with engines and hosiery and the head scout turned the whole troop to the left and detoured around the block to get down to Spruce street for the fountain dedication, with Mr. L'Arceny counting very excitedly as they marched by.

FATE FORGETS TO DUCK

He counted 139 boy scouts and 81 civilians so quick that his sordidness simply nauseated me, as a purely sporting pastime was being debauched into a commercial business.

Then he said, "That makes it just $200 even and I thank you very much as I consider this a very pleasant pastime, indeed," and with that he picked up my $200 and, just as he said this, the clock in the court house tower struck half past three and the fire chief yelled "fire's out, boys; leave the traffic through."

A Friendly Atmosphere.

New Year's afternoon I was alone in Chicago, 300 miles from home. I went into a café and ordered their special New Year's turkey dinner. A good looking, pleasant voiced young woman waited on me — brought a well rounded, well cooked dinner with all the trimmings, in just the right quantities, and came back to my table several times to see that I lacked for nothing.

It was delicious and I cleaned the plates. Before I was through she came again to see if I wanted anything else; asked me how I enjoyed the dinner, and when I had told her, she noted my empty plates and remarked, "I always like to have a customer who eats things clean, because I know he has appreciated his meal. I think it's the best compliment a diner can pay to his dinner." She then left, wishing me a happy New Year. Needless to say, when I left there was a good tip beside my plate.

I stepped up to the desk to pay my bill. The manager in a neighborly manner, inquired how I liked the dinner; was pleased to know I did like it; wished me a happy New Year and invited me to call again. Take it all around, this was so different from the ordinary Chicago eating house attitude of "Here's your grub; take it or leave it, but hurry up and eat it and on your way," that when I'm in the city again (and I have been making it pretty regularly for the last twenty-five years) I'm going back to that place to eat.

Courtesy Appreciated.

During the February sale of wool remnants at one of the largest department stores in the city, I went to purchase some material before going to the office. I had but a few minutes in which to shop and having selected a piece of charmeen which, under the electric light seemed perfect, an elderly salesman made out the purchase slip.

As he folded the material, he inspected it closely. Then he went back to the counter and found another piece of charmeen and taking both pieces to the window we compared them in the daylight. The piece I had selected was raveled at the edges and had the dull, shop worn color. The piece the salesman selected was an excellent piece of material and the exact shade of the color I wanted.

The average salesman at a remnant counter is indifferent to what he sells and glad to be rid of an imperfect piece of material, such as I had selected. I appreciated this man's interest in pleasing a customer and at every opportunity tell others of his courtesy.

Pleasing a Fat Man.

I had a few hours to spend between trains, so, looking in one of the loop stores I discovered a golf sweater I admired greatly. Rushing in, I decided to purchase it. As I am a fat man I could not be fitted, but the floor walker and clerk, noticing my disappointment, took my name and address and a week later sent me the size sweater I wanted, C. O. D.

I had taken up a lot of their time as they had even tried to get my size at their warehouse. I've been a steady customer since.

Highbrow Train Conductors Decreed by German Rulers

BERLIN.—(AP)—High brow conversation about Goethe, Shakespeare, and Bernard Shaw, mingled perhaps with learned opinions on astral bodies, the Voronoff theory and other scientific subjects, will be carried on in several languages by conductors on the German express trains, if federal railway administration succeeds with its plans.

These plans contemplate that the express train "con" shall possess so good a general education that he can converse with any passenger on any subject and, if necessary, in several languages. Above all, he must be able to express himself in choice German.

The railway administration believes traveling will become even more popular than it already is if the passenger is sure of finding an accommodating conductor.

W-G-N'S WEEKLY BRIDGE LESSON

THE twelfth of a series of twenty radio auction bridge games will be broadcast from W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, Tuesday, at 9 p. m.

Each game of the series features Milton C. Work and Wilbur C. Whitehead, New York experts, in association with players from other cities in America and Canada, the contestants in the twelfth game being Wynne Ferguson of New York, widely known author on bridge, and Gratz M. Scott, also of New York, one of the keenest of the metropolitan experts, playing against Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead.

Following are the advance hands for game twelve:

Mr. Work.
Spades—K, 9, 5, 3, 2
Hearts—7, 5, 4, 2
Diamonds—6
Clubs—A, 5, 2

Mr. Ferguson.
Spades—A
Hearts—A, 9, 3
Diamonds—J, 10, 9, 7, 2
Clubs—K, 10, 7, 4

Mr. Scott.
Spades—Q, J, 10, 6
Hearts—J
Diamonds—A, Q, 8
Clubs—Q, J, 9, 8, 6

Mr. Whitehead, Dealer.
Spades—8, 7, 4
Hearts—K, Q, 10, 8, 6
Diamonds—K, 5, 4, 3
Clubs—3

IN the eleventh of the series of radio bridge games, broadcast last Tuesday from station W-G-N, Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead had for their opponents Walter F. Wyman of Arlington, Mass., and E. E. Denison of Portland, Me., a well known player and writer on bridge.

Mr. Wyman, dealer, south, held:

E. E. DENISON.

Spades, 8, 5, 3; hearts, A, K, 10, 8, 2; diamonds, 6, 5; clubs, J, 10, 9.

Mr. Work, west, held: Spades, Q, 10, 6, 2; hearts, Q, 5; diamonds, K, 9, 8, 4; clubs, K, Q, 6.

Mr. Dennison, north, held: Spades, 9; hearts, 9, 6, 3; diamonds, A, Q, 7, 3, 2; clubs, A, 8, 5, 4.

Mr. Whitehead, east, held: Spades, A, K, J, 7, 4; hearts, J, 7, 4; diamonds, J, 10; clubs, 7, 3, 2.

Mr. Wyman, the dealer, bid one heart, a sound declaration based on his five card heart suit containing two quick tricks. Mr. Work passed.

Mr. Denison also passed. Had he been the dealer, or had dealer and second hand passed, Mr. Denison would have bid a diamond. But the same strength that would have permitted him to bid diamonds would also support his partner's easier game going bid of hearts. Had he held but two small hearts Mr. Denison would have denied normal support for hearts by a bid of two diamonds.

AN INDIRECT ASSIST

Mr. Whitehead, of course, bid one spade, as his hand was strong enough even for an initial spade bid.

Mr. Wyman passed, as he had already bid the full strength of his hand. Mr. Work passed. Mr. Denison bid two diamonds. This bid, after his original pass of his partner's heart bid, told his partner three things: First, that he had exactly three hearts; otherwise he would have denied normal support on the first round of bidding. Second, that he held no more than three hearts, otherwise he would have assisted the heart bid on the second round instead of naming diamonds. Third, that he held a sound diamond bid. By this diamond bid Mr. Denison also invited his partner to continue with hearts if his holding warranted his doing so with but three hearts in Mr. Denison's hand. A bid of this kind is called an indirect assist. Mr. Whitehead passed, as he lacked the necessary values for a rebid.

Mr. Wyman read Mr. Denison's bid correctly, but as he held five hearts he returned to that suit, bidding two hearts. Mr. Work went to two spades, a sound assist based upon values held. Mr. Denison bid three hearts. Since he had been assured by his partner as to the heart situation, his side tricks called for strong heart support. Mr. Whitehead passed. Notwithstanding his partner's assist, his holding did not warrant further bidding.

Mr. Wyman passed. Mr. Work bid three spades, a slight overbid possibly, but one which was not liable to produce a material loss. Mr. Denison bid four hearts. His side tricks in diamonds and clubs and his singleton in the spade suit adversely bid, in connection with his partner's assurance regarding hearts, more than justified this second assist.

Mr. Whitehead, Mr. Wyman and Mr. Work passed; therefore Mr. Wyman became the declarer with his contract four hearts.

CONTRACT, FOUR HEARTS

Mr. Work, the initial leader, opened with the queen of spades. Dummy went down and Mr. Wyman played from it the singleton 9 of spades. Mr. Whitehead played his king of spades so as to obtain the lead to lead trumps up to weakness in dummy. Mr. Wyman played the 3.

Mr. Whitehead led the 4 of hearts. Mr. Wyman played the king; Mr. Work the 5; dummy the 3.

Before continuing, Mr. Wyman decided upon his plan of play. A thoughtless or inexperienced player would doubtless have led a spade in order to ruff it in dummy before dummy's two other trumps could be removed. Having ruffed the spade, he would then discover too late that he could not reënter his own hand for the lead of his other spade without returning dummy's last trump. Thus he would be left with a losing spade in his own hand with no trump protection in dummy to prevent its loss.

Mr. Wyman foresaw this situation. Disregarding, therefore, any idea of a spade lead, he considered the relative possibilities of a diamond or a club lead. He recalled that Mr. Whitehead did not rebid spades, but that his partner, Mr. Work, west, assisted spades twice. Mr. Wyman therefore correctly reasoned that the outstanding side strength should logically be with Mr. Work, and consequently that one or both of the club honors together with the king of diamonds should be in Mr. Work's hand. Therefore it was possible that a diamond finesse would win. But an attempt to establish and bring in dummy's diamonds at once would involve the removal of the adverse trumps, and this could not be undertaken because of Mr. Wyman's two losing spades, for which dummy held trump protection.

THE POSSIBILITIES

Considering the club suit, Mr. Wyman saw that if there were a 3-3 split of the outstanding six clubs, he could establish a long club on which to discard one of his two losing spades. As his remaining losing spade could be trumped without embarrassment, this play, if successful, would give him the number of tricks necessary for game, in case the high cards lay as assumed.

Mr. Wyman therefore led the 9 of clubs as the initial step towards the establishment of the club suit. Mr. Work played low, the 6 of clubs, in the hope that his partner held the jack or 10, which could win the trick if dummy's ace were not played. If Mr. Whitehead held neither jack nor 10, then Mr. Wyman must hold them; therefore Mr. Work risked no danger of loss by not playing his queen or king. Dummy ducked with the 4 of clubs; Mr. Whitehead played the 2.

WALTER F. WYMAN.

Mr. Wyman continued with the jack of clubs; Mr. Work covered with the queen; dummy played the ace; Mr. Whitehead the 3. Dummy returned the 5 of clubs; Mr. Whitehead played the 7; declarer the 10; Mr. Work won with the king.

Mr. Work led the queen of hearts, to remove another of dummy's trumps; dummy played the 6; Mr. Whitehead the 7; declarer the ace.

Mr. Wyman next led the 6 of diamonds; Mr. Work played the 4; dummy finessed the queen, and Mr. Whitehead played the 10. Dummy returned the ace of diamonds; Mr. Whitehead played the jack; declarer the 5, and Mr. Work the 8. Dummy continued with the 8 of clubs; Mr. Whitehead, holding the high trump, good at any time for a trick, passed, discarding the 4 of spades. Mr. Wyman discarded the 5 of spades, and Mr. Work the 6 of spades.

GAME IN HEARTS

Dummy led the 2 of diamonds; Mr. Whitehead discarded the 7 of spades; Mr. Wyman trumped with the 2 of hearts, and Mr. Work played the 9 of diamonds.

Mr. Wyman then led his losing 8 of spades; Mr. Work played the 10; dummy trumped with the 9 of hearts; Mr. Whitehead played the jack of spades.

Dummy returned the 3 of diamonds; Mr. Whitehead discarded the ace of spades; Mr. Wyman trumped with the 8 of hearts; Mr. Work played the king of diamonds. The final trick, of course, was won by Mr. Whitehead's jack of hearts.

Mr. Wyman, the declarer, took four tricks, giving him game in hearts. He scored 32 trick points and 30 for three honors.

In commenting on Mr. Wyman's skill, Mr. Work stated that it is the play of hands of this type that is most confusing to the average player, as it requires not only considerable experience but also considerable perspective to determine the correct procdure.

Kathleen Stewart, Pianist, to Be Heard Tuesday Over W-G-N

Kathleen Stewart, noted pianist, will be heard Tuesday night over W-G-N on the 8 o'clock New York program. Miss Stewart has been engaged to play the Second piano concerto by Saint-Saëns. She is recognized as one of the leading pianists among women.

Paul Kochanski and Chorus on W-G-N Tonight

Paul Kochanski, the Polish violinist, and a chorus of sixteen male voices will present the Atwater Kent hour tonight over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, and twenty-three other stations.

The singers are all members or former members of the well known New York University Glee club who were selected, organized, and directed by Reinald Werrenrath especially for radio broadcasting.

Kochanski began his musical studies early under the guidance of a father who did not believe in sparing the bow and spoiling the violinist. At nine he made his debut in Warsaw, where he studied under Mlynarski and then with Cesar Thomson in Brussels, winning the conservatory's first prize at eighteen.

He began his solo appearances with the principal orchestras in Poland, and probably no young artist has made more recital appearances in various parts of the world. He has been heard many times in the principal capitals of Europe, touring France, England, Germany, Russia, Poland, Spain, Greece, Turkey and Egypt, as well as making annual visits to the United States, Canada, and South America. He first came to America in 1921, at the invitation of Walter Damrosch.

"In the whole field of music there is no literature so poor as that of the violin," commented Kochanski in discussing his radio program. "With the exception of a few fine things of Beethoven, Brahms, Mozart and Bach there is no real music for the violin."

In the program, he maintains, lies the secret of an interesting concert. While he always includes several of the greatest old violin classics, there is a touch of modernity somewhere toward the end.

W-G-N Radio Program

(416.4 Meters—720 Kilocycles)

Chicago Tribune Station on the Drake Hotel—SUNDAY, JANUARY 15, 1928

Out of the East Comes Aladdin . . .

Alfred G. Wathall

TO regale you in this afternoon's Arabian Nights' Entertainment with his enchanted orchestra. You'll hear the weird blending of Oriental flutes as his mysterious caravan winds over the sands. Then you relax as the shadows gather and Aladdin whisks you over the world to the impassioned melodies that resound in the far places . . . to waltz on the banks of the "Blue Danube" . . . to a glorious escape from Winter's drabness in the outdoor grandeur of Herbert's "Al Fresco" . . . and you glimpse the shrouded figures dancing among the tombstones in the ghostly "Dance Macabre"! These are some of the great compositions that Alfred G. Wathall has specially arranged for this topping 4:30 to 6 o'clock musical marvel. Vocal selections by the lyric tenor, Edwin Kemp, will be another highlight of the Arabian Nights' diversion.

Edwin Kemp

The singing notes of a great violin will ride on the ether tonight when Paul Kolchanski, the Polish artist superb, takes up his bow. Lovers of the esthetic in tone will find his performance distinguished by an amazing technical skill combined with an intense artistic ardour. Warsaw and Brussels were his background and the principal cities of all the world have heard his concert recitals. And Agnes Davis, the coloratura soprano who was selected by Atwater Kent as the champion of all amateurs, makes her bow tonight to the radio audience. A rousing chorus of sixteen male voices is also featured in the Atwater Kent hour at 8:15 o'clock.

Young Tommy Coates, whose lyric baritone voice beguiles thousands of radio listeners into romantic reverie, is scheduled to appear in the late evening bill between 10:20 and 11 o'clock. And with his pleasing vocalisms W-G-N presents its unique Salon Concert Orchestra in a group of the popular light classicals.

Paul Kolchanski

Have you heard Quin Ryan in his sports reviews? Each week now he reproduces one of the outstanding sport events of 1927, and he does it with a gusto and a vividness that make the contest seem no less than real. The amazing thing about it is the way the inimitable Quin warms up and forgets it's make-believe as he revives the excitement of the past season. You'll catch his enthusiasm this afternoon when you tune in between 4 and 4:30 o'clock.

A zip and a zest go into the Sunday program when Correll and Gosden burst into song at 7:30. But these two magnetic boys do not stop at singing. They whistle the plaintive, yearning notes of the "Indian Love Call." And they hum it like—like—like—well, like it should be hummed! Then the harmony kings of W-G-N cast off the serious mantle and lead you into laughland with their tuneful tinkering and footlight chatter. And do you like wisecracks? Gosden has a whale of an anecdote about two—but let Gos tell it . . . tonight!

Agnes Davis

The genius of Edward McDowell is the theme for the "Our Music Room" concert tonight between 9:15 and 10 o'clock. This American composer's etchings of the great rolling plains, mighty forests, and vast and lonely retreats will be re-created by the Drake Concert ensemble together with Edwin Kemp's rendition of the better known of McDowell's songs. Here, indeed, is a rare treat for music-lovers!

For a tasty dessert to your dinner today W-G-N offers a Hawaiian dish redolent with the spicy aroma of the South Seas. The quivering tones of Henry Dixon's Hawaiian Trio will hula from your radio horn between 1:30 and 2 o'clock. That burst of insular melody, "Waikiki," presages a brilliant repertoire of Hawaiian and popular medleys harmonized on the steel guitars and ukulele.

An exceptional day in music closes with an hour's popular program from WLIB that's alive with novelties. There will be such stellar performers as Leon Lichtenfeld of the black mustache and his moaning cello; Herbert Johnson, whose nimble fingers flick the ivories into furies, and Armand Buisseret, a young man who does strange things with saxophone!

Captain Frederick C. Mensing

There are the other features, too! Lawrence and Frank Salerno (the voice and the accordion!) . . . "Sam 'n' Henry" . . . "Auld Sandy" . . . The Million—but read the details!

A half hour of unusual music is promised at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon when Captain Frederick C. Mensing plucks his famous harp-zither. It is a quaint instrument, not at all like the ordinary concert zither, and it has been around the world and in the salons of royalty many times. Also in this period appears Joseph Zisman and his cosmopolitan String Trio. Here is a savory entree in today's radio menu!

TO SING FRIDAY

MME. MARIA JERITZA.
[Elzin Photo.]

JOHN McCORMACK.
[Russell Ball Photo.]

The promise of radio to present during the coming year the best programs ever broadcast will be partially fulfilled next Friday, when Mme. Maria Jeritza, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, and John McCormack, world famous tenor, will be heard on N. B. C.'s blue chain at 9 o'clock central time.

Interest in Mme. Jeritza's numbers centers in two selections from Bizet's "Carmen," an opera in which she makes her first American appearance only a few days before she goes on the air. In addition she will sing two other operatic arias, one from "Le Cid," by Massenet, and the other, "Voi Lo Sapete," from the ever popular "Cavalleria Rusticana."

Mr. McCormack is hurrying back to this country from his estate in Ireland in order to sing on this program. His selections will include a group of songs for children, three of the Irish folk songs which he has made so famous, and a group of favorites, among which is "Dear Old Pal of Mine."

Inside the Loud Speaker

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer

PROBABLY the listening public isn't entirely familiar as yet with the many terms employed in the radio racket. The radio has added a flock of news words and new meanings to old words, and it's only right that some of them should be set down here, on this Sabbath morn. So here's a glossary, or what do you call it:

RADIO—The cacophonic chautauqua.

ANNOUNCER—A Rubber wing-collar out for an endurance record of flagpole sitting.

STATIC—A measured compound of rats and wails and puppy dogs' tails, a charivari, New Year's eve, your mother-in-law and a barefooted cavalry charge.

BEDTIME STORY HOUR—An interval that gives mother a little time of leisure—to wash the dishes in.

TENOR—"Mother Machree," with a falsetto finish.

SOPRANO—See static.

BASSO—"Give a Man a Horse He Can Ride."

BARITONE—"Give a Man a Horse He Can Ride on the Road to Mandalay."

JAZZ—"My [Vo-dee-o-doh] — Blue [Vo-dee-o-doh]—Heaven!"

DIAL—An easy way to walk out on a sermon.

STAND BY—An old stand by.

SPEECHES—Just like speeches in the flesh, only more so.

LOUD SPEAKER—See wife.

SET—To sit.

MIKE—The only guy who has to listen to more hooey than a hotel telephone operator.

LISTENERS COMMENTS — See awful, terrible, punk, junk, drunk and codfish.

SIGNING OFF—A gesture of the announcer when he has a late date.

AMPLIFIERS—Potatoes, butter and malted milk.

CONDENSER—A street car in the rush hour.

QUARTET—Four men who sing as though they were having their pictures taken.

DID YOU ever stop to consider great moments in recent and ancient history when the radio might have been employed to greatest effect?

Think, for instance, of how universally and unanimously the public would have hung on its radio horns if broadcasting had been in vogue on the day the first draft numbers for the world war were made known. Or the armistice tidings ending the war.

Remember Presidential election nights of yore in Chicago, when gigantic searchlights played across the sky to announce the winning candidate. The newspapers announced that the beam would be red if Wilson won, green if Roosevelt won and white if Taft were the victor, in 1916—wasn't it? And we stood on street corners or craned our necks from the front porches to spy the waving searchlights, or swarmed downtown to see the returns flashed on movie screens around THE TRIBUNE building at Madison and Dearborn streets, blocking all traffic for the evening.

WHEN FUNNIER songs are written, Americans will write 'em. Everybody in America has become an amateur song writer, and everybody sends his songs to the radio stations. This month's prize of a worsted inkwell for the most unforgettable ditty presented, goes to M. Lena Beattie of Glade Spring, Va., the composer, librettist, author, and publisher of "After the Drive:"

FIRST VERSE.

A broken-hearted maiden sat on the porch with me,
Told me her story amid the gentle breeze.
"Why are you sad, dear? Why seem alone?
Have you no sweetheart? Is that why you moan?"
"I had a sweetheart a few days ago;
Where he is now, dear, never shall I know.
List to my story; to tell you I'll strive.
I believed him faithful 'til after the drive.

CHORUS.

After the drive was over, when the stars began to shine;
After my love had vanished and he is no longer mine,
My poor heart was aching—the story I can't revive—
I'll tell you some other time, dear, but not right after the drive.

SECOND VERSE.

Long years will pass, dear, but I shall never wed,
True to my lost love! O, that I were dead!
He tried to tell me, tried to explain!
I would not listen, pleadings were in vain.
Some day a letter may come from that girl,
She will say, "We are married"—it makes my head whirl!
That's why I'm lonely and just alive,
For my heart was broken after the drive.

(INTO THE CHORUS AGAIN.)

With its exquisite color combinations, and with the soft sheen of its satin surface—a finish like the richest and loveliest fabrics.

New in engineering!

Look inside. See how ingeniously Atwater Kent engineers have developed a self-contained A. C. Receiver. A powerful, full-voiced, six-tube set, but simple, small, convenient—everything condensed in a shielded cabinet, only 7¼ inches high, with no waste space.

Listen. You know real tone when you hear it. Here it is, without disturbing power noises, with its superiority assured by the shielded cabinet and the doubly shielded built-in power supply. This little shielded case, just back of the tubes, is no larger than a jewel case. Yet it takes the place of all the old-style batteries and charger.

Here is accuracy—assured by the precise manufacturing and testing methods of the Atwater Kent factory, where every Model 37 has to pass 222 tests and inspections before it is permitted to leave. Here is durability—assured by these tests, by the material of which every part is made and by the protection of every part against deterioration. Here's a lifetime of enjoyment for you in the new A. C. set.

Here are many features which cannot be copied without infringing on Atwater Kent patents, including innovations which make the single dial control so marvelously efficient.

New in case of operating!

When you bring in a station with the Atwater Kent ONE Dial you will readily appreciate its advantages—it is a full-vision dial, you see it all at a glance. A touch of the fingers selects the station you want without fumbling or delay. This speed and ease in selecting stations is due to this full-vision dial—one of the features of Atwater Kent Receiving Sets.

Model 37 The astonishing price of the new, six-tube, full-vision ONE Dial, self-contained A. C. set includes everything except tubes and a speaker. No power accessories required—no batteries, no charger. For use only with 110-115 volt, 60-cycle, Alternating Current. Uses six A. C. tubes, and one rectifying tube.

without tubes

Beside the dial is the volume control. Try that, too, and see how easy it is to change from soft music to loud and back again—as you like.

And here is the price—$88! (without tubes).

If you are not already familiar with the Atwater Kent price policy, this may help you to understand that figure—$88!

We never make anything to sell at a certain price. We make it as well as it can be made and then let the cost determine the price. The price of the Atwater Kent 37 is low because many people buy it and because the demand has enabled us to put into effect the economies of very large production. If only a few people wanted our sets, they would be expensive. That's the whole story.

In the Model 37 we offer a really extraordinary A. C. set—a perfected set—a set that will please you in every way.

When you try this set—and raise the lid to see how it's made—at an Atwater Kent dealer's, forget the price until you are satisfied on every other point. Then you'll know the price represents the greatest value we have ever offered.

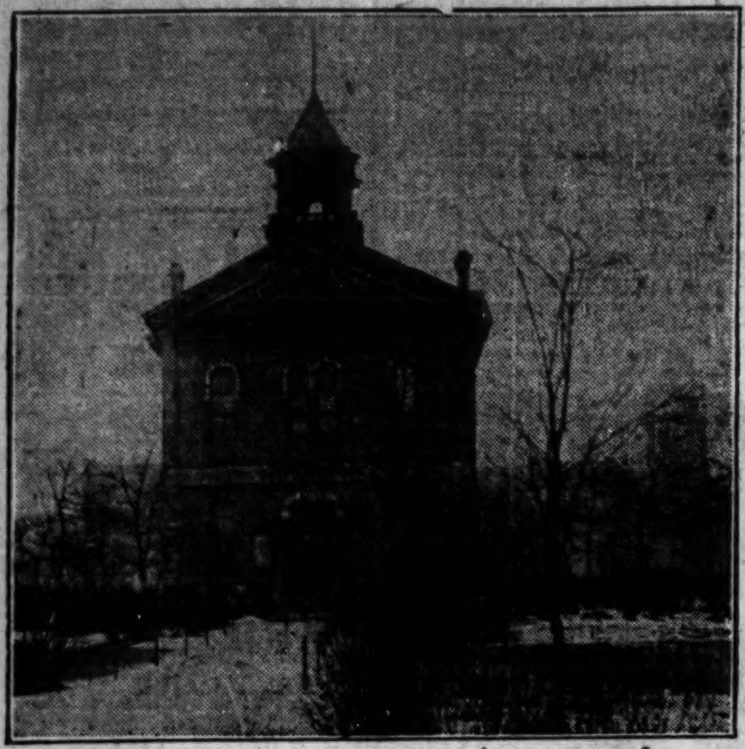
TOO SLOW FOR AUSTIN.



"TOWN HALL—TONIGHT!" read the handbills in the old days when theatrical companies trouped the small towns of the country. But showfolk, including the Duncan sisters, will have to hurry if they intend to "play" what, according to the stone letters up under the roof, is "Cicero Town Hall." The structure, located in Austin's Holden park, proud enough when it was built in 1870, is to be torn down and a big auditorium is to be erected on the site. For ten years the walls housed the Austin police station, but more recently has been used for community meetings and gatherings of the American Legion, women's clubs, and the Boy Scouts.

Scotland's Haunted Castle Above Bay Is Demolished

ABERDEEN, Scotland.—(AP)—Slains castle, lashed at its base for centuries by roaring waves which in their time have kept such notables as Samuel Johnson awake all night, is being demolished.

It became too old and spooky for any earthly use. The last items of furniture, oak beams, and the like were sold at auction some time ago.

For centuries Slains castle, built sheer on the cliffs jutting above Cruden bay, was the seat of the Earls of Erroll, lord high constables of Scotland. In 1916 the estate was sold to Sir John Ellerman, ship owner, who disposed of it in 1923 because of what he considered exorbitant taxation, and it has been empty ever since.

The last tenants were Lord and Lady Oxford, several summers ago, and it was there that Lady Violet Bonham-Carter, then Miss Violet Asquith, had an exciting adventure when she became lost among the crags in a heavy mist.

Residents in the neighborhood for years have never gone near the old castle at night, especially in winter, because of the eery sounds emanating from the structure as the North sea winds whistled through the floorings of its numerous ghostly chambers.

Dr. Johnson and Boswell were regally entertained at the castle on their tour of Scotland in 1773 and Johnson greatly admired its noble site, but the famous writer and lexicographer complained bitterly that he did not sleep a wink at night because of the dreary pounding of the waves below his bedroom window.

"Well, now I has yo'."—Los Angeles Times.

Another Winner in "The Battle of the Neighborhoods"—

Milwaukee, Ashland, Paulina and Division

ONE of Chicago's main business centers—that's Milwaukee, Ashland, Paulina and Division. This is the point to which shoppers for miles around come to buy.

Business is good on each of these streets. But Milwaukee Avenue shows the most extensive commercial development. Here the stores line the street solidly block after block. Furniture stores and clothing shops for men and women predominate. But there are also three large department stores, two five and ten cent stores and scores of smaller shops. At this center all the varied needs of the vast neighborhood can be filled.

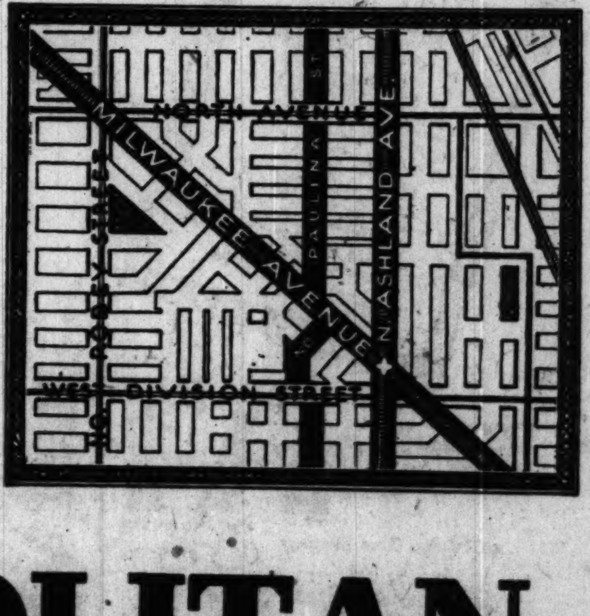
One of the Biggest . . . . .

As Chicago's great northwest side has grown, Milwaukee Avenue has prospered. Stores have been improved, business property along the street has risen to an average rental of $650 a month. Two large banks have come and their buildings are as modern and impressive as any in the city. Today this center serves a vast area that contains over 115,000 families. The buying habits of most of these people have been formed. The merchants of Milwaukee, Ashland, Paulina and Division have convinced them that it pays to trade in their neighborhood.

Change . . . Constant Change

Milwaukee, Ashland, Paulina and Division has won success in "the battle of the neighborhoods." Other centers have also triumphed. Still others have not been able to stand the pace of competition and have settled back into commercial oblivion.

Every year sees some change in Chicago's retail centers. What's the reason? Why do some neighborhoods rise to the peak of prosperity and others show the empty store fronts that mean business stagnation?



There's Only One Answer . .

Business is not for the timid. Prosperity comes to those merchants who want it enough to fight for it. Business is good. Buying power is high. But to get your share of the public's dollar you must go after it. If you don't, some one else will!

Three Fundamentals . . . .

Modern merchandising—modern selling—modern advertising are today necessary for success. The first two are problems for the individual merchant. But in advertising, a new, all-powerful ally has come into the field.

This is The Sunday Tribune Metropolitan Section. The Tribune has divided its vast circulation in Chicago and suburbs into three parts—one for each side of the city. Think what this means! A neighborhood merchant can broadcast his sales message to 250,000 families, all of whom can shop conveniently at his store.

The Tribune is noted for the solid successes it has built up for scores of manufacturers and retailers in many varied lines of business.

Now you have a chance to talk to the same responsive audience. And you can pick out only those who will benefit you. You pay only for the readers in your own section of the city—about a third of the cost for full Sunday Tribune circulation!

Act Immediately! . . . . .

Ask a Tribune man to drop in and tell you why The Sunday Tribune Metropolitan Section is the logical, economical solution to your sales problem. Phone Superior 0100—NOW!

METROPOLITAN SECTION

The Chicago Tribune publishes as a part of its regular Sunday issue a Metropolitan Section, the circulation of which is divided so that local neighborhood merchants may advertise in any one or more of the three sides of Chicago and suburbs as follows:

CLOSING IN ON THE FRENCH ANARCHISTS

"Vile Melville" of the Scotland Yard Effects Two Spectacular Captures

Walking Into The Trap Set By the Detective

By George Dilnot.

(William Melville sets out to capture two notorious French anarchists and a woman, all suspected of complicity in a Paris bombing. He plans to storm the house occupied by Francois and his wife. Concluded from last Sunday.)

THIS desperate venture in cold blood did not, as events turned out, prove to be necessary. On the very night selected for the arrest the oil for the lamp which was the solitary illumination of the room gave out. The man and woman peered into the street. It was as quiet as death. There was not a soul to be seen. François determined there was nothing to fear. He stole silently out and was quietly shadowed to a small general shop by one detective while another maintained the vigil on the house.

This was a few minutes before the time that had been fixed for the raid, and Melville himself was taking a few hours' rest. He came ere François had returned from his mission and instantly followed up the opportunity.

As the anarchist emerged from the shop detectives flung themselves upon him and a fierce struggle began. With dynamic fury, and mouthing strange French oaths, François wrested himself free and drew his revolver. Melville knocked it up just in time and it exploded harmlessly.

Again the beset man fired with deadly purpose, and this time the bullet whistled among the detectives. Someone twisted the weapon from his hand and in a twisted, snarling heap they struggled on the ground till numbers told and a pair of handcuffs were forced upon his wrists.

A TRAPPED BEAST

Overcome, but still defiant, like a trapped beast, he was escorted to the nearest police station. Melville was not among those who accompanied him. The inspector—for he had not yet become a superintendent—still had work to do. There was Madame François to deal with.

Back, accompanied by a single colleague, he went to the house where she was waiting. It was in his mind that she would be expecting the return of her husband and that so there was a chance of taking her by surprise.

Only the footsteps of a single man sounded on the stairs as they crept up to the apartment in which she was waiting. Madame heard a tap at the bolted door and a guarded voice calling to her in French to open. For once thrown off her guard, she stole to obey.

In the gloom she had no opportunity of recognizing the intruders before their grip was upon her. Even then, with the arms of the burly Melville encircling her, she managed to pull herself within reach of the table and seize the pistol and dagger. It was no time for mistaken chivalry. Before she could do any damage she was thrown to the ground and the weapons taken from her. Then she was held while she was securely manacled.

DEPORTED, DISGUSTED

This part of the story may well end here. Both François and his wife were extradited to France—to the consternation of others of their kidney who had come to look upon England as a safe sanctuary for murderers. François was chiefly disgusted because he had been afforded no chance of "immortalising" himself by some act of assassination.

For some reason they escaped the scaffold, and instead were sent to penal servitude for life. But that did not concern Melville. His part of the business had finished when he arrested them and handed them over to the French police.

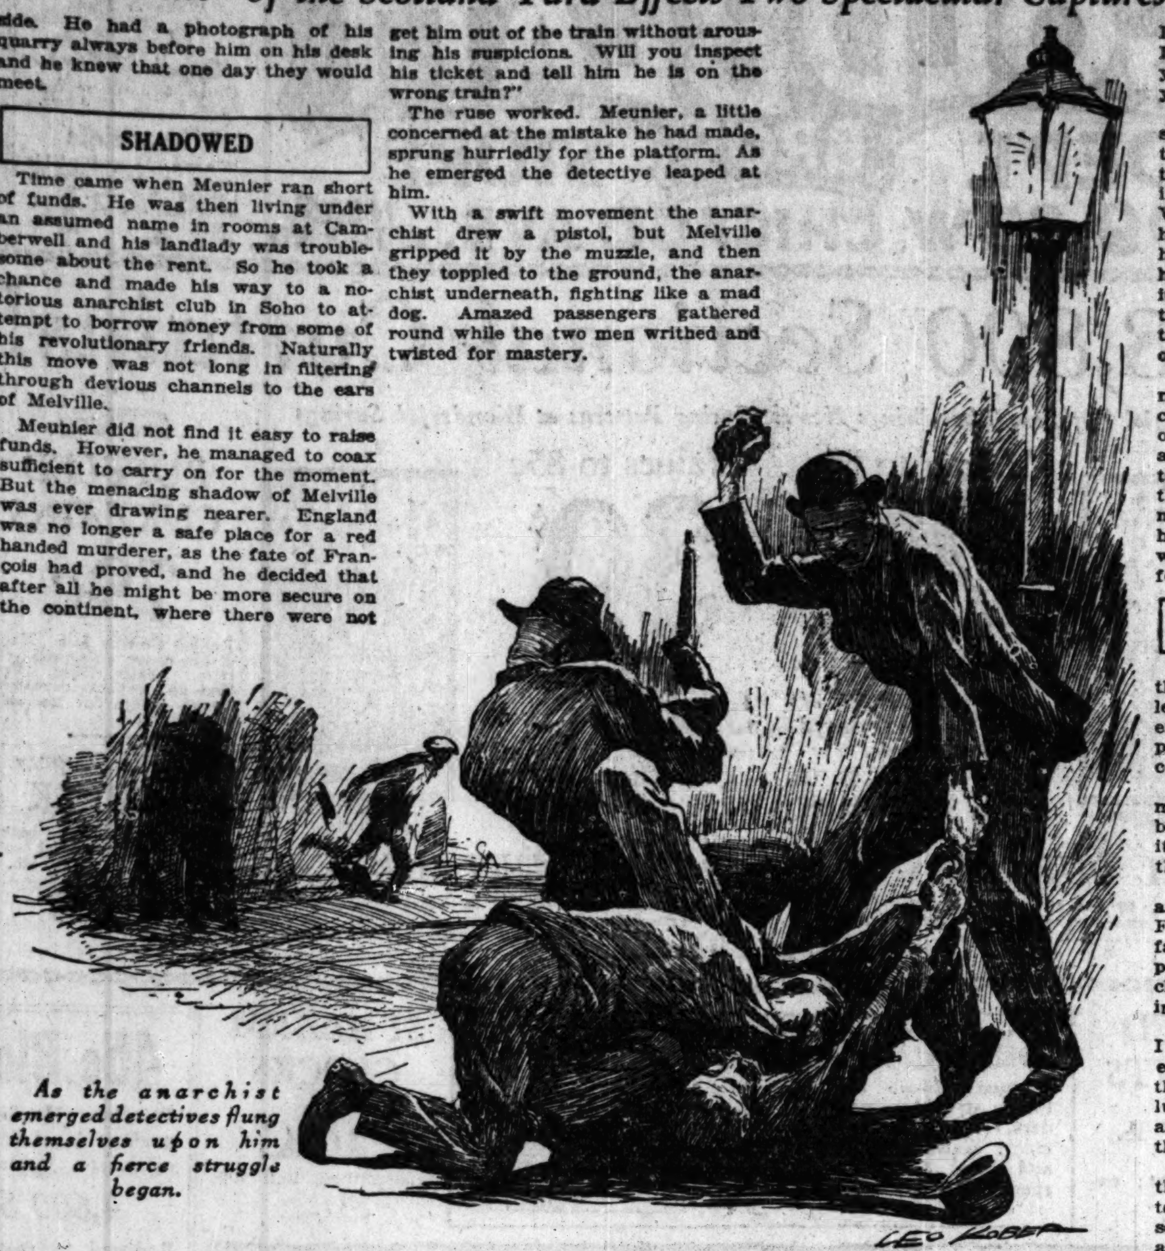
There remained Meunier. He was a less slap-dash type of villian than François, but he had a greater fund of cunning, and he covered his trail with considerable cleverness. As soon as one retreat had been discovered he would bolt to another. He was as suspicious and elusive as a fox and he had a resourceful capacity of disguise.

Patiently, unhurriedly, Melville kept him on the move. Time was on his side. He had a photograph of his quarry always before him on his desk and he knew that one day they would meet.

SHADOWED

Time came when Meunier ran short of funds. He was then living under an assumed name in rooms at Camberwell and his landlady was troublesome about the rent. So he took a chance and made his way to a notorious anarchist club in Soho to attempt to borrow money from some of his revolutionary friends. Naturally this move was not long in filtering through devious channels to the ears of Melville.

Meunier did not find it easy to raise funds. However, he managed to coax sufficient to carry on for the moment. But the menacing shadow of Melville was ever drawing nearer. England was no longer a safe place for a red handed murderer, as the fate of François had proved, and he decided that after all he might be more secure on the continent, where there were not so many pertinacious detectives of Melville's character.



As the anarchist emerged detectives flung themselves upon him and a fierce struggle began.

THE HUNCHBACK

Easy though it had been to get into England, Meunier felt it would be more difficult to get out. Although he had eluded Melville for so long, he had not shaken him off. He knew the detectives had his photograph and a description. The hunted man made himself up as a hunchback, and, confident that he had assumed an impenetrable disguise, resolved to make a dash for the boat train at Victoria station.

Now it may be taken as certain that there were few continental boat trains at that time at which Melville or some of his staff did not take a glance. It was unlucky for Meunier that at the particular hour he had selected Melville himself should be at Victoria by the merest chance. He was, in fact, escorting his wife to a theater.

The detective caught a glimpse at the face of a well dressed hunchback at the ticket office and with a quick word of explanation to Mrs. Melville slipped after him.

"As I drew nearer and nearer," he said, "doubts increased as to whether he really was Meunier. But he headed for the continental departure platform, and that circumstance, flimsy as it was, renewed the confidence of my first impression."

The detective saw the other take his seat in the corner of a first class compartment. One final glance and he was sure.

THE CLASH

Now, he knew Meunier was armed, and that he would not hesitate to use his weapon. Melville had left his pistol at home. He did not even carry a walking stick. To enter the small apartment in an endeavor to make the arrest would give Meunier such an advantage as to make the attempt almost suicidal. He would have to be lured into the open.

Melville walked nonchalantly on and summoned a railway official.

"I am a police officer," he explained. "There is a hunchback in the fifth carriage from the engine. I want to get him out of the train without arousing his suspicions. Will you inspect his ticket and tell him he is on the wrong train?"

The ruse worked. Meunier, a little concerned at the mistake he had made, sprung hurriedly for the platform. As he emerged the detective leaped at him.

With a swift movement the anarchist drew a pistol, but Melville gripped it by the muzzle, and then they toppled to the ground, the anarchist underneath, fighting like a mad dog. Amazed passengers gathered round while the two men writhed and twisted for mastery.

Strong man though Melville was, he had all he could do to retain his grip. As the other found he could not loosen it he strove with all his strength to drag his captor under the wheels of the train, which was on the verge of starting.

At that moment Mrs. Melville appealed to the crowd for help. Even against the dozen men who immediately responded Meunier struggled desperately. He was overpowered, and Melville got him to a cab.

The detective seated himself opposite his prisoner and placed one hand on his knee.

"Look here, Meunier," he said. "We have had our fight and you have lost. Suppose you make the best of it, now."

"Who are you?" asked the other.

"I'm Melville," said the detective.

"The mere mention of the name," said Melville, telling of the arrest, "whirled him into a passion which made his assume a more fiendish look than anything I had ever pictured possible. His hideous stare, livid complexion, and the tightly drawn muscles of his face gave him a look of startling ferocity. Beneath his clenched teeth he muttered imprecation of singular power and fluency; and then in tones of deep mortification he added:

HIS SORRY FATE

"'What a sorry fate, to be sure! I had a haunting suspicion I should fall into your net. I hated that thought more than anything else, because I loathed you for your past successes against my friends. To prevent the possibility of falling into your clutches, I had you pointed out to me just after I came to England, and I felt sure that I should know you anywhere. I had your photograph. I knew the clothes you wore.

"'Furthermore, I carried a pistol, so that in the event of an attempt to take me I might end your career and the life of everyone else within shooting distance who tried to interfere. When I saw you in the station, I only half realized who you were. If you had come into the carriage I should have killed you for certain. Think of it—after all my measures of precaution here I am like a common felon, taken as though I were the tamest of tame criminals!'

"He was genuinely despondent—not because he was captured, but because he had not murdered a dozen or more people in the process! He afterwards became more resigned, and took me into his confidence concerning the many diabolical deeds he had committed. He cherished the thought that he had plumbed the depth of malicious wickedness, no horror being too terrible for his evil genius."

THREATENED

In the inner councils of anarchy the arrest of Meunier provoked a violent outburst of rage. Shoals of threatening letters descended upon the imperturable Melville. One anonymous courrespondent wrote:

"You have arrested one of the best men in the world, and his capture must be avenged. I have set myself to do it, and will effect my purpose on the thirteenth."

On the ninth of that month Melville arrested two Italians, named Polti and Farnara, who were engaged in manufacturing bombs with which they proposed to blow up the London stock exchange. On Polti was found a dairy in which he had written:

"The thirteenth is an unlucky day. I was born on the thirteenth and have ever been unlucky. I was married on the thirteenth—another piece of bad luck. However, on the thirteenth I am going to kill Melville and perhaps that will balance matters."

His intentions were postponed, by the intervention of Melville, for a matter of twenty years, which was the sentence imposed upon him by a judge at the Old Bailey.

FINALE

As for Meunier: he was sent back to France. Murderer though he was, he, like François, managed to escape the scaffold. He was sent to imprisonment for life, but one morning while serving his sentence he was found strangled in his cell. The theory was that, rightly or wrongly, some of his fellow convicts suspected him of being a spy in the employ of the warders.

Melville, the most threatened man of his time, died peacefully in his suburban bed toward the close of the world war.

Germans Plan First Aid Stations for Motorists

BERLIN.—(AP)—"Automobilists' Aid Company, Ltd.," is the name of a newly founded organization for technically and personally aiding automobilists who meet with an accident on the road. The work is to be carried on by emergency stations to be erected throughout the country.

The founders of the company were the Central European Automobile association, the German Industrial Automobile league, and the German Automobile Dealers' league.

All police authorities in Prussia have been instructed by the minister of interior to assist with all possible means, in the interest of public traffic, the work of the organization, and, especially in country districts where there is no postoffice, to place their service telephone at the disposal of members.

Paris Sets 25 Miles as Dangerous Speed

PARIS.—(AP)—Twenty-five miles an hour has been fixed as a sort of arbitrary "dangerous" automobile speed in downtown Paris. There is no legal limit, for the driver of a car is responsible for his acts at all speeds.

The police, nevertheless, have decided that a common sense standard must be used so traffic officers can exercise control.

This limit is to be enforced only where there are cross streets. On the avenues a car may go as fast as traffic conditions and safety permit.

Superfluous Hair Removed Forever

Patient Receiving Treatment on Cheek

By the New Tricho Electric Wave Method

The Tricho System employs the new wave length method which has won the approval of the scientific world. Hair on the face, arms and legs can now be removed painlessly, without further recurrences in growth. No needles are used in the Tricho System—nothing but the vibratory wave which cannot be heard or felt. No matter what the condition of a growth may be, we will remove it harmlessly and painlessly.

Hair on Face, Arms, Legs Painlessly Removed

Our treatment for men with heavy black beards reduces the growth. From 60% to 90% of the hair can be permanently removed, making it necessary to shave only once a week.

Unsightly hair showing through expensive silk hose, or hairy legs exposed at the beach, are a hindrance to every woman's beauty. The Tricho System of hair removing can easily remedy this.

Hair on the upper lip can be easily removed without any pain whatsoever. Only a few treatments at a moderate cost will banish lip growths forever.

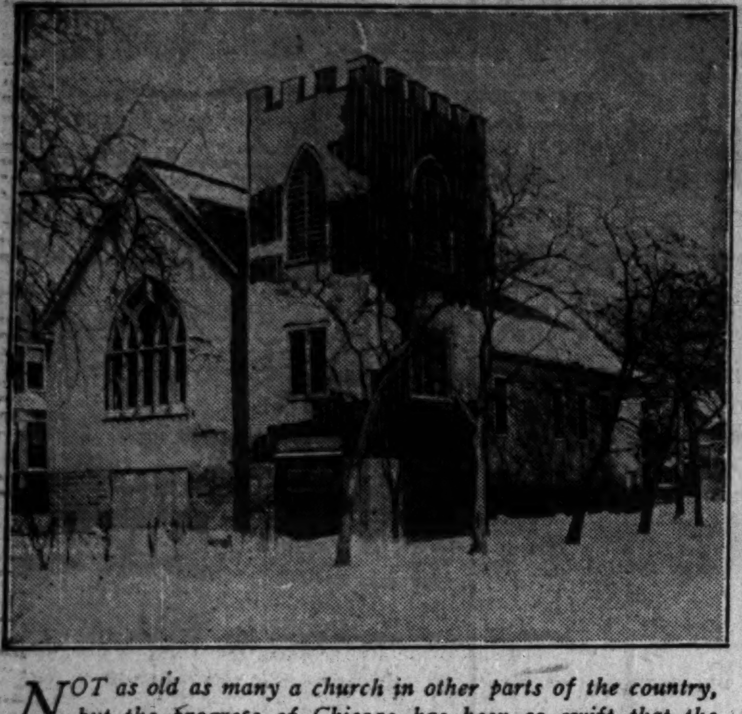
WINTRY WINDS NOW ITS CHOIR.



NOT as old as many a church in other parts of the country, but the progress of Chicago has been so swift that the Windsor Park Baptist church, once meeting its community's needs, has been abandoned now for some six years. The bell in its belfry stilled, its plaster fallen in decay, and its windows empty of stained glass, the structure at Saginaw and Seventy-sixth streets serves as nothing more than a landmark for that part of the city. Thirty-five years ago it was built alongside what had been an Indian trail leading to Detroit.

Cashier Cashes in Handsomely on Politeness

explain with a smile that she catered only to women's trade.

Maybe it was the springlike day. Politeness seemed to be a drug on the market.

At the northeast corner of the Wieboldt & Co. big store four men had paused in the process of shoveling snow and stood in the formation of a quartet about to sing "Sweet Adeline."

"How could I get a job that easy?" I asked, smart-alecky.

"Wait for the next snow," one of them—four against one—came back.

But one of the older men, wearing glasses, came closer and said in a low tone, "Do you need a job? I know how it is. I can't say for sure, but if you'll go and see the superintendent on the third floor——"

I started on down the street and he called after me that I could find the superintendent best by taking the side entrance.

A PEDESTRIAN PEST

Going into a little combination soda fountain and magazine shop, I told the proprietor I didn't want to buy anything, but just wanted to read the magazines for a while.

"All right," he agreed, "go ahead."

I went into the office of the secretary of the Journeymen Plasterers and inquired for the address of a mortar slinger of my acquaintance. There was plenty of courtesy there from a man who didn't seem to have a scowl or sign of peevishness in his repertoire, though a group of plastering kings, talking shop in the hallway by the window, eyed my intrusion and cocked their ears at my obviously unsophisticated questioning.

I regaled a radio dealer who hadn't my particular "set" for sale about the number of stations I was able to get and, while he didn't enthuse, he did listen patiently. I called a Negro window washer down off his ladder to ask him how he found business, and he informed me, with a grin, that it was simply a case of washing another window when you got through with the one you were washing and then washing another after that.

The newsboy on the corner stopped in the middle of dealing with cash customers to inform me in a gay tone that the best way to get to Lincoln park was to "take the Ashland car to North and transfer east."

What a day! Where were all those folks who had grumbled and scowled and growled and waxed sarcastic? Blame it on the weather.

Night had fallen now and the sun was gone and the slush was beginning to freeze in the gutters.

AFTER SEVEN YEARS

I entered the cafeteria at 1612 West Van Buren. The bustle accompanying the evening meal had begun and the woman at the cashier's desk was counting up her cash that stood in piles on the marble slab beside the register. Walking over to her with my mouth opened like a disgusted carp, I said, complainingly:

"Have I got to wait on myself?"

"It's a self serve," she answered sweetly, as if she were sure my pleasure ought to be akin to her pride in the fact.

"When I go into a restaurant," I grumbled, "I want to have some one come and wait on me."

She abandoned her cash counting. My interruption meant starting at it all over again. Instead of telling me that I must have observed the style of the place at least after entering and that there was nothing to prevent me from going elsewhere, she gave me the look of a doting mother happy at the return to the old home of a long wandering son.

"It's a cafeteria," she smiled, nodding her head with emphasis, "but if you want to go to a table and have the food brought to you——"

"How will I know what you've got?" I interrupted.

"Well, now," she quavered, apologetically, "will you just wait until I check up this man coming with the tray? Then I'll go over with you to the counters. I'm sure we'll find something——"

She left the stool to follow up her suggestion.

"Do you own the place?" I asked her.

"No. Mercy, no, but I've been here seven years."

Seven years with the blur of humanity passing her desk. Seven years of the same thing, day in and day out. One might have expected her extra steps along with the light in the window of the old farmhouse kitchen, but I was just one in the long line that was forming with napkins and silver. Outside, the street cars clanged and the light had come into the huge electric sign. Not patronizing in her attitude toward a troublesome stranger, but genuinely sympathetic.

THE MAGIC CARD

My decision didn't come as the result of debate, but through helplessness.

"Here's the card," I said.

Even as she read it, the card was something that she couldn't immediately understand. I had to explain and explain again. She was to present the card at The Tribune Tower and receive $50 award in recognition of her courtesy.

"I can't believe it," she puzzled, with a tremble to her lips.

"Maybe," I said, "it's because you think the whole world's kind and polite."

She thought a moment.

"No," she mused, wistfully, "I know what you mean by discourtesy. It does exist. But long ago I figured it out this way: If I find people cranky and I deal with them as kindly as I can, after a while we're both able to smile the trouble off, and that's ever so much the best, don't you think?"

"Well," I agreed, "it's at least worth while when the Politeness Reporter happens to be around."

France May Force Factories to Hire More Elderly Men

PARIS.—(AP)—Obligatory employment of old men is one of the social reforms before the government. All employers, under a plan proposed by Paul Canjole, member of the Seine departmental general council, would be required to employ a small percentage of men between fifty and sixty years old.

Gray hair, he says, is the worker's greatest burden.

"Only young men are wanted in this hurrying age of mass production. The older men often are quite as competent and certainly their experience and dependability are worth something, but regardless of that," he concluded, "society in some way must take care of the older men still able to give a good return for their wages."

A social insurance program that would include old age pensions is expected to be passed by parliament eventually.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Indoor and Outdoor Costumes for the Winter Resort are Now in the Limelight of Fashion.

By BETTINA BEDWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—This is the season of the year when fashions migrate. They begin their young lives in Paris, but the rigors of a rainy winter drive them to other climates for growth. The more hardy styles go to snowbound Switzerland for the mid-winter sports and the ephemeral springtime clothes go south to the Cote d'Azur and Palm Beach.

At the moment Paris is being deserted. Everybody who is somebody is going to St. Moritz and the newest sartorial fancies of the Paris grand couture are going along. At St. Moritz the smart world goes in for strenuous sports of the kind that the high Alps encourage, skating, skiing, and so forth, for out of doors, and dancing every evening for indoors. Here all women are young, in pep and spirit at least, and there is little of the idling that passes the hours in the south. Clothes are correspondingly youthful, so that the styles that come out of St. Moritz are youthful sports fashions, whether they are created for the outside or the in.

Outdoor costumes are warm, simple, and essentially practical for wear anywhere that the snow falls in winter. For a number of seasons it has been smart, and a bit snobbish, to wear no fur on outdoor sports clothes designed for zero weather. Women bundled themselves up in all sorts of "woolies," as the English quaintly call them, but they would rather die from exposure than appear with an ounce of fur visible anywhere on their chic clothes.

This season sees a return to normalcy, for the smartest of winter sports outfits are at least fur trimmed, particularly the skating ensembles. Fur coats are not worn, but fur lined coats are permitted, and fur is of the simplest and most practical variety, being clipped rabbit, chevrette, and astrakhan, usually.

Very thick, lightweight woolens, usually the English types, are used to make the skating costume, of which our first sketch shows an excellent example. This ensemble from Drecoll makes walking or skating in the coldest weather a pleasure. It is designed to give the maximum of freedom with the greatest comfort.

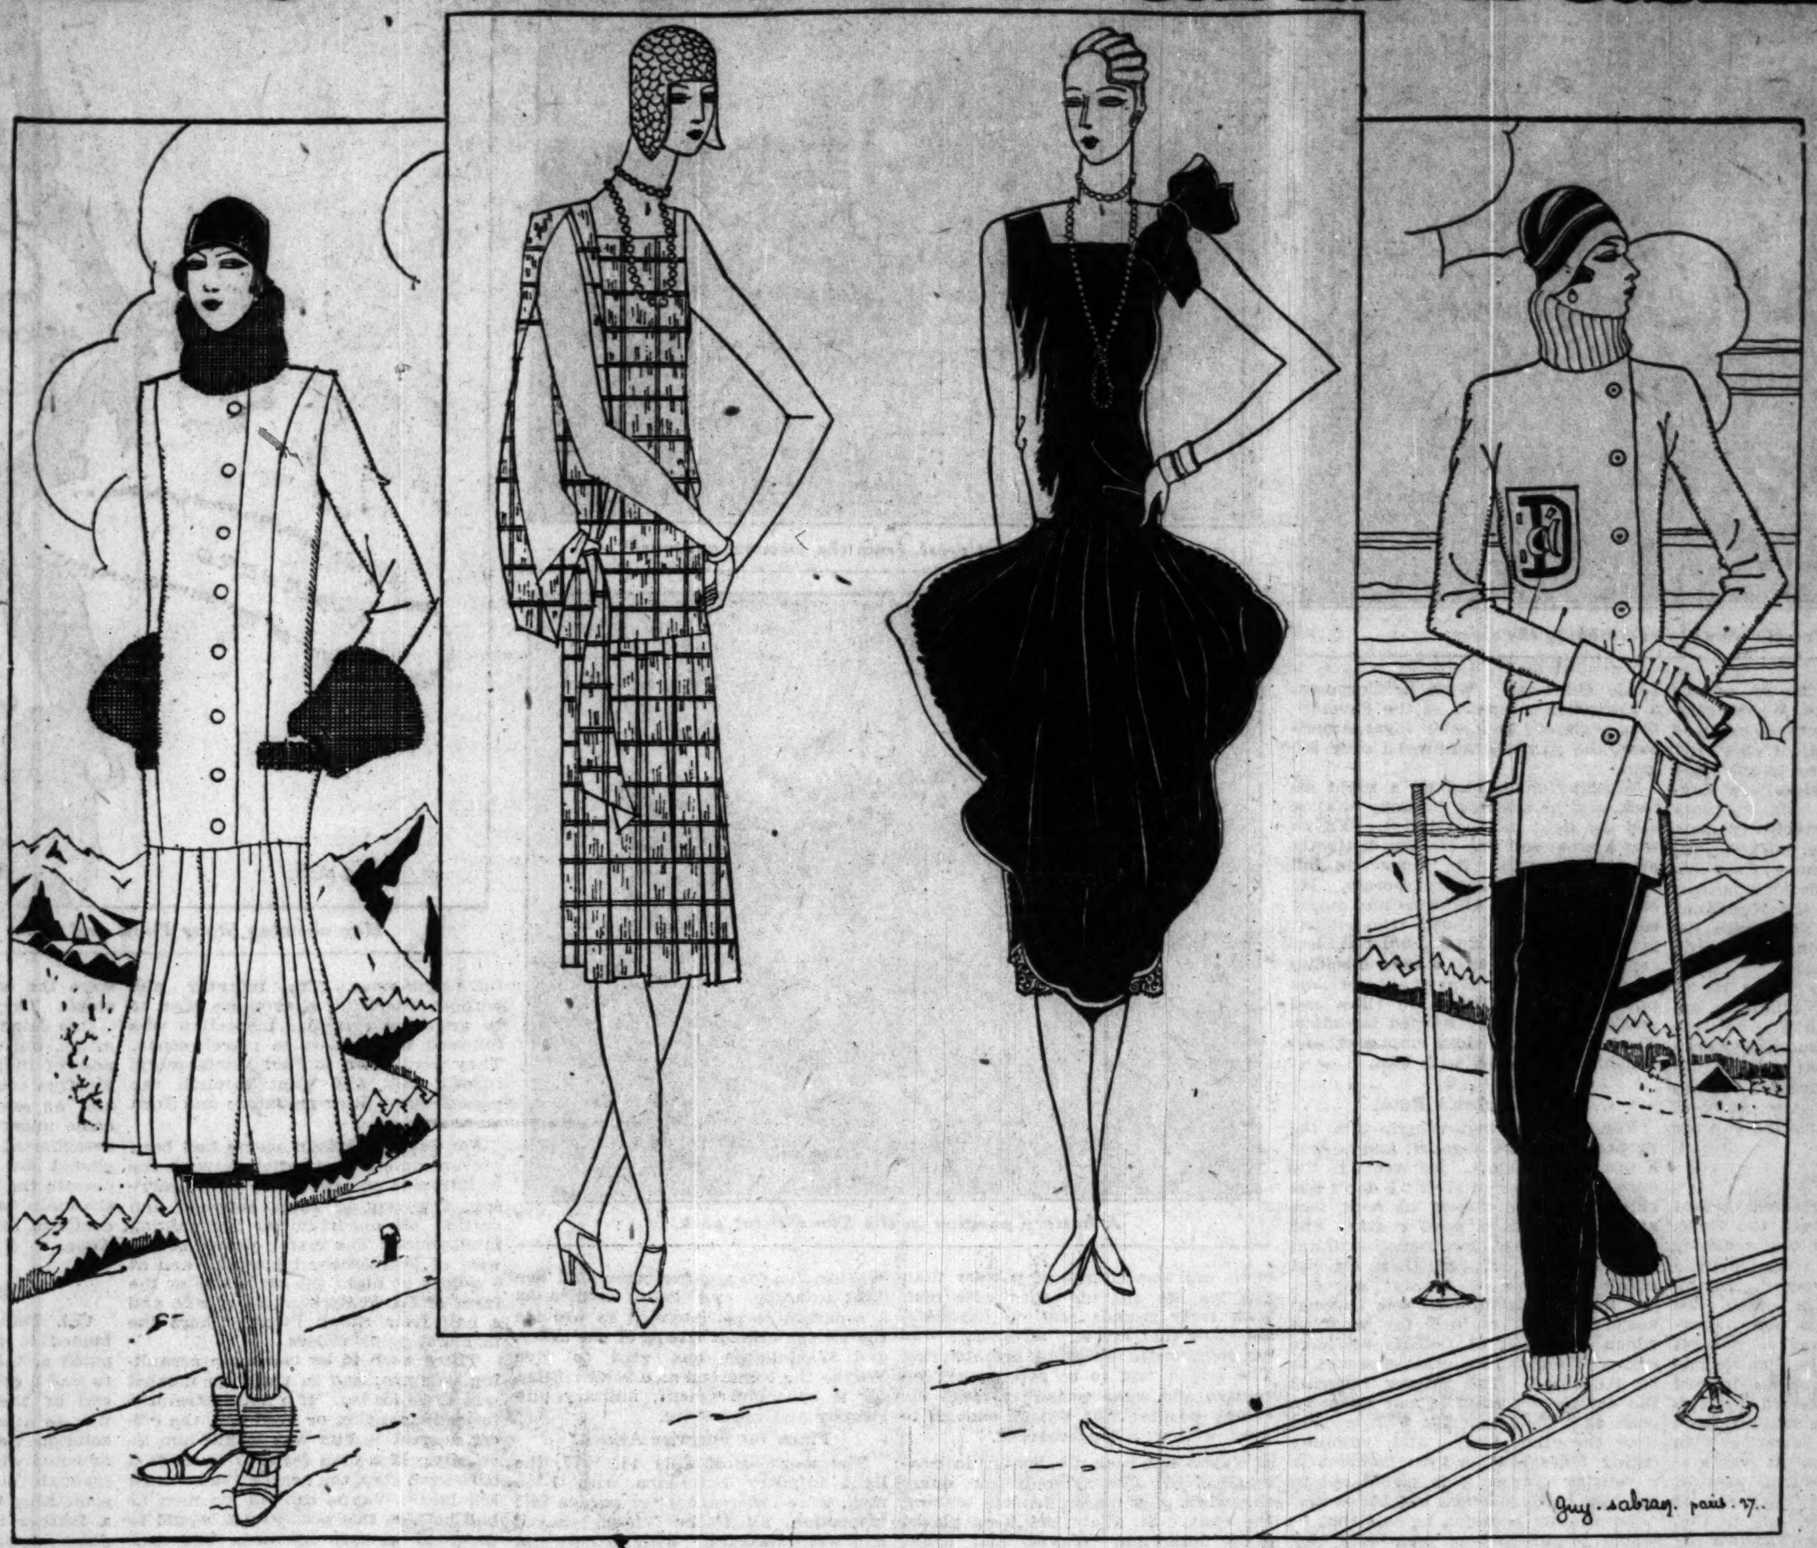
In color it is a dull blue, about the shade of the January sky, the horizon blue of the French poilu. The fabric is a lightweight woolen which is at the same time thick, being made entirely of angora. The jacket is very straight in line, buttoned up to the neck at the left side front, and fitted snugly at the hips and around the shoulders to keep out the cold. An enveloping collar of gray astrakhan and large flaring cuffs of the same fur make the jacket more chic and also more snug. Bands of this fur top the deep pockets which are roomy enough to give plenty of parking space to frosty hands.

The skirt is almost completely circular, made so by the circular godets that are placed all around it from hips to hemline. Under this skirt is worn a pair of knickers of the material of the costume, and under the jacket a heavy, coarsely knitted pull-over sweater, in tones of blue and gray. A small hat of knitted wool, painted in the costume colors, accompanies it, and heavy ribbed stockings and half socks are worn with the skating or walking shoes of calfskin.

On the opposite side of our sketch is illustrated the skiing costume which is worn from morning to night by those women who go in for this most active sport. There is argument about, or place, for the skirt in this type of costume Long, loose trousers are invariably worn, and they are just as inevitably tucked into chaussettes knitted like a man's sports socks in heavy ribbed woolen.



Guy-sabran. paris. 27.

Fashion wears, 'mid snow and ice, the simple sports suit of blue gray woolen, collared and cuffed in gray astrakhan, and having a circular godeted skirt. Shown on the figure at the extreme left.

Red and beige plaid lame chiffon is the latest material for the dance dress. A spangled helmet covers entirely the close cropped hair. Second figure.

Third, the newest idea in the period frock is shown in this Martial et Armand model of black taffeta with panniers that decrease toward the hemline, and a petticoat of lace.

The skiing costume is made in two tones of green woolen, worn with an orange turtle necked sweater and gloves. The jacket is banded and embroidered in orange wool, and the cap is green and orange. Shown last.

This skiing suit is made of dull green overcoat woolen the trousers of darker tone than the jacket, which Drecoll leaves collarless so that the turtle necked sweater of orange wool may be seen. Three huge patch pockets of the material are placed on this jacket, outlined and embroidered with orange. The buttons are of orange colored leather, and the gauntlet gloves are of orange wool. The cap is made of orange and green wool knitted in stripes.

These are the costumes that are seen during the daytime, and for dancing in the evening the frocks worn also have a sports feeling, in most cases. One of the new style ideas for the dance frock, which comes from St. Moritz, is the dress of plaid chiffon, a sketch of which is shown on our second figure.

J. Suzanne Talbot, who created this model, makes it of red and beige plaid, with a thread of lamé to increase its brilliancy. The jumper blouse has a daytime, square decolletage, and is given charm and chic by the unusual drapery over the right arm, which ties in a knot at the waistline. There is a suggested bolero on this blouse, lifted in front to suggest a high waistline, and the very deep band below is tightly fitted over the hips.

With this blouse Talbot places a skirt of plaited plaid chiffon, and the smart helmet hat is also specially designed by her to accompany the toilette. The shape and the red spangled embroidery of this cap remind you of the armored helmets of olden days. A number of fashionable women are covering their bobbed heads with these decorative helmets when they go to dance or theater in the evening.

The taffeta dance dress shown on our third figure is one of the new models from Martial et Armand, and also one of the latest and most original of the new evening silhouettes. Madame Vallet has given to this frock a panniered effect, in harmony with the trend of styles toward the romantic, and at the same time with real genius kept it entirely modern in feeling.

The fitted bodice has the novelty of wide shoulder straps, the left one tying in a stiff bow on the shoulder. The skirt is somewhat like an inverted maple leaf in outline, being very bouffant over the hips and descending to a narrow half circle at the hem in front and back. To leave this hem amply wide for dancing it is cut up at the sides and a finely plaited petticoat of lace is worn beneath, showing below the cut-out portions at the sides. This petticoat also furthers the period idea of the frock.

It is the frock or coat with some sort of past period inspiration which forecasts the trend of the mode of Paris. We have already observed that the Victorian and Spanish influences are at work to change the cut of our clothes, and now this idea of the panniered evening gown brings in still another.

Martin Larson & Son,
Chicago, Ill.
My Dear Mr. Larson:
I find that my left shoe (Good Foot) has become somewhat worn, while the right shoe (Bad Foot) is in good condition and I would like you to make me a left shoe (Good Foot) and also the inner sole. Please use the same kind of leather. My reason for not ordering both shoes is that I expect to drive to Chicago in the spring and have you make a few changes of the shoes.
Suppose you have had a successful year and I hope a happy one, as I feel that you have made so many happy that I know it reacts to you.
Remember me to your wife and tell her my sisters and I are still watching the trains for that visit of hers.
Wishing you the greetings of the season, I am,

HISTORICAL AMERICA by CLIFFORD RAYMOND

Mad Anthony Wayne at Stony Point

THE ROMAN wall of the American revolution was in the Hudson river Highlands. These mountains were the ramparts by which not only upper New York but also the New England states were defended, and upon which Washington based much of his strategy for operations in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware.

Possession of the Highlands was the condition upon which he campaigned. They held the line of communication with New England. The British regarded the American positions on the heights and in the passes as virtually untakable, at least after 1778, and therein lay for them the importance of Arnold's treason and proposal to sell West Point, the key position.

The Britishers' Lost Opportunity.

Very likely in 1777 Howe could have forced his way up the river from New York City and could have joined Burgoyne. Clinton, undertaking what Howe should have done, had reduced some of the forts, but Burgoyne could not hold out and the object of the relief was lost.

Howe had been lured away from the Hudson by an ambition to take Philadelphia, the continental capital. Washington had followed him and fought the battle of Brandywine and Germantown in an effort to keep the city. He failed, but he proved two things: that he had an army and that he had learned to command it in attack.

After the announcement of the French alliance, the British decided that Philadelphia must be given up and their forces united in New York. Clinton was in command then, and Washington followed him on his march to New York, offered him a fight, and had it at Monmouth.

In 1779 there was little action. In 1778 the British peace commission had come over with terms and negotiations had been refused in circumstances which were regarded in London as humiliating. Washington was at Middlebrook, N. J., in a strong position, with great freedom of movement. Patriot stores were at Easton, Pa. Clinton was instructed by his war office to draw the American into a position unfavorable to him, and in consequence he began feinting to accomplish this. If Washington made a false move Clinton would get the stores at Easton or he might get Washington himself. A water and land attack was made on the approaches to the Highlands and an American line of communication was broken.

The American Line.

It was the most convenient one between New England and Washington's position in New Jersey. It crossed the Hudson at King's ferry, from Verplanck's on the east side to Stony Point on the west. Both places were taken by the British and garrisoned. Washington had been apprised of the plan and he moved from Middlebrook toward West Point. The change of position had not bettered Clinton, and in another attempt to draw Washington into a false move an expedition was sent against the Connecticut coast and nearby towns. That was in the hope that the cries of defenseless New Englanders would attract a military blunder. The work was ruthlessly done and many towns were burned, but Washington did not move from his Roman wall. Clinton decided against further penetration of the Highlands and returned to New York with his main body, leaving Stony Point and Verplanck's strongly held.

This was opportunity for a bit of military drama which Washington apparently loved. He knew what the effect of it would be if successful even if material improvement seemed obscure or locking. He decided to take Stony Point by storm. It would be of a piece with Trenton and the capture of the Hessians.

Stony Point.

Stony Point at its greatest height was about 150 feet above the river. It was a bold promontory reaching out a half mile into the river from the shore line, rocky and wooded. Inland its slopes ran down to a marsh. To the east, where there is now a government lighthouse, was a natural stone bastion, which the British had fortified. The inland slopes toward the swamps were protected by two lines of abattis. On the summit there were seven or eight batteries with communicating trenches. It was reasonably regarded as safe from assault, and to the Seventeenth regiment of British infantry, under Lieut. Col. Henry Johnson, it was known as Little Gibraltar. With artillerymen, a grenadier company of the Seventy-first regiment and some loyal Americans, the garrison numbered over 600 men.

Washington decided on a night attack, and he selected Anthony Wayne and the light infantry for it. Wayne was a great soldier. He was distinctly an assault man. He knew the full composition of infantry morale. He believed in smart uniforms and smart soldiers. He knew that a trim soldier, polished, shaved, and powdered, had something in him that a ragged soldier missed. He knew that the Americans put too much reliance on rifles and marksmanship. He wanted bayonets. That was his greatest emphasis, and Washington agreed with him.

Von Steuben's Pupil.

Von Steuben had taught him the proper use of the bayonet, and he was a thorough convert. He wrote to the secretary of war in 1777: "I don't like rifles. I would almost as soon face an enemy with a good musket and bayonet as with ammunition without a bayonet, for although there are not many instances of bloody bayonets, yet I am confident that one bayonet keeps off another, and for want of which the Chief of Defeats we have met with ought in a great measure to be attributed. The Enemy knowing the defenseless state of our riflemen, rush on. They fly, mix with or pass thro' the other troops, and communicating fears that is ever incident to a retiring corps. This would not be the case if the riflemen had bayonets."

On another occasion he said that he would prefer to lead men with bayonets and one charge of powder than risk his life and his effort with men with forty rounds and no bayonets. He knew that military advantage was not complete in defending breastworks. The soldier had to be given some incentive and some weapon to gain the enemy position. It wasn't enough to fight well with legs covered.

Wayne had been a brigadier in command of the Pennsylvania line, doing the work of a major general without the rank. St. Clair had been placed above him, and Wayne had asked Washington for another command. The light infantry was being formed as a separate corps, destined to provide the chosen assault troops of the army, and Washington was glad to give Wayne the command as a soldier fitted for it by temperament, military philosophy and experience.

Plans for Surprise Attack.

The morning of July 14, 1779, the light infantry battalions with 1,350 men, were ordered out for parade and inspection, all to be "fresh shaved and well powdered," with rations and full equipment. The infantry was without suspicion that there was to be anything else, but inspection was followed with orders to march south. They went down to Fort Montgomery, turned west and went through the pass between Bear mountain and Torn mountain.

For days American scouts had been preventing communication between the countryside and the Stony Point garrison, intercepting farm supplies and cutting off opportunities for gaining intelligence. The march passed southwest of Donderberg mountain, and at 8 o'clock at night the corps was at the farm of David Springsteel, a mile and a half from Stony Point. There the men got their orders.

There were to be two main assaulting columns, and in them no musket was to be loaded. If a man attempted to load a musket or fired one, the officer nearest to him was to kill him instantly. If a man faltered or made a backward step, the nearest officer must kill him. Wayne said to his men he had no idea this punishment would be deserved in any instance, but such were the orders and must be understood. They would be enforced.

One detachment was to have ammunition, but this was only for the purpose of hiding the real attacks. Maj. Murfree commanded this small outfit, and as soon as the silent columns came under fire, not returning it, the detachment with loaded muskets should fire as rapidly as possible to deceive the garrison into thinking that the main danger was in the front and center of their works at the foot of the slope.

Other Commanders.

Col. Febiger, a Danish officer, attached to the patriot cause by sympathy at the beginning of the war, was to lead a column up from the southern end of the swamp, and Col. Butler was to attack from the north. Both columns were to have selected men in advance with tools for cutting a way through the abattis. All were to wear something white, paper, a cockade, or a feather in their hats, to be distinguishable in the dark, and the height was to be taken without firing except as indicated; the firing for deception and not for

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Pork Furnishes Fundamental Meat for Men of Every Fashion

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington

ONCE upon a time there was a "plum pudding pig." Needless to say, he was an English pig and not a Chinese pig (the Chinese are supposed to have learned how to roast pig so as to get a divine flavor, and they still use pig meat enormously), nor a Poland-China pig of the U. S. A. In fact, we do not know what kind of a pig he was from English denominations, whether a Yorkshire, Hampshire, Berkshire, or a Sussex, Dorset, Leicestershire, Northamptonshire, Oxfordshire, Cambridgeshire, Cumberland, Welsh, or Essex, or whether they imported him from Naples or brought him over from Germany.

All of which suggests, we guess, that there have been many varieties of pigs, yes, and styles, too, to suit localities, the manufacturing modes of the time, a country at large (suppose it is a pork packing country), and a change in customs, perhaps, the world around. In other words, styles in pigs and changes of styles in pigs have come about because of admirations for some special breed, and sometimes have come about because of belief in the greater utility of one breed as compared with another, and so forth, and so forth.

Great changes in styles have come about, as changes in other styles have come about, because of changes in styles of living among residents of town and country and because of such a change as that of the mild curing of bacon and ham, saving many a cut of pork from a continuous bath in salt brine. Terrible names have been given to salted pork, mainly, probably because terrible things have been done to it in the cooking. But think what it has been with beans, and men in the Arctic cold have eaten raw salt pork and thought it as sweet as sugar! Swines' meat, indeed, has been a principal food among most early peoples, and the acorns and beechnuts of the great primeval forests seem to have been largely a provision for the pigs' upkeep.

Pig as Food.

Pork is food. Pork has justified itself as a food for the races of men because it has been the means of securing, inexpensively, to impecunious people a food element (fat), without which they could not live with any degree of comfort and efficiency. The more wintry the climate, or farther toward the north or south pole anybody goes, the more indispensable does fat in the diet, and plenty of it, become. It is something that "sticks to the ribs." The process of digestion is slow but sure, like the burning of hard coal.

The old time idea that it was indigestible merely because it was slowly digested has lost its force. It is only when pork is wrongly cooked that it is indigestible, and any fat may easily be rendered indigestible by poor cookery. The fat of pork can be cooked so as to be appetizing and not, the least bit coarse or greasy, when one chooses to do nice work with it.

Cuts of Pork.

No animal seems to yield meat in so great a variety as the pig. The differences between different cuts, enhanced by different treatment, is so great as to make them seem almost like unrelated meats. This fact is especially brought out with the curing of the meat, and the cured parts have a greater variety of names than most people notice.

The fresh cuts give primary meat dishes, like roasts and chops and sausages, while what are called the secondary parts, like pigs' feet, the head, tongue, lips, liver, heart, brain, and even the tail, are now handled with great expertness by the packing houses and presented in most undeniably attractive ways in wholesale quantities.

One may see pigs' feet, pigs' ears, pork pluck, and so forth, packed to look as uniform as dates in a box. More than this, these are labeled "fancy meats," and the packers have had recipes prepared for their cooking, some of which have labels that entitle them to be called epicurean.

If we go to the English practices, we can find names that seem most interesting for all these secondary parts and for small cuts of the main carcass of the pig. Some of these names have never been used in the United States.

Inexpensive Cuts of Meat.

Not only the spare ribs, but many other pieces of pork can be used for exceedingly inexpensive dishes of a good deal of worth and attractiveness. Even the neck bone of the pig has on it both fat and lean, though some butchers profess to have great scorn for this piece and will not sell it because they can buy a whole barrel of neck bones for $1, or have been able to do so in the past.

People who know how use scraps of pork in making chop suey or even the elegant soufflé. One dollar can be made to do the work of three by buying such parts. Almost everything now is cured, so that we have blades and cheeks and other parts in that condition and they would be just as well worth while cooked fresh.

Imitation Chicken.

For this dish one may use either an inexpensive piece of pork or the expensive loin. In the latter case you choose a pound of the best roast or buy what would be cut into chops, but do not have it separated, or, for the inexpensive cut, have the shoulder piece without the bone. It is likely to have more fat because today the loin is so closely trimmed. Besides that use one carrot, four or five cups of cold water, two onions sliced, some celery leaves, green pepper and any other seasoning to suit. Perhaps we should emphasize the fact that the loin is superior for this dish.

Make the piece of meat immaculate and put in with the prepared vegetables in the cold water, bring to a boil slowly, and then cook it gently for one hour, skimming at the start if necessary. Leave the pork in the liquid, but cool it rapidly. When cooked in this fashion it should be as tender as possible; in fact, no meat is more tender.

Pork Soufflé.

Put through the food chopper enough of the pork cooked in the imitation chicken style to make one cup. Strain the liquid in which the pork was boiled and take two cups of it for a gravy. There ought to be another cup which one can use with the soufflé that is made.

Thicken the two cups of liquid with four level tablespoons of flour, mixing them with two level tablespoons of butter, cooking them till smooth; then add the liquid and stir and cook until it thickens. With care one may add a cold liquid to the hot combination, but if inexperienced it is best to have the liquid hot, or cool the other.

Add the chopped meat to this cup of gravy with salt to taste, if the meat was not salted in the first cooking, as it may have been when it had been cooked till tender. Also add a few grains of cayenne pepper. Stir into this mixture one or two beaten egg yolks, then fold in two egg whites carefully, keeping the mixture as fluffy as possible.

Pour this mixture into a buttered earthen baking dish, sprinkle with bread crumbs, and bake until it puffs. Then serve immediately.

To vary this dish have in the baking dish an inch layer of cooked spaghetti, pour the soufflé mixture over it, cover with crumbs and a bit of grated cheese, and bake like the soufflé, and serve at once. This may be served with a gravy made of the liquid in which the pork was cooked first. This may also be baked in individual portions and it is not half bad when cool.

Creamed Pork.

Prepare the gravy as for the soufflé, but make it a little thicker and add a little cream to it when it has cooked up, till thick. Cut up the cooked pork in dice or slivers and heat it thoroughly in the gravy.

A little green pepper chopped fine and a little sweet pepper or pimento in slivers cooked first in butter, and even some mushrooms may be added to this to make it like chicken à la king.

Creamed Fresh Pork.

Cut one chop or one slice of pork into as thin slices as possible, leaving them the full length of the piece, or make them into just mouthful sized pieces. For one chop use two tablespoons of flour, with a level teaspoon of salt and a little pepper. Roll the thin slices thoroughly in this seasoned flour.

Melt two tablespoons of butter in the frying pan and when it is hot enough to brown, put in the pieces of pork and cook them about one minute to a side. Then stir in the left-over flour, let the whole partly cool, add a cup of milk or a cup of half milk and half cream; then put this over the fire and stir until it thickens, after which stew gently for twenty minutes. This must be cooked gently, because of the milk, which will easily boil up, get too thick and also have a little skin over it—three undesirable effects. To have it cook in the gentlest possible way it may be covered and stand where it barely simmers.

This may seem remarkably like fried chicken in a creamed gravy. It is something of our own devising and we have before now enlarged considerably upon its attractiveness. We think immaculate fat from a pork chop, when browned and seasoned and served in a cream gravy, a good rival for the delicate marrow of French cookery, while when it is not treated in the right way it is barely edible, and a large number of people will reject it in eating a chop. In gravy of one sort or another, or in a pork pie, one will not even recognize it as fat.

An inexpensive piece of lean fresh pork can be cut up and fried and furnish seasonings for the excellent cream gravy of this sort, and it has other possibilities.

Fried Spareribs.

In this dish we also used milk in making a gravy. Other nations than ours understand how milk with pork fat changes it into something dainty and quite different from what we ordinarily get in pork dishes. In this case use spareribs instead of chops for frying.

Make them immaculate, cut the bones apart—about four inch bones are best—roll them in seasoned flour, put them into a hot frying pan in which there is a little butter, cover the pan and let the spareribs cook gently twenty minutes to a side, take them up and add milk to the pan, stir until it thickens, then bake the spareribs and simmer for ten minutes.

You can gnaw these bones without getting the slightest odor of pork fat, and we recommend trying the gravy on crackers, because we tried this combination on someone and got "Yum, yum."

The wish to make this dish on my part was inspired because, in a rather nice place at a good price, I had pork tenderloin that was dry and distorted from being cooked with too much fire, which also made it greasy. No gravy was served with it and there was no complementary relief like fried apples or applesauce or greens, therefore I turned from this most expensive pork meat to see what I could do with less expensive.

Stuffed Spareribs.

Spareribs rolled, skewered so the piece will stand like a basket, then filled with sour stuffing over which slices of bacon may be skewered, will be deliciously flavored if baked, and some people will like the dressing while others will not. Pork, at any rate, yields some of the best flavors baked of any meat we have, and the tiny bit of meat on the sparerib is no exception.

The apples in the dressing may make it too wet, but because of the tiny bit of meat they need to be protected by wetness, though not too thoroughly, in which case they will not get the browning that makes them delicious.

Boiled Spareribs.

Boiled spareribs are salt spareribs and a man's dish when cooked. Wash off the salt thoroughly from both sides of the meat, then soak for about three hours. Put them on to cook in cold water and when this boils skim it, if it is necessary.

Simmer for three hours. Prepare vegetables separately and serve on the same platter as the meat. To have them flavored like the meat, partly cook them, then add to them some of the cooking water around the spareribs. When the water cools in which the spareribs are boiled, skim off the goodly portion of fat which arises and use it as dressing.

Salt spareribs are among the most inexpensive of meats and are boiled with vegetables, but we do not recommend this because it spoils the vegetables, both from the flavor and nutriment standpoint. They lose their own good flavor and acquire one quite different when cooked with salt meats, and do not balance the objectionable side of the meat as they otherwise would.

Frying a Pork Chop.

First we recommend that you buy your chops from a butcher who knows how to cut them; otherwise get a board and cleaver and learn to cut them yourself, buying a block of loin. A careless butcher will give you one chop thick and one much thinner, sometimes a whole third thinner, which makes the cooking difficult. At any rate, pork chops need trimming at home in order to remove weathered edges of bone in particular, as well as to take off fat that has been handled and is far from immaculate.

A little of this fat, tried out, is best to have in the pan when frying the chops, but butter can be used. One tablespoon of fat is enough for six chops. Have it genuinely hot in the pan when the meat is put in, after which immediately lower the fire so that they may cook eight or ten minutes to a side, according to their thickness, without a sign of burning.

If they are in a shape to flatten they may be cooked in a shorter time. In addition to the fats there should be some seasonings like salt and pepper, and some people like to add a teaspoon of vinegar. When ready to turn the chops, turn up the fire for half a minute and then quickly down again. The fat will have been increased by what was cooked out from the chop and with seasoning is excellent with boiled potatoes or with greens, or it may be left in the pan and potatoes may be cooked in it. Pan fried potatoes in this fat are extra crisp and palatable.

Too much explaining can hardly be given in reference to the correct cooking of a pork chop. It is necessary to remember that the water in the lean part of the pork is not as well protected as in beef streaked with fat, so it can be easily dried out from a pork chop in about two minutes, in which case the chop necessarily shrinks, and after that, although more cooking is required, it cannot be well done. The juices must be kept in the meat and when you see them come out in the pan and harden to look almost like the white of egg, the chop is being cooked in the wrong fashion.

The Ruined Church.

Do dreams come true? Yes, I know they do, for several of mine have. One peculiar one occurred years ago. I was devoted to my church and wanted to go to the evening service, but did not.

The next morning my young nephew said to me, "Aunt Marion, your church burned last night."

I replied at once, "O, no, it was only damaged." I had dreamed that I went to the church, and as I was to enter the body of a tonsured priest was borne out of the door in an open casket, and it was turned on the side. Low, sad music was heard.

As soon as possible I went to the church and found its walls standing. The door was broken, but closed, and an officer was guarding it to keep out the curiosity seekers who wanted to get inside. I turned away and went into an alley to look in a window, climbing up on a pile of ashes to get there. As I did so I saw an envelope box, with a cover, on the dump, and, glancing into it, saw a Japanese doll, with tonsured head, lying on its side.

Here was my tonsured priest, of whom I had dreamed. Strange to say, the organ, an unusually fine one, had been battered to pieces, the fire having started in it. Here was the sad music of my dream. M. A.

A Strange Visitor.

In my dream I distinctly saw a man. Every detail of his face made an impression on my mind, and in the morning when I awoke, a sense of fear possessed me. I knew positively I was to see this man.

Two days later someone rapped at my back door. I started toward the door, but before I could reach it, it opened and, horrors! it was the man of my dream.

I was paralyzed with fear. When he walked past me and sat down at my kitchen table and said, "Lady, some food."

Needless to say, I hurried to do his bidding, as I was all alone in the house with my small boy. I put everything on the table that I could find in the pantry and made him a cup of hot tea, as it was a bitter cold day.

After eating, he moved back his chair, commenced to rise, while I felt as if my last hour had come.

When he got to his feet he made me a curtly bow and said, "Lady, thank ye from the bottom of heart," and quickly turned and out, closing the door behind him.

Needless to say, after that my doors were always kept locked.

GOODBY TO EXTRA POUNDS

by Antoinette Donnelly

This Is the Third Week in the Reducing Program. Are You Growing Slimmer?

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—At dinner the other night the conversation turned on reducing, as it undoubtedly did where you dined the other night. Dinners sure do inspire that topic, don't they? I suppose because a woman can't escape her conscience for one single dinner hour any more. The cream soup gives it a jab [the conscience, I mean]. The scrumptious looking meat course with the creamed 'taters, creamed cauliflower gives it a few more jabs. The salad with the tasty mayonnaise dressing stabs it outright, so that when the baked Alaskan dessert comes in it's for crying out loud about how you can keep a figger respectable with meals like that!

At this dinner was a young woman worried, as a goodly number of us are, about a fat rash breaking out somewhere on her person. A bright young person, she, under ordinary circumstances. But there's something extraordinary about the gullibility of the most intelligent people on reducing cures. She backed me off in a corner after the meal to whisper the good news. It seems her sister-in-law's aunt's daughter had just heard about it. You mix castile soap and epsom salts and rub it on your stomach and lo! before the new moon is out you haven't got anything so vulgar as a stomach.

You might just as well rub the mixture of soap and epsom salts on the back porch for all the good it's going to do your figure. So I told the bright young woman, but her defiant glance convinced me she'd go home and try it once, anyway. It won't do her any harm. Soap never did anybody harm so far as I've been able to make out. But it certainly won't help her by half a pound to get into her last year's wedding dress.

And so it goes with all these magic potions for going to bed fat and waking up thin. I never mind people talking them. I just sit back and bide my time. I don't even say "I told you so." And I've seen and heard a lot of crazy suggestions tried and found wanting. Some of them are harmless, some of them not. Diets, like the tomato and egg diet, the lamb chop and pineapple, the skimmed milk and baked potato, and so on, continued over a long period, have undermined many a good constitution. Some of these freak menus, I will admit, reduce, and quickly, but there is not a sufficient number of calories, nor do they contain the mineral elements, vitamins, proteins and carbohydrates necessary for a healthy reducing program. They average about 600 calories, which is not sufficient for the day.

The Third Week.

This is the third week of our safe and sane reducing course.

Tell me, how are you getting along? Has anybody been telling you lately that you're looking better? Wait till you hear what they'll say when you get through with this course. That is, if you're playing it on the level. No cheating between meals, or at them! You're on your honor, as I told you!

Did you walk that hour, daily, every day last week? Did you follow the diet I carefully worked out for you? I did that to save you the trouble of counting up your calories, believing you would show your appreciation by sticking closely to the menus prescribed. Good things to eat they were, too, weren't they?

This week I'll work out another food program for you. And if there are any last minute applicants who want to get in on the class work, they can start right in. If they want to catch up, they can put themselves on a liquid diet for three days. Three days on liquid [nonalcoholic] is a good thing for the stomach. One day, in fact, of liquid and no food is recommended by physicians as a rest system for this vastly overworked organ. Some authorities think the three day liquid diet an excellent method of controlling the appetite for the regular reducing diet to follow.

It is also advised for its beneficial effect of ridding the system of poisons that have accumulated from excess food intake. A business woman I know puts herself on one of these three day liquid diets every time she feels she is putting weight on again. From Friday to Monday is the time she chooses, and she loses five pounds each time. Also, she reports a grand sense of general well being.

We wouldn't recommend it for a longer period because the weight loss would be too quick, and there aren't enough of the food elements needed to maintain health. It would be classified as one of the freak diets if continued indefinitely. But as a prelude to a reducing régime it is all right, or as a weight regulator, as with my business friend, orange juice is the preferred liquid.

More Exercise.

About exercise. The first week I let you off without any; the second with an hour's brisk walk daily. Now with this, the third week, I want you to do some trunk exercises and keep up the daily walks. Any games, outdoor or indoor, skating, swimming, basketball, and so on, that you can take advantage of—so much the better. Now that your reduced diet is shaking the fat loose, you need exercise to strengthen the flabby muscles, and to stimulate the blood so that it can wash out the tissues. Exercise helps break down the fat. So that you really need now, at the very least, ten minutes workout morning and night. It is better to take it in two ten minute sessions than one twenty. If there is great overweight, your doctor should be consulted. He may advise against exercise until the heart has been relieved of its fat burden.

1. Here is that good old timer—keeping the knees straight and touching the toes with the finger tips. Begin with the hands raised over the head.

2. Same exercise, practically. But touch the left toes with the right hand and the right toes with the left hand. Feet wide apart. Begin movement with the arms spread full length from the shoulders; not overhead.

3. Spread the feet wide. Hands clasped overhead, swing like a woodchopper down between the legs and bring the clasped hands back over the head, going back as far as you can comfortably. Do this same woodchopping movement with the hands clasped together over the right shoulder and swing down outside the left hip. Reverse and swing down over the right hip.

4. Lie on your back on the floor, hands at sides, feet together. Try to bring the feet up over your head. This you may practice in bed and bring the feet up to touch the head board. Don't strain on this exercise. Just come up as far as you can comfortably and let it go until another day. Tomorrow you'll do it a little better and easier.

5. Still in a prone position, keep the heels tight to the floor with the hands extended overhead. Pull yourself up at the waist and carry the upper body forward trying to touch the toes with your hands. Don't strain. Take it easy at first.

6. Now sit up on the floor. Cross your legs and draw them up fairly close to the body, but not too close. Grasp the ankles with the hands and rock the body forward and back.

There are six exercises for you, morning and night. Go through them with each movement repeated ten times. If you find at first exercises 4 and 5 strain, do them no more than five times. Gradually increase.

Menus for the Week.

Now for this week's menus:

Monday — Breakfast: Grapefruit, poached egg on thin toast, coffee with half cup hot milk.

Luncheon: Celery and apple salad, bran muffin, a gelatin dessert, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Clear beef broth, roast lamb, stewed tomatoes or brussels sprouts, romaine salad with vinegar dressing, prune whip [no cream].

Tuesday—Breakfast: Stewed prunes, two strips broiled bacon, whole wheat bread [thin slice toasted], coffee with hot milk.

Luncheon: Small serving minced meat on slice unbuttered toast, vegetable salad, three crackers, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Vegetable soup, 1 serving lean meat, medium serving mashed potatoes with little milk but no butter, large helping carrots, raw fruit.

Wednesday — Breakfast: Orange juice, small serving oatmeal with a little milk, a hard roll thinly spread with butter, coffee.

Luncheon: Clam broth, asparagus on toast [unbuttered], baked apple, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Broiled lamb chop, spinach, large serving; medium baked potato with dash of butter, half grapefruit.

Thursday—Breakfast: Apple sauce, 1 piece toast lightly buttered, 1 slice crisp bacon, coffee with hot milk.

Luncheon: Scrambled egg on toast, whole wheat muffin, lettuce and tomato salad with salt and vinegar dressing, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Fruit cocktail, slice of liver and bacon, well done; boiled potato with salt only, turnips, small serving custard.

Friday—Breakfast: Orange juice, cereal with ¼ cup milk, toast and coffee with hot milk.

Luncheon: Cup of cream soup, large bowl lettuce salad, 1 slice bread, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Halibut, trout, or cod; baked potato, string beans, endive and watercress salad, tea.

Saturday—Breakfast: Grapefruit, 1 strip bacon, bran muffin, coffee.

Luncheon: Omelet [1 egg], slice toast, fruit cup.

Dinner: Vegetable soup, lean meat, cabbage, sliced tomatoes, canned peach or pineapple.

Sunday—Breakfast: Orange or other fruit, small serving cereal with ¼ cup milk, egg, slice toast, coffee.

Dinner: Medium serving roast beef, small browned potato, string beans, vegetable salad with vinegar dressing, fruit dessert.

Supper: Slice lean meat, sliced tomatoes with salt dressing, three graham wafers, and glass of milk.

Keep the menus, please, to guide you. Next week I shall tell you more about foods and let you try and work out your own menus afterward, as you must get familiar with their values.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

V. McG.: THE FINE LINES UNDER and around the eyes are due to the tissues being very soft. Discontinue massaging them with creams and apply compresses of cotton saturated in cold salt water. Do this morning and night, and, if possible, during the day.

D. F.: HERPES IS COMMONLY known as cold sore. Where cold sores appear frequently there may be digestive disturbance which should be corrected. Camphor ice may be applied. It is well to soften the lips with cold cream several times during the day.

J. S.: IF THE BIRTHMARK IS indistinct it may be disguised by the use of stage paint, getting the shade which blends with your skin. Birthmarks are treated by skin specialists.

E. H.: THE WAY TO TREAT whiteheads is to soften the skin with hot towels, then open each blemish with a sterilized needle and press out the contents. Daub on a little peroxide of hydrogen and gently massage with cold cream. Send a stamped addressed envelope for my booklet on the skin.

C. D.: YOU WISH EXERCISES for constipation? Try these: Jump rope, just as the children do, for five or ten minutes, morning and night. Stand with the feet together, hands on hips, bend forward as far as possible. Keep the knees straight. Return to erect position. For other exercises send a stamped addressed envelope.

CHERIE: IF YOUR HAIR IS TOO thick you may have it thinned out by a hairdresser, and brushing it every day for five minutes will make it glossy. When the hair is dry it is lusterless, but by brushing it the fat of the sebaceous glands is distributed, giving it a silky appearance.

I. B.: YOU MAY BLEACH THE under arms with a teaspoonfull of peroxide to which a drop of ammonia has been added.

LEAP YEAR PROPOSALS

The year 1928 spells hope for the aggressive maiden who wants to change her name. Given the time, the place, and the man, all she needs is the courage to pop the question. Do you know of any girl who invited a man to leap into matrimony with her? Was her proposal met with eager acceptance or graceful refusal? What was the aftermath? If you'll send us a brief account of the affair we'll be glad to pay $1 if we print it. Address Leap Year Proposals, Chicago Tribune.

Blonde and Brunette.

It was in leap year when little colored ribbons accompanied by poetry was sent to a man by the girl who wished to propose to him that this proposal took place.

In our office there were two girls, a blonde and a brunette, who adored the same man, secretly.

One day the blonde said to me, "I believe I'll send Mr. Smith a leap year letter, signed 'Blonde,' and perhaps he'll find out who sent it."

A few days later Mr. Smith walked into our office and said, "You know, girls, I received a leap year letter and I don't know who is proposing to me."

Before one could say "Jack Robin" out walked the brunette from her files and said, "I sent the letter to you, Mr. Smith," just as though she were handing him a letter from her files.

He was stunned for a moment, but finding himself, quickly said, "Well, what ribbon would you prefer?"

Brazenly, "The white, of course," ["if you want me for your wife, send me back my bow of white"].

From that day friendship sprang up and within six months they were married. Mr. Smith seemed very happy and told the girls how his wife proposed and how glad he was she did it. M. C.

Accepted the Hint.

She was a pretty little first grade teacher and he, the father of one of her pupils, was a young and attractive widower. For some reason he had formed the habit of dropping in at the school to inquire about his daughter's progress.

One afternoon he remarked to the little teacher: "You have been very good to Helen Ann. I appreciate your interest in her."

The little teacher was fussed: "I think a great deal of Helen Ann," she said. "I wouldn't mind taking care of her always."

Then, realizing what a shocking admission she had made, she was overcome with confusion.

"We'll discuss that more some later time," he answered briefly. From his attitude she could not tell what he really was thinking. And, O, how much she wanted to know! A few weeks later she found out.

And we've lived happily ever since. C. S. A.

Surprise for Mother.

It was back in the good old days when a fraternity pin on a shirtwaist meant something.

He never knew how much guile there was in the loss of her collar pin. Quite innocently he suggested his fraternity pin as the only fastener in the emergency.

Imagine his consternation at her gleeful chuckle, "O won't mother be surprised," as she transferred the pin from his vest to her shirtwaist. C. B. T.

In Need of Help.

Four years ago my girl chum and I had a girl's bachelor apartment in Chicago. We always had our boy friends in for Sunday dinner.

My beau had always had his mother to look after his clothes until he came to Chicago, so naturally he wasn't very prompt in sewing buttons back on.

Every Sunday when he came I would sew on a button or maybe mend a pocket.

One day I was standing in front of him sewing buttons on his vest, when I said to him, "I think I will have to marry you and see that you are taken care of."

"Gee! will you?" was his surprised answer.

I did, and the outcome? It is too early to tell. We have only been married four years. F. A.

Preparedness.

I had been attentive to a young woman for several months and we were invited to a turkey dinner on New Year's day at her uncle's home. Her uncle was a preacher.

During the meal my sweetheart came upon the wishbone, so we each made a wish, and, in "turkey wishbone parlance," I got the major part of the bone and therefore I was to get my wish. I told her my wish was that she would marry me. To my utter astonishment she produced a marriage license and two wedding rings and our marriage immediately followed the dinner with the double ring service, her uncle performing the ceremony.

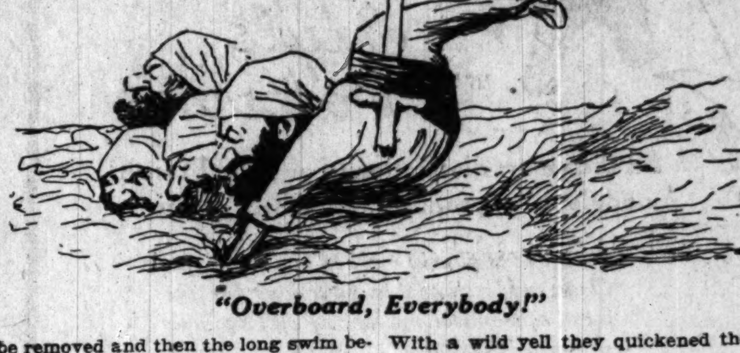
Our honeymoon was a five mile ride in a cutter. A. M. M.

The Strange Adventures of Young Robinson Grewso

By KEMBLE

His ma called him Robin; his dad called him son.
He grew like a weed and thought it great fun,
So—he called himself Robinson Grewso.

ONE sunny morning after the pirates had gone into the woods, Sweet Marie and Roy prepared for their escape. The bands around Roy's legs were soaked in water until they were loose enough to be removed and then the long swim began. The little mermaid led the way and continually warned Roy not to swim too fast or he would soon tire and that would be fatal.



"Overboard, Everybody!"

"Take it easy, Roy," she urged, "and float every once in a while to rest yourself."

At Robin's camp the boys were getting the boat ready to go and rescue their pals.

"I'll not wait a day longer," sputtered Robin. "We are nothing but a set of cowards to stick around here, waiting, just waiting for them to come back. I don't care what Sweet Marie's orders were, She would have been back long ago if Roy had been able to get away from those fat rascals. Come on, get your jab poles, pile in and let's get going!"

Away they sailed, a slight breeze helping them along, Chin Chin at the mast head shading his pop eyes with his stubby wing. Little did they know that Sweet Marie and Roy were swimming steadily toward them.

The pirates came marching through the woods at noontime shouting their song—

Hail, hail the gang's all here,
A bunch of little sinners,
We want our dinners, yes, we want
our dinners.

They stopped short when they reached the beach and found it deserted.

"Where are they?" screamed the pirate chief, and picking up Roy's leg bands, he fairly foamed at the mouth.

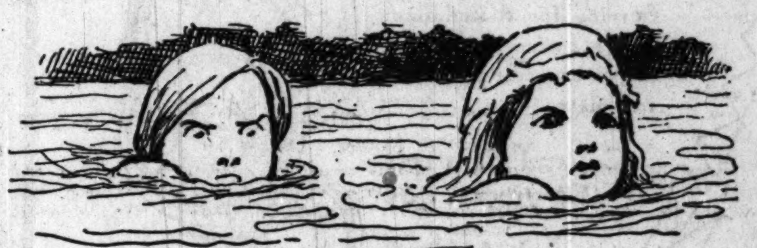
"Gone! Gone!" he howled. "Not a moment to lose. Overboard everybody!" Grabbing their swords they stuck them in their belts and plunged into the lake. They were fast swimmers, all of them, and clipping through the water at a great rate, they gained rapidly on Roy and Sweet Marie. Soon they saw the heads of the escaped prisoners but a short distance ahead. With a wild yell they quickened their stroke.

Sweet Marie and Roy spied them almost at the same moment.

"Save yourself, Marie," cried Roy. "Never mind me." But the little mermaid refused to leave the tiring swimmer. Roy gathered himself for a final dash. He would not give up, no matter how tired he was. Closer and closer came the pirates, their fat little bodies riding the waves with ease as their frog-like legs worked like machinery.

Just as Roy called to Marie that he could not hold out any longer, Robin and his pals hove into sight, Chin Chin screaming, "I see them, I see them!"

The pirates heard the bird's voice and, turning, they beat it for home. Soon Roy and Sweet Marie were helped into the boat and the chase after the bandit crew commenced. Jab poles were made ready and just then a stiff breeze bulged the sail and with a triumphant cheer Robin and his pals bore down on the panic stricken outlaws.



Roy and Marie Escape

"Poke them! Sink them! Shove them under," screamed Chin Chin.

The pirates slashed with their swords only to get jabbed as they kicked and plunged. Sputtering and howling, they begged for mercy.

"Not a bit of it," called out Roy. "We are going to drive you to our camp and put leg bands on you. We need a gang to do some work for us and you are just the ones to do it."

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the humble dandelion, hugging the earth, should turn out, upon examination, to be one of the most efficient of all living creatures and one that is constantly extending its domain while holding its own in old time haunts!

Whoever has a lawn is likely to know the dandelion. It has traveled around the world and established itself in every nook and cranny. Examining the plant on the lawn, one would find a rosette of sturdy leaves flat on the ground. The lawn mower runs over it and does no harm. Man or beast may trample it to no avail. Cut it off and it grows again. Come rain, come drought, it survives. Examine its roots and they are found to be big, strong, and deep. They are able to dispute possession of the soil with all comers.

The dandelion makes itself obnoxious to grazing animals, and so they do not eat it. Chop it off every month of the spring and summer and it grows again. Some time before frost it is likely to find a chance to burst into its yellow bloom and ripen seed.

And when its seeds appear it does not have to depend for planting as does the apple upon the fancy of the boy who throws away the core. It does not need to coax the squirrel to bury it, as does the acorn. The dandelion puts wings on its seeds and they ride away on the winds to new homes.

The white globe of dandelion seeds is little less beautiful against its background of green than the yellow flower itself. Many a child has plucked a stem bearing one of these globes, held it high, and exploded it with a puff of his breath. When he does so a hundred seeds have been released that will scatter far and each bear the chance of starting a new plant. The foot of a cow, hitting this globe, may start these seeds traveling. A mere puff of wind may do it. One way or another, the chance of their being planted is most excellent.

There is efficiency from cradle to the grave for the dandelion. "Dent de lion" was its name in the beginning, which means "tooth of the lion," a stern name but not a misfit when the real character of this plant is known.

Mother!

Look at Child's Tongue if Sick, Cross, Feverish

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! See if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhœa, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easily after giving this harmless, "fruity laxative" because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup"; then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

Recently I received a letter from an old school friend, telling me she would be in the city on a certain date and would like to spend the evening at my home. I answered her letter immediately and urged her to to call, then I remembered that I had already set that evening aside for my son's scout club to have a party at our home.

I said to my son, "I think I will change my mind about your party and put it off for a week."

"You can't do that, mother, you can't do that," he cried in a panic. "You can't help changing your mind, but you musn't change your promise." M. T.

The children of a family brought a stray dog home with them and earnestly hoped for his adoption into the fold.

Discussions were usually held at the dinner table, and at this hour the poor creature stood forlornly on the porch just outside the dining room window. The older children of the family had presented their arguments in the dog's behalf, while Jamie, aged 4, silent thus far, very concernedly said: "You're talking louder and louder and pretty soon the doggie will hear everything you're saying about him." DRINK WATER IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

To help neutralize these irritating acids; to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

For the woman who desires something different and smart, pattern No. 3136 will be just the thing. It is an excellent design for travel, business or general daytime wear and can be made of one of the novelty silk crêpes, silk twill, crêpe satin, flat silk crêpe, printed sheer velvet, angora jersey or kasha.

The dress buttons the entire length of the front and opens at the top over a vest of a contrasting color and fabric. The full length sleeves are gathered into fitted bands at the wrists, made of the same material as the vest, and if you like, the collar across the back may be made of this same material. Two inserted pockets at the left side of the skirt with welts made of the vest material complete this good looking dress.

A good many buttons are finished with shanks, and if you use this kind on this dress punch the eyelets exactly opposite each button hole. After the hole is punched, take a very shallow over and over stitch having the stitches as close together as possible, all around the punched hole. Use a stiletto to keep the eyelet in shape.

Button holes in a dress of this kind should always be overcasted from the wrong side. Use button hole scissors, and try first on a piece of paper to see that the size is correct.

Pattern No. 3176 is a design any young girl will delight to have used for herself. It is suitable for the classroom, or for afternoon wear, depending largely on the materials used. The long waisted bodice is cut in two pieces and has set-in sleeves. The sleeve pattern is perforated for short ones and the full length sleeve is gathered at the wrist into fitted bands. A straight, two piece skirt is gathered at the top and set on to the bodice.

A dress of this kind is very easy to cut and make, and no trimming is needed other than the bows shown in the sketch. Be sure to allow a sufficient hem at the bottom of the skirt and then divide the upper edge into quarters before gathering. Put pins in the middle back and front of the bodice edge and pin the skirt at each of these places and at the side seams. Of course, you will have the skirt seams come at the side seams of the bodice, and the center of each piece will be pinned to the center front and back of the bodice.

Baste and stitch in a wrong side seam; or, if you choose, you may take a right side seam and cover this with a narrow bias strip, stitched close to each edge. If you prefer, the bottom of the skirt may be finished with a binding, and the neck should have the same finish.

For class room wear a tan wool jersey with brown velvet ribbon, navy blue wool crêpe with bright red velvet ribbon, or a novelty plaid cashmere will be serviceable and inexpensive. And if you wish something a little dressier, choose a printed velveteen, and make the shoulder and waistline bows of faille silk crêpe.

The diagonal treatment of the neck and waistline, with the circular skirt fullness in the front, is the latest and most important movement of fashion. You will enjoy making a dress by pattern No. 3134, and won't find it difficult. The back is cut in one piece and is plain and straight. It will be pretty to join the circular part to the bodice with a piping of a contrasting color and this same material should be used to bind the bottom of the skirt and the neck.

The attractively shaped cascading jabot at the left side of the bodice is another smart feature of this dress and may be made of the dress material. Printed silk crêpe, crêpe Roma, crêpe de chine, chiffon, georgette crêpe, and crêpe satin or crepella are all effective materials for this design.

The full length sleeve is gathered into a narrow band at the wrist. Always transfer all notches, perforations and all other marks to your material when cutting out, and in setting the sleeves into the dress be sure that the notches front and back, as well as the perforations for the shoulder, come where they should. All the seams of any of the crêpes can be made French seams, even setting the sleeves in; but if kasha or other wool fabrics are used, press the seams open and finish with binding ribbon.

Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives

Station Signed Off.

John: This is funny tasting cake, Mary.

Mary: Well, that's as far as I got with the recipe when the station quit broadcasting. F. M. L.

An Awful Shock.

Slowly he opened the letter. As he read on, his face turned pale. His wife was looking at him with suspicious eyes. Then she burst out:

"I want to see that letter."

"What letter?" he asked innocently.

"The one you just opened. I can see the handwriting and I know it's from a woman. You also turned pale just now when you read it. Hand it here, sir."

"Here it is, dear," he answered meekly, "it's from your dressmaker." M. D.

Need for Expurgation.

Wifie—"I took the recipe for this cake out of the book."

Hubby—"You did right. It should never have been put in." M. R.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

YOU CAN MAKE WINTER FUN FOR YOUNGSTERS

The joy of winter is in winter sports. When we can skate and go coasting January and February change from months of cold and hardship into months of robust outdoor exercise, that gives red cheeks, glowing health, and new vigor for everything.

This gives us our chance to do a world of good without trouble or expense. We know, of course, that poor children face winter without the means for enjoying it. To them it is often a season of hardship and sickness to be lived through as best they can—unless we give them the means to take advantage of all its health giving sports. And we can do it so easily!

Christmas has come and brought its harvest of new skates, new sleds, new clothing for the children, and meantime the old articles are lying around—outgrown, discarded by our own little ones, but still able to provide a world of fun for poor children who need all the outdoor exercise they can get. Why not get these articles together, and give them an entire new life of usefulness, serving children who will have nothing except as we think of them?

Warm clothing in particular is needed—suits, caps, dresses, mittens, mufflers, caps, and sound shoes. These are discarded by growing children while there's still lots of wear left in them. Almost every one of us can help. And we will, I know, when we realize how much good we can do!

Offers Morris Chair.

"I have a morris chair we are no longer using. I shall be glad to give it to any of your readers who would care to have it. Mrs. M. P."

Here's a comfortable place to rest your weary bones at the end of a hard day. Write me if you'd like to have the chair.

Bathrobe Will Bring Comfort.

"I have a woman's bathrobe, size 36, which I no longer need. It is in good condition and any one who can use it may have it. Mrs. L. F."

Cold, wintry mornings you'll find this wooly robe a great comfort. If this will fit you and you'd like to have it, let me know.

An Old Recipe to Darken Hair

By JANICE RANDALL

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

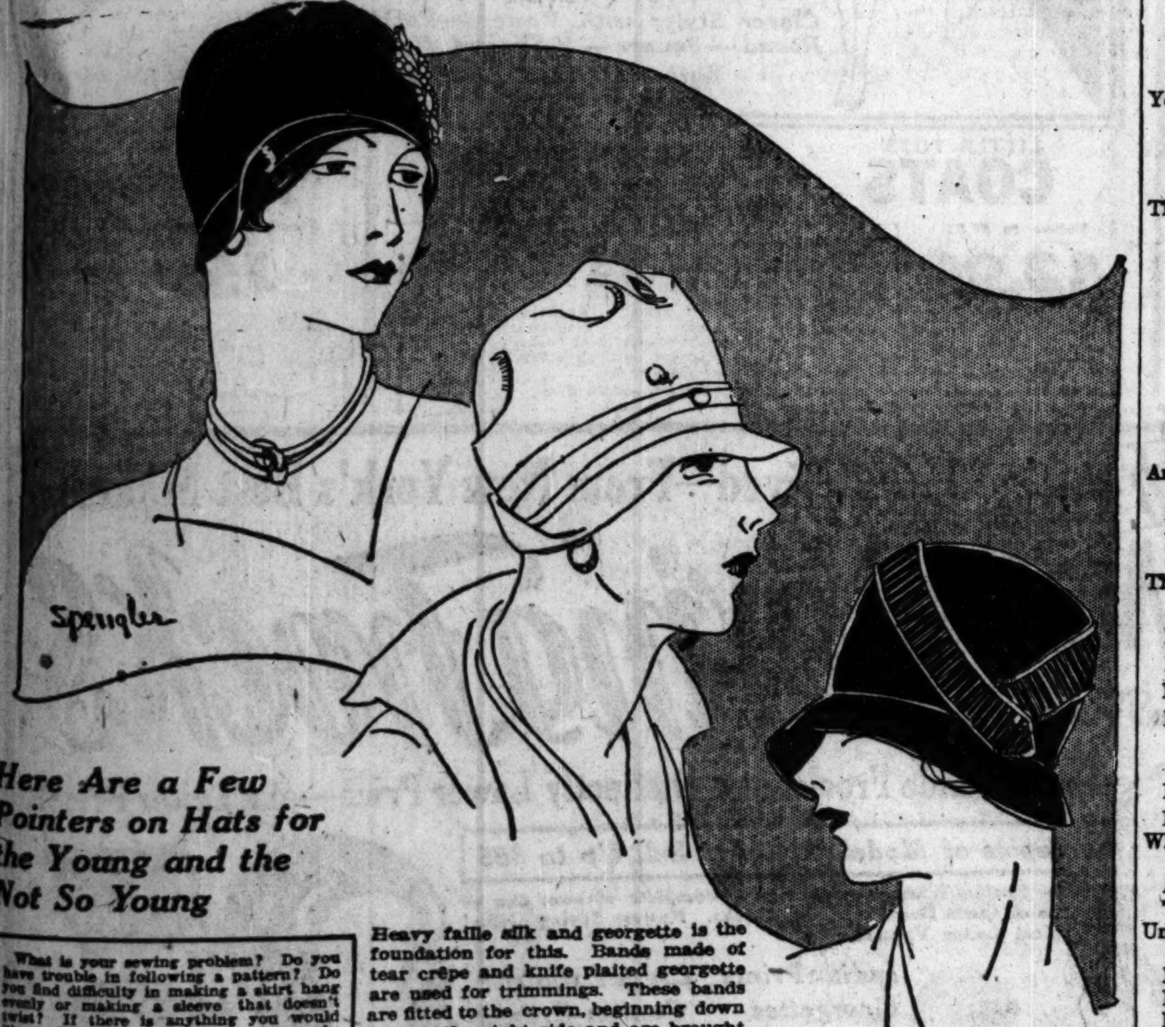
Practical and Fancy Needlework . . . By Clotilde



Here Are a Few Pointers on Hats for the Young and the Not So Young

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

The hats that are being worn at this time of the season are either all satin or satin and bengaline combined. Heavy faille silk is also in great favor, in black and all the brilliant colors.

The debutante is wearing small, close fitting hats and the trimmings of those hats are the least of the designer's worry. Small flowers or a strap of the felt, just to give it a finish, are used, as it is quite the smart thing after purchasing the hat to remove the trimmings and substitute a diamond pin or pendant.

Matrons' hats have decidedly more brim these days. The crowns are higher, but draped into soft puffings and folds to give a soft line to the face. Pearls and brilliants in dart shapes, or bands of sequins or metallic cloth are used for trimming. A word about brims: a two inch brim with a slight mushroom across the face rolling to the back of the brim which is turned up so that it fits snugly to the back of the crown is typical of the form that goes with these soft crowns.

Mourning is standing in high favor for the first time in several years. It is worn by both young and old women.

Heavy faille silk and georgette is the foundation for this. Bands made of tear crêpe and knife plaited georgette are used for trimmings. These bands are fitted to the crown, beginning down low on the right side and are brought up high across the crown in front and down again on the left side, and to the bottom of the crown in the back, finished off on the right side. They are two and one-half inches deep and are completed with a small cording of the same material all the way around the band.

Other attractive trimmings on mourning hats are ornaments made of all widths of black grosgrain or bengaline ribbon. No. 9 ribbon is the most popular width to use in making these.

WHAT'S NEW?

By Walter M. Schwimmer.

I've roamed about this hemisphere
And met some bimbos who are queer,
Yes, I've abhorred and oft been bored
by irritating pests;
But there's a mortifying gink
Who is so asinine I think
That he's a sap whom ev'ry chap quite
heartily detests.
For when by accident you meet
This nincompoop upon the street
He strains his vocal cords to bark
This masterful, inspired remark—
"What's new?"

Now, ev'ry time I see this chump
He gives my tender back a thump
And soon he'll slip a crushing grip that
dislocates my hand;
He wears a vapid grin on his
Insipid, idiotic phiz,
Then starts to whine the hackneyed line
he has at his command.
No erudite, sagacious speech
Does this dull ignoramus preach,
For when I greet this gawky guy
He makes this scatterbrained reply—
"What's new?"

I'd like to write the epitaphs
For all the human phonographs
Who still maintain this trite refrain and
ever ask, "What's new?"
And here's a frank and fearful fact,
These imbeciles will make me cracked
Unless we balk this inane talk and have
it judged taboo.
Now, I am just a mild gazook,
I rarely censure or rebuke,
But, folks, some day I will conspire
To kill the ninnies who inquire—
"What's new?"

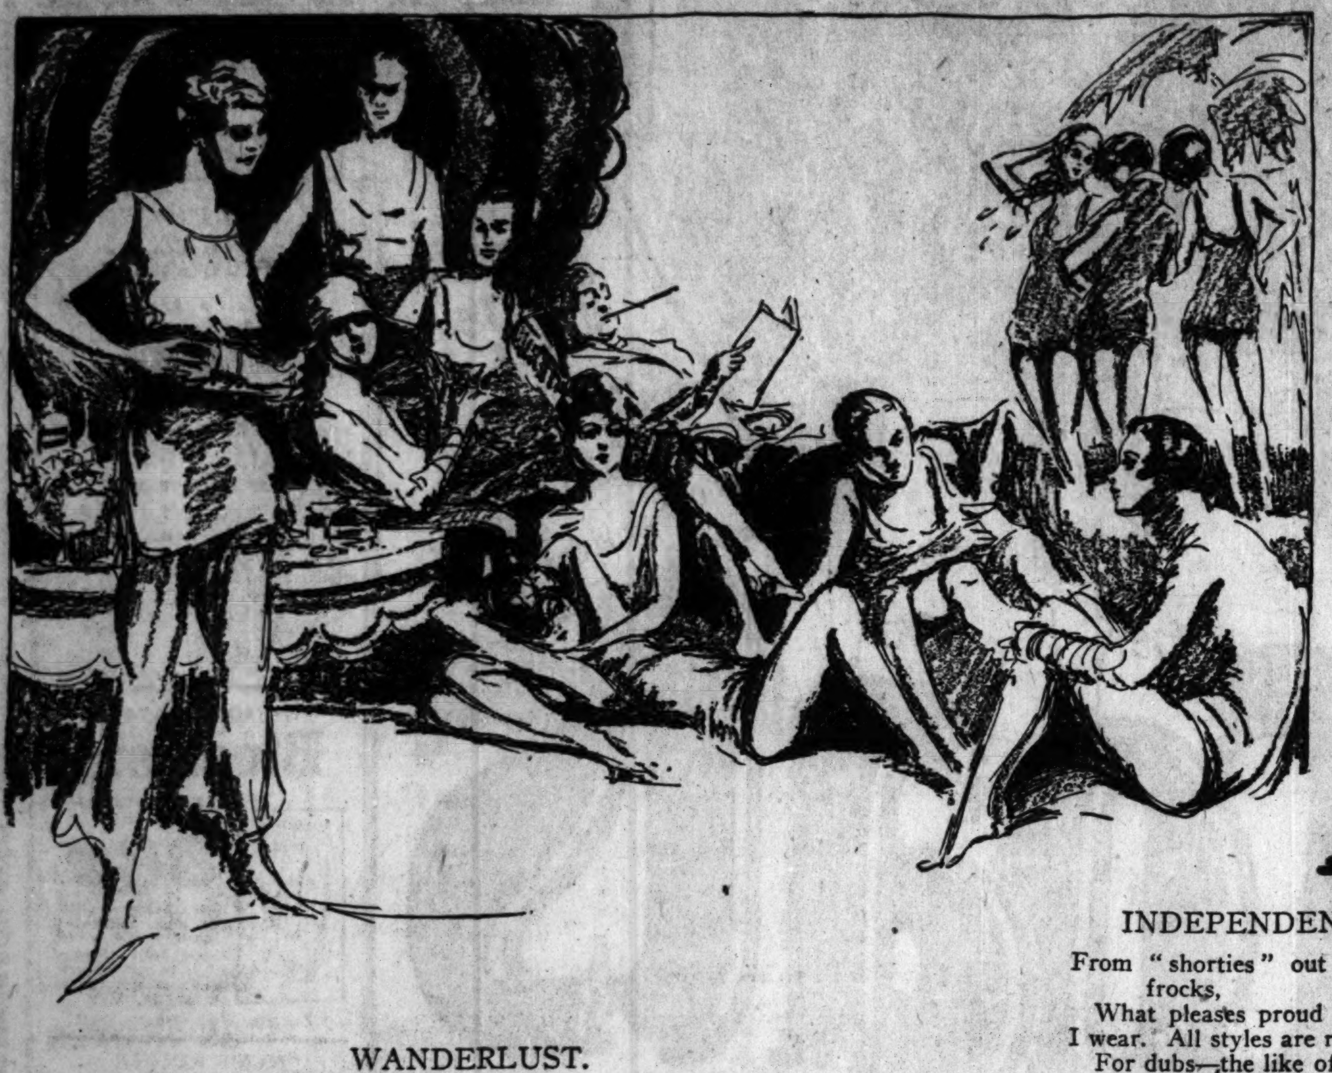
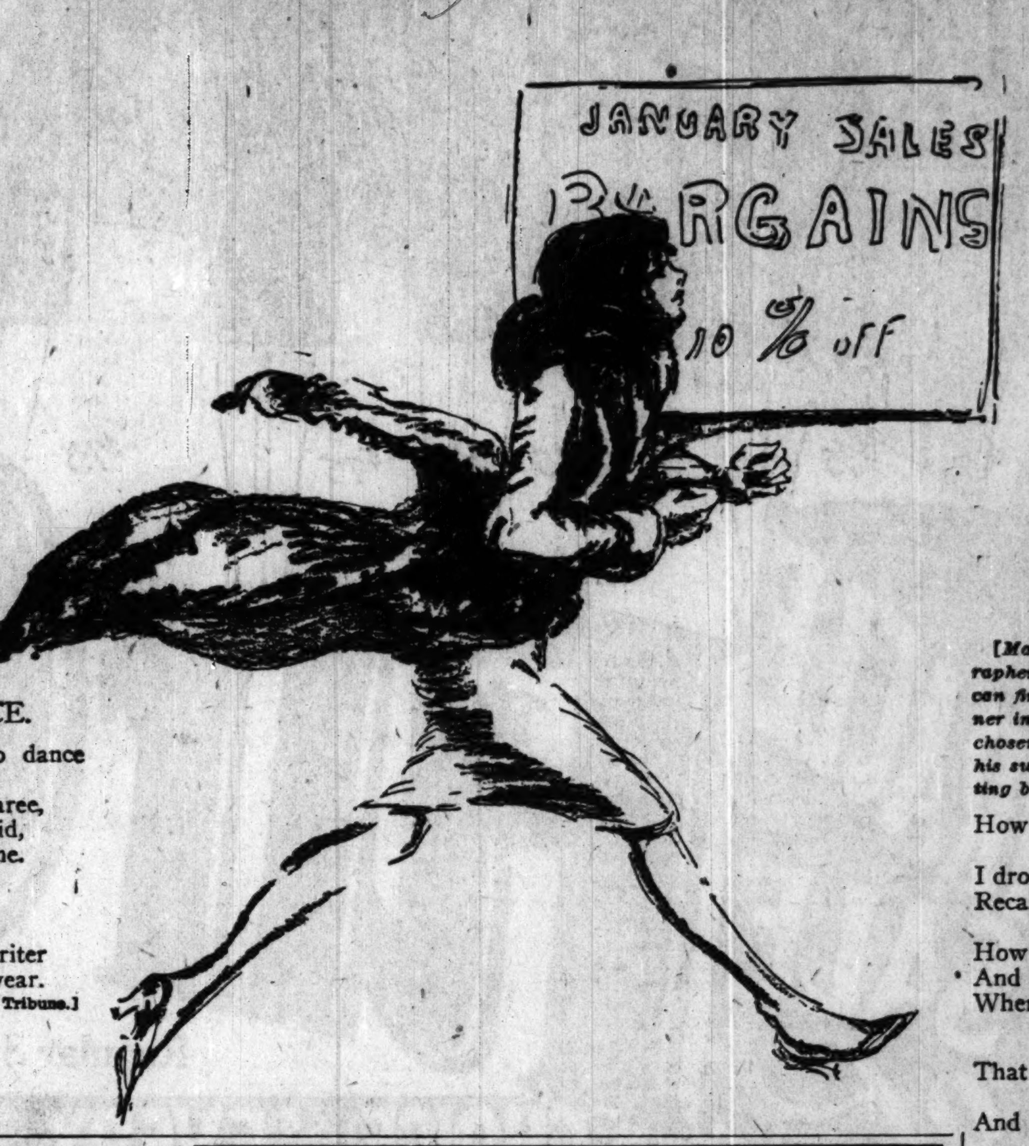
MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

by Sara Moore





WANDERLUST.

Ship me somewhere east of Tampa
Where they barbecue the wurst,
Where the maximum temptation,
Opportunely, meets your thirst;
Where quick cameras click coyly
At the orange laden trees,
And the naughty gulf winds
tamper
With some most exclusive knees.

On the sands of any bay
In expensive F L A
Lies a rotogravure heaven
Where plump golf bugs swarm to —pay.
On the coast of F L A
You can see if feet are clay.
And while gossips buzz like thunder
There the tan goes all the way.

INDEPENDENCE.

From "shorties" out to dance frocks,
What pleases proud Paree,
I wear. All styles are rigid,
For dubs—the like of me.

But on the up an up, bo,
Atop the social stair,
No "ham and" fashion writer
Could tell me what to wear.

MAMIE HICKEY LOOKS BACK.

[Mamie knows she is an A1 stenographer and a B1 chorus lady, but she can find no glass partitioned cozy corner in an affluent corporation. Clothes chosen to knock a booking agent off his swivel chair prevent her from getting by an office manager's outposts.]

How memory makes the dead
days dear!
I drop a salt and homesick tear
Recalling our old firm's cashier.

How could I ever think him crude
And kid him for the office prude,
When he, on pay day, would
intrude?

That weekly check! I scorned it
then,
And snubbed that dub for lesser
men.
Ah, could I meet him once again!
My clothes, designed to smite the eyes
Of hard boiled Broadway booking guys,
Aren't what a secretary buys.

No office manager who's sane
Would credit me with half a brain.
Each man believes his eyes, 'tis plain.

But if in tasteful office guise
I sought a job with those called
"wise,"
I'd meet as sceptical surprise.

THE YOUNGEST BOOK SHELF

by Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevans

In offering suggestions for the selecting of children's books, as I have been asked to do, it is necessary to make some sort of general grouping according to age. Of course, these lines drawn between ages can never be hard and fast ones, because some children develop more rapidly than others in their love and interest in books. Some times this is due to an innate love for them, some times to the influence of their parents.

However, there are certain underlying principles that can govern us in our choice of reading matter for the children, and there are certain facts that we have learned about the tastes of children at different ages.

Since, on the whole, books for the very little children are apt to be less thought about in the buying than those for any other age, we might begin by considering how we shall choose books for the littlest bookshelf.

From the time a baby is a toddler until he is, say, 5 years old, all his books must be chosen with two things in view—that he will look at the pictures, but the text will be read to him. So we must judge a book's suitability by its illustrations and its subject matter for reading aloud.

Forming His Taste.

In some ways, for the very young child's book the illustrations might be considered the more important, because the child sees the pictures but you can doctor up the text a little as you read. So what we want to look for in the way of pictures is not only something that will appeal to the child, but also something that will help to form his taste.

First, the pictures should be clear and full of action. They should be simple in technique and without too much detail. A mass of detail is very confusing to a child. Simplicity is a desirable thing. And it is a lack of this quality that we find in many illustrations that are so decorative that they overstep the mark as far as the children's interest is concerned.

In the second place, the pictures should measure up to some sort of artistic standard. By this I don't mean that they need be "arty" or of the over decorative type, but they should be well drawn or well painted. We don't want to place before our children's eyes the cheap and the garish, nor the frightening, nor the grotesque.

Reading Matter.

Now, as to the reading matter. In his very first books a child doesn't need much story—in fact, a long story or poem tires him. As he grows a little older he can stand more and more in quantity of text. Also, as a rule, he requires that a story be about pleasant things. Little children don't like ugly or unpleasant happenings, nor unhappy endings. My little boy couldn't stand Mr. McGregor in dear old "Peter Rabbitt," just because he put Peter's father into a meat pie! And I know of lots of other children who were made miserable by similar little things—and even asked their mothers to hide the books containing them.

Where all of the book is good except a page or a sentence it is better to skip the picture they don't like and delete parts of the story to suit their taste than to take the book away entirely. Because the time will come when they'll pass this tender hearted stage and not notice this part at all—when, in fact, they will enjoy all sorts of gory and melodramatic happenings. But not when they're at this youngest book age.

The subjects that the little children like their stories and poems to be about are pretty well defined. They adore animals, either as they naturally are or dressed up and doing half human things. They are interested in a story about all sorts of homey, familiar activities that come within their own experience, and they like to have read to them the adventures and doings of everyday children like themselves. Fairy tales really belong in a later period, being, after all, a more sophisticated type of story, though a few exceptions are to be found in some of the very simple folk tales that are being put out in charming book form today.

Two Periods.

It would be fascinating to have side by side, if it were possible, a collection of children's books of two periods—one representing those of today and the other the output of a time no longer ago than the childhood days of Kate Greenaway. Books for the children of even so recent a date were considered of such little importance that, illustrated, they were sold for a few pence a copy in England. What dreadful things they must have been! While today some of the finest artists of the world are lavishing their talent on the illustrating of books for children.

When it comes to buying books for the younger children, it is rather staggering to discover how much the fine ones cost. Many people feel it is a waste to spend money that way, thinking that little children are too destructive to own expensive books. They are really not so, if they have any sort of intelligent training. They can readily learn how to handle books, though their greatest difficulty when very tiny is in the turning of pages. Even a deft child has trouble with this at the beginning. So when he is learning, just don't give him books with brittle paper to practice on. But where it is feasible from the expense end, he should have some of the amusing and beautiful books of today given to him to use and to own.

But all the children's books need not be of this class. There are many inexpensive ones which are good and become dear to their hearts. These are books in which the illustrations may not measure up to the highest canons of art, but which are so quaint, so clear, so delightful that they deserve a place of their own in the littlest library.

List of Favorites.

A booklet is being prepared containing a selected list of the names and publishers of books for the littlest children, but a few are noted here for immediate use. This little list is made up of a few tried and true books—not books that look charming to the adult eye—but books little children really love to have read and re-read to them.

Best Way to Loosen Stubborn Cough

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, throat tickle, bronchial asthma, or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love it.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Can You Believe It?
CONSTIPATION
of 40 Years Gone!

HERE IS, probably, the most remarkable statement ever made by anyone who has suffered from constipation and stomach trouble. But read for yourself what Mr. Allen says:

"I was troubled with chronic constipation for more than 40 years. Gas on the stomach often made me dizzy and bothered my heart. Nothing I used gave me more than temporary relief. I was told that there was nothing that would help much. But I tried Adlerika and am happy to say that my bowels are now very regular, and a slight case of piles is gone, too. Thanks to Adlerika I feel younger and happy again."—Geo. A. Allen, Westboro, Mass.

Quick Action Surprises

AS GENTLY and naturally as taking a drink of water, Adlerika acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowels, bringing immediate relief from gas bloating, intestinal stasis and chronic constipation.

The very FIRST dose of Adlerika often brings out astonishing amounts of old waste matter from the intestinal canal. This poisonous matter may have been in the intestines a long time, causing gas, headache, sleeplessness and many other symptoms. A treatment of a few weeks with Adlerika often corrects chronic constipation and intestinal stasis, so that just a small dose, now and then, keeps the intestines and stomach in a most satisfactory condition.

What Doctors Say

DR. H. LOUIS SHOUB, B. Sc., well-known New York pathologist, after laboratory tests on living subjects, states: "Adlerika very markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli. This feature increases the therapeutic value of Adlerika, because, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action, it inhibits the growth of these intestinal bacteria."

Dr. A. J. Lancaster, a physician of over a quarter century's active experience, makes this statement: "In the treatment of gastro-intestinal disorders, (where thorough evacuation is indicated), Adlerika has no equal."

Dr. Carl Weschcke, a graduate of the world-famous medical University of Heidelberg, Germany, in his private practice, first perfected the intestinal cleanser and carminative now known as Adlerika. It is a compound of a specially processed saline intestinal evacuant with buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other ingredients which expel gas and have detergent action.

Adlerika, unlike most other medicines, acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowels. It is recognized by many physicians as the one dependable remedy for gas, intestinal stasis and chronic constipation, or whenever real intestinal cleansing is needed.

Even if your bowels move every day, Adlerika may surprise you by bringing out poisonous, gas-forming matter which you would never believe was in your system.

In just a single month, over one thousand men and women wrote that they obtained wonderful relief from even a short treatment with Adlerika. Many of them said that now, after all other treatments and medicines had failed, they are at last rid of gas, indigestion, sour stomach, sleeplessness, nervousness or other trouble due in their cases to intestinal stasis. And now, these folks say, they are again able to eat and enjoy the foods they like.

No matter what you have tried for the bowels and stomach, Adlerika will surprise you.

Sold by over 39,000 druggists.

27 Germ Diseases
that hands may carry
—just from touching things
Compiled by LIFE EXTENSION INSTITUTE

Sickness comes from germ-laden hands

Why risk family health when this purifying toilet soap removes germs as well as dirt?

ISN'T IT puzzling at times how children get sick?

Perfectly well one day—tearing around with their playmates—handling everything—pets, games, trash—just reveling in dirt and germs.

Then, perhaps, too long a wait before hands are washed—a chance for germs to enter the system—a little fatigue or exposure—and before you know it—sickness!

Germs—a constant menace

Children's hands, as well as grown-ups', are always in danger of disease germs, say health authorities. Hiding unseen on toys, books, pencils, money—and many other things we all must touch—these germs get on our hands and menace health. The Life Extension Institute lists 27 germ diseases hands may spread.

For health's sake, children in over 63,000 schools have been taught to use Lifebuoy—especially before eating. In millions of homes—for greater safety—everyone washes with Lifebuoy. Its antiseptic lather removes germs.

Note its clean scent

Children, men and women too, quickly learn to love Lifebuoy's clean scent—your proof that Lifebuoy purifies—yet which quickly evaporates after rinsing.

And the same gentle, antiseptic Lifebuoy lather that removes germs—purifies pores—keeps skins fresh, clear, healthy. Prevents embarrassing body odor, too.

Use Lifebuoy a week and you'll use it for life. Get some today.

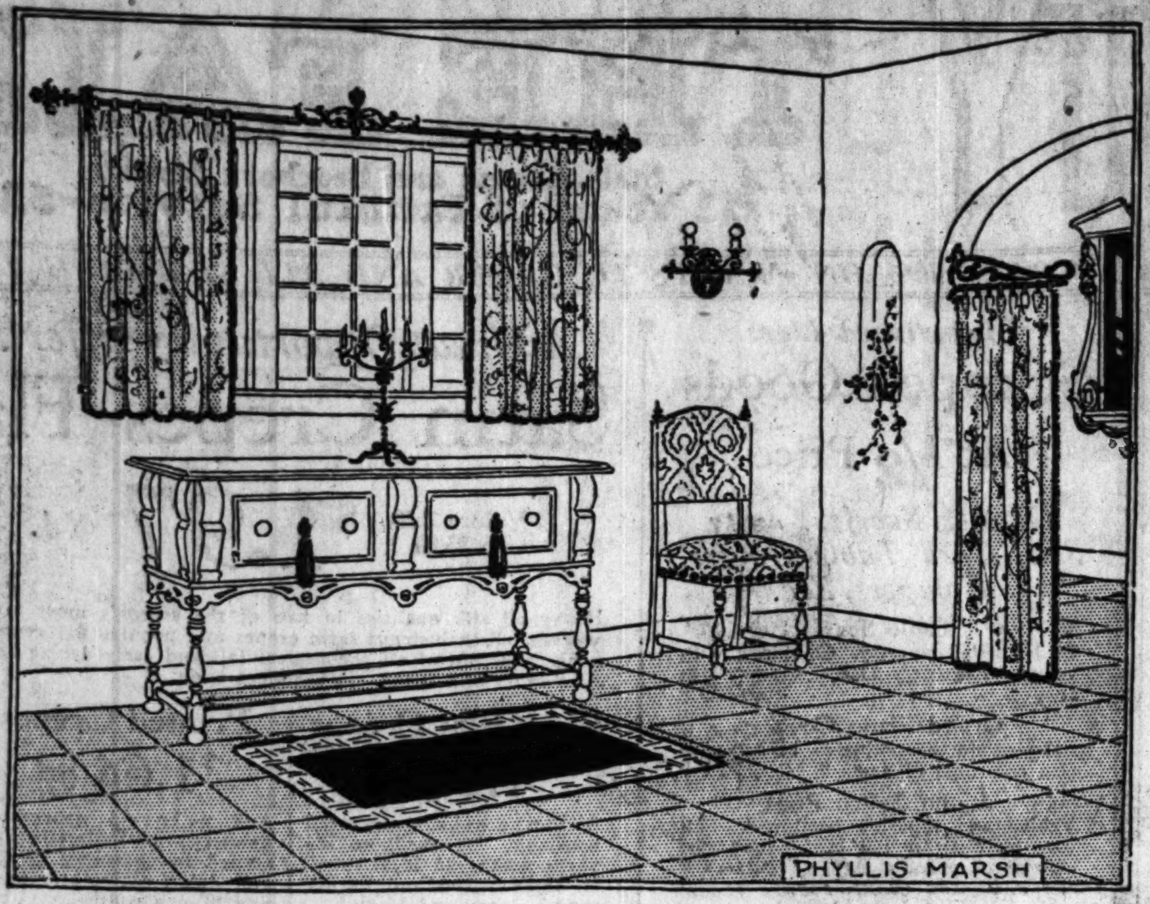
The HOME HARMONIOUS

The Furnishing of the Spanish House Is an Interesting and Worth While Task

By Phyllis Marsh



Interesting arrangement of Spanish furniture in a modern dining room.

At the present time there is much interest in the home of Spanish architecture. The actual development of this type in this country took place in California and in Florida and has spread rapidly within the last few years.

From the standpoint of both climate and scenery these two states present an ideal setting for the Spanish home, with its colored exterior, patio, wrought iron grilled windows, and rambling dimensions. Nevertheless, this same architecture and its appropriate landscape gardening may be transplanted to almost any state today with most charming results. The modern architect, like the modern furniture designer, is gifted with a keen understanding of properly applied adaptation. It is to him that much credit is due.

Rough plastered walls, beamed ceilings, arched windows, luxuriant and colorful fabrics, heavily carved and rather massive furniture, intermingled with wrought iron, are characteristics of the Spanish interior. The floors of the Spanish home may be of decorative tile, wide oak flooring boards, tile effect in linoleum or rubber composition, etc. For this home in a northern environment the wood or linoleum floor is best and will be found much warmer in winter than a tiled one. The rugs used may be confined to those of oriental character, of rather bold geometric pattern, Spanish Alpujarras, which take their name from the district from whence they come, or other rugs of Spanish origin, as well as some of our own country's Navajo rugs.

Damask and silk velour play the principal rôle as drapery fabrics in the home of Spanish feeling. However, it is possible to use other suitable and decoratively effective fabrics, such as heavily embroidered Crewel panels, hand blocked linen in the heavy style of Jacobean pattern, wide, colorfully striped antique satins, brocatelles, machine made Sardinian embroideries, which are comparatively new, and materials of similar character.

The walls, which should be done in a rough plaster glaze finish, may be tinted in a neutral tone or may boast a tint of any color suitable to the exposure of the rooms. Walls of this type act as a sort of foil for the lovely, richly colored drapery fabrics and wall hangings of tapestry and other materials which may be used.

In various ways wrought iron plays an important part in achieving some of the decorative and characteristic charm of the modern Spanish home. For the side lights or wall sconces there are many suitable styles from which to make a choice. Then there are many styles of appropriate wrought iron drapery poles which can add so much to the distinction of a Spanish interior. For the arched in-swinging Spanish window or the arched doorway between rooms there is a new treatment being used in the form of wrought iron swinging curtain cranes. They are proving a wonderful boon to the perplexed home decorator who is so often at a loss to know just how to treat the in-swinging arched casement window and archways.

There are also separate table and floor lamps, as well as candle holders of various types to be considered. Some of these should be of wrought iron, while others should be of pottery of suitable contour, design and color, with parchment shades to correspond. If there is a fireplace [and we hope there is] wrought iron again enters into the decorative scheme of the Spanish interior, for andirons, fuel basket, and fire set must be of the same metal. Arched planked doors should be elaborately hinged with wrought iron, while an opening or two, between hall and living room, may display an attractively designed grille or wrought iron gate.

Last, but not least, comes the selection of furniture which may be of authentic or adapted reproduction. It should be chosen carefully, and should consist only of those pieces which are both useful as well as decoratve. If the room is not extremely large, it is always wisest to select a less elaborate or sumptuous style of Spanish furniture than that which one would choose for the room of large dimensions. However, in either case color must be introduced in characteristic style and to be typically Spanish must consist of bright reds, yellows and greens. These can be worked out in the draperies, wall hangings, rugs and upholstery and if carefully done will be capable of producing a room of unusual charm.

In selecting the furniture and in its placement, care must be exercised in order to achieve a certain amount of austerity and dignity which is characteristic of the Spanish interior. Much of this feeling can be relieved, however, by the use of colorful wall hangings, warm toned wall tapestries, and rugs, colorful draperies and upholstery fabrics. Often hanging wall-pockets for trailing ivy add a softening touch to the severity of the rough plastered interior of a Spanish dwelling. Small niches and recessed book shelves, gayly colored, contribute their share to the decorative scheme, with their colorful books and ornaments of various kinds.

The massive and elaborately carved construction and the sumptuousness of the upholstery of much of the Spanish furniture necessitates economy of use. For the average sized living room of modern Spanish adaptation, the following pieces of "period" style furniture will probably suffice for both comfort and a homelike attractiveness. An overstuffed davenport, upholstered in either a linen frisé, linen, ramie, or cotton velour or mohair, preferably in red, is the essential piece of furniture. Next, there should be two or three carved arm chairs of different designs, upholstered in silk or cotton velour, "cut" or brocaded velvet, or a small geometrically patterned linen frisé.

A couple of these chairs might be trimmed with heavy wool tassel fringe while the third one could be adorned with fancy antique finished large brass headed nails, and each chair upholstered in a different fabric. A side chair could be included to match one of the three chairs, which might be used for a cabinet desk when needed.

In like manner the dining room must, of necessity, be furnished in equally characteristic style. If more color is desired here the draperies should be of a colorfully patterned hand blocked linen in a bold design, possibly of Jacobean inspiration. Red and gold brocatelle, green and gold antique damask, plain tapestry, mohair, or any other fabric of similar character and texture suitable to the style of the furniture may be chosen for the chairs. The floor, whether covered in tiled linoleum, genuine tile, or in wood, may boast several small or one large Spanish or Oriental rug of suitable pattern and coloring.

The wrought iron wall sconces and the suspended central ceiling fixture should be fitted out with amber colored frosted bulbs to mellow the general tone of the room. Suitable buffet, serving table and between meal scarfs may be of brocade, velvet, damask, etc.

Massiveness and ornate carving are characteristic of the bedroom furniture of Spanish style. Therefore, let the selection of fabrics here be confined to those of proper color and texture. For a sumptuous effect damask lends itself best for both the draperies and the spread. If a less elaborate treatment is desired, let the hand blocked and printed fabrics of bold design and gay colorings substitute.

HAS FILIAL LOVE DISAPPEARED?

From the True Stories Recounted Today It Seems to Be a Very Rare Trait for the Modern Child to Possess

BY DORIS BLAKE.

A STORY was related to me of a couple who had reared two sons, each married now. Mr. and Mrs. Stone, we'll call them, had a lifelong dream. They lived on the east coast. Their dream was to spend a winter in California. Mrs. Stone had a sister living out there. Mr. Stone suffered periodically from rheumatism. He bore it with fortitude, smiling at Ma Stone when she'd say: "Never mind, daddy; when we get out to California you'll forget all about it."

For years, more than either could remember, when anything went wrong the panacea was: "Well, never mind; we'll go to California some day."

That thought cheered them. It cheered them through the measles and the chicken pox, croups, cold, flu, and through the afflictions common to the ordinary business of family rearing.

Mr. Stone was a moderate wage earner. Mrs. Stone, though not a native down east Yankee, had become inoculated with enough of the thrift germs to make every dollar account for its full value. No work was farmed out that her own willing hands could perform. The result was that there was a tidy little home free from mortgage and enough in the bank after the second son's marriage to permit of the long dreamed of trip to California.

They reckoned their "spree" would eat a considerable hole in the $2,000 they'd take along. But there was the insurance on which they'd met the payments with religious regularity. There were three other thousand dollars in the bank and Daddy Stone's lifelong employer dared him not to come back after his three months' leave.

The future optimistically bright, Mamma and Daddy Stone set about getting travel literature for the ideal route to their promised land. And Ma Stone set about getting her wardrobe. About a week later, she came home from the dressmaker's one evening. Her first born was sitting in the living room. His wife was with him. An untidy little fellow of 4 was propped on Grandpa Stone's knee.

A Dishonest Son.

To make a painful séance as short as possible, the mission of the first born and his selfish wife was to get the lifetime savings out of the old couple. They wanted to go to California and set up in business out there. The son had heard of a great opening there for a fellow with a few thousand. Ma and pa were old. The son and his wife would go out and make the fortune and then send for them to come and live with them.

The little fellow had been primed for his part in the game. He begged grandma and grandpa to let him go to California, telling them with hugs and kisses how much he loved them.

The younger son, somehow, got wind of the transaction before the money was turned over. He went to his brother and among other things the elder son emerged with after the combat was a couple of black eyes. The elder son, he found out, was going in on some wildcat gambling scheme and had no intention whatever of leaving for California. The wife, it seems, was the inspiration behind the get rich plan and the threat of exposure of some early associations of hers was the final means of saving the old couple their savings and their trip to California.

A note was received a few days after the encounter of the brothers by the old folks, which read to the effect "that on further investigation of that California matter they found it inadvisable to consider it." So Mom and Daddy Stone set off in blissful ignorance of the real story of their regained fortune, and from recent postcards they are having the proverbial good time and wish we were all along.

That was a happier ending than the tales many parents might tell of sacrifices demanded of them by selfish children. Behind many a mother-in-law story in which she is related as the offensive and offending party is another tale that would quickly turn the tide of sympathy to her were she as ready to broadcast her wrongs.

Unjust Treatment.

One within my direct knowledge is the presence in the home of a mother-in-law who deeded over her house and her small savings on promise of being lovingly tended for the rest of her life. The money has long since been dissipated in an unsuccessful business venture, and the poor old woman is submitted to treatment no servant would stand for.

Another display of the injustice shown by children to their parents is that of a daughter and mother of three who bitterly resents the slightest intrusion of her parent in the conduct of her home. Yet that mother is constantly being subjected to innuendoes and on more than one occasion open criticism, because she goes along without asking her daughter's advice in the conduct of her life. This mother was upbraided by her daughter for not asking somebody's advice about what she should do with her money. If mother, on the other hand, had said that a dollar a week was too much pin money for the oldest of her daughter's three boys there would have been a bitter retort about whose business that was.

Children too often are given to thinking of their parents as inexhaustible sources of supply. Theirs is but to ask and they should receive. That parents are individuals with rights and preferences is a fact that should be more generally respected.

There are daughters who seem to think simply because their mothers have reached the grandmother age that pleasures of their own are almost expressions of indecency. They turn over their children for mother to look after while they lunch, dine, shop, or go on vacations. And a paid nursemaid would get more thanks for the duties performed, or less criticism, at least, if the instructions as to diet and clothes were not carried out to the letter.

There are other children who would take the last dollar from parents, caring little whether or not the old folks would like to look forward to the day when they might take things a bit easier. These, of course, are social outcasts, or should be branded as such in fiery letters.

Shirking Responsibility.

And there are children who run off and get married, bring home child, husband or wife, as the case may be, and expect their parents to assume their matrimonial burdens. And girls who find they can't, or won't get along with their husbands, run back home with their children, believing it is their divine right to be protected and provided for by mother and father, who may have all they can do to take care of themselves. That they may be eating up the old-age fund of their parents concerns them very little, if at all. They are the first to resent the burden of mother or father should the tables be turned later.

Parents, no doubt, will be mothers and fathers always—at least, the kind that are grafted on. They'll give their last dollar; they'll sacrifice their own desires, their own comforts, their well-deserved years of ease for parasitic sons and daughters. But if every grafting son and daughter would realize that they are parasites, and parasites of the lowest order, it might help them to see that after a couple has worked for, supported, and raised one family they are entitled to a few of the pleasures they have had to deny themselves throughout the years. Also, that they have rights entitling them and them only to the money they have managed to scrape together during their lifetime. Also, since it is their savings, they are entitled, as human beings, to spend those savings as they see fit.

And they are wise parents who make their children understand that they have rights to be respected. Parents who are not too sacrificial are in little danger of becoming burdens or of being burdened with the support of their children and their children's children.

Doris Blake's Answers TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Do the Same Thing.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a girl dearly and I know she loves me, but every time I take her out she is always talking about another fellow. Do you think she is trying to make me jealous? BILL."

Don't let her get away with it, Bill. Make up a few fanciful yarns about some beautiful blonde who thinks you're pretty nice. She won't like it and it will open her eyes to her mistake.

Keep Her Busy.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am in love with a girl who loves me, but lately a friend of mine is interfering—flirting with her. Do you think I'll lose her? What can I do to keep her? J. D. K."

You needn't lose her if you're on the job, J. D. K. Make it a point to be more attentive than usual and keep her so dated up she won't have time for flirting with others. It's up to you.

Too Old for Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 17 and like a fellow who is 29. I believe he is too old for me. HOME GIRL."

You would have little in common with a man so much older. He is ready to settle down and you are just beginning to taste the good times of youth.

Parents Know Best.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 15 and am in high school. All the girls in my room go out with fellows. A fellow from my room asked me to go out with him but my parents disapprove. What shall I do? Is it correct for my parents to disapprove? He is a very nice boy. Please advise. CUTY."

If your parents disapprove, do not accept his invitation, Cuty. They feel you are still young and that it is for your best interests to wait awhile before going out with the boys, as it might interfere with your studies.

Taller than He.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am writing this for my girl friend. Her boy friend says if she gets any taller he won't go out with her because she is now a trifle taller than he is. ROSE."

Boys like to feel they are strong and manly, that girls look up to them and depend upon them for protection. It's difficult for a boy to have this confidence in himself when he must look up to the girl, Rose.

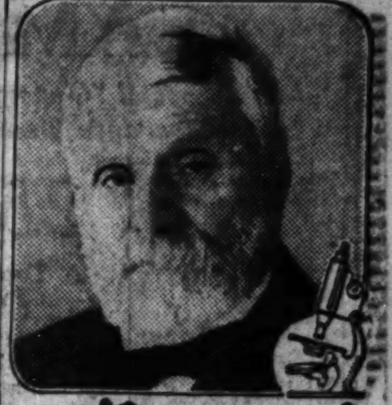
Nice to His Friend.

"Dear Miss Blake: I introduced my girl to a friend of mine. Since then she does not seem to pay much attention to me. When I am alone with her she acts differently and does not seem to have changed. Please advise. "PUZZLED."

Aren't you allowing jealousy to creep in, Puzzled? The young man is your friend and naturally she wants to be nice to him for your sake.

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

What Dr. Caldwell Learned in 47 Years Practice



W. B. Caldwell M.D.
AT AGE 83

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their systems. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

Intimate Bits Concerning Busy Chicagoans, North, South, and West Siders

By Edward Burns.

ART LUEDER, the w. k. postmaster, says he has run his business up higher than ever. Well, competition isn't so strong in his line.

Many business men on the near west side have become volleyball bugs. T. I. Foster, box manufacturer, of 1553 West Madison, has become so pleased with progress that he's booked a game for Tuesday night in Elgin with a team of Kane county men.

Lou Barbour Sr., 3053 South Throop street, is a water widower. Mrs. Elsa is a member of the Sinai swimming team and Lou Jr. is an aquatic star at Englewood High. Mother and son plunge almost every night, but pap is afraid to get into even the family tub without water wings.

Charles Ehegartner, the big fish and lobster man of 4021 Broadway, plans to close his pinochle season early and go to New Orleans. "If the railroads don't get the money the doctors and pinochlers will," says Mrs. E.

Mrs. Mabel Lunde, 3467 West Madison street, who was hit by an auto as she alighted from a taxicab on New Year's eve, was able to return to her shop several days ago.

William L. O'Day, 4008 Washington boulevard, the distinguished private detective, has a new wrinkle for trying out applicants for sleuthing jobs. He sends them over the west park system to see if they can find an intersection with no stop light.

Sergts. William Shanley and William O'Donnell of the East Chicago avenue station are involved in the Kegel-Bundesen controversy. Shanley has a four months old offspring he's training under Bundesen rules, while O'Donnell, whose baby also is four months, has switched to the advice of a motorman, father of eleven.

John Hertz's polo ponies are not getting the winter lay-off enjoyed by Reigh Count, Anita Peabody, et al. Mr. Hertz shipped his entire stable of polo performers to Miami, Fla., last Wednesday.

Our Mayor Bill Thompson says the best old sea chanty he has heard in years was "Gumbo Sal" on board the schooner Elsa at the Boston Tea wharf. Get him to sing it for you.

Ald. Donald F. McKinley of the 11th ward and some of his south side colleagues are all steamed up over the idea that their section of town is not going to cut in adequately on the $100,000,000 about to be spent for city improvements.

Rob Crowe, the king's counsel, so to speak, says h—l can't be such a mean place when you've got a cold like his'n. That's a harsh thought for the curly-headed lad whose picture you see above this item, but the lad is the same Rob. He looked like that when he was 3 years old.

DR. O. G. WERNICKE, 3532 West vulnerable spot, after he had Achilles, found his heel his most Adams street, who, unlike broken it four months ago, is able to be out again despite the fact that broken heels usually rate from one to two years' confinement.

Smiling George Eldridge, 555 North Austin boulevard, an invalid for five years and destined to spend his life in bed, is apace with the revived popularity of "hooked" rugs. Mr. Eldridge last Tuesday completed the weaving of his fifty-ninth rug.

Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom has been invited to speak at the dinner-dance to be given next Thursday evening by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce at the Swedish clubhouse, 73d street and Cregier avenue. The affairs is in honor of newly elected officers of the chamber.

MASTER IN CHANCERY JAMES J. KELLY, 6859 Jeffery avenue, sister, Miss Nona Kelly, and niece, Miss Gertrude Kelly, have left for a four months' visit on the west coast.

Frank P. Ross, 531 North East avenue, Oak Park, who made his several millions in a score or more different manufacturing enterprises, is just plain "capitalist" now. He sold his last factory interest, a soap works in Dayton, O., last week.

Congressman M. A. Michaelson has been in Havana relaxing a bit. Whether Congressman Michaelson is on a business mission is not known, nor is it known whether he has been picking the winners consistently at Oriental park.

A prohibition agent, getting measured for a snappy set of patent teeth, confided to Dr. Lewis A. Dyer, Ashland and Madison, that "most prohibition agents now are starving to death. Joke on Doc: He thought the agent was talking about food shortage.

Col. Matt Winn, the famed public benefactor, has just returned from a visit to New York, where he entreated leading hoss men to do right by our village by not keeping all the good nags in the east, come this summer.

Mrs. Wendell Hall and Miss Flora Martin, 4351 North Paulina street, who last week organized the Ravenswood Rotund Ladies' Walking society, have dissolved the organization after one meeting. The abandonment was caused by "fretting dogs."

Some of this town's most eloquent orators are billed to say a few kind words at the opening of the handsome new Chelten theater, 79th street and Exchange avenue, next Friday evening. There also will be a comedy and other things for those who don't care for speeches.

Friends gave Henry Busche, 100 Washington boulevard, Oak Park, a jade cage for his canary. Mrs. B. was a bit miffed when Henry required her to postpone entertainment of her club until he had the front room done over in green to harmonize with the cage.

Honest John Alger, 1523 Dearborn parkway, has announced that he positively is not a candidate for the United States senate, no matter what final action may be taken in the case of Frank Smith, senator elect.

The family physician has ordered Mrs. Irene Blum, 1101 Independence boulevard, to quit feeding those big medium-rare porterhouses to her husband, Albert, the rubber broker. Mr. Blum has rheumatism and sits and reads the cook book for hours at a time.

U. S. Commissioner Henry C. Beitler, 4641 Dover street, though in a weakened condition from several weeks' illness, appeared in his court Wednesday and bravely listened to bootleggers tell how the whisky found behind their bars was planted there by their mothers-in-law, etc.

Mrs. Gertie Waterfall, who opened a candy store on Randolph street a year and a half ago "to occupy her time," has sold the place and now is spending her spare moments bossing the servants in one of those elegant new residences at Grace and Sheridan.

Principal Benjamin F. Buck of Senn High, 5900 Glenwood avenue, says that response of citizens to the invitation to sign petitions for an addition to the school buildings has exceeded the expectations of persons sponsoring the action.

The Rev. F. E. Davison, pastor of the Austin Boulevard Christian church, after conducting a radio series of religious services at 7:30 mornings, says the response leaves him with no regrets at having got up before daylight each morning during the zero snap.

Eugene Byfield says it ought to be a great season for corned beef and cabbage, what with the Democratic convention here and all.

Mabel G. Reinecke, collector of internal revenue, with income tax scheduling two months away, is organizing for the big panic. Won't she have fun when she gets the schedules of Gene Tunney, Jack Dempsey, and Tex Rickard?

Leo Klein, widely known as "the mayor of Roscoe street," has returned from Boston. He nearly was locked up when he asked for a copy of

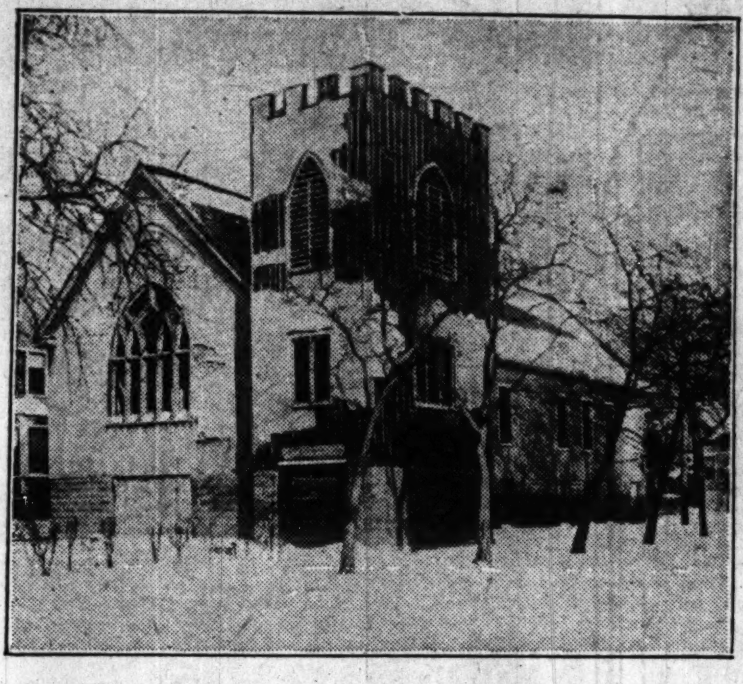
WINTRY WINDS NOW ITS CHOIR.



NOT as old as many a church in other parts of the country, but the progress of Chicago has been so swift that the Windsor Park Baptist church, once meeting its community's needs, has been abandoned now for some six years. The bell in its belfry stilled, its plaster fallen in decay, and its windows empty of stained glass, the structure at Saginaw and Seventy-sixth streets serves as nothing more than a landmark for that part of the city. Thirty-five years ago it was built alongside what had been an Indian trail leading to Detroit.

Jobless Carpenter Wins $50, South Side's Politeness Prize

Goes for Bread, Comes Back With Cash

By the Politeness Reporter.

STARTING for the south side in search of some one upon whom to bestow THE TRIBUNE'S $50 award for the politest person encountered in a day's adventure, I happened, on this occasion, to find myself seated on a Cottage Grove car beside a young lady who was reading a paper backed novel entitled, "Love's Bitter Harvest." She may recall my attempt also to follow the progress of the hero and heroine and, if so, she will remember that she sneezed along in the middle of the exciting first chapter.

She alone knows whether the sneeze came because she couldn't check it, or whether it was artificially produced for the purpose of causing me to stick my nose in another direction. She might have been worthy of an award for originality in devising a weapon against rudeness of others, but, being a believer in the germ theory, I couldn't see how she deserved the magic card that reposed in my pocket.

I realized I was on a quest as romantic as anything in her book. To some one, somewhere on the south side, that day, I was to present $50 and ask for nothing in return save an outstanding act of what in this hurly burly age means so much—courtesy.

TAKEN FOR A RIDE

At 47th street the conductor did something more than he was paid to do. Remembering my inquiry many streets back, he called to me after I had left the car: "Don't forget—a No. 4 or 5," and he drew the letters in the air with his forefinger.

Maybe it would be one of those days in which I, and not the world about me, would be the one out of tune.

I had had only a few hours' sleep the night before, the skies were gray, and the streets were drably enveloped in a fog.

But the No. 4 car was jammed and there was such a crowd pushing at the front entrance that one of a group of students, his own standing room secure, blocked my way to the steps and called out to the motorman: "All right; go ahead!" I barely missed being caught in the closing of the gate, for I was hidden from the view of the motorman, who had taken the selfish youth's word for the condition of things. But I got aboard and found myself standing beside two middle aged women who were being polite to each other, exchanging, "I never saw you look better." I had a cynical idea, however, that maybe neither one of them meant it. And they weren't talking to me, anyhow.

Later, when I asked of nobody in particular, "Is this 63d?" two or three fellow passengers glanced up with interest to tell me it was. Thus I landed out there on the street covered by elevated tracks, having, with but one exception, been kindly enough treated, and yet with the magic card in my pocket.

C. R. Ord of 6437 Minerva avenue, who went out of his way to be courteous to the Politeness Man, and thus won $50.

A COMMON NUISANCE

A trunk and leather goods store proprietor, standing out in front of his place, followed me inside. Noting the brand of goods he carried, I told him I was in search of a rival make of trunk.

"We've got something just as good," he assured me, briskly. "Here's the same style for $27.50."

"Twenty-seven dollars and fifty cents?" I gasped. "I thought I could get one for about eight or nine dollars."

"Maybe the corners and the locks for that," he answered, a bit disgustedly. "How long do you think it takes to make a trunk?"

"They make 'em by pieces, don't they? No one man makes the whole trunk."

"That may be true," he agreed, "but look here——" and he went and got out his price list to compare it with the tag on the trunk. He talked for a long time about the virtue of his trunk, explaining that when one bought such a piece of goods it should be something that would last a lifetime. He did know trunks, and he finally convinced me that his stock was first class and his prices reasonable, but he didn't cause me to glow with the feeling that I had been shown any special courtesy.

I stopped in at a book store, and, while I read the magazines, the young lady clerk was both efficient and tactful, in that she came and stood just for an instant at my side and then, as I said nothing, moved discreetly to another part of the store that I might not be bothered while making a free library of her wares. A high type of courtesy under the circumstances, one might say, but after all of a negative sort. I had been given no opportunity to gauge her smile or tabulate the quality of her voice.

AT THE FIVE AND TEN

At a cigar store across the street, on the corner, I insisted to the clerk that I wanted "a five cent cigar that would be as good as a ten center." He brought out a box. Touching one of them, I asked:

"What do you mean, it's as good?"

"I'll explain," he agreed, in English accent, and he brought another box from the case. "You see, it's the same thing as these, except that it's a faulty shape."

"And if I get it to smoking, no one will ever know that I paid but five cents for it, except you and I?"

"Precisely," he smiled.

My own disposition seemed to improve as I took a puff at the cigar which had been so thoroughly sold to me from every angle, and I stood around flecking the ashes and thinking that maybe the clerk would have further friendly remarks to offer, but he had none, and so I went over to the Morgan Deluxe bakery, simply because it looked inviting and not because I had any purchase in mind.

I told one of the girls back of the

"CHICAGO MAY," QUEEN OF THE UNDERWORLD

Launched Equal Rights for Women Among the Rogues and Swindlers

Cleverest of Female Crooks Will Be Bride

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick.

THE next time Englewood Edna, or the Tiger Lady, or the Baby Bandit takes a curtain call as as something new in lady criminals, with a superlative technique, don't bother to toss too many bouquets.

Just recall the name and fame of "Chicago May." And you'll recollect that, criminally speaking at least, the good olds days were indeed the good old days.

For just as Holinshed's Chronicles furnished the foundation for Shakespeare's historical plays, so is "Chicago May" the source book for the girls who today get their names scratched across the police blotters. Only "Chicago May" made the front page of newspapers oftener than she made the desk sergeant's entry book.

BACK ON PAGE ONE

She was called the world's cleverest woman crook, back when the century was turning. And the distinction was not unmerited.

Recent report that this one-time queen [she's now 52] of beauty, blackmail, and burglary is soon to marry Netley N. Lucas, 26, British author and criminologist, has brought her back to the news columns, where she once figured so prominently.

For in the Chicago world's fair days it was this good looking girl, with the baby stare, the fluffy hair, and the innocent eyes, who was heralded as the country's first shoplifter. A dreamy smile beguiled the salesmen. A voluminous but modish skirt with inside pockets housed the plunder. And enchanting eyes covered the get-away.

THE TRAIL BLAZER

She was really a pioneer in woman's rights in a world of crooks. In Chicago, too, she is credited with having perfected the fainting fit, during the agonies of which she would revive sufficiently to steal watches and scarfpins of the men who were helping her.

In London, later, she went busily along this same highway of invention. It was she, they say, who introduced the camera into the art of blackmail. A confederate, concealed behind the arras, snapped the pictures. And they do say that British barristers, members of parliament, and even a knight or two paid no end of money to gain permanent possession of these photographic plates.

Then there was her hansom cab trick. She dearly loved to lure men into cabs with her. Once in the cab, she always liked to have their arms about her trim waist, her blonde head on their shoulder. This loving position gave her opportunity to bury her lips in his scarf and deftly to bite out the scarfpin. She always, of course, chose a man with a diamond pin, and the diamond was real.

Occasionally her companion called the police. Not often. But there never was evidence, and the prosecution always failed.

LIFE'S UPS AND DOWNS

It was in the spring of 1901 that she started, first up to dazzling splendors of wealth and excitement, and then down to prison sentences. For it was then that she met Eddie Guerin, Chicago's famed "Cockney Eddie," who was later to rob the American Express company in Paris, then to be sent for life to Devil's Island, that direful penal colony in French Guiana which earlier had held Capt. Dreyfus.

She, as an accomplice of Guerin's, was sentenced to five years at the French convent prison at Montpelier, and got out just about the time Guerin made his way to fame and freedom as the first, and some say the only, prisoner ever to escape from Devil's Island.

But more of "Chicago May."

She was born Mary Vechs, the blue-eyed, golden-haired daughter of a German baker on the east side in New York. She soon changed the name to May Vivienne, and her favorite last name was Latimer. But as she went from adventure to adventure she had many others. Some of them were May Fletcher, Katie Fitzgerald, Mary Guerin, and Mary Miller. But "Chicago May" Churchill was the name that lasted.

As a young girl she came to Chicago and put herself through a rigorous apprenticeship as a smart shoplifter before going back to New York for a career as a blackmailer. In New York her sweet face and her large eyes [victims were wont to swear they were hypnotic eyes] won her a place in the "Salvation Army" chorus of a musical revue. It was about this time that she made the acquaintance of a crook called "the king of the badgers."

Tiring, presently, of the gay and uncertain life, she married a man named Sharp. He is supposed to have committed suicide in despair. "Chicago May" went on to London, where she fell in love with a drill master. He was ordered to South Africa, in the Boer war. She tried to follow him as a nurse. Refused permission, she thought of taking her own life. But she didn't.

Instead, she rented a house in Montagu place and began to mystify police and Scotland Yard with her stunts. Her score in blackmail includes one earl, a knight, half a dozen canny barristers, and a number of wealthy clubmen. There was rarely a prosecution; never a conviction. Her camera technique was said to be perfect. Most of her accomplices landed in jail, and she went to Paris for a rest and some new clothes. She came back to a house in Bloomsbury.

EDDIE ENTERS

In the spring of 1901, in the Horseshoe tavern—a rendezvous for crooks and adventurers and Bohemians—situated in Tottenham Court row, she met Eddie Guerin.

Eddie, member of a respectable Chicago family, had left this city when he thought he had killed a detective in a quarrel over a woman. In 1882 he robbed the Mechanics' bank at Galesburg, and escaped. Next he turned up in Pittsburgh, where he robbed a ticket office and was sentenced to the Allegheny City Western penitentiary. He escaped and went over to London. In May, 1889, he went down to Lyons, dressed up in a frock coat and fawn colored gloves, robbed the bank, and was sentenced to ten years at hard labor in the Auvergne mountains. Then back to Chicago, to work on the west side at his trade of a tailor, just about the time "Chicago May" was leaving the city. But the two never met until that night in the Horseshoe tavern. Let Eddie Guerin tell it in his own words:

"There I met a woman; a goddess, I should say.

"Tall and beautifully proportioned, with an abundance of golden hair; the real thing, not the peroxide variety, and a complexion of delicate pink and cream, large blue eyes shaded with long, dark lashes, and a mouth the upper lip of which formed a perfect cupid's bow, while the lower was straight and full and ripe. Such was the vision of loveliness I beheld and instantly coveted."

UNITED

The two former Chicagoans exchanged reminiscences. She said she had reformed. He said he had. He had been serving as an interpreter at the Paris exposition and so, three days later, the two of them went to Paris, as Mr. and Mrs. Brown. Mrs. Brown was "radiant, lovely, elegantly attired, blazing with valuable jewelry."

But they both went to bad luck: he, to a life sentence on Devil's Island; she, to the isolation of a French female prison.

For, in spite of their resolutions of reformation, it wasn't long—April 16—before the American Express company in Paris was robbed of 30,000 francs. A man called "Dutch Gus," whose real name was George Miller, a former sweetheart of "Chicago May," was immediately arrested. Guerin and "Chicago May" took the first train for Calais, hopeful of getting into England. On the train Guerin was arrested. His companion tried to act the grand English lady, but she protested too much, and her haughty ways were overdone. The French detective turned to her and said:

"All right, Chicago May, we know you. It's better you go to London, don't you think, while you are safe?"

SEPARATED

She went to London in safety, but returned for the trial; whether to help Eddie or Dutch Gus no two stories agree. The most romantic version is that she came back to help Eddie, got ensnared, and received her five years' sentence. When she heard his life sentence she is said to have implored the judge to give her a similar one. Anyway, she kissed her hand to the judge as they led her away.

Women interested in her case got her out of jail after she had served three of her five years. She bought some new clothes and sailed down to Brazil, where she caused an English nobleman to fall in love with her and then, distracted at the revelation that she was "Chicago May," to kill himself.

Then back to London and the Horseshoe tavern in the spring of 1906. Guerlin had bribed jailers, wooed a warden's wife, suffered unspeakable privations, had starved and fought and sickened, and finally had made his miraculous way back to Chicago to the home of his sister, 125 St. Louis avenue. But he grew restive and went to Canada, across to England, and back to the tavern.

WHEN LOVE GROWS COLD

Here again the stories differ. He says "Chicago May" had never loved him and wanted revenge for having been sent to jail. Others say she had risked everything for him and now he repudiated her for an Emily Skinner. He says she said: "I'll send you back to Devil's Island to die like a dog." She says she never said it.

"Chicago May" and a new friend, "the man from nowhere," who was in reality a Charles Smith, got him tossed into Brixton jail and held for thirteen months pending extradition fights. He grew suddenly British, swore he had been born in Hoxton, England, and that the only reason he hadn't tried to prove citizenship before was that it would have meant that his aged mother [and he said he was her favorite child] would have been dragged into the controversy. He won his point and was not sent back to France.

But four days after his release from jail a mysterious man shot at him. The bullets merely crippled his foot. "Chicago May" was found hiding down an alley, and Charles Smith had the gun. They were tried.

TRUE CONFESSIONS

And once again, on a hot July morning in 1907, "Chicago May" stood in court, this time in New Baily, and heard a judge pronounce sentence on her. This time it was for fifteen years in prison at Aylesbury, England. But she was still able to smile at the judge. She served ten of the fifteen years and came out, reformed and autobiographical. She began to write her confessions.

But Eddie, too, had written his confessions. As a note to the prospective bridegroom we offer this sentence from Guerin's memoirs:

"O, woman, woman! You have much to answer for. Look at my own case, for instance. Ah, if I had never known Chicago May!"

WHEN WINTER COMES TO THE "FOUNTAIN OF TIME."

IT was Austin Dobson's vagrant line, "Time goes, you say? Ah no; Alas! time stays; we go," that was the inspiration for Lorado Taft's colossal work of sculpture which stands at the west end of the Midway Plaisance in Washington Park. The mass of hurrying humanity, though made in marble, seems to suffer more keenly because of the cold and snow as they stumble and fall in their fateful onward march, while the trees in the background—shorn of their leaves by the same winds of destiny that have driven men on since time began—lend their touch of bleakness to the group. The craglike figure of Time, cynically watching the endless procession, is not shown in the photograph, but we can feel assured that his own mantle caught some of the blizzard's snow.

Politeness Its Own Reward? Not in This Case

counter that I wanted "a 25 cent loaf of whole wheat bread."

"We've got one for 16 cents."

"No," I hemmed, "I want the 25 cent loaf."

She exchanged the wrapped package for another one high on the shelf and remarked that this one contained gluten—if I happened to be troubled with diabetes. The price of this loaf, she added, was what I wished to pay. No, no, it wasn't the gluten loaf I wanted. I pointed to a third loaf and, with crooked elbow, she held it in her hand, waiting patiently, and without change of countenance, for my decision. I withheld my decision so long that other customers came, wanting service. The young lady may have shifted from one foot to the other while I deliberated, but her face—and it was a beautiful one—remained mobile. She was prepared, apparently, to wait as long as I was, and then, suddenly, her lips twitched into a wonderful smile.

"Wrap it up," I capitulated. "I'm not hungry now, but I will be some time. That's the loaf I want."

And although this young lady may not have won the magic card by her outstanding courtesy, she did at least make a sale for the house by her patience and smile.

HARD HEARTED PAPA

At the Empress candy store I priced bon bons—the boxes in the window and the ones in the cases—and at the end of it all I told the youth who had known boyhood in sunny Greece that I was really not in the market.

"You ain't sore, are you?" I asked as he walked with me to the door.

"No," he smiled. "No hard feelings at all. Drop in any time."

On down the street I came to McLelland's, with its red front, and, sauntering inside, I found myself attracted by the phonograph record department. There was a pretty blonde girl back of the counter, giving demonstrations. I told her I liked to hear the radio best.

"Do you?" she answered, placing "Hard Hearted Papa" for the scratch of the needle.

In one group of listeners there was a heavy set woman with a baby, and standing at one side was a man who met my gaze and asked:

"Did ya ever hear 'My Blue Heaven'?"

I didn't know that I had.

"I'll ask her to play it for you," he suggested.

I gave the fellow another glance. Certainly he was not connected with the institution. His cap and overcoat indicated he had dropped in from the out of doors. He had the look of a mechanic. Quite evidently he was no professional song plugger. He really seemed a little ill at ease in the store environment. Surely his interest that I should share his joy in the ballad was not inspired by any selfish motive. It had struck me for a moment that the pleasant girl back of the counter was a possibility for the courtesy award. She——

"Dya want me to ask her to play it for ya?" the fellow ventured again with a hesitating smile. "The reason I think you'll like it is at home we folks have played it until it's worn through—that and 'Aloma'."

The folks at home, it developed, were his wife, his daughter, Juanita, age 9, and the boy, just 12 weeks old.

THE HUNT GROWS WARM

There was something so friendly in the fellow's attitude to me, a perfect stranger, that I felt the magic card in my pocket begin to burn, but somehow I argued to myself against his being the recipient of the day's prize.

"I'd like to have ya hear 'My Blue Heaven'," he continued. "And did ya ever hear Vernon Dalhart sing 'Aloma'? You'll like that."

I asked him to spell the word for me, and he hunted for a paper in his pocket on which to write it down carefully—"A-l-o-m-a."

A bit embarrassed, he asked the girl if she had this last favorite selection and he seemed quite downcast, on my account, when she shook her head.

"They'd have it up at 73d and Greenwood," he brightened finally. "I saw it up there in the window."

"How far away?"

"O, block and a half, maybe two blocks."

"Do you want to show me the way up there?"

"I could," he agreed, and as he left the store I noticed he had a limp to his walk.

"Yes," he explained, "my right side's still paralyzed, but really it don't hurt. Piece of tile fell four floors and hit me when I was on a job last September. Since then I've been laid up more or less. I'm a carpenter by trade."

I asked him for his card as we walked along and he handed it to me—C. R. Ord, 6437 Minerva avenue.

"My wife," he recalled, "wanted me to get some poppyseed bread and one of those ten cent pans on sale there in the window of McLelland's. I got there just as they was all sold out. She'll be disappointed about that, but I don't want to disappoint her about the bread. When I found the pans gone, I went over to listen a while at the records. You'll like 'Aloma'."

THE SEARCH IS OVER

We reached 73d and Greenwood and we stood facing each other as I paused out in front of the place.

"Why are you being so courteous to me?" I inquired. "You'll go your way and I'll go mine, and we'll never see each other again."

At this turn of events, his eyes narrowed in reflection.

"Always believe in live and let live," he philosophized. "Always tried to treat people right, though lots of times they treat you just the opposite. I suppose I ought to be getting home with that poppyseed bread. My wife says going out of the way for people don't get you nothing."

"She's mistaken this time," I chuckled, and I handed him the magic card.

He looked at it a long time while I explained.

"Then you didn't care to hear 'Aloma' after all?" he puzzled, coming out of a daze.

"There's no more wonderful music," I answered, "than that of a kind word spoken from one stranger to another with no thought of selfish gain."

Whooping Cough Cure Found in Airplane Rides

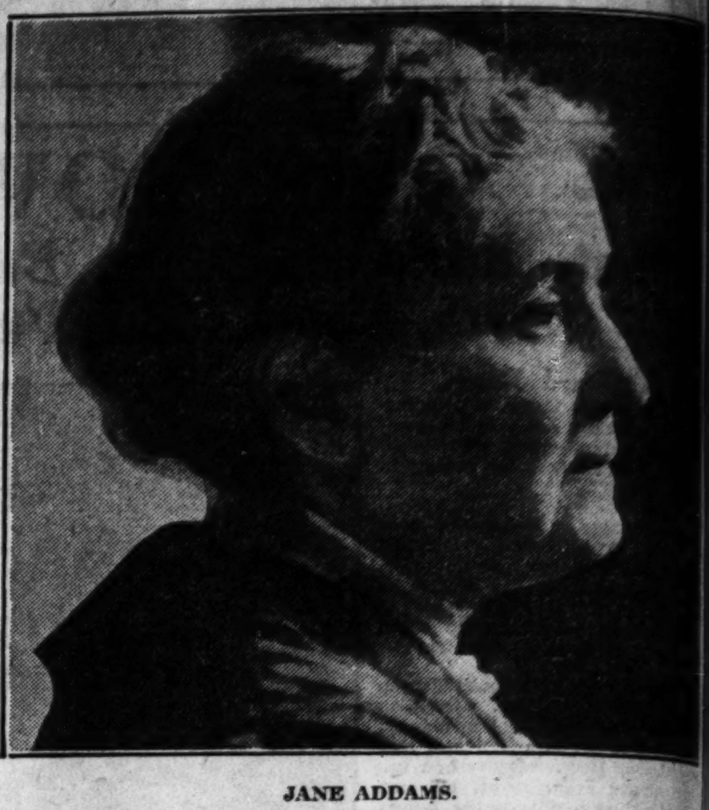
BERLIN.—(AP)—Air fights are likely to become the prescribed treatment for whooping cough, if the cures in the air recorded by Dr. A. Kettner in the "Medizinische Welt" are frequently repeated.

The cases concerned two sisters, aged 7 and 9, whose father is the owner of an airplane After consulting Dr. Kettner, the father took to the air with his little girls, ascending to an altitude of 3,000 metres. The experiment was repeated in a few days.

The first flight was sufficient to cure the two girls completely, whereas their younger sister, aged one, who was suffering from the same malady but who was not taken along on the aerial trip, could be cured only after long and tedious treatment with repeated injections.

Dr. Kettner believes that not only the change of air but especially the altered surroundings and nervous excitement attending the experience of flying had had a salutary effect on the nervous components of the disease.

FAMOUS WOMEN OF CHICAGO



JANE ADDAMS.

[Copyright Photo by Moffett.]

FAMOUS not only in Chicago, but one of the most famous women in the world is Jane Addams, head of the Hull House social settlement, which she helped found back in 1889. Leader of the woman's movement in the United States, a pioneer in social settlement work in this country, a keen student of sociology, she was once described by President Roosevelt as "Chicago's most useful citizen." Born at Cedarville, Ill., in 1860, Miss Addams, a frail and sensitive girl, caught her first glimpse of real poverty during a European visit. She is the author of a number of books on sociological and philanthropic subjects. In April, 1914, she organized the Woman's International Peace conference, held at The Hague.

Highbrow Train Conductors Decreed by German Rulers

BERLIN.—(AP)—High brow conversation about Goethe, Shakespeare, and Bernard Shaw, mingled perhaps with learned opinions on astral bodies, the Voronoff theory and other scientific subjects, will be carried on in several languages by conductors on the German express trains, if federal railway administration succeeds with its plans.

These plans contemplate that the express train "con" shall possess so good a general education that he can converse with any passenger on any subject and, if necessary, in several languages. Above all, he must be able to express himself in choice German.

The railway administration believes traveling will become even more popular than it already is if the passenger is sure of finding an accommodating conductor.

France May Force Factories to Hire More Elderly Men

PARIS.—(AP)—Obligatory employment of old men is one of the social reforms before the government. All employers, under a plan proposed by Paul Canjole, member of the Seine departmental general council, would be required to employ a small percentage of men between fifty and sixty years old.

Gray hair, he says, is the worker's greatest burden.

"Only young men are wanted in this hurrying age of mass production. The older men often are quite as competent and certainly their experience and dependability are worth something, but regardless of that," he concluded, "society in some way must take care of the older men still able to give a good return for their wage."

A social insurance program which would include old age pensions is expected to be passed by parliament eventually.

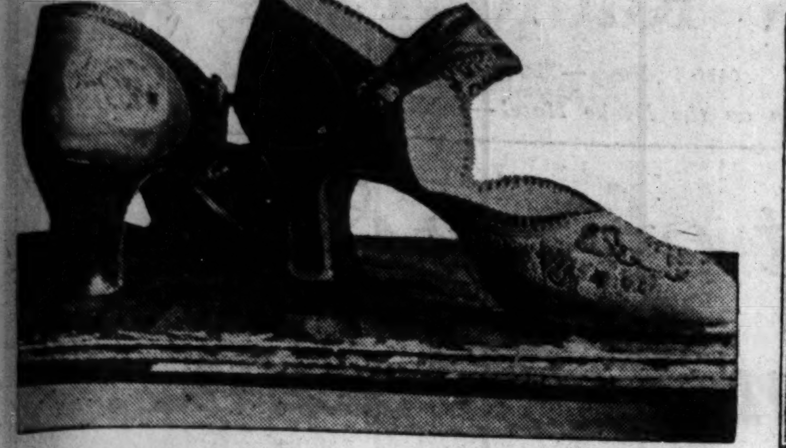
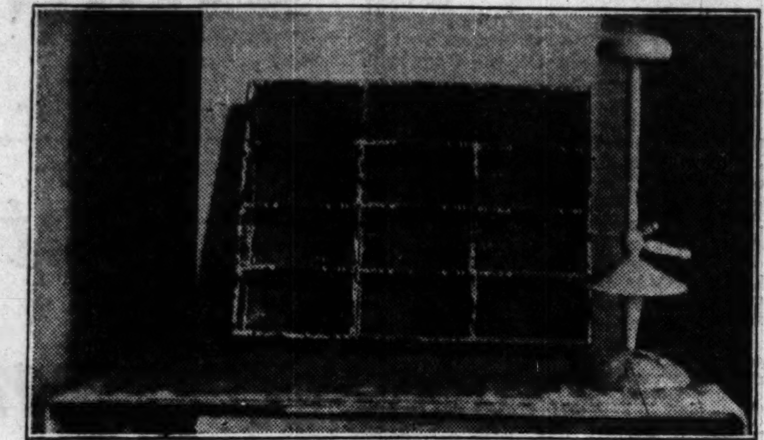
FEMININE FADS AND FANCIES

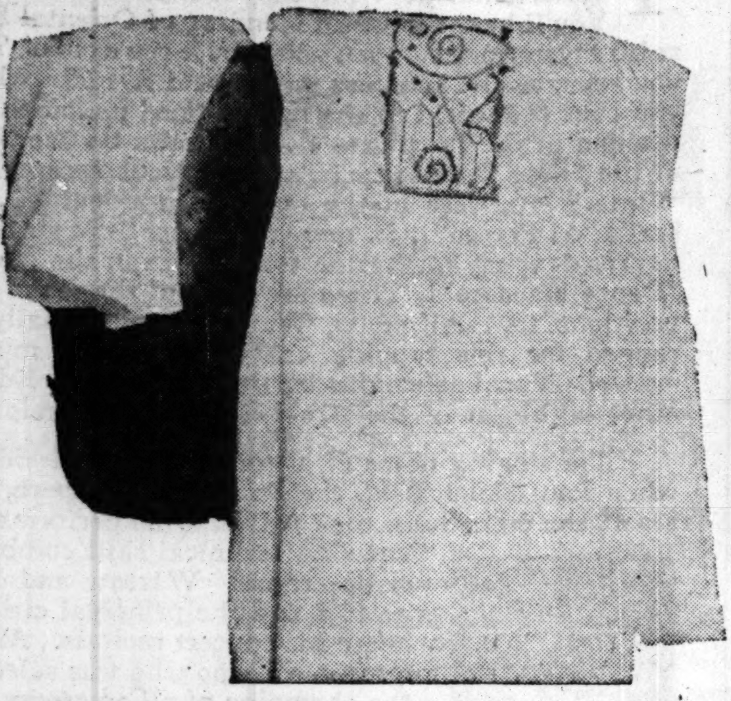


Sandals for the south are in subtle shades of tan and rose salé embroidered in raffia. The heels are a delightful, but decadent, red. They are worn by a spectator at the sports and later in the day for tea.



Two things for beauty and neatness. One is a box for milady's silken hose—a dozen pairs of them. The other is a fantastic hat stand for her closet.

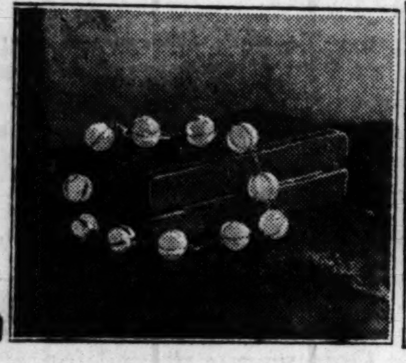
The latest in bathing caps provides earrings of gold rubber, so that there will be no danger of losing the gold ones in the sea and having them swallowed by a shark. And, of course, one must have earrings, even bathing earrings.



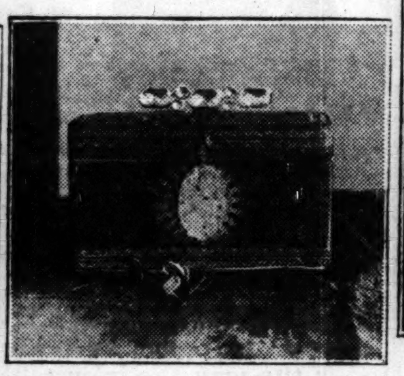
A new beach robe made of terry cloth in white with a stunning monogram and lined—of all things—in silk jersey, so that your wet bathing suit won't make it crinkle.

If one spends the day on the beach one must have a beach pillow of rubberized silk with a tiny robe for one's feet, which fits inside and is quilted. One can slip one's book, or magazine, or knitting inside, too.

Beach pajamas for lounging after the bathing hour are flurrying the designers this new season. These are of white rajah, which, by the way, is to be the last word for spring, and they are trimmed with blue.



A rose quartz necklace, so becoming with the new shade of rose salé, and the rosy beige which spring brings to us. It is set in gold and carved just a trifle, and is not prohibitive in price.



Crystal jewels are more popular than ever and will be especially good with the new frocks of white chiffon. Here is a pendant of modernistic design in crystal set with rubies and a pin as brilliant as a waterfall.

For the more practical traveler is this chaise cover which fits into a silk bag and forms a pillow when not in use. It is especially useful in Europe, where an extra light cover is so hard to procure at a moment's notice.

SNOWSHOE AL'S SAD BOOTLEGGER

Introducing Clarence, Who Sighs and Cries

By Snowshoe Al.

YESTERDAY morning I decides that it might be a good idea to have a pint bottle of Liquid Lightning around our shack in case of sickness, unexpected company, expected company, or the blues. Therefore I grabs the telephone and calls a certain number.

"Hello," answers the party.

"Hello," says I; "is this Clarence?"

"No," says the voice. "Clarence ain't here no more. He has went away and left no forwarding address."

"This is Al," says I.

"O, hello, Al," says the voice; "this is Clarence."

"Gallop over here with a pint," says I; "and don't add too much Lake Michigan to it! The last bottle I got from you must have contained at least three spoonfuls of booze. You should have stuck one of those 'Shake Well Before Using' labels on it."

"All right," says he; "what brand do you want?"

"I really hadn't given that any thought," says me.

"Well," says Clarence, "I'll bring eight different labels with me, an' in the meantime you can be making up your mind about it."

THREE IN ONE

A half hour later he rang my doorbell. Clarence is an ornery looking hombre what weighs 285 pounds. He's built like a cross between Strangler Lewis and a ferry boat. He has a complexion like a girl—an Indian girl. I wouldn't exactly call him handsome; in fact, his mug always reminds me of a train wreck. He's one of them bozos what cracks cocoanuts between his teeth and swallows billiard balls to relieve a headache. The city ought to hire him, because he would make three good traffic cops. Or, if they could make him promise not to get too rough, they could always send him out alone to quell a riot. He claims that, aided by the rest of the United States army, he won the war.

"Come right in, Clarence," says I, as he parks his carcass on the davenport in the parlor and hands me the pint I ordered.

"I've got another bottle with me for a customer in this neighborhood," says he, "an' he wants quick delivery on it, so I can't sit here very long."

Then he stared out the window and sighed. Clarence has the most odoriferous sigh what ever perfumed the air in a parlor. He has so much booze on his breath that he can murder a canary bird accidentally, just by standing near its cage and gazing at it. Whenever he enters a room the poor little flies fall off the ceiling and do tailspins to the floor. He's already embalmed, but he don't know it.

MATRIMONIAL BLUES

"What are you sighing about?" asks I. "Don't you feel good?"

"I feel blue," says he; "terribly blue! O, dear; O, dear; O, dear! My wife bawled me out this morning. I don't mind being bawled out by the cops and et cetera, but it just busts me all up to have my dear little wife call me names! I'm too tender hearted, that's the trouble. It just makes me feel blue all day."

"Why did she bawl you out?" asks me.

"Because I socked her in the snoot," says Clarence. "O, dear; O, dear! I feel rotten. I wish I had a drink of Funny Fluid."

He gazed longingly at the bottle which I just bought from him. Well, I begins to feel sorry for the poor simp, so I pulls the cork and slips him the Giggle Grease. He took a gulp that damn near wrecked the pint, so I figured I better get my share right away. Therefore, I did a little gulping myself.

"Yup," says Clarence, "I'm too tender hearted, that's the trouble," and he begun wiping big tears from his eyes; "I'm getting bluer an' bluer!"

"Have another shot," says I, passing the bottle back to him. So we finished the pint, and this dumb bimbo got bluer than ever; in fact, his whole framework shook with suppressed sobs. All at once he grabbed the other bottle and started pulling the cork.

"Hold on, Clarence," says I, "you said that bottle is for your other customer in this neighborhood!"

"Aw, to hell with 'im," sobs Clarence; "when I gets the blues, I gets them bad!"

HEART-RENDING

Me, I'm a sympathetic guy, so within another half hour we was both balancing very unsteadily on the edge of a Blue Breakdown. Then my phone rang. It was my wife.

"Listen, Creature," says her to me, "when I left the house this morning I noticed that there was a bunch of little sparrows looking for food in the alley behind our building. I imagine that it's awfully hard for the poor little things to find any food in this cold weather, so why don't you throw them some crumbs the next time you go outside?"

"Yes, Dear," says I, hanging up. The tears was galloping down my face as I told Clarence what she said.

"Aw, the poor little sparrers!" squawks Clarence, sobbing as if his heart was busted. Ah, at last! At last, here was something worth crying about! We sat on the davenport and wept wildly for a half hour. The more we thought about it, the more we cried.

"Could anybody be so cruel as to forget the hungry little birds?" weeps me, going to the bedroom to find another dry handkerchief. I found the handkerchief and part of a bottle of gin which I had forgotten about.

Well, by the time the gin was gone the grief was becoming so terrible that we couldn't stand it any more, so we crawls into our hats and coats, grabs a loaf of bread from my pantry, and goes outside to do a twin act on the Good Samaritan stuff. We couldn't find any sparrows in our alley, so we walked around the block about six times, but there wasn't a sparrow in sight. All the little customers had disappeared.

HIS NOSE KNOWS

"Let's take a taxi an' go looking for 'em," says Clarence, so we falls into a cab and tells the chauffeur to drive around till he sees some sparrows. The driver gives us a nasty look, sniffs the air a couple times in a suspicious manner, and then says:

"Is youse guys got any money?"

"Certainly," snorts Clarence, "we have dozens of money. Giddap!"

"Well," says the Gasoline Bandit, after a couple minutes of hesitation, "all right. Youse sound to me like a couple Flat Tires, but youse smell like a couple millionaires; in fact, your breath comes highly recommended, so I'll take a chance. Let's go!"

We drove three dollars west and two dollars and seventy-five cents north, but we didn't see one damn sparrow. We stopped several times to ask people if there was any in their neighborhood. They all told us "no," but advised us that there was lots of squirrels, and suggested that we drive fast as hell. At last we sees an old guy with chin whiskers which flopped back and forth against his knees. He looked like Father Time's grandfather.

"Aha," says I to Clarence, "we'll stop an' question this dear old gentleman. He looks like a chiropodist."

BEHIND THE BUSH

"What's a chiropodist?" asks Clarence.

"A chiropodist is a bimbo what has made a study of birds," says I, so we hails the old geezer, and Clarence says to him:

"Listen, Audubon, or King Ben, or Diogenes, or whatever your name happens to be: We are looking for sparrows. Yuh got any around here?"

"How dare you take up my valuable time with such silly questions!" howls the old bozo; "you intoxicated idiots!"

"Your valuable time!" yells Clarence; "why, you poor goat, you ain't done anything for the last ninety years except grow older! Shake your whiskers a few times—I'll catch any rabbits that come this direction."

"$@$@$@$@$@$@$@$!!" says the dear old gentleman. So we drove on, because if there is anything we detest, it's profanity. Well, by this time the blues had left us and we was beginning to feel much more sensible.

"I don't know why we hired this damn cab anyhow," says Clarence, "because I have got my own car parked right in front of your place. We probably was leaning against it when we hailed this driver."

"I," SAID THE SPARROW

So we told the Gasoline Bandit to drive us back to my place. We still had the loaf of bread. Just as we stepped out of the cab we saw the cutest little sparrow sitting about ten feet away, looking right at us! He was the prettiest little thing you ever saw! He had little bright eyes and a cheerful voice. Furthermore, he looked real hungry.

"Well," says Clarence, "look who's here! Aint he cute?"

"He's too cunning for words," says I; "just think, we spent twelve dollars cab fare looking for him an' he was here all the time, the little darling!"

So we slammed the loaf of bread at the dirty little bum and killed him.

HOLLERAN YELL TAKES A FLIER ON FATE

How Do Things Happen to Happen?

By Westbrook Pegler.

I OFTEN hear people say that if a thing is going to happen you cannot stop it from happening, because if you do stop it, why then the chances are that it was not going to happen anyway.

I used to be the proprietor of a pugilist who got to thinking this way and when I would tell him to contract his neck so that his chin would not stick out, he would reply: "No, there is no use contracting my neck because if I am going to get spanked on the screamer, I am going to get spanked on the screamer, and it was all arranged way back in historical times before Noah's ark.

I used to reason with him in a philosophical way, but he stubbornly refused to contract his neck, so every time we would fight some big clumsy bum, he would leave his kisser sticking out in a careless manner and I became stoopshouldered from carrying him back to our corner in a state of unconsciousness.

AN ULTIMATUM

"Well," I would assert when I would get through resuscitating him back to consciousness, "if you had pulled in your neck you would have ducked that one."

"No," he would say, "fate did that and you cannot duck fate."

Well, physical labor is not good for me as I have weak health, so the strain of dragging this big bum back to our corner began to wear me down, and finally I had to issue an ultimatum to him.

"Either you will have to contract your neck," I stated, "or you will have to train off about fifty pounds, as I cannot stand these continual knockouts every time we fight some bum."

"No," he replied, "there is no use of my training off any pounds because fate arranged how much I am going to weigh and you can't change fate around."

"All right, then," I stated, "I will sever our relations.

I'D LIKE TO BE FATE'S MANAGER

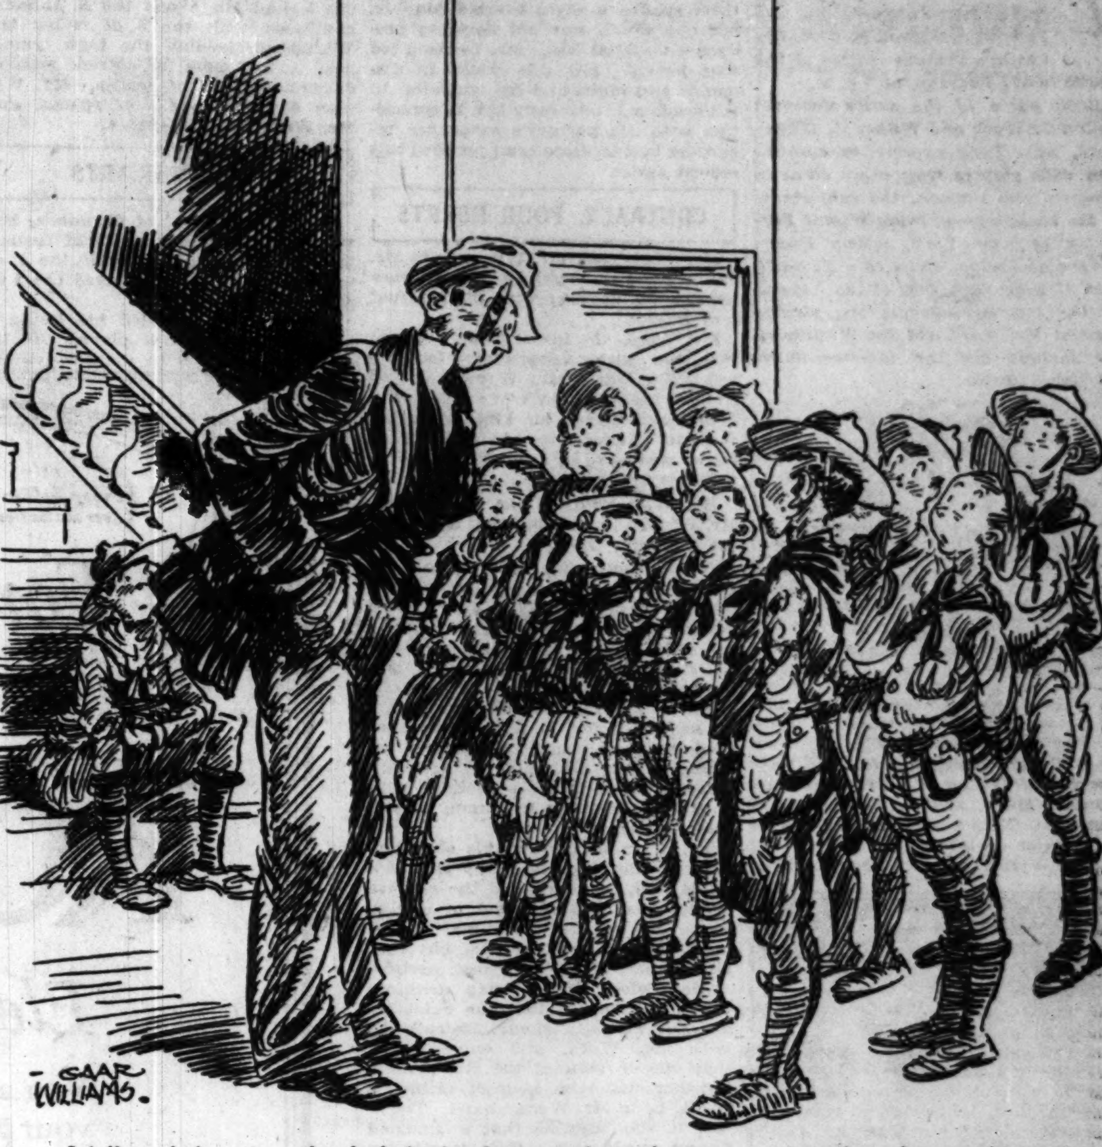
So I sold my bum to a friend for the sum of $200. This was not very much resources to begin life anew on, but you may be sure that I did not sit down and start wringing my head in despair; because it is always my policy to help things happen.

At this time I had a desk in the office of a gentleman who sold bail bonds to an exclusive trade and this office was right across the street from the county courthouse in our town.

Well, the day I got the $200 I was standing by the window of our office thinking of some progressive way to stimulate fate and I just happened to start counting the number of people who came out of the courthouse and turned to the right down Broadway. Then I counted the number of people who turned to the left up Broadway.

My head is full of business schemes, so I started to wager myself a nominal sum of $100,000 on every person that turned to the right down Broadway. It was a very interesting pastime. One minute I would be eight or nine million dollars ahead and the next minute a lot of people would turn to the left and I would be wiped out again.

Finally I became tired of this so I went out to the Dairy Lunch to eat a little collation and while I was passing the courhthouse I saw a troop of boy scouts going in to hold some kind of a meeting in the council chamber. This gave me an idea and I followed them in and asked the head scout where they were going after the meeting.



GAAR WILLIAMS.

I followed them in and asked the head scout where they were going after the meeting.

I HELP THINGS HAPPEN

"Why," he replied, "we are going to leave here at half past three and march down Broadway to Spruce street, where we are going to dedicate a drinking fountain."

It was half past two then. My mind was working with hair breadth speed, so I dashed back to my office and made a proposition to Mr. L'Arceny, the gentleman who owned the bail bond business.

"Mr. L'Arceny," I broached, "what about wagering some funds in a friendly little past time that I invented in one of my thoughtful moods?"

"Why, certainly," he replied, "if you wish to play strictly for cash funds."

"O, yes," I said, "I mean for cash, for I have got the sum of $200 to fritter away."

So I explained the game and laid my $200 on the window sill.

"Now," I stated, "We will play for a dollar a head and we will quit at half past three, as I have an appointment."

"I will wager on the right turn," I said, "and you can wager on the left turn."

So the wagering commenced but the traffic was pretty evenly divided and we merely exchanged our funds back and forth although I had a suspicion that just before half past three there would be a run of traffic to the right toward Spruce street.

Well, my dear sir, at ten minutes after three, I happened to see a man throw a cigaret out of one of the windows in the courthouse and it lit on an awning over the sidewalk, just to the right of the courthouse. Naturally I paid little attention to this but it just goes to show how fate will get careless at times.

"HOLD 'EM, FATE!"

The wagering continued. With only ten minutes to go the courthouse doors flew open and two juries came out guarded by Deputy Sheriffs and turned Mr. L'Arceny's way to go to the hotel for the night. That placed me $30 in the hole, but I was confident of another great rally at the last moment so I did not mind.

A couple minutes later, the doors flew open again and the chief scout came out. "Hooray!" I exclaimed. "Three cheers for the Boy Scouts of America." But just then Mr. L'Arceny grabbed my arm and let out a yell. "Look! Fire!" and when I looked, the ghastly spectacle made by blood curl in my veins because the awning was burning on my side of the entrance and a policeman was shooing the boy scouts back.

While the boy scouts hesitated, the fire engines dashed up and blocked the streets with engines and hosiery and the head scout turned the whole troop to the left and detoured around the block to get down to Spruce street for the fountain dedication, with Mr. L'Arceny counting very excitedly as they marched by.

FATE FORGETS TO DUCK

He counted 139 boy scouts and 31 civilians so quick that his sordidness simply nauseated me, as a purely sporting pastime was being debauched into a commercial business.

Then he said, "That makes it just $200 even and I thank you very much as I consider this a very pleasant pastime, indeed," and with that he picked up my $200 and, just as he said this, the clock in the court house tower struck half past three and the fire chief yelled "fire's out, boys; leave the traffic through."

"Houses That Kill" to Be Demolished

PARIS.—(AP)—"Houses that kill" are slowly being demolished in Paris, but there still remain several score buildings where there are hundreds of bedrooms without ventilation or sun light.

Grouped along the ancient "street of the ovens" are tenements that soon are to be torn down.

There were 5,000 such buildings thirty years ago when the city began collecting reports on each separate house. These were reduced to a few score before the war, but the housing shortage has delayed further action.

W-G-N'S WEEKLY BRIDGE LESSON

THE twelfth of a series of twenty radio auction bridge games will be broadcast from W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, Tuesday, at 9 p. m.

Each game of the series features Milton C. Work and Wilbur C. Whitehead, New York experts, in association with players from other cities in America and Canada, the contestants in the twelfth game being Wynne Ferguson of New York, widely known author on bridge, and Gratz M. Scott, also of New York, one of the keenest of the metropolitan experts, playing against Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead.

Following are the advance hands for game twelve:

Mr. Work.
Spades—K, 9, 5, 3, 2
Hearts—7, 5, 4, 2
Diamonds—6
Clubs—A, 5, 2

Mr. Ferguson.

Hearts—J
Diamonds—A, Q, 8
Clubs—Q, J, 9, 8, 6

Mr. Whitehead, Dealer.
Spades—8, 7, 4
Hearts—K, Q, 10, 8, 6
Diamonds—K, 5, 4, 3
Clubs—3

IN the eleventh of the series of radio bridge games, broadcast last Tuesday from station W-G-N, Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead had for their opponents Walter F. Wyman of Arlington, Mass., and E. E. Denison of Portland, Me., a well known player and writer on bridge.

Mr. Wyman, dealer, south, held:

E. E. DENISON.

Spades, 8, 5, 3; hearts, A, K, 10, 8, 2; diamonds, 6, 5; clubs, J, 10, 9.

Mr. Work, west, held: Spades, Q, 10, 6, 2; hearts, Q, 5; diamonds, K, 9, 8, 4; clubs, K, Q, 6.

Mr. Dennison, north, held: Spades, 9; hearts, 9, 6, 3; diamonds, A, Q, 7, 3, 2; clubs, A, 8, 5, 4.

Mr. Whitehead, east, held: Spades, A, K, J, 7, 4; hearts, J, 7, 4; diamonds, J, 10; clubs, 7, 3, 2.

Mr. Wyman, the dealer, bid one heart, a sound declaration based on his five card heart suit containing two quick tricks. Mr. Work passed.

Mr. [illegible] also passed. Had he been the dealer, or had dealer and second hand passed, Mr. Denison would have bid a diamond. But the same strength that would have permitted him to bid diamonds would also support his partner's easier game going bid of hearts. Had he held but two small hearts Mr. Denison would have denied normal support for hearts by a bid of two diamonds.

AN INDIRECT ASSIST

Mr. Whitehead, of course, bid one spade, as his hand was strong enough even for an initial spade bid.

Mr. Wyman passed, as he had already bid the full strength of his hand. Mr. Work passed. Mr. Denison bid two diamonds. This bid, after his original pass of his partner's heart bid, told his partner three things: First, that he had exactly three hearts; otherwise he would have denied normal support on the first round of bidding. Second, that he held no more than three hearts, otherwise he would have assisted the heart bid on the second round instead of naming diamonds. Third, that he held a sound diamond bid. By this diamond bid Mr. Denison also invited his partner to continue with hearts if his holding warranted his doing so with but three hearts in Mr. Denison's hand. A bid of this kind is called an indirect assist. Mr. Whitehead passed, as he lacked the necessary values for a rebid.

Mr. Wyman read Mr. Denison's bid correctly, but as he held five hearts he returned to that suit, bidding two hearts. Mr. Work went to two spades, a sound assist based upon values held. Mr. Denison bid three hearts. Since he had been assured by his partner as to the heart situation, his side tricks called for strong heart support. Mr. Whitehead passed. Notwithstanding his partner's assist, his holding did not warrant further bidding.

Mr. Wyman passed. Mr. Work bid three spades, a slight overbid possibly, but one which was not liable to produce a material loss. Mr. Denison bid four hearts. His side tricks in diamonds and clubs and his singleton in the spade suit adversely bid, in connection with his partner's assurance regarding hearts, more than justified this second assist.

CONTRACT, FOUR HEARTS

Mr. Whitehead, Mr. Wyman and Mr. Work passed; therefore Mr. Wyman became the declarer with his contract four hearts.

Mr. Work, the initial leader, opened with the queen of spades. Dummy went down and Mr. Wyman played from it the singleton 9 of spades. Mr. Whitehead played his king of spades so as to obtain the lead to lead trumps up to weakness in dummy. Mr. Wyman played the 3.

Mr. Whitehead led the 4 of hearts. Mr. Wyman played the king; Mr. Work the 5; dummy the 3.

Before continuing, Mr. Wyman decided upon his plan of play. A thoughtless or inexperienced player would doubtless have led a spade in order to ruff it in dummy before dummy's two other trumps could be removed. Having ruffed the spade, he would then discover too late that he could not reënter his own hand for the lead of his other spade without returning dummy's last trump. Thus he would be left with a losing spade in his own hand with no trump protection in dummy to prevent its loss.

Mr. Wyman foresaw this situation. Disregarding, therefore, any idea of a spade lead, he considered the relative possibilities of a diamond or a club lead. He recalled that Mr. Whitehead did not rebid spades, but that his partner, Mr. Work, west, assisted spades twice. Mr. Wyman therefore correctly reasoned that the outstanding side strength should logically be with Mr. Work, and consequently that one or both of the club honors together with the king of diamonds should be in Mr. Work's hand. Therefore it was possible that a diamond finesse would win. But an attempt to establish and bring in dummy's diamonds at once would involve the removal of the adverse trumps, and this could not be undertaken because of Mr. Wyman's two losing spades, for which dummy held trump protection.

THE POSSIBILITIES

Considering the club suit, Mr. Wyman saw that if there were a 3-3 split of the outstanding six clubs, he could establish a long club on which to discard one of his two losing spades. As his remaining losing spade could be trumped without embarrassment, this play, if successful, would give him the number of tricks necessary for game, in case the high cards lay as assumed.

Mr. Wyman therefore led the 9 of clubs as the initial step towards the establishment of the club suit. Mr. Work played low, the 6 of clubs, in the hope that his partner held the jack or 10, which could win the trick if dummy's ace were not played. If Mr. Whitehead held neither jack nor 10, then Mr. Wyman must hold them; therefore Mr. Work risked no danger of loss by not playing his queen or king. Dummy ducked with the 4 of clubs; Mr. Whitehead played the 2.

WALTER F. WYMAN.

Mr. Wyman continued with the jack of clubs; Mr. Work covered with the queen; dummy played the ace; Mr. Whitehead the 3. Dummy returned the 5 of clubs; Mr. Whitehead played the 7; declarer the 10; Mr. Work won with the king.

Mr. Work led the queen of hearts, to remove another of dummy's trumps; dummy played the 6; Mr. Whitehead the 7; declarer the ace.

Mr. Wyman next led the 6 of diamonds; Mr. Work played the 4; dummy finessed the queen, and Mr. Whitehead played the 10. Dummy returned the ace of diamonds; Mr. Whitehead played the jack; declarer the 5, and Mr. Work the 8. Dummy continued with the 8 of clubs; Mr. Whitehead, holding the high trump, good at any time for a trick, passed, discarding the 4 of spades. Mr. Wyman discarded the 5 of spades, and Mr. Work the 6 of spades.

GAME IN HEARTS

Dummy led the 2 of diamonds; Mr. Whitehead discarded the 7 of spades; Mr. Wyman trumped with the 2 of hearts, and Mr. Work played the 9 of diamonds.

Mr. Wyman then led his losing 8 of spades; Mr. Work played the 10; dummy trumped with the 9 of hearts; Mr. Whitehead played the jack of spades.

Dummy returned the 8 of diamonds; Mr. Whitehead discarded the ace of spades; Mr. Wyman trumped with the 8 of hearts; Mr. Work played the king of diamonds. The final trick, of course, was won by Mr. Whitehead's jack of hearts.

Mr. Wyman, the declarer, took four tricks, giving him game in hearts. He scored 32 trick points and 30 for three honors.

In commenting on Mr. Wyman's skill, Mr. Work stated that it is the play of hands of this type that is most confusing to the average player, as it requires not only considerable experience but also considerable perspective to determine the correct procdure.

Canadian and U. S. Radio Hams in Annual Tests Soon

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 17.—Radio amateurs of the United States and Canada will participate in the second annual international transmission test next month.

Conducted under auspices of the American Radio Relay league, the test is held to enable communication with radio enthusiasts abroad. It is designed to promote international fellowship and good will and to permit amateurs to try for distance records.

Various prizes are to be awarded for the stations making the best transmission scores. The opening date is Feb. 6, while entries must be in ARRL headquarters by Feb. 1. The test closes Feb. 19.

Paul Kochanski and Chorus on W-G-N Tonight

Paul Kochanski, the Polish violinist, and a chorus of sixteen male voices will present the Atwater Kent hour tonight over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, and twenty-three other stations.

The singers are all members or former members of the well known New York University Glee club who were selected, organized, and directed by Reinald Werrenrath especially for radio broadcasting.

Kochanski began his musical studies early under the guidance of a father who did not believe in sparing the bow and spoiling the violinist. At nine he made his debut in Warsaw, where he studied under Mlynarski and then with Cesar Thomson in Brussels, winning the conservatory's first prize at eighteen.

He began his solo appearances with the principal orchestras in Poland, and probably no young artist has made more recital appearances in various parts of the world. He has been heard many times in the principal capitals of Europe, touring France, England, Germany, Russia, Poland, Spain, Greece, Turkey and Egypt, as well as making annual visits to the United States, Canada, and South America. He first came to America in 1921, at the invitation of Walter Damrosch.

"In the whole field of music there is no literature so poor as that of the violin," commented Kochanski in discussing his radio program. "With the exception of a few fine things of Beethoven, Brahms, Mozart and Bach there is no real music for the violin."

In the program, he maintains, lies the secret of an interesting concert. While he always includes several of the greatest old violin classics, there is a touch of modernity somewhere toward the end. He is planning to introduce many novelties to his American radio audience.

Out of the East Comes Aladdin...

Alfred G. Wathall

TO regale you in this afternoon's Arabian Nights' Entertainment with his enchanted orchestra. You'll hear the weird blending of Oriental flutes as his mysterious caravan winds over the sands. Then you relax as the shadows gather and Aladdin whisks you over the world to the impassioned melodies that resound in the far places . . . to waltz on the banks of the "Blue Danube" . . . to a glorious escape from Winter's drabness in the outdoor grandeur of Herbert's "Al Fresco" . . . and you glimpse the shrouded figures dancing among the tombstones in the ghostly "Dance Macabre"! These are some of the great compositions that Alfred G. Wathall has specially arranged for this topping 4:30 to 6 o'clock musical marvel. Vocal selections by the lyric tenor, Edwin Kemp, will be another highlight of the Arabian Nights' diversion.

Edwin Kemp

The singing notes of a great violin will ride on the ether tonight when Paul Kolchanski, the Polish artist superb, takes up his bow. Lovers of the esthetic in tone will find his performance distinguished by an amazing technical skill combined with an intense artistic ardour. Warsaw and Brussels were his background and the principal cities of all the world have heard his concert recitals. And Agnes Davis, the coloratura soprano who was selected by Atwater Kent as the champion of all amateurs, makes her bow tonight to the radio audience. A rousing chorus of sixteen male voices is also featured in the Atwater Kent hour at 8:15 o'clock.

Young Tommy Coates, whose lyric baritone voice beguiles thousands of radio listeners into romantic reverie, is scheduled to appear in the late evening bill between 10:20 and 11 o'clock. And with his pleasing vocalisms W-G-N presents its unique Salon Concert Orchestra in a group of the popular light classicals.

Paul Kolchanski

Have you heard Quin Ryan in his sports reviews? Each week now he reproduces one of the outstanding sport events of 1927, and he does it with a gusto and a vividness that make the contest seem no less than real. The amazing thing about it is the way the inimitable Quin warms up and forgets it's make-believe as he revives the excitement of the past season. You'll catch his enthusiasm this afternoon when you tune in between 4 and 4:30 o'clock.

A zip and a zest go into the Sunday program when Correll and Gosden burst into song at 7:30. But these two magnetic boys do not stop at singing. They whistle the plaintive, yearning notes of the "Indian Love Call." And they hum it like—like—like—well, like it should be hummed! Then the harmony kings of W-G-N cast off the serious mantle and lead you into laughland with their tuneful tinkering and footlight chatter. And do you like wisecracks? Gosden has a whale of an anecdote about two—but let Gos tell it . . . tonight!

Agnes Davis

The genius of Edward McDowell is the theme for the "Our Music Room" concert tonight between 9:15 and 10 o'clock. This American composer's etchings of the great rolling plains, mighty forests, and vast and lonely retreats will be re-created by the Drake Concert ensemble together with Edwin Kemp's rendition of the better known of McDowell's songs. Here, indeed, is a rare treat for music-lovers!

For a tasty dessert to your dinner today W-G-N offers a Hawaiian dish redolent with the spicy aroma of the South Seas. The quivering tones of Henry Dixon's Hawaiian Trio will hula from your radio horn between 1:30 and 2 o'clock. That burst of insular melody, "Waikiki," presages a brilliant repertoire of Hawaiian and popular medleys harmonized on the steel guitars and ukulele.

An exceptional day in music closes with an hour's popular program from WLIB that's alive with novelties. There will be such stellar performers as Leon Lichtenfeld of the black mustache and his moaning cello; Herbert Johnson, whose nimble fingers flick the ivories into furies, and Armand Buisseret, a young man who does strange things with saxophone!

There are the other features, too! Lawrence and Frank Salerno (the voice and the accordion!) . . . "Sam 'n' Henry" . . . "Auld Sandy" . . . The Million—but read the details!

Captain Frederick C. Mensing

A half hour of unusual music is promised at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon when Captain Frederick C. Mensing plucks his famous harp-zither. It is a quaint instrument, not at all like the ordinary concert zither, and it has been around the world and in the salons of royalty many times. Also in this period appears Joseph Zisman and his cosmopolitan String Trio. Here is a savory entree in today's radio menu!

TO SING FRIDAY

MME. MARIA JERITZA.
[Elzin Photo.]

JOHN McCORMACK.
[Russell Ball Photo.]

The promise of radio to present during the coming year the best programs ever broadcast will be partially fulfilled next Friday, when Mme. Maria Jeritza, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, and John McCormack, world famous tenor, will be heard on N. B. C.'s blue chain at 9 o'clock central time.

Interest in Mme. Jeritza's numbers centers in two selections from Bizet's "Carmen," an opera in which she makes her first American appearance only a few days before she goes on the air. In addition she will sing two other operatic arias, one from "Le Cid," by Massenet, and the other, "Voi Lo Sapete," from the ever popular "Cavalleria Rusticana."

Mr. McCormack is hurrying back to this country from his estate in Ireland in order to sing on this program. His selections will include a group of songs for children, three of the Irish folk songs which he has made so famous, and a group of favorites, among which is "Dear Old Pal of Mine."

Inside the Loud Speaker

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer

PROBABLY the listening public isn't entirely familiar as yet with the many terms employed in the radio racket. The radio has added a flock of news words and new meanings to old words, and it's only right that some of them should be set down here, on this Sabbath morn. So here's a glossary, or what do you call it:

RADIO—The cacophonic chautauqua.

ANNOUNCER—A Rubber wing-collar out for an endurance record of flagpole sitting.

STATIC—A measured compound of rats and wails and puppy dogs' tails, a charivari, New Year's eve, your mother-in-law and a barefooted cavalry charge.

BEDTIME STORY HOUR—An interval that gives mother a little time of leisure—to wash the dishes in.

TENOR—"Mother Machree," with a falsetto finish.

SOPRANO—See static.

BASSO—"Give a Man a Horse He Can Ride."

BARITONE—"Give a Man a Horse He Can Ride on the Road to Mandalay."

JAZZ—"My [Vo-dee-o-doh]—Blue [Vo-dee-o-doh]—Heaven!"

DIAL—An easy way to walk out on a sermon.

STAND BY—An old stand by.

SPEECHES—Just like speeches in the flesh, only more so.

LOUD SPEAKER—See wife.

SET—To sit.

MIKE—The only guy who has to listen to more hooey than a hotel telephone operator.

LISTENERS COMMENTS — See awful, terrible, punk, junk, drunk and codfish.

SIGNING OFF—A gesture of the announcer when he has a late date.

AMPLIFIERS—Potatoes, butter and malted milk.

CONDENSER—A street car in the rush hour.

QUARTET—Four men who sing as though they were having their pictures taken.

DID YOU ever stop to consider great moments in recent and ancient history when the radio might have been employed to greatest effect?

Think, for instance, of how universally and unanimously the public would have hung on its radio horns if broadcasting had been in vogue on the day the first draft numbers for the world war were made known. Or the armistice tidings ending the war.

Remember Presidential election nights of yore in Chicago, when gigantic searchlights played across the sky to announce the winning candidate. The newspapers announced that the beam would be red if Wilson won, green if Roosevelt won and white if Taft were the victor, in 1916—wasn't it? And we stood on street corners or craned our necks from the front porches to spy the waving searchlights, or swarmed downtown to see the returns flashed on movie screens around THE TRIBUNE building at Madison and Dearborn streets, blocking all traffic for the evening.

WHEN FUNNIER songs are written, Americans will write 'em. Everybody in America has become an amateur song writer, and everybody sends his songs to the radio stations. This month's prize of a worsted inkwell for the most unforgettable ditty presented, goes to M. Lena Beattie of Glade Spring, Va., the composer, librettist, author, and publisher of "After the Drive:"

FIRST VERSE.

A broken-hearted maiden sat on the porch with me,
Told me her story amid the gentle breeze.
"Why are you sad, dear? Why seem alone?
Have you no sweetheart? Is that why you moan?"
"I had a sweetheart a few days ago;
Where he is now, dear, never shall I know.
List to my story; to tell you I'll strive.
I believed him faithful 'til after the drive.

CHORUS.

After the drive was over, when the stars began to shine;
After my love had vanished and he is no longer mine,
My poor heart was aching—the story I can't revive—
I'll tell you some other time, dear, but not right after the drive.

SECOND VERSE.

Long years will pass, dear, but I shall never wed,
True to my lost love! O, that I were dead!
He tried to tell me, tried to explain!
I would not listen, pleadings were in vain.
Some day a letter may come from that girl,
She will say, "We are married"—it makes my head whirl!
That's why I'm lonely and just alive,
For my heart was broken after the drive.

(INTO THE CHORUS AGAIN.)

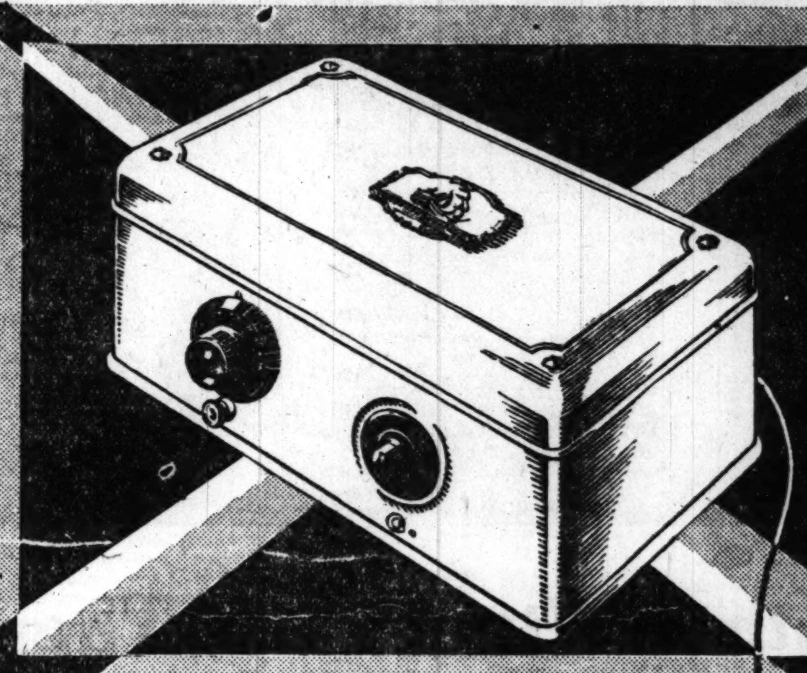
THE new! ATWATER KENT A·C·set RADIO



IT'S NEW! New in appearance, new in engineering, new in ease of operating!

New in appearance.

With its exquisite color combinations, and with the soft sheen of its satin surface—a finish like the richest and loveliest fabrics.

New in engineering!

Look inside. See how ingeniously Atwater Kent engineers have developed a self-contained A. C. Receiver. A powerful, full-voiced, six-tube set, but simple, small, convenient—everything condensed in a shielded cabinet, only 7⅛ inches high, with no waste space.

Listen. You know real tone when you hear it. Here it is, without disturbing power noises, with its superiority assured by the shielded cabinet and the doubly shielded built-in power supply. This little shielded case, just back of the tubes, is no larger than a jewel case. Yet it takes the place of all the old-style batteries and charger.

Here is accuracy—assured by the precise manufacturing and testing methods of the Atwater Kent factory, where every Model 37 has to pass 222 tests and inspections before it is permitted to leave. Here is durability—assured by these tests, by the material of which every part is made and by the protection of every part against deterioration. Here's a lifetime of enjoyment for you in the new A. C. set.

Here are many features which cannot be copied without infringing on Atwater Kent patents, including innovations which make the single dial control so marvelously efficient.

New in ease of operating!

When you bring in a station with the Atwater Kent ONE Dial you will readily appreciate its advantages—it is a full-vision dial, you see it all at a glance. A touch of the fingers selects the station you want without fumbling or delay. This speed and ease in selecting stations is due to this full-vision dial—one of the features of Atwater Kent Receiving Sets.

Model 37 The astonishing price of the new, six-tube, full-vision ONE Dial, self-contained A. C. set includes everything except tubes and a speaker. No power accessories required—no batteries, no charger. For use only with 110-115 volt, 60-cycle, Alternating Current. Uses six A. C. tubes, and one rectifying tube.

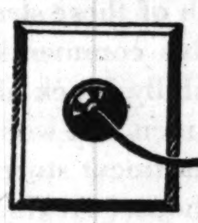
without tubes



Beside the dial is the volume control. Try that, too, and see how easy it is to change from soft music to loud and back again—as you like.

And here is the price—$88! (without tubes).

If you are not already familiar with the Atwater Kent price policy, this may help you to understand that figure—$88!

We never make anything to sell at a certain price. We make it as well as it can be made and then let the cost determine the price. The price of the Atwater Kent 37 is low because many people buy it and because the demand has enabled us to put into effect the economies of very large production. If only a few people wanted our sets, they would be expensive. That's the whole story.

In the Model 37 we offer a really extraordinary A. C. set—a perfected set—a set that will please you in every way.

When you try this set—and raise the lid to see how it's made—at an Atwater Kent dealer's, forget the price until you are satisfied on every other point. Then you'll know the price represents the greatest value we have ever offered.

SIGN UP FOR SAFETY.

SCHOOL

Chicago's board of education is enrolling practically all the city's school children in a safety league to help cut down the number of traffic accidents. The camera shows the pupils at Holy Name Cathedral school enrolling. Seated are Kenneth Herlihy, Anna Furey, Annabelle LaRue, and Sam Nester. The children standing are Mathew Joyce, Eugene Burns, Harry Van De North, James Lavelle, Bernice Grosch, Margaret Conlon, and Rosemary McManmon. The Rev. Father John Kozlowski and two of the nuns who teach in the school are directing the work.

STORIES of GIRLS

Sportsmanship for Two

THE train had been on its way about ten minutes when the big parade began.

Infants started squealing for sparklers. The pungent odor of oranges permeated the atmosphere; potato chips snapped around. An occasional man, his shirt sleeves held up by bright elastics, patiently waddled to the icy water tank to take a drink up the aisle to the baby.

None of this was noticed by Mildred. She sat next to the window. Through tear blurred eyes she was watching the flying landscape. Her throat ached. She was wondering what the world was all about anyway.

Her mother sat silently beside her, gazing into space. In the last seat of this same car sat Mildred's father.

This was the last ride home together for these three. Never in the world would they meet again so closely.

They had come to the city to see about a divorce. Mildred's mother had brought her along "for company" and because she felt Mildred was "old enough to understand some things."

Already Mildred understood much more than they did. She had been a spectator for many years.

Her first remembrance of her father and mother concerned two people behind closed doors, her mother crying and her father reasoning with her. Many a night across the supper table the two had glared at each other, while the children watched and felt uncomfortable.

In the end it had come to this—the consultation for the divorce.

The lawyer claimed divorce was impossible. The man and the woman were both wrong, both right. They simply didn't get along; that was all.

So Mildred's father decided to hire a mean little room somewhere. His business was in the city; so he must live there.

Mildred's mother must stay there also, because they owned the house.

Now she was exhausted and upset. When the home station was reached she and Mildred got off the front end of the car. The father got off at the rear.

He looked down at the two fading out of his life. When Mildred turned he waved good-by.

His poor, human farewell stirred his daughter as nothing else in the world could do. That moment she hated her mother. It was the woman's job to be a "good sport" in marriage if there were children. Besides, dad hadn't done anything wrong.

So in deep revolt she walked home beside her mother.

Her mother did not come to supper. Mildred bravely told the children dad was staying with friends till mother got more reasonable. At that lie dad's canary began to sing in its cage.

Mildred thought of her father in a dingy room getting ready to go to some restaurant and get a rather inferior supper—with oleomargarine, perhaps.

She left the table abruptly. She went upstairs and packed her clothes. The other children could run away to him or stay where they were. She was going.

Into her music case she tucked half a dozen "brownies," because dad loved them. As she passed the living room she decided to take her music along. For dad had spent a lot of money on her lessons. And probably his landlady would have a piano; even if it were tin-panny would not matter.

When she took the études off the rack she faced something entitled "Wedding March (Lohengrin)."

For the first time in her life Mildred felt cynical.

"Yes," she thought.

BARGAINS!

Afforded Many Laughs.

I have always had a great weakness for bargains. During the Christmas holidays about fifteen years ago I journeyed from the extreme south side to the far west side to buy my food supplies. Often at this store the management would offer dates or figs at 10 cents a package or three for a quarter. This particular day when I asked the price of dates, the saleswoman said, "Eight cents a package."

I was looking for a bargain so I asked if she would sell them three for a quarter. Se said "No."

I decided not to buy any so she asked me to wait a minute and she would ask the manager if she could sell them three for a quarter. The manager agreed. I bought six packages, and filled with the success of my ability to get a bargain, purchased a great many more things in the store.

Everything would have been all right but on the way home I kept talking about it to my little daughter who had just started to school. Suddenly the child said, "Why, mother, three times eight is only twenty-four and you paid twenty-five."

Am I sore? I should say not! I have had a laugh at least twenty times a year for the last fifteen years over my greatest bargain. A. A. M.

Canadian Money.

I was returning from a trip to Canada and the train being late, I decided to have dinner on it, instead of waiting until I got into Chicago.

They had a special chicken dinner at $1.50 which I ordered, consumed and thoroughly enjoyed.

When the waiter placed the check beside my plate, I covered it with two Canadian bills. He asked me if I had no American money, to which I replied that I had not as I had had no time in which to get my money changed. He then called the head steward, who came and started to get abusive, saying I knew Canadian money wasn't legal tender here. I stood it for a while and then said, "Look here, you're the first man that has refused Canadian money since we left the border, there is more than enough in that two dollars to cover the cost of the dinner and any exchange there might be and I haven't any American money. What are you going to do about it?"

"Give you the dinner, I suppose," he replied, and walked away.

And the joke was that several people who had overheard the controversy, told me afterward that they would have exchanged all my Canadian money at par! L. J. T.

Another Winner in "The Battle of the Neighborhoods"—

Milwaukee, Ashland, Paulina and Division

ONE of Chicago's main business centers—that's Milwaukee, Ashland, Paulina and Division. This is the point to which shoppers for miles around come to buy.

Business is good on each of these streets. But Milwaukee Avenue shows the most extensive commercial development. Here the stores line the street solidly block after block. Furniture stores and clothing shops for men and women predominate. But there are also three large department stores, two five and ten cent stores and scores of smaller shops. At this center all the varied needs of the vast neighborhood can be filled.

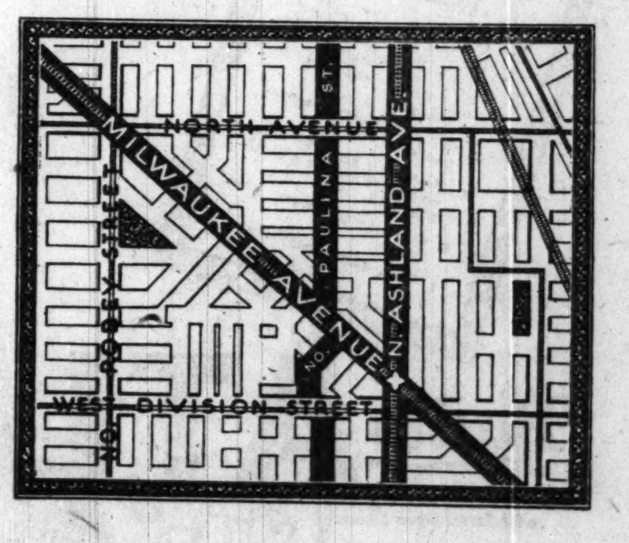
One of the Biggest . . . . .

As Chicago's great northwest side has grown, Milwaukee Avenue has prospered. Stores have been improved, business property along the street has risen to an average rental of $650 a month. Two large banks have come and their buildings are as modern and impressive as any in the city. Today this center serves a vast area that contains over 115,000 families. The buying habits of most of these people have been formed. The merchants of Milwaukee, Ashland, Paulina and Division have convinced them that it pays to trade in their neighborhood.

Change . . . Constant Change

Milwaukee, Ashland, Paulina and Division has won success in "the battle of the neighborhoods." Other centers have also triumphed. Still others have not been able to stand the pace of competition and have settled back into commercial oblivion.

Every year sees some change in Chicago's retail centers. What's the reason? Why do some neighborhoods rise to the peak of prosperity and others show the empty store fronts that mean business stagnation?



There's Only One Answer . .

Business is not for the timid. Prosperity comes to those merchants who want it enough to fight for it. Business is good. Buying power is high. But to get your share of the public's dollar you must go after it. If you don't, some one else will!

Three Fundamentals . . . .

Modern merchandising—modern selling—modern advertising are today necessary for success. The first two are problems for the individual merchant. But in advertising, a new, all-powerful ally has come into the field.

This is The Sunday Tribune Metropolitan Section. The Tribune has divided its vast circulation in Chicago and suburbs into three parts—one for each side of the city. Think what this means! A neighborhood merchant can broadcast his sales message to 250,000 families, all of whom can shop conveniently at his store.

The Tribune is noted for the solid successes it has built up for scores of manufacturers and retailers in many varied lines of business.

Now you have a chance to talk to the same responsive audience. And you can pick out only those who will benefit you. You pay only for the readers in your own section of the city—about a third of the cost for full Sunday Tribune circulation!

Act Immediately! . . . . .

Ask a Tribune man to drop in and tell you why The Sunday Tribune Metropolitan Section is the logical, economical solution to your sales problem. Phone Superior 0100—NOW!

Chicago Tribune
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER.

METROPOLITAN SECTION

The Chicago Tribune publishes as a part of its regular Sunday issue a Metropolitan Section, the circulation of which is divided so that local neighborhood merchants may advertise in any one or more of the three sides of Chicago and suburbs as follows:

North and Uptown Section—West and Northwest Section—South and Southwest Section

"O, very well. But I smashed your mudguard."

"Don't worry about that. It's nothing. But you'll let me pay for the damage I have——"

"Certainly not! Never mention a thing like that or I'll surely lose my temper."

"You insist?"

"Absolutely."

"Well, good luck to you, my friend."

"Same to you. I hope we meet again."—Life.

IN PEACE AND IN WAR.

IT would hardly be fair to print just the one photograph of Mrs. Anna L. Sheridan, policewoman, in action, for despite her thirteen years of contact with the cruelest phases of life, she is first of all a mother and home woman. Also, she is a lawyer. She took her master's degree at De Paul university in 1925 and received the highest marks ever given a student at that institution. But her fame, we fear, has mostly to do with the fact that she is the champion pistol shot of the police department. Winner of five gold medals, Mrs. Sheridan in 1922 defeated 130 policemen of the Shakespeare avenue police station, where she is assigned. "But," she says, "it is guiding young lives aright rather than reformation that brings the greatest satisfaction in living."

Scotland's Haunted Castle Above Bay Is Demolished

ABERDEEN, Scotland.—(AP)—Slains castle, lashed at its base for centuries by roaring waves which in their time have kept such notables as Samuel Johnson awake all night, is being demolished.

It became too old and spooky for any earthly use. The last items of furniture, oak beams, and the like were sold at auction some time ago.

For centuries Slains castle, built sheer on the cliffs jutting above Cruden bay, was the seat of the Earls of Erroll, lord high constables of Scotland. In 1916 the estate was sold to Sir John Ellerman, ship owner, who disposed of it in 1923 because of what he considered exorbitant taxation, and it has been empty ever since.

The last tenants were Lord and Lady Oxford, several summers ago, and it was there that Lady Violet Bonham-Carter, then Miss Violet Asquith, had an exciting adventure when she became lost among the crags in a heavy mist.

Residents in the neighborhood for years have never gone near the old castle at night, especially in winter, because of the eery sounds emanating from the structure as the North sea winds whistled through the floorings of its numerous ghostly chambers.

Dr. Johnson and Boswell were regally entertained at the castle on their tour of Scotland in 1773 and Johnson greatly admired its noble site, but the famous writer and lexicographer complained bitterly that he did not sleep a wink at night because of the dreary pounding of the waves below his bedroom window.

Shell Fish Play Role of Pied Piper in War on Rats

DONEGAL, Ireland.—(AP)—If the Pied Piper of Hamelin could only come to Donegal! He'd make a good war correspondent in the battle raging here between the limpets and the rats.

Thus far the limpets have had by far the better of it, thousands of rats having fallen in the unequal struggle, to the great joy of all Donegalities.

A limpet, for the benefit of those who have not taken a degree in zoölogy, is a small, edible shellfish which sticks close to a rock.

The armies of rats which infest the islands on the northwest coasts off Donegal have been adventuring to the waterside in quest of food.

When the tide recedes, the rats insert their noses between the partly raised shell of the limpet, hoping to make a meal off the edible fish. But the limpet is a wist bird—or fish. Exceedingly sensitive to the slightest touch, he—she, or it—instantly closes on its prey with a vicelike grip.

The rat is held tight. He stays put until the relentless encroachment of rising waters claims him.

"YES, THOSE WERE THE DAYS."

THE days are just as busy as they ever were for Hiram Harmon in his barber shop at Madison street and Sacramento boulevard. Conversation and the style of haircuts have changed in forty years, that's all. Used to be that all Hiram's customers talked about was the races at the old Garfield Park track. He still reminisces with some of the old-timers about the horses, but, being only 75 years old, he understands the lingo of the flaming youth trade, too. During the forty years that he's conducted business in the same block, Hiram has watched the various stages through which whiskers have passed until their almost total extinction.

A Friendly Atmosphere.

New Year's afternoon I was alone in Chicago, 300 miles from home. I went into a café and ordered their special New Year's turkey dinner. A good looking, pleasant voiced young woman waited on me — brought a well rounded, well cooked dinner with all the trimmings, in just the right quantities, and came back to my table several times to see that I lacked for nothing.

It was delicious and I cleaned the plates. Before I was through she came again to see if I wanted anything else; asked me how I enjoyed the dinner, and when I had told her, she noted my empty plates and remarked, "I always like to have a customer who eats things clean, because I know he has appreciated his meal. I think it's the best compliment a diner can pay to his dinner." She then left, wishing me a happy New Year. Needless to say, when I left there was a good tip beside my plate.

I stepped up to the desk to pay my bill. The manager in a neighborly manner, inquired how I liked the dinner; was pleased to know I did like it; wished me a happy New Year and invited me to call again. Take it all around, this was so different from the ordinary Chicago eating house attitude of "Here's your grub; take it or leave it, but hurry up and eat it and on your way," that when I'm in the city again (and I have been making it pretty regularly for the last twenty-five years) I'm going back to that place to eat.

Courtesy Appreciated.

During the February sale of wool remnants at one of the largest department stores in the city, I went to purchase some material before going to the office. I had but a few minutes in which to shop and having selected a piece of charmeen which, under the electric light seemed perfect, an elderly salesman made out the purchase slip.

As he folded the material, he inspected it closely. Then he went back to to the counter and found another piece of charmeen and taking both pieces to the window we compared them in the daylight. The piece I had selected was raveled at the edges and had the dull, shop worn color. The piece the salesman selected was an excellent piece of material and the exact shade of the color I wanted.

The average salesman at a remnant counter is indifferent to what he sells and glad to be rid of an imperfect piece of material, such as I had selected. I appreciated this man's interest in pleasing a customer and at every opportunity tell others of his courtesy.

Pleasing a Fat Man.

I had a few hours to spend between trains, so, looking in one of the loop stores I discovered a golf sweater I admired greatly. Rushing in, I decided to purchase it. As I am a fat man I could not be fitted, but the floor walker and clerk, noticing my disappointment, took my name and address and a week later sent me the size sweater I wanted, C. O. D.

I had taken up a lot of their time as they had even tried to get my size at their warehouse. I've been a steady customer since.

Fighter Gets More Space Than Cardinal

PARIS.—(AP)—Paris is awakening to the importance of boxers.

When Archbishop Rouleau of Quebec arrived recently on his way to Rome to get his cardinal's hat one of his fellow passengers was Kid Francis, who was reported by the French newspapers as having come here "for a little repose" before his next fight.

The Kid got first position in the stories of prominent arrivals, while the archbishop "also arrived."

A few of the more dignified journals put the prelate up at the top, but even they gave the fighter three times the space they devoted to the churchman.

London Subway Trains Run Without Help from Humans

LONDON.—(AP)—London now has an all mechanical subway, in which neither engineers, conductors, nor brakemen appear.

The trains run bewteen the eastern district post office and the Paddington station, and carry only mail.

The subway has been in course of construction since 1913, is six miles long, 80 feet underneath the ground, and cost $7,500,000.

The trains are controlled by operators above ground, who follow the course of the trains by diagrams on which lights give them the position of the engines. Forty-five tons of mail can be carried an hour in each direction, at a speed of 35 miles an hour. The new subway is expected to save the post office $200,000 a year.

During the war work was discontinued on the subway, and the tunnel was used for storing of the most valuable of British museum exhibits.

Paris Sets 25 Miles as Dangerous Speed

PARIS.—(AP)—Twenty-five miles an hour has been fixed as a sort of arbitrary "dangerous" automobile speed in downtown Paris. There is no legal limit, for the driver of a car is responsible for his acts at all speeds.

The police, nevertheless, have decided that a common sense standard must be used so traffic officers can exercise control.

This limit is to be enforced only where there are cross streets. On the avenues a car may go as fast as traffic conditions and safety permit.

CLOSING IN ON FRENCH ANARCHISTS

"Vile Melville" of the Scotland Yard Effects Two Spectacular Captures

Walking Into The Trap Set By the Detective

By George Dilnot.

(William Melville sets out to capture two notorious French anarchists and a woman, all suspected of complicity in a Paris bombing. He plans to storm the house occupied by Francois and his wife. Concluded from last Sunday.)

THIS desperate venture in cold blood did not, as events turned out, prove to be necessary. On the very night selected for the arrest the oil for the lamp which was the solitary illumination of the room gave out. The man and woman peered into the street. It was as quiet as death. There was not a soul to be seen. François determined there was nothing to fear. He stole silently out and was quietly shadowed to a small general shop by one detective while another maintained the vigil on the house.

This was a few minutes before the time that had been fixed for the raid, and Melville himself was taking a few hours' rest. He came ere François had returned from his mission and instantly followed up the opportunity.

As the anarchist emerged from the shop detectives flung themselves upon him and a fierce struggle began. With dynamic fury, and mouthing strange French oaths, François wrested himself free and drew his revolver. Melville knocked it up just in time and it exploded harmlessly.

Again the beset man fired with deadly purpose, and this time the bullet whistled among the detectives. Someone twisted the weapon from his hand and in a twisted, snarling heap they struggled on the ground till numbers told and a pair of handcuffs were forced upon his wrists.

A TRAPPED BEAST

Overcome, but still defiant, like a trapped beast, he was escorted to the nearest police station. Melville was not among those who accompanied him. The inspector—for he had not yet become a superintendent—still had work to do. There was Madame François to deal with.

Back, accompanied by a single colleague, he went to the house where she was waiting. It was in his mind that she would be expecting the return of her husband and that so there was a chance of taking her by surprise.

Only the footsteps of a single man sounded on the stairs as they crept up to the apartment in which she was waiting. Madame heard a tap at the bolted door and a guarded voice calling to her in French to open. For once thrown off her guard, she stole to obey.

In the gloom she had no opportunity of recognizing the intruders before their grip was upon her. Even then, with the arms of the burly Melville encircling her, she managed to pull herself within reach of the table and seize the pistol and dagger. It was no time for mistaken chivalry. Before she could do any damage she was thrown to the ground and the weapons taken from her. Then she was held while she was securely manacled.

DEPORTED, DISGUSTED

This part of the story may well end here. Both François and his wife were extradited to France—to the consternation of others of their kidney who had come to look upon England as a safe sanctuary for murderers. François was chiefly disgusted because he had been afforded no chance of "immortalizing" himself by some act of assassination.

For some reason they escaped the scaffold, and instead were sent to penal servitude for life. But that did not concern Melville. His part of the business had finished when he arrested them and handed them over to the French police.

There remained Meunier. He was a less slap-dash type of villian than François, but he had a greater fund of cunning, and he covered his trail with considerable cleverness. As soon as one retreat had been discovered he would bolt to another. He was as suspicious and elusive as a fox and he had a resourceful capacity of disguise.

Patiently, unhurriedly, Melville kept him on the move. Time was on his side. He had a photograph of his quarry always before him on his desk and he knew that one day they would meet.

SHADOWED

Time came when Meunier ran short of funds. He was then living under an assumed name in rooms at Camberwell and his landlady was troublesome about the rent. So he took a chance and made his way to a notorious anarchist club in Soho to attempt to borrow money from some of his revolutionary friends. Naturally this move was not long in filtering through devious channels to the ears of Melville.

Meunier did not find it easy to raise funds. However, he managed to coax sufficient to carry on for the moment. But the menacing shadow of Melville was ever drawing nearer. England was no longer a safe place for a red handed murderer, as the fate of François had proved, and he decided that after all he might be more secure on the continent, where there were not so many pertinacious detectives of Melville's character.

THE HUNCHBACK

Easy though it had been to get into England, Meunier felt it would be more difficult to get out. Although he had eluded Melville for so long, he had not shaken him off. He knew the detectives had his photograph and a description. The hunted man made himself up as a hunchback, and, confident that he had assumed an impenetrable disguise, resolved to make a dash for the boat train at Victoria station.

Now it may be taken as certain that there were few continental boat trains at that time at which Melville or some of his staff did not take a glance. It was unlucky for Meunier that at the particular hour he had selected Melville himself should be at Victoria by the merest chance. He was, in fact, escorting his wife to a theater.

The detective caught a glimpse at the face of a well dressed hunchback at the ticket office and with a quick word of explanation to Mrs. Melville slipped after him.

"As I drew nearer and nearer," he said, "doubts increased as to whether he really was Meunier. But he headed for the continental departure platform, and that circumstance, flimsy as it was, renewed the confidence of my first impression."

The detective saw the other take his seat in the corner of a first class compartment. One final glance and he was sure.

Now, he knew Meunier was armed, and that he would not hesitate to use his weapon. Melville had left his pistol at home. He did not even carry a walking stick. To enter the small apartment in an endeavor to make the arrest would give Meunier such an advantage as to make the attempt almost suicidal. He would have to be lured into the open.

Melville walked nonchalantly on and summoned a railway official.

THE CLASH

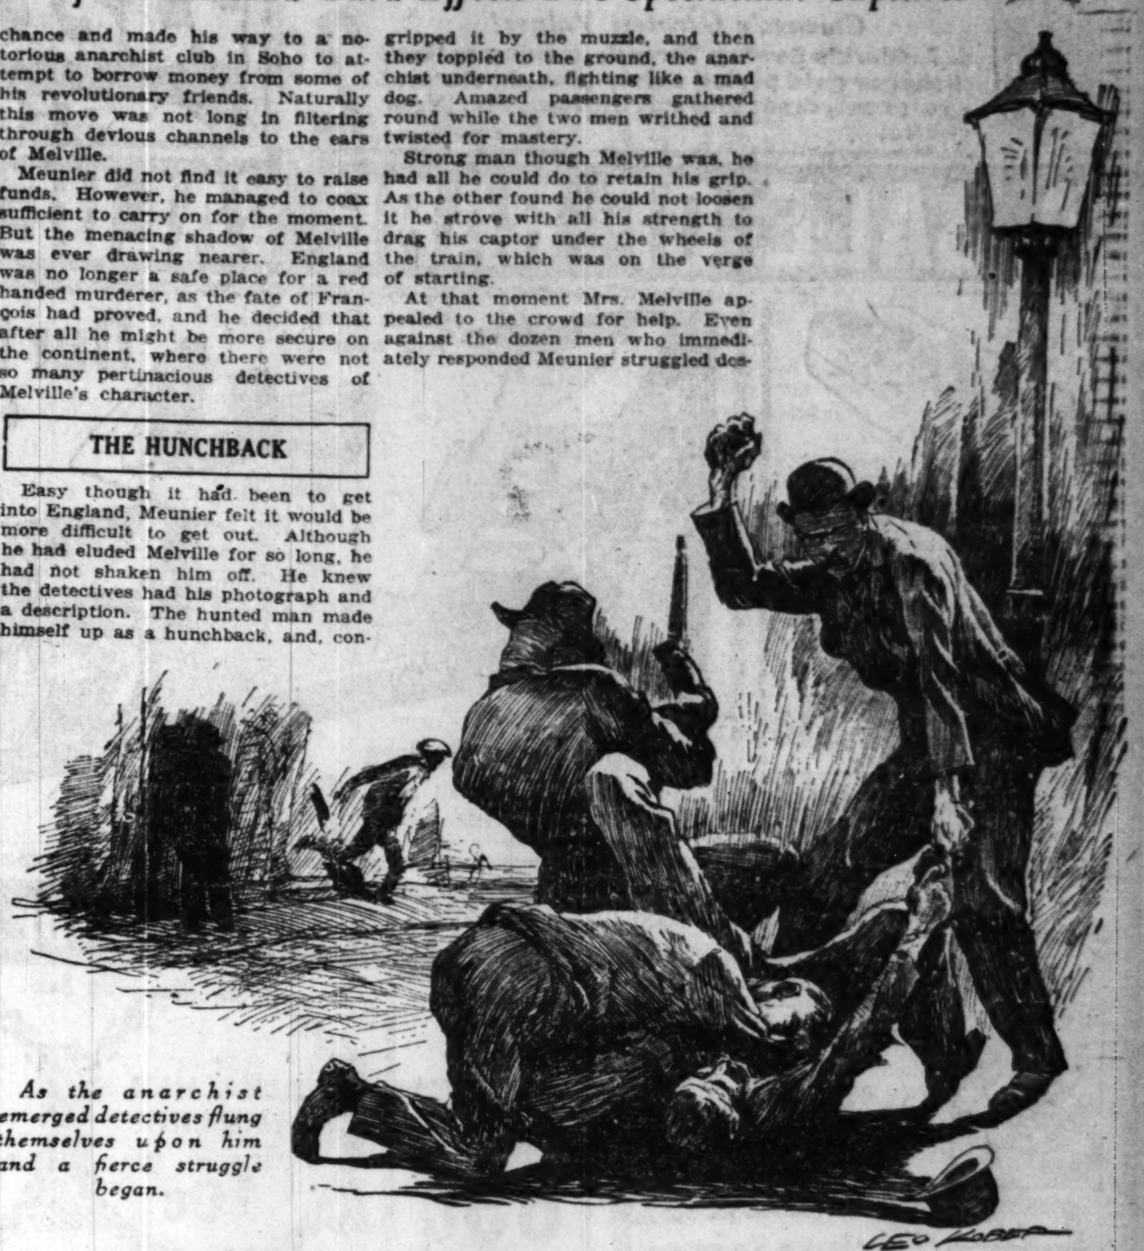
"I am a police officer," he explained. "There is a hunchback in the fifth carriage from the engine. I want to get him out of the train without arousing his suspicions. Will you inspect his ticket and tell him he is on the wrong train?"

The ruse worked. Meunier, a little concerned at the mistake he had made, sprung hurriedly for the platform. As he emerged the detective leaped at him.

With a swift movement the anarchist drew a pistol, but Melville gripped it by the muzzle, and then they toppled to the ground, the anarchist underneath, fighting like a mad dog. Amazed passengers gathered round while the two men writhed and twisted for mastery.

Strong man though Melville was, he had all he could do to retain his grip. As the other found he could not loosen it he strove with all his strength to drag his captor under the wheels of the train, which was on the verge of starting.

At that moment Mrs. Melville appealed to the crowd for help. Even against the dozen men who immediately responded Meunier struggled desperately. He was overpowered, and Melville got him to a cab.



As the anarchist emerged detectives flung themselves upon him and a fierce struggle began.

The detective seated himself opposite his prisoner and placed one hand on his knee.

"Look here, Meunier," he said. "We have had our fight and you have lost. Suppose you make the best of it, now."

"Who are you?" asked the other.

"I'm Melville," said the detective.

"The mere mention of the name," said Melville, telling of the arrest, "whirled him into a passion which made his assume a more fiendish look than anything I had ever pictured possible. His hideous stare, livid complexion, and the tightly drawn muscles of his face gave him a look of startling ferocity. Beneath his clenched teeth he muttered imprecation of singular power and fluency; and then in tones of deep mortification he added:

HIS SORRY FATE

"'What a sorry fate, to be sure! I had a haunting suspicion I should fall into your net. I hated that thought more than anything else, because I loathed you for your past successes against my friends. To prevent the possibility of falling into your clutches, I had you pointed out to me just after I came to England, and I felt sure that I should know you anywhere. I had your photograph. I knew the clothes you wore.

"'Furthermore, I carried a pistol, so that in the event of an attempt to take me I might end your career and the life of everyone else within shooting distance who tried to interfere. When I saw you in the station, I only half realized who you were. If you had come into the carriage I should have killed you for certain. Think of it—after all my measures of precaution here I am like a common felon, taken as though I were the tamest of tame criminals!'

"He was genuinely despondent—not because he was captured, but because he had not murdered a dozen or more people in the process! He afterwards became more resigned, and took me into his confidence concerning the many diabolical deeds he had committed. He cherished the thought that he had plumbed the depth of malicious wickedness, no horror being too terrible for his evil genius."

THREATENED

In the inner councils of anarchy the arrest of Meunier provoked a violent outburst of rage. Shoals of threatening letters descended upon the imperturbable Melville. One anonymous courrespondent wrote:

"You have arrested one of the best men in the world, and his capture must be avenged. I have set myself to do it, and will effect my purpose on the thirteenth."

On the ninth of that month Melville arrested two Italians, named Polti and Farnara, who were engaged in manufacturing bombs with which they proposed to blow up the London stock exchange. On Polti was found a dairy in which he had written:

"The thirteenth is an unlucky day. I was born on the thirteenth and have ever been unlucky. I was married on the thirteenth—another piece of bad luck. However, on the thirteenth I am going to kill Melville and perhaps that will balance matters."

His intentions were postponed, by the intervention of Melville, for a matter of twenty years, which was the sentence imposed upon him by a judge at the Old Bailey.

FINALE

As for Meunier: he was sent back to France. Murderer though he was, he, like François, managed to escape the scaffold. He was sent to imprisonment for life, but one morning while serving his sentence he was found strangled in his cell. The theory was that, rightly or wrongly, some of his fellow convicts suspected him of being a spy in the employ of the warders.

Melville, the most threatened man of his time, died peacefully in his suburban bed toward the close of the world war.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Indoor and Outdoor Costumes for the Winter Resort are Now in the Limelight of Fashion.

By BETTINA BEDWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—This is the season of the year when fashions migrate. They begin their young lives in Paris, but the rigors of a rainy winter drive them to other climates for growth. The more hardy styles go to snowbound Switzerland for the midwinter sports and the ephemeral springtime clothes go south to the Cote d'Azur and Palm Beach.

At the moment Paris is being deserted. Everybody who is somebody is going to St. Moritz and the newest sartorial fancies of the Paris grand couture are going along. At St. Moritz the smart world goes in for strenuous sports of the kind that the high Alps encourage, skating, skiing, and so forth, for out of doors, and dancing every evening for indoors. Here all women are young, in pep and spirit at least, and there is little of the idling that passes the hours in the south. Clothes are correspondingly youthful, so that the styles that come out of St. Moritz are youthful sports fashions, whether they are created for the outside or the in.

Outdoor costumes are warm, simple, and essentially practical for wear anywhere that the snow falls in winter. For a number of seasons it has been smart, and a bit snobbish, to wear no fur on outdoor sports clothes designed for zero weather. Women bundled themselves up in all sorts of "woolies," as the English quaintly call them, but they would rather die from exposure than appear with an ounce of fur visible anywhere on their chic clothes.

This season sees a return to normalcy, for the smartest of winter sports outfits are at least fur trimmed, particularly the skating ensembles. Fur coats are not worn, but fur lined coats are permitted, and fur is of the simplest and most practical variety, being clipped rabbit, chevrette, and astrakhan, usually.

Very thick, lightweight woolens, usually the English types, are used to make the skating costume, of which our first sketch shows an excellent example. This ensemble from Drecoll makes walking or skating in the coldest weather a pleasure. It is designed to give the maximum of freedom with the greatest comfort.

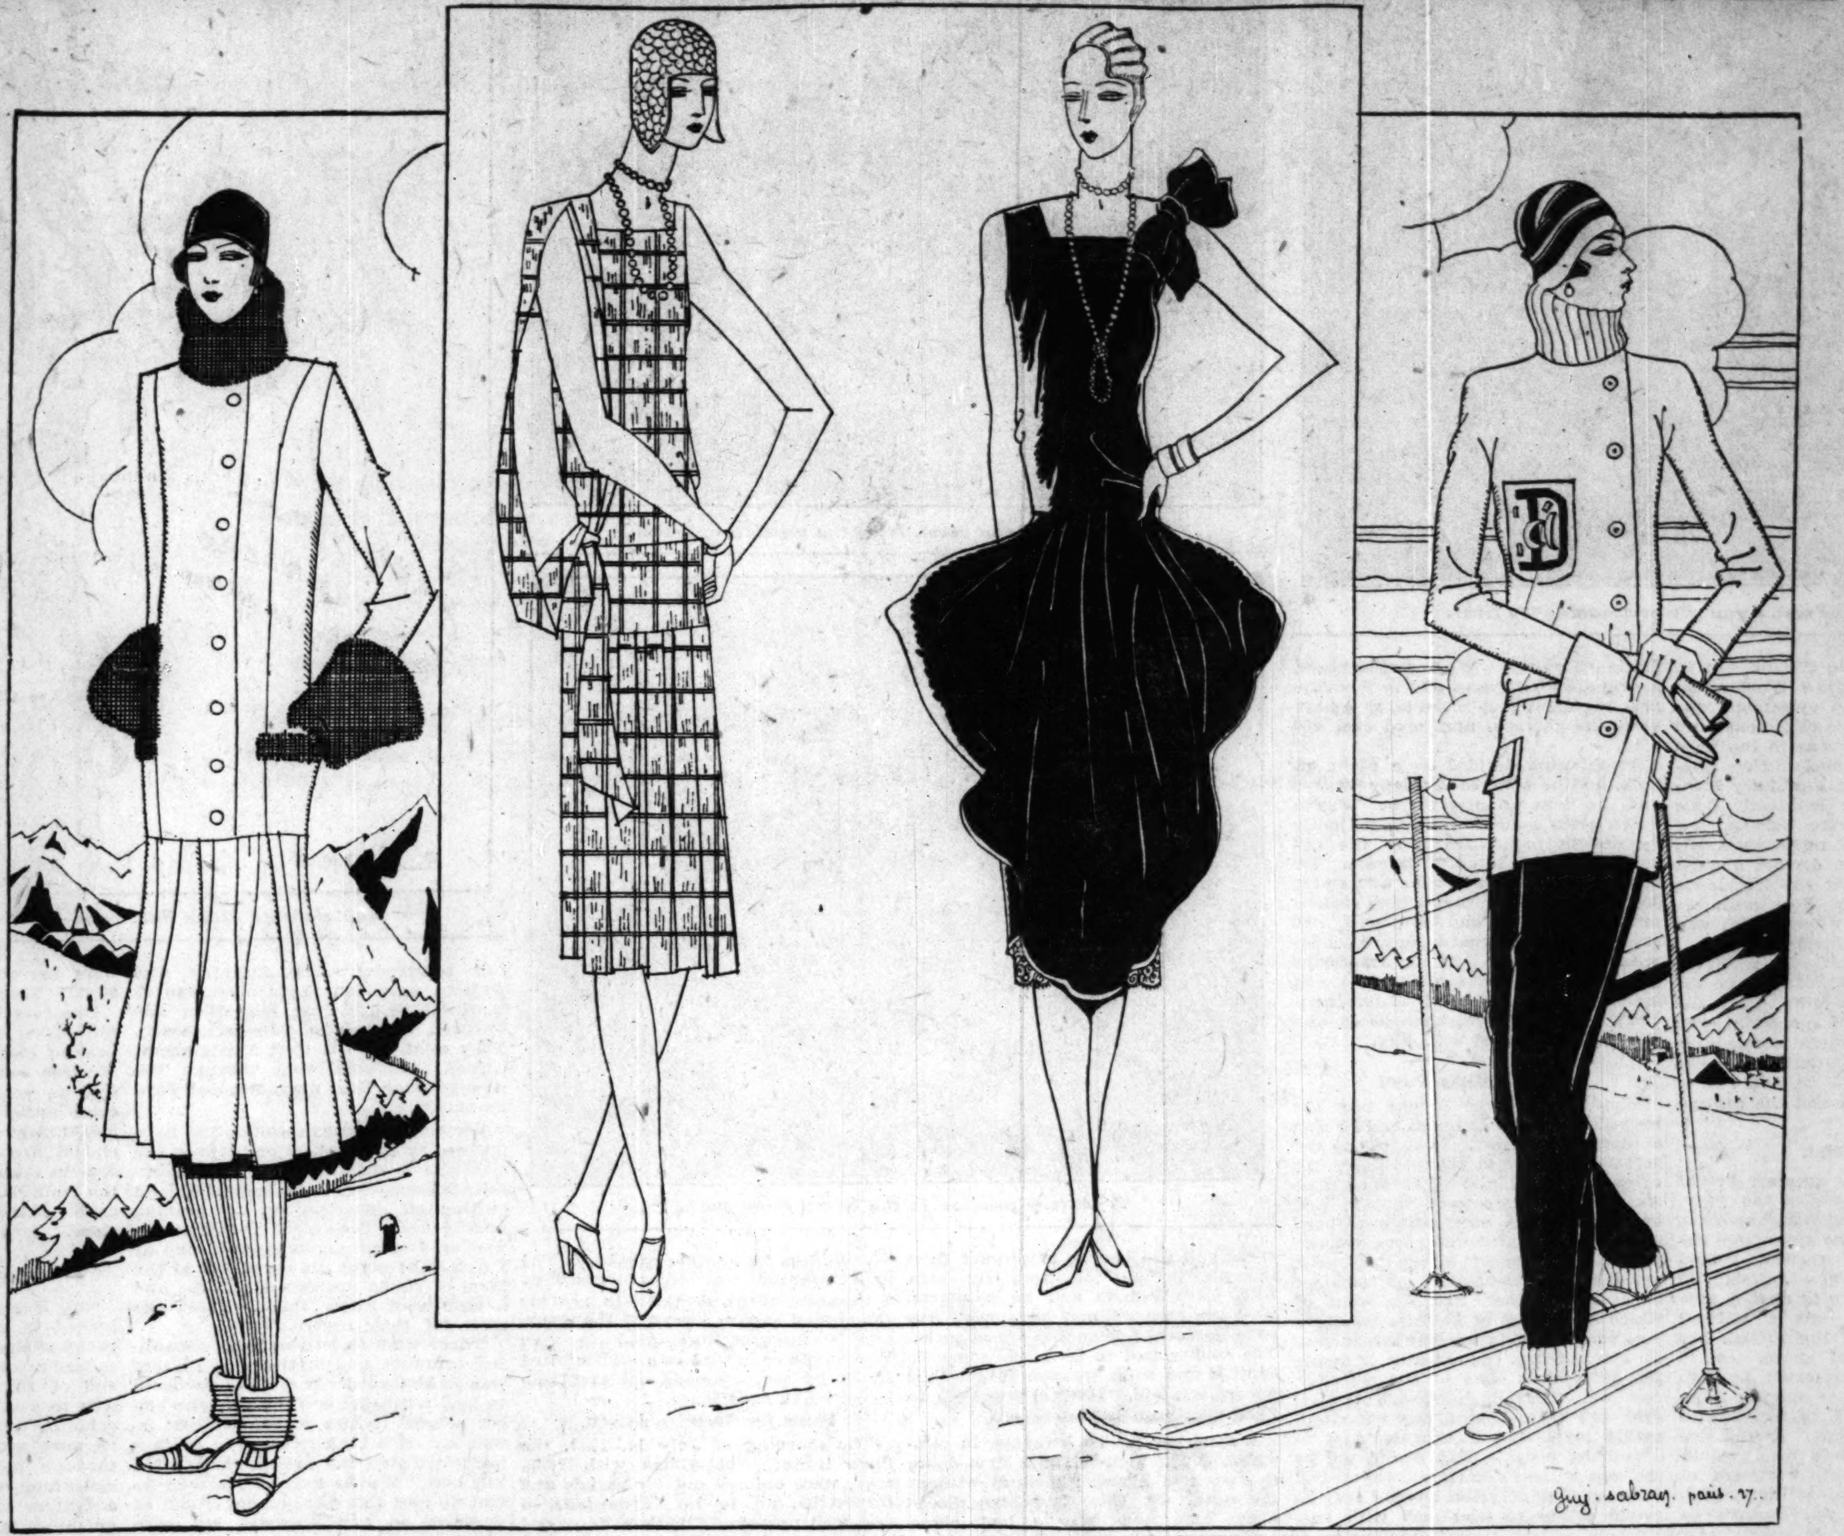
In color it is a dull blue, about the shade of the January sky, the horizon blue of the French poilu. The fabric is a lightweight woolen which is at the same time thick, being made entirely of angora. The jacket is very straight in line, buttoned up to the neck at the left side front, and fitted snugly at the hips and around the shoulders to keep out the cold. An enveloping collar of gray astrakhan and large flaring cuffs of the same fur make the jacket more chic and also more snug. Bands of this fur top the deep pockets which are roomy enough to give plenty of parking space to frosty hands.

The skirt is almost completely circular, made so by the circular godets that are placed all around it from hips to hemline. Under this skirt is worn a pair of knickers of the material of the costume, and under the jacket a heavy, coarsely knitted pull-over sweater, in tones of blue and gray.

A small hat of knitted wool, painted in the costume colors, accompanies it, and heavy ribbed stockings and half socks are worn with the skating or walking shoes of calfskin.

On the opposite side of our sketch is illustrated the skiing costume which is worn from morning to night by those women who go in for this most active sport. There is argument about, or place, for the skirt in this type of costume Long, loose trousers are invariably worn, and they are just as inevitably tucked into chaussettes knitted like a man's sports socks in heavy ribbed woolen.



Guy. sabran. paris. 27.

Fashion wears, 'mid snow and ice, the simple sports suit of blue gray woolen, collared and cuffed in gray astrakhan, and having a circular godeted skirt. Shown on the figure at the extreme left.

Red and beige plaid lame chiffon is the latest material for the dance dress. A spangled helmet covers entirely the close cropped hair. Second figure.

Third, the newest idea in the period frock is shown in this Martial et Armand model of black taffeta with panniers that decrease toward the hemline, and a petticoat of lace.

The skiing costume is made in two tones of green woolen, worn with an orange turtle necked sweater and gloves. The jacket is banded and embroidered in orange wool, and the cap is green and orange. Shown last.

This skiing suit is made of dull green overcoat woolen the trousers of darker tone than the jacket, which Drecoll leaves collarless so that the turtle necked sweater of orange wool may be seen. Three huge patch pockets of the material are placed on this jacket, outlined and embroidered with orange. The buttons are of orange colored leather, and the gauntlet gloves are of orange wool. The cap is made of orange and green wool knitted in stripes.

These are the costumes that are seen during the daytime, and for dancing in the evening the frocks worn also have a sports feeling, in most cases. One of the new style ideas for the dance frock, which comes from St. Moritz, is the dress of plaid chiffon, a sketch of which is shown on our second figure.

J. Suzanne Talbot, who created this model, makes it of red and beige plaid, with a thread of lamé to increase its brilliancy. The jumper blouse has a daytime, square decolletage, and is given charm and chic by the unusual drapery over the right arm, which ties in a knot at the waistline. There is a suggested bolero on this blouse, lifted in front to suggest a high waistline, and the very deep band below is tightly fitted over the hips.

With this blouse Talbot places a skirt of plaited plaid chiffon, and the smart helmet hat is also specially designed by her to accompany the toilette. The shape and the red spangled embroidery of this cap remind you of the armored helmets of olden days. A number of fashionable women are covering their bobbed heads with these decorative helmets when they go to dance or theater in the evening.

The taffeta dance dress shown on our third figure is one of the new models from Martial et Armand, and also one of the latest and most original of the new evening silhouettes Madame Vallet has given to this frock a panniered effect, in harmony with the trend of styles toward the romantic, and at the same time with real genius kept it entirely modern in feeling.

The fitted bodice has the novelty of wide shoulder straps, the left one tying in a stiff bow on the shoulder. The skirt is somewhat like an inverted maple leaf in outline, being very bouffant over the hips and descending to a narrow half circle at the hem in front and back. To leave this hem amply wide for dancing it is cut up at the sides and a finely plaited petticoat of lace is worn beneath, showing below the cut-out portions at the sides. This petticoat also furthers the period idea of the frock.

It is the frock or coat with some sort of past period inspiration which forecasts the trend of the mode of Paris We have already observed that the Victorian and Spanish influences are at work to change the cut of our clothes and now this idea of the panniered evening gown brings in still another.

Martin Larson & Son,
Chicago, Ill.
My Dear Mr. Larson:
I find that my left shoe (Good Foot) has become somewhat worn, while the right shoe (Bad Foot) is in good condition and I would like you to make me a left shoe (Good Foot) and also the inner sole. Please use the same kind of leather. My reason for not ordering both shoes is that I expect to drive to Chicago in the spring and have you make a few changes of the shoes.
Suppose you have had a successful year and I hope a happy one, as I feel that you have made so many happy that I know it reacts to you.
Remember me to your wife and tell her my sisters and I are still watching the trains for that visit of hers.
Wishing you the greetings of the season, I am,
Yours very truly,

Mr. Martin Larson Sr.,
Chicago, Ill.
Dear Mr. Larson:
In my happiness at being able to walk after nine years of lameness and ill health, I want to express to you my sincere appreciation of your shoes, which brought about this change. With the ease and comfort these shoes afford, I feel confident to say this would not have been accomplished if it weren't for Larson's shoes.
I remain, sincerely,
MRS. MINNIE KREJCI.

Special Price Offer on Larson's Famous Sta-Right Shoes

These shoes are made from plaster casts of your own feet. Inwardly they tally line for line with your foot; outwardly they are as fashionable in appearance as more expensive custom-made shoes. Their scientific structure makes them unique—it is the only such method of shoe building in the country. Thousands of people—weary foot sufferers from all over the land—gladly testify to the blessed relief that Martin Larson gives them. Broken arches, pains in back and limbs, as well as headaches, mental depression and so-called rheumatic conditions all fade away as soon as you place your feet in Martin Larson's hands.

HISTORICAL AMERICA by CLIFFORD RAYMOND

Mad Anthony Wayne at Stony Point

THE ROMAN wall of the American revolution was in the Hudson river Highlands. These mountains were the ramparts by which not only upper New York but also the New England states were defended, and upon which Washington based much of his strategy for operations in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware.

Possession of the Highlands was the condition upon which he campaigned. They held the line of communication with New England. The British regarded the American positions on the heights and in the passes as virtually untakable, at least after 1778, and therein lay for them the importance of Arnold's treason and proposal to sell West Point, the key position.

The Britishers' Lost Opportunity.

Very likely in 1777 Howe could have forced his way up the river from New York City and could have joined Burgoyne. Clinton, undertaking what Howe should have done, had reduced some of the forts, but Burgoyne could not hold out and the object of the relief was lost.

Howe had been lured away from the Hudson by an ambition to take Philadelphia, the continental capital. Washington had followed him and fought the battle of Brandywine and Germantown in an effort to keep the city. He failed, but he proved two things: that he had an army and that he had learned to command it in attack.

After the announcement of the French alliance, the British decided that Philadelphia must be given up and their forces united in New York. Clinton was in command then, and Washington followed him on his march to New York, offered him a fight, and had it at Monmouth.

In 1779 there was little action. In 1778 the British peace commission had come over with terms and negotiations had been refused in circumstances which were regarded in London as humiliating. Washington was at Middlebrook, N. J., in a strong position, with great freedom of movement. Patriot stores were at Easton, Pa. Clinton was instructed by his war office to draw the American into a position unfavorable to him, and in consequence he began feinting to accomplish this. If Washington made a false move Clinton would get the stores at Easton or he might get Washington himself. A water and land attack was made on the approaches to the Highlands and an American line of communication was broken.

The American Line.

It was the most convenient one between New England and Washington's position in New Jersey. It crossed the Hudson at King's ferry, from Verplanck's on the east side to Stony Point on the west. Both places were taken by the British and garrisoned. Washington had been apprised of the plan and he moved from Middlebrook toward West Point. The change of position had not bettered Clinton, and in another attempt to draw Washington into a false move an expedition was sent against the Connecticut coast and nearby towns. That was in the hope that the cries of defenseless New Englanders would attract a military blunder. The work was ruthlessly done and many towns were burned, but Washington did not move from his Roman wall. Clinton decided against further penetration of the Highlands and returned to New York with his main body, leaving Stony Point and Verplanck's strongly held.

This was opportunity for a bit of military drama which Washington apparently loved. He knew what the effect of it would be if successful even if material improvement seemed obscure or locking. He decided to take Stony Point by storm. It would be of a piece with Trenton and the capture of the Hessians.

Stony Point.

Stony Point at its greatest height was about 150 feet above the river. It was a bold promontory reaching out a half mile into the river from the shore line, rocky and wooded. Inland its slopes ran down to a marsh. To the east, where there is now a government lighthouse, was a natural stone bastion, which the British had fortified. The inland slopes toward the swamps were protected by two lines of abattis. On the summit there were seven or eight batteries with communicating trenches. It was reasonably regarded as safe from assault, and to the Seventeenth regiment of British infantry, under Lieut. Col. Henry Johnson, it was known as Little Gibraltar. With artillerymen, a grenadier company of the Seventy-first regiment and some loyal Americans, the garrison numbered over 600 men.

Washington decided on a night attack, and he selected Anthony Wayne and the light infantry for it. Wayne was a great soldier. He was distinctly an assault man. He knew the full composition of infantry morale. He believed in smart uniforms and smart soldiers. He knew that a trim soldier, polished, shaved, and powdered, had something in him that a ragged soldier missed. He knew that the Americans put too much reliance on rifles and marksmanship. He wanted bayonets. That was his greatest emphasis, and Washington agreed with him.

Von Steuben's Pupil.

Von Steuben had taught him the proper use of the bayonet, and he was a thorough convert. He wrote to the secretary of war in 1777: "I don't like rifles. I would almost as soon face an enemy with a good musket and bayonet as with ammunition without a bayonet, for although there are not many instances of bloody bayonets, yet I am confident that one bayonet keeps off another, and for want of which the Chief of Defeats we have met with ought in a great measure to be attributed. The Enemy knowing the defenseless state of our riflemen, rush on. They fly, mix with or pass thro' the other troops, and communicating fears that is ever incident to a retiring corps. This would not be the case if the riflemen had bayonets."

On another occasion he said that he would prefer to lead men with bayonets and one charge of powder than risk his life and his effort with men with forty rounds and no bayonets. He knew that military advantage was not complete in defending breastworks. The soldier had to be given some incentive and some weapon to gain the enemy position. It wasn't enough to fight well with legs covered.

Wayne had been a brigadier in command of the Pennsylvania line, doing the work of a major general without the rank. St. Clair had been placed above him, and Wayne had asked Washington for another command. The light infantry was being formed as a separate corps, destined to provide the chosen assault troops of the army, and Washington was glad to give Wayne the command as a soldier fitted for it by temperament, military philosophy and experience.

Plans for Surprise Attack.

The morning of July 14, 1779, the light infantry battalions with 1,350 men, were ordered out for parade and inspection, all to be "fresh shaved and well powdered," with rations and full equipment. The infantry was without suspicion that there was to be anything else, but inspection was followed with orders to march south. They went down to Fort Montgomery, turned west and went through the pass between Bear mountain and Torn mountain.

For days American scouts had been preventing communication between the countryside and the Stony Point garrison, intercepting farm supplies and cutting off opportunities for gaining intelligence. The march passed southwest of Donderberg mountain, and at 8 o'clock at night the corps was at the farm of David Springsteel, a mile and a half from Stony Point. There the men got their orders.

There were to be two main assaulting columns, and in them no musket was to be loaded. If a man attempted to load a musket or fired one, the officer nearest to him was to kill him instantly. If a man faltered or made a backward step, the nearest officer must kill him. Wayne said to his men he had no idea this punishment would be deserved in any instance, but such were the orders and must be understood. They would be enforced.

One detachment was to have ammunition, but this was only for the purpose of hiding the real attacks. Maj. Murfree commanded this small outfit, and as soon as the silent columns came under fire, not returning it, the detachment with loaded muskets should fire as rapidly as possible to deceive the garrison into thinking that the main danger was in the front and center of their works at the foot of the slope.

Other Commanders.

Col. Febiger, a Danish officer, attached to the patriot cause by sympathy at the beginning of the war, was to lead a column up from the southern end of the swamp, and Col. Butler was to attack from the north. Both columns were to have selected men in advance with tools for cutting a way through the abattis. All were to wear something white, paper, a cockade, or a feather in their hats, to be distinguishable in the dark, and the height was to be taken without firing a gun except as indicated; the firing was for deception and not for execution.

Washington had chosen midnight as the hour, on the assumption that the sentries and officers would be less on the alert then. The favorite time for a night attack was in the later morning darkness, and then a careful garrison took extra precautions. The tide had come in and the sandbars which had to be crossed required deeper wading than had been anticipated. A British sentry heard a splash in the water and opened fire. Murfree's men at that signal began to fire, bringing the British commander, Col. Johnson, down to the center as it was intended.

The Battle.

The garrison was bewildered, but sprang to the defense of earthworks and guns. The assault tore its way through the abattis and took the lower lines of works, plunging up in the dark under a fire to which the response was only with steel at close quarters. Wayne received a flesh wound in the head. Febiger had his nose seared by a bullet. Capt. Selden of Meigs' regiment was shot in the side. Capt. Phelps, Lieut. Palmer, and Ensign Hall of the same regiment were wounded.

The two columns storming from opposite sides had timed the movement so well that they were only a few minutes apart in reaching the crest. A French officer, Lieut. Col. Fleury, was the first into the flag bastion and lowered the flag. The British were surrendering in squads. Johnson, returning up the slope, saw that his situation was hopeless and surrendered to Febiger. The Point was taken with a loss of fifteen killed and eighty-three wounded. The British had sixty-three killed and seventy wounded and 543 were prisoners. One man escaped, Lieut. Roberts of the artillery, who got away by swimming to the British ship Vulture in the river.

Yanks Lauded by Foes.

Later the British were freely complimentary, and they conceded that there had been an exceptional generosity in the quarter given when asked. The practice of war permitted a denial of mercy in such an assault, but the attack had been as conspicuous in humanity as it had been in courage. The marked effect which Washington sought had been produced, although Stony Point was not retained, and no attempt was made to hold it when Clinton came back up the river to retake it.

Wayne's report to Washington of the success said: "Our officers and men behaved like men determined to be free." He had led what he believed to be an attack in perfect conditions, the men without ammunition. Incidentally, the last attack of the war, that of the light infantry on the Yorktown redoubt, was executed likewise with unloaded muskets.

For the successful and celebrated soldier who commanded in the assault, Stony Point fixed a descriptive title. Thereafter he was Mad Anthony.

Pork Furnishes Fundamental Meat for Men of Every Fashion

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington

ONCE upon a time there was a "plum pudding pig." Needless to say, he was an English pig and not a Chinese pig (the Chinese are supposed to have learned how to roast pig so as to get a divine flavor, and they still use pig meat enormously), nor a Poland-China pig of the U. S. A. In fact, we do not know what kind of a pig he was from English denominations, whether a Yorkshire, Hampshire, Berkshire, or a Sussex, Dorset, Leicestershire, Northamptonshire, Oxfordshire, Cambridgeshire, Cumberland, Welsh, or Essex, or whether they imported him from Naples or brought him over from Germany.

All of which suggests, we guess, that there have been many varieties of pigs, yes, and styles, too, to suit localities, the manufacturing modes of the time, a country at large (suppose it is a pork packing country), and a change in customs, perhaps, the world around. In other words, styles in pigs and changes of styles in pigs have come about because of admirations for some special breed, and sometimes have come about because of belief in the greater utility of one breed as compared with another, and so forth, and so forth.

Great changes in styles have come about, as changes in other styles have come about, because of changes in styles of living among residents of town and country and because of such a change as that of the mild curing of bacon and ham, saving many a cut of pork from a continuous bath in salt brine. Terrible names have been given to salted pork, mainly, probably because terrible things have been done to it in the cooking. But think what it has been with beans, and men in the Arctic cold have eaten raw salt pork and thought it as sweet as sugar! Swines' meat, indeed, has been a principal food among most early peoples, and the acorns and beechnuts of the great primeval forests seem to have been largely a provision for the pigs' upkeep.

Pig as Food.

Pork is food. Pork has justified itself as a food for the races of men because it has been the means of securing, inexpensively, to impecunious people a food element (fat), without which they could not live with any degree of comfort and efficiency. The more wintry the climate, or farther toward the north or south pole anybody goes, the more indispensable does fat in the diet, and plenty of it, become. It is something that "sticks to the ribs." The process of digestion is slow but sure, like the burning of hard coal.

The old time idea that it was indigestible merely because it was slowly digested has lost its force. It is only when pork is wrongly cooked that it is indigestible, and any fat may easily be rendered indigestible by poor cookery. The fat of pork can be cooked so as to be appetizing and not the least bit coarse or greasy, when one chooses to do nice work with it.

Cuts of Pork.

No animal seems to yield meat in so great a variety as the pig. The differences between different cuts, enhanced by different treatment, is so great as to make them seem almost like unrelated meats. This fact is especially brought out with the curing of the meat, and the cured parts have a greater variety of names than most people notice.

The fresh cuts give primary meat dishes, like roasts and chops and sausages, while what are called the secondary parts, like pigs' feet, the head, tongue, lips, liver, heart, brain, and even the tail, are now handled with great expertness by the packing houses and presented in most undeniably attractive ways in wholesale quantities.

One may see pigs' feet, pigs' ears, pork pluck, and so forth, packed to look as uniform as dates in a box. More than this, these are labeled "fancy meats," and the packers have had recipes prepared for their cooking, some of which have labels that entitle them to be called epicurean.

If we go to the English practices, we can find names that seem most interesting for all these secondary parts and for small cuts of the main carcass of the pig. Some of these names have never been used in the United States.

Inexpensive Cuts of Meat.

Not only the spare ribs, but many other pieces of pork can be used for exceedingly inexpensive dishes of a good deal of worth and attractiveness. Even the neck bone of the pig has on it both fat and lean, though some butchers profess to have great scorn for this piece and will not sell it because they can buy a whole barrel of neck bones for $1, or have been able to do so in the past.

People who know how use scraps of pork in making chop suey or even the elegant soufflé. One dollar can be made to do the work of three by buying such parts. Almost everything now is cured, so that we have blades and cheeks and other parts in that condition and they would be just as well worth while cooked fresh.

Imitation Chicken.

For this dish one may use either an inexpensive piece of pork or the expensive loin. In the latter case you choose a pound of the best roast or buy what would be cut into chops, but do not have it separated, or, for the inexpensive cut, have the shoulder piece without the bone. It is likely to have more fat because today the loin is so closely trimmed. Besides that use one carrot, four or five cups of cold water, two onions sliced, some celery leaves, green pepper and any other seasoning to suit. Perhaps we should emphasize the fact that the loin is superior for this dish.

Make the piece of meat immaculate and put in with the prepared vegetables in the cold water, bring to a boil slowly, and then cook it gently for one hour, skimming at the start if necessary. Leave the pork in the liquid, but cool it rapidly. When cooked in this fashion it should be as tender as possible; in fact, no meat is more tender.

Pork Soufflé.

Put through the food chopper enough of the pork cooked in the imitation chicken style to make one cup. Strain the liquid in which the pork was boiled and take two cups of it for a gravy. There ought to be another cup which one can use with the soufflé that is made.

Thicken the two cups of liquid with four level tablespoons of flour, mixing them with two level tablespoons of butter, cooking them till smooth; then add the liquid and stir and cook until it thickens. With care one may add a cold liquid to the hot combination, but if inexperienced it is best to have the liquid hot, or cool the other.

Add the chopped meat to this cup of gravy with salt to taste, if the meat was not salted in the first cooking, as it may have been when it had been cooked till tender. Also add a few grains of cayenne pepper. Stir into this mixture one or two beaten egg yolks, then fold in two egg whites carefully, keeping the mixture as fluffy as possible.

Pour this mixture into a buttered earthen baking dish, sprinkle with bread crumbs, and bake until it puffs. Then serve immediately.

To vary this dish have in the baking dish an inch layer of cooked spaghetti, pour the soufflé mixture over it, cover with crumbs and a bit of grated cheese, and bake like the soufflé, and serve at once. This may be served with a gravy made of the liquid in which the pork was cooked first. This may also be baked in individual portions and it is not half bad when cool.

Creamed Pork.

Prepare the gravy as for the soufflé, but make it a little thicker and add a little cream to it when it has cooked up, till thick. Cut up the cooked pork in dice or slivers and heat it thoroughly in the gravy.

A little green pepper chopped fine and a little sweet pepper or pimento in slivers cooked first in butter, and even some mushrooms may be added to this to make it like chicken à la king.

Creamed Fresh Pork.

Cut one chop or one slice of pork into as thin slices as possible, leaving them the full length of the piece, or make them into just mouthful sized pieces. For one chop use two tablespoons of flour, with a level teaspoon of salt and a little pepper. Roll the thin slices thoroughly in this seasoned flour.

Melt two tablespoons of butter in the frying pan and when it is hot enough to brown, put in the pieces of pork and cook them about one minute to a side. Then stir in the left-over flour, let the whole partly cool, add a cup of milk or a cup of half milk and half cream; then put this over the fire and stir until it thickens, after which stew gently for twenty minutes. This must be cooked gently, because of the milk, which will easily boil up, get too thick and also have a little skin over it—three undesirable effects. To have it cook in the gentlest possible way it may be covered and stand where it barely simmers.

This may seem remarkably like fried chicken in a creamed gravy. It is something of our own devising and we have before now enlarged considerably upon its attractiveness. We think immaculate fat from a pork chop, when browned and seasoned and served in a cream gravy, a good rival for the delicate marrow of French cookery, while when it is not treated in the right way it is barely edible, and a large number of people will reject it in eating a chop. In gravy of one sort or another, or in a pork pie, one will not even recognize it as fat.

An inexpensive piece of lean fresh pork can be cut up and fried and furnish seasonings for the excellent cream gravy of this sort, and it has other possibilities.

Fried Spareribs.

In this dish we also used milk in making a gravy. Other nations than ours understand how milk with pork fat changes it into something dainty and quite different from what we ordinarily get in pork dishes. In this case use spareribs instead of chops for frying.

Make them immaculate, cut the bones apart—about four inch bones are best—roll them in seasoned flour, put them into a hot frying pan in which there is a little butter, cover the pan and let the spareribs cook gently twenty minutes to a side, take them up and add milk to the pan, stir until it thickens, then bake the spareribs and simmer for ten minutes.

You can gnaw these bones without getting the slightest odor of pork fat, and we recommend trying the gravy on crackers, because we tried this combination on someone and got "Yum, yum."

The wish to make this dish on my part was inspired because, in a rather nice place at a good price, I had pork tenderloin that was dry and distorted from being cooked with too much fire, which also made it greasy. No gravy was served with it and there was no complementary relief like fried apples or applesauce or greens, therefore I turned from this most expensive pork meat to see what I could do with less expensive.

Stuffed Spareribs.

Spareribs rolled, skewered so the piece will stand like a basket, then filled with sour stuffing over which slices of bacon may be skewered, will be deliciously flavored if baked, and some people will like the dressing while others will not. Pork, at any rate, yields some of the best flavors baked of any meat we have, and the tiny bit of meat on the sparerib is no exception.

The apples in the dressing may make it too wet, but because of the tiny bit of meat they need to be protected by wetness, though not too thoroughly, in which case they will not get the browning that makes them delicious.

Boiled Spareribs.

Boiled spareribs are salt spareribs and a man's dish when cooked. Wash off the salt thoroughly from both sides of the meat, then soak for about three hours. Put them on to cook in cold water and when this boils skim it, if it is necessary.

Simmer for three hours. Prepare vegetables separately and serve on the same platter as the meat. To have them flavored like the meat, partly cook them, then add to them some of the cooking water around the spareribs. When the water cools in which the spareribs are boiled, skim off the goodly portion of fat which arises and use it as dressing.

Salt spareribs are among the most inexpensive of meats and are boiled with vegetables, but we do not recommend this because it spoils the vegetables, both from the flavor and nutriment standpoint. They lose their own good flavor and acquire one quite different when cooked with salt meats, and do not balance the objectionable side of the meat as they otherwise would.

Frying a Pork Chop.

First we recommend that you buy your chops from a butcher who knows how to cut them; otherwise get a board and cleaver and learn to cut them yourself, buying a block of loin. A careless butcher will give you one chop thick and one much thinner, sometimes a whole third thinner, which makes the cooking difficult. At any rate, pork chops need trimming at home in order to remove weathered edges of bone in particular, as well as to take off fat that has been handled and is far from immaculate.

A little of this fat, tried out, is best to have in the pan when frying the chops, but butter can be used. One tablespoon of fat is enough for six chops. Have it genuinely hot in the pan when the meat is put in, after which immediately lower the fire so that they may cook eight or ten minutes to a side, according to their thickness, without a sign of burning.

If they are in a shape to flatten they may be cooked in a shorter time. In addition to the fats there should be some seasonings like salt and pepper, and some people like to add a teaspoon of vinegar. When ready to turn the chops, turn up the fire for half a minute and then quickly down again. The fat will have been increased by what was cooked out from the chop and with seasoning is excellent with boiled potatoes or with greens, or it may be left in the pan and potatoes may be cooked in it. Pan fried potatoes in this fat are extra crisp and palatable.

Too much explaining can hardly be given in reference to the correct cooking of a pork chop. It is necessary to remember that the water in the lean part of the pork is not as well protected as in beef streaked with fat, so it can be easily dried out from a pork chop in about two minutes, in which case the chop necessarily shrinks, and after that, although more cooking is required, it cannot be well done. The juices must be kept in the meat and when you see them come out in the pan and harden to look almost like the white of egg, the chop is being cooked in the wrong fashion.

A DOLLAR FOR YOUR DREAMS

Friday night's dreams on Saturday told
Are sure to come true be they never so old.
—Old Saying.

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? We're not referring to the day dreams which build castles in the air; we're interested in the nocturnal variety which beguile or disrupt slumber. If you'll mail us an account of your prophetic dream we'll pay $1 for every letter published. Address Dreams, Chicago Tribune.

The Ruined Church.

Do dreams come true? Yes, I know they do, for several of mine have. One peculiar one occurred years ago. I was devoted to my church and wanted to go to the evening service, but did not.

The next morning my young nephew said to me, "Aunt Marion, your church burned last night."

I replied at once, "O, no, it was only damaged." I had dreamed that I went to the church, and as I was to enter the body of a tonsured priest was borne out of the door in an open casket, and it was turned on the side. Low, sad music was heard.

As soon as possible I went to the church and found its walls standing. The door was broken, but closed, and an officer was guarding it to keep out the curiosity seekers who wanted to get inside. I turned away and went into an alley to look in a window, climbing up on a pile of ashes to get there. As I did so I saw an envelope box, with a cover, on the dump, and, glancing into it, saw a Japanese doll, with tonsured head, lying on its side.

Here was my tonsured priest, of whom I had dreamed. Strange to say, the organ, an unusually fine one, had been battered to pieces, the fire having started in it. Here was the sad music of my dream. M. A.

A Strange Visitor.

In my dream I distinctly saw a man. Every detail of his face made an impression on my mind, and in the morning when I awoke, a sense of fear possessed me. I knew positively I was to see this man.

Two days later someone rapped at my back door. I started toward the door, but before I could reach it, it opened and, horrors! it was the man of my dream.

I was paralyzed with fear. When he walked past me and sat down at my kitchen table and said, "Lady, some food."

Needless to say, I hurried to do his bidding, as I was all alone in the house with my small boy. I put everything on the table that I could find in the pantry and made him a cup of hot tea, as it was a bitter cold day.

After eating, he moved back his chair, commenced to rise, while I felt as if my last hour had come.

When he got to his feet he made me a curtly bow and said, "Lady, I thank ye from the bottom of my heart," and quickly turned and went out, closing the door behind him.

Needless to say, after that episode my doors were always kept locked. A. J. B.

A Friend in Danger.

Many of my dreams have come true but recently I had a rather horrid one concerning a dear friend of mine. I saw her standing in her living room as though listening intently. She seemed to hear a noise and turned to find a man confronting her with a pistol. She screamed. He fired and fled through the window. She fell across a couch, her blood dyeing a Spanish shawl I had given her as a Christmas gift. The next day I warned her but she treated the whole matter as a huge joke, and would not take me at all seriously.

Exactly three weeks from that date a burglar entered her home and my dream came true verbatim. The man was never caught, though my friend recovered and everything turned out well, except the shawl, which is ruined. K. K.

Care of Babies

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good. And it is so pleasant to take. Taste it yourself, and you'll know why "Children Cry for It."

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or when you even suspect the approach of constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. See how quickly all fretfulness or wakefulness will cease!

Only one word of warning: the above advice is true of genuine Castoria.* The kind called Fletcher's bearing Fletcher's signature is genuine—and does not contain opiates or any other drug that can harm your baby. Other preparations may be just as free from harm; the writer does not know as to that, but does know one family whose children will never make the experiment!

*SPECIAL NOTE: With every bottle of genuine Fletcher's Castoria is wrapped a book on "Care and Feeding of Babies" worth its weight in gold to every mother or prospective mother.

GOODBY TO EXTRA POUNDS

by Antoinette Donnelly

This Is the Third Week in the Reducing Program. Are You Growing Slimmer?

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—At dinner the other night the conversation turned on reducing, as it undoubtedly did where you dined the other night. Dinners sure do inspire that topic, don't they? I suppose because a woman can't escape her conscience for one single dinner hour any more. The cream soup gives it a jab [the conscience, I mean]. The scrumptious looking meat course with the creamed 'taters, creamed cauliflower gives it a few more jabs. The salad with the tasty mayonnaise dressing stabs it outright, so that when the baked Alaskan dessert comes in it's for crying out loud about how you can keep a figger respectable with meals like that!

At this dinner was a young woman worried, as a goodly number of us are, about a fat rash breaking out somewhere on her person. A bright young person, she, under ordinary circumstances. But there's something extraordinary about the gullibility of the most intelligent people on reducing cures. She backed me off in a corner after the meal to whisper the good news. It seems her sister-in-law's aunt's daughter had just heard about it. You mix castile soap and epsom salts and rub it on your stomach and lo! before the new moon is out you haven't got anything so vulgar as a stomach.

You might just as well rub the mixture of soap and epsom salts on the back porch for all the good it's going to do your figure. So I told the bright young woman, but her defiant glance convinced me she'd go home and try it once, anyway. It won't do her any harm. Soap never did anybody harm so far as I've been able to make out. But it certainly won't help her by half a pound to get into her last year's wedding dress.

And so it goes with all these magic potions for going to bed fat and waking up thin. I never mind people talking them. I just sit back and bide my time. I don't even say "I told you so." And I've seen and heard a lot of crazy suggestions tried and found wanting. Some of them are harmless, some of them not. Diets, like the tomato and egg diet, the lamb chop and pineapple, the skimmed milk and baked potato, and so on, continued over a long period, have undermined many a good constitution. Some of these freak menus, I will admit, reduce, and quickly, but there is not a sufficient number of calories, nor do they contain the mineral elements, vitamins, proteins and carbohydrates necessary for a healthy reducing program. They average about 600 calories, which is not sufficient for the day.

The Third Week.

This is the third week of our safe and sane reducing course.

Tell me, how are you getting along? Has anybody been telling you lately that you're looking better? Wait till you hear what they'll say when you get through with this course. That is, if you're playing it on the level. No cheating between meals, or at them! You're on your honor, as I told you!

Did you walk that hour, daily, every day last week? Did you follow the diet I carefully worked out for you? I did that to save you the trouble of counting up your calories, believing you would show your appreciation by sticking closely to the menus prescribed. Good things to eat they were, too, weren't they?

This week I'll work out another food program for you. And if there are any last minute applicants who want to get in on the class work, they can start right in. If they want to catch up, they can put themselves on a liquid diet for three days. Three days on liquid [nonalcoholic] is a good thing for the stomach. One day, in fact, of liquid and no food is recommended by physicians as a rest system for this vastly overworked organ. Some authorities think the three day liquid diet an excellent method of controlling the appetite for the regular reducing diet to follow.

It is also advised for its beneficial effect of ridding the system of poisons that have accumulated from excess food intake. A business woman I know puts herself on one of these three day liquid diets every time she feels she is putting weight on again. From Friday to Monday is the time she chooses, and she loses five pounds each time. Also, she reports a grand sense of general well being.

We wouldn't recommend it for a longer period because the weight loss would be too quick, and there aren't enough of the food elements needed to maintain health. It would be classified as one of the freak diets if continued indefinitely. But as a prelude to a reducing régime it is all right, or as a weight regulator, as with my business friend, orange juice is the preferred liquid.

More Exercise.

About exercise. The first week I let you off without any; the second with an hour's brisk walk daily. Now with this, the third week, I want you to do some trunk exercises and keep up the daily walks. Any games, outdoor or indoor, skating, swimming, basketball, and so on, that you can take advantage of—so much the better. Now that your reduced diet is shaking the fat loose, you need exercise to strengthen the flabby muscles, and to stimulate the blood so that it can wash out the tissues. Exercise helps break down the fat. So that you really need now, at the very least, ten minutes workout morning and night. It is better to take it in two ten minute sessions than one twenty. If there is great overweight, your doctor should be consulted. He may advise against exercise until the heart has been relieved of its fat burden.

1. Here is that good old timer—keeping the knees straight and touching the toes with the finger tips. Begin with the hands raised over the head.

2. Same exercise, practically. But touch the left toes with the right hand and the right toes with the left hand. Feet wide apart. Begin movement with the arms spread full length from the shoulders; not overhead.

3. Spread the feet wide. Hands clasped overhead, swing like a woodchopper down between the legs and bring the clasped hands back over the head, going back as far as you can comfortably. Do this same woodchopping movement with the hands clasped together over the right shoulder and swing down outside the left hip. Reverse and swing down over the right hip.

4. Lie on your back on the floor, hands at sides, feet together. Try to bring the feet up over your head. This you may practice in bed and bring the feet up to touch the head board. Don't strain on this exercise. Just come up as far as you can comfortably and let it go until another day. Tomorrow you'll do it a little better and easier.

5. Still in a prone position, keep the heels tight to the floor with the hands extended overhead. Pull yourself up at the waist and carry the upper body forward trying to touch the toes with your hands. Don't strain. Take it easy at first.

6. Now sit up on the floor. Cross your legs and draw them up fairly close to the body, but not too close. Grasp the ankles with the hands and rock the body forward and back.

Those are six exercises for you, morning and night. Go through them with each movement repeated ten times. If you find at first exercises 4 and 5 strain, do them no more than five times. Gradually increase.

Menus for the Week.

Now for this week's menus:

Monday — Breakfast: Grapefruit, poached egg on thin toast, coffee with half cup hot milk.

Luncheon: Celery and apple salad, bran muffin, a gelatin dessert, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Clear beef broth, roast lamb, stewed tomatoes or brussels sprouts, romaine salad with vinegar dressing, prune whip [no cream].

Tuesday—Breakfast: Stewed prunes, two strips broiled bacon, whole wheat bread [thin slice toasted], coffee with hot milk.

Luncheon: Small serving minced meat on slice unbuttered toast, vegetable salad, three crackers, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Vegetable soup, 1 serving lean meat, medium serving mashed potatoes with little milk but no butter, large helping carrots, raw fruit.

Wednesday — Breakfast: Orange juice, small serving oatmeal with a little milk, a hard roll thinly spread with butter, coffee.

Luncheon: Clam broth, asparagus on toast [unbuttered], baked apple, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Broiled lamb chop, spinach, large serving; medium baked potato with dash of butter, half grapefruit.

Thursday—Breakfast: Apple sauce, 1 piece toast lightly buttered, 1 slice crisp bacon, coffee with hot milk.

Luncheon: Scrambled egg on toast, whole wheat muffin, lettuce and tomato salad with salt and vinegar dressing, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Fruit cocktail, slice of liver and bacon, well done; boiled potato with salt only, turnips, small serving custard.

Friday—Breakfast: Orange juice, cereal with ¼ cup milk, toast and coffee with hot milk.

Luncheon: Cup of cream soup, large bowl lettuce salad, 1 slice bread, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Halibut, trout, or cod; baked potato, string beans, endive and watercress salad, tea.

Saturday—Breakfast: Grapefruit, 1 strip bacon, bran muffin, coffee.

Luncheon: Omelet [1 egg], slice toast, fruit cup.

Dinner: Vegetable soup, lean meat, cabbage, sliced tomatoes, canned peach or pineapple.

Sunday—Breakfast: Orange or other fruit, small serving cereal with ¼ cup milk, egg, slice toast, coffee.

Dinner: Medium serving roast beef, small browned potato, string beans, vegetable salad with vinegar dressing, fruit dessert.

Supper: Slice lean meat, sliced tomatoes with salt dressing, three graham wafers, and glass of milk.

Keep the menus, please, to guide you. Next week I shall tell you more about foods and let you try and work out your own menus afterward, as you must get familiar with their values.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

V. McG.: THE FINE LINES UNDER and around the eyes are due to the tissues being very soft. Discontinue massaging them with creams and apply compresses of cotton saturated in cold salt water. Do this morning and night, and, if possible, during the day.

D. F.: HERPES IS COMMONLY known as cold sore. Where cold sores appear frequently there may be digestive disturbance which should be corrected. Camphor ice may be applied. It is well to soften the lips with cold cream several times during the day.

J. S.: IF THE BIRTHMARK IS indistinct it may be disguised by the use of stage paint, getting the shade which blends with your skin. Birthmarks are treated by skin specialists.

R. H.: THE WAY TO TREAT whiteheads is to soften the skin with hot towels, then open each blemish with a sterilized needle and press out the contents. Daub on a little peroxide of hydrogen and gently massage with cold cream. Send a stamped addressed envelope for my booklet on the skin.

C. D.: YOU WISH EXERCISES for constipation? Try these: Jump rope, just as the children do, for five or ten minutes, morning and night. Stand with the feet together, hands on hips, bend forward as far as possible. Keep the knees straight. Return to erect position. For other exercises send a stamped addressed envelope.

CHERIE: IF YOUR HAIR IS TOO thick you may have it thinned out by a hairdresser, and brushing it every day for five minutes will make it glossy. When the hair is dry it is lusterless, but by brushing it the fat of the sebacious glands is distributed, giving it a silky appearance.

I. B.: YOU MAY BLEACH THE under arms with a teaspoonfull of peroxide to which a drop of ammonia has been added.

LEAP YEAR PROPOSALS

The year 1928 spells hope for the aggressive maiden who wants to change her name. Given the time, the place, and the man, all she needs is the courage to pop the question. Do you know of any girl who invited a man to leap into matrimony with her? Was her proposal met with eager acceptance or graceful refusal? What was the aftermath? If you'll send us a brief account of the affair we'll be glad to pay $1 if we print it. Address Leap Year Proposals, Chicago Tribune.

Blonde and Brunette.

It was in leap year when little colored ribbons accompanied by poetry was sent to a man by the girl who wished to propose to him that this proposal took place.

In our office there were two girls, a blonde and a brunette, who adored the same man, secretly.

One day the blonde said to me, "I believe I'll send Mr. Smith a leap year letter, signed 'Blonde,' and perhaps he'll find out who sent it."

A few days later Mr. Smith walked into our office and said, "You know, girls, I received a leap year letter and I don't know who is proposing to me."

Before one could say "Jack Robin" out walked the brunette from her files and said, "I sent the letter to you, Mr. Smith," just as though she were handing him a letter from her files.

He was stunned for a moment, but finding himself, quickly said, "Well, what ribbon would you prefer?"

Brazenly, "The white, of course," ["if you want me for your wife, send me back my bow of white"].

From that day friendship sprang up and within six months they were married. Mr. Smith seemed very happy and told the girls how his wife proposed and how glad he was she did it.

M. C.

Accepted the Hint.

She was a pretty little first grade teacher and he, the father of one of her pupils, was a young and attractive widower. For some reason he had formed the habit of dropping in at the school to inquire about his daughter's progress.

One afternoon he remarked to the little teacher: "You have been very good to Helen Ann. I appreciate your interest in her."

The little teacher was fussed: "I think a great deal of Helen Ann," she said. "I wouldn't mind taking care of her always."

Then, realizing what a shocking admission she had made, she was overcome with confusion.

"We'll discuss that more some later time," he answered briefly. From his attitude she could not tell what he really was thinking. And, O, how much she wanted to know! A few weeks later she found out.

And we've lived happily ever since.

C. S. A.

Surprise for Mother.

It was back in the good old days when a fraternity pin on a shirtwaist meant something.

He never knew how much guile there was in the loss of her collar pin. Quite innocently he suggested his fraternity pin as the only fastener in the emergency.

Imagine his consternation at her gleeful chuckle, "O won't mother be surprised," as she transferred the pin from his vest to her shirtwaist.

C. B. T.

In Need of Help.

Four years ago my girl chum and I had a girl's bachelor apartment in Chicago. We always had our boy friends in for Sunday dinner.

My beau had always had his mother to look after his clothes until he came to Chicago, so naturally he wasn't very prompt in sewing buttons back on.

Every Sunday when he came I would sew on a button or maybe mend a pocket.

One day I was standing in front of him sewing buttons on his vest, when I said to him, "I think I will have to marry you and see that you are taken care of."

"Gee! will you?" was his surprised answer.

I did, and the outcome? It is too early to tell. We have only been married four years.

F. A.

Preparedness.

I had been attentive to a young woman for several months and we were invited to a turkey dinner on New Year's day at her uncle's home. Her uncle was a preacher.

During the meal my sweetheart came upon the wishbone, so we each made a wish, and, in "turkey wishbone parlance," I got the major part of the bone and therefore I was to get my wish. I told her my wish was that she would marry me. To my utter astonishment she produced a marriage license and two wedding rings and our marriage immediately followed the dinner with the double ring service, her uncle performing the ceremony.

Our honeymoon was a five mile ride in a cutter.

The Strange Adventures of Young Robinson Grewso

By KEMBLE

His ma called him Robin; his dad called him son.
He grew like a weed and thought it great fun,
So—he called himself Robinson Grewso.

ONE sunny morning after the pirates had gone into the woods, Sweet Marie and Roy prepared for their escape. The bands around Roy's legs were soaked in water until they were loose enough to be removed and then the long swim began. The little mermaid led the way and continually warned Roy not to swim too fast or he would soon tire and that would be fatal.

"Take it easy, Roy," she urged, "and float every once in a while to rest yourself."

At Robin's camp the boys were getting the boat ready to go and rescue their pals.

"I'll not wait a day longer," sputtered Robin. "We are nothing but a set of cowards to stick around here, waiting, just waiting for them to come back. I don't care what Sweet Marie's orders were. She would have been back long ago if Roy had been able to get away from those fat rascals. Come on, get your jab poles, pile in and let's get going!"

Away they sailed, a slight breeze helping them along, Chin Chin at the mast head shading his pop eyes with his stubby wing. Little did they know that Sweet Marie and Roy were swimming steadily toward them.

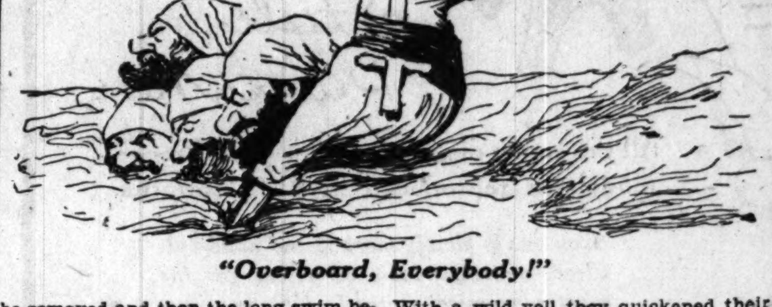
The pirates came marching through the woods at noontime shouting their song—

Hail, hail the gang's all here,
A bunch of little sinners,
We want our dinners, yes, we want
our dinners.

They stopped short when they reached the beach and found it deserted.

"Where are they?" screamed the pirate chief, and picking up Roy's leg bands, he fairly foamed at the mouth.

"Gone! Gone!" he bowled. "Not a moment to lose. Overboard everybody!" Grabbing their swords they stuck them in their belts and plunged into the lake. They were fast swimmers, all of them, and clipping through the water at a great rate, they gained rapidly on Roy and Sweet Marie. Soon they saw the heads of the escaped prisoners but a short distance ahead.



"Overboard, Everybody!"

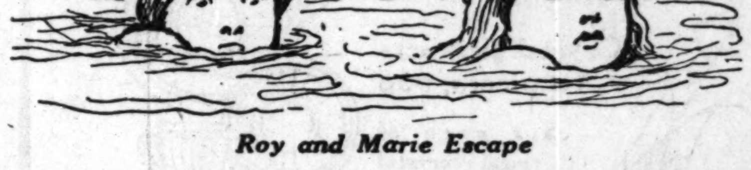
With a wild yell they quickened their stroke.

Sweet Marie and Roy spied them almost at the same moment.

"Save yourself, Marie," cried Roy. "Never mind me." But the little mermaid refused to leave the tiring swimmer. Roy gathered himself for a final dash. He would not give up, no matter how tired he was. Closer and closer came the pirates, their fat little bodies riding the waves with ease as their frog-like legs worked like machinery.

Just as Roy called to Marie that he could not hold out any longer, Robin and his pals hove into sight, Chin Chin screaming, "I see them, I see them!"

The pirates heard the bird's voice and turning, they beat it for home. Soon Roy and Sweet Marie were helped into the boat and the chase after the bandit crew commenced. Jab poles were made ready and just then a stiff breeze bulged the sail and with a triumphant cheer Robin and his pals bore down on the panic stricken outlaws.



Roy and Marie Escape

"Poke them! Sink them! Shove them under," screamed Chin Chin.

The pirates slashed with their swords only to get jabbed as they kicked and plunged. Sputtering and howling, they begged for mercy.

"Not a bit of it," called out Roy. "We are going to drive you to our camp and put leg bands on you. We need a gang to do some work for us and you are just the ones to do it."

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the humble dandelion, hugging the earth, should turn out, upon examination, to be one of the most efficient of all living creatures and one that is constantly extending its domain while holding its own in old time haunts!

Whoever has a lawn is likely to know the dandelion. It has traveled around the world and established itself in every nook and cranny. Examining the plant on the lawn, one would find a rosette of sturdy leaves flat on the ground. The lawn mower runs over it and does no harm. Man or beast may trample it to no avail. Cut it off and it grows again. Come rain, come drought, it survives. Examine its roots and they are found to be big, strong, and deep. They are able to dispute possession of the soil with all comers.

The dandelion makes itself obnoxious to grazing animals, and so they do not eat it. Chop it off every month of the spring and summer and it grows again. Some time before frost it is likely to find a chance to burst into its yellow bloom and ripen seed.

And when its seeds appear it does not have to depend for planting as does the apple upon the fancy of the boy who throws away the core. It does not need to coax the squirrel to bury it, as does the acorn. The dandelion puts wings on its seeds and they ride away on the winds to new homes.

The white globe of dandelion seeds is little less beautiful against its background of green than the yellow flower itself. Many a child has plucked a stem bearing one of these globes, held it high, and exploded it with a puff of his breath. When he does so a hundred seeds have been released that will scatter far and each bear the chance of starting a new plant. The foot of a cow, hitting this globe, may start these seeds traveling. A mere puff of wind may do it. One way or another, the chance of their being planted is most excellent.

There is efficiency from cradle to the grave for the dandelion. "Dent de lion" was its name in the beginning, which means "tooth of the lion," a stern name but not a misfit when the real character of this plant is known.

Mother!

Look at Child's Tongue if Sick, Cross, Feverish

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! See if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhœa, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easily after giving this harmless, "fruity laxative" because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup"; then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Face Powder Satisfaction

Black and White Face Powder is the choice of beautiful women everywhere because it gives face powder satisfaction.

This flower-fragrant powder is made of the finest materials and bolted through silk to give it a soft, even texture. It comes in just the right tints to enhance the natural beauty of your skin.

"It is far superior in quality to others I have been using," says Miss Marie Hackett, of Brooklyn, N. Y., "and is most satisfactory in its effect on my skin. I am always recommending it to my friends."

Black and White Beauty Creations are of a quality acceptable to those who seek the best, at prices within the reach of all—25c and 50c.

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

Recently I received a letter from an old school friend, telling me she would be in the city on a certain date and would like to spend the evening at my home. I answered her letter immediately and urged her to to call, then I remembered that I had already set that evening aside for my son's scout club to have a party at our home.

I said to my son, "I think I will change my mind about your party and put it off for a week."

"You can't do that, mother, you can't do that," he cried in a panic. "You can't help changing your mind, but you musn't change your promise."

M. T.

The children of a family brought a stray dog home with them and earnestly hoped for his adoption into the fold.

Discussions were usually held at the dinner table, and at this hour the poor creature stood forlornly on the porch just outside the dining room window. The older children of the family had presented their arguments in the dog's behalf, while Jamie, aged 4, silent thus far, very concernedly said: "You're talking louder and louder and pretty soon the doggie will hear everything you're saying about him."

DRINK WATER IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

To help neutralize these irritating acids; to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

FOR the woman who desires something different and smart, pattern No. 3136 will be just the thing. It is an excellent design for travel, business or general daytime wear and can be made of one of the novelty silk crêpes, silk twill, crêpe satin, flat silk crêpe, printed sheer velvet, angora jersey or kasha.

The dress buttons the entire length of the front and opens at the top over a vest of a contrasting color and fabric. The full length sleeves are gathered into fitted bands at the wrists, made of the same material as the vest, and if you like, the collar across the back may be made of this same material. Two inserted pockets at the left side of the skirt with welts made of the vest material complete this good looking dress.

A good many buttons are finished with shanks, and if you use this kind on this dress punch the eyelets exactly opposite each button hole. After the hole is punched, take a very shallow over and over stitch having the stitches as close together as possible, all around the punched hole. Use a stiletto to keep the eyelet in shape.

Button holes in a dress of this kind should always be overcasted from the wrong side. Use button hole scissors, and try first on a piece of paper to see that the size is correct.

Pattern No. 3176 is a design any young girl will delight to have used for herself. It is suitable for the classroom, or for afternoon wear, depending largely on the materials used. The long waisted bodice is cut in two pieces and has set-in sleeves. The sleeve pattern is perforated for short ones and the full length sleeve is gathered at the wrist into fitted bands. A straight, two piece skirt is gathered at the top and set on to the bodice.

A dress of this kind is very easy to cut and make, and no trimming is needed other than the bows shown in the sketch. Be sure to allow a sufficient hem at the bottom of the skirt and then divide the upper edge into quarters before gathering. Put pins in the middle back and front of the bodice edge and pin the skirt at each of these places and at the side seams. Of course, you will have the skirt seams come at the side seams of the bodice, and the center of each piece will be pinned to the center front and back of the bodice.

Baste and stitch in a wrong side seam; or, if you choose, you may take a right side seam and cover this with a narrow bias strip, stitched close to each edge. If you prefer, the bottom of the skirt may be finished with a binding, and the neck should have the same finish.

For class room wear a tan wool jersey with brown velvet ribbon, navy blue wool crêpe with bright red velvet ribbon, or a novelty plaid cashmere will be serviceable and inexpensive. And if you wish something a little dressier, choose a printed velveteen, and make the shoulder and waistline bows of faille silk crêpe.

The diagonal treatment of the neck and waistline, with the circular skirt fullness in the front, is the latest and most important movement of fashion. You will enjoy making a dress by pattern No. 3134, and won't find it difficult. The back is cut in one piece and is plain and straight. It will be pretty to join the circular part to the bodice with a piping of a contrasting color and this same material should be used to bind the bottom of the skirt and the neck.

The attractively shaped cascading jabot at the left side of the bodice is another smart feature of this dress and may be made of the dress material. Printed silk crêpe, crêpe Roma, crêpe de chine, chiffon, georgette crêpe, and crêpe satin or crepella are all effective materials for this design.

The full length sleeve is gathered into a narrow band at the wrist. Always transfer all notches, perforations and all other marks to your material when cutting out, and in setting the sleeves into the dress be sure that the notches front and back, as well as the perforations for the shoulder, come where they should. All the seams of any of the crêpes can be made French seams, even setting the sleeves in; but if kasha or other wool fabrics are used, press the seams open and finish with binding ribbon.

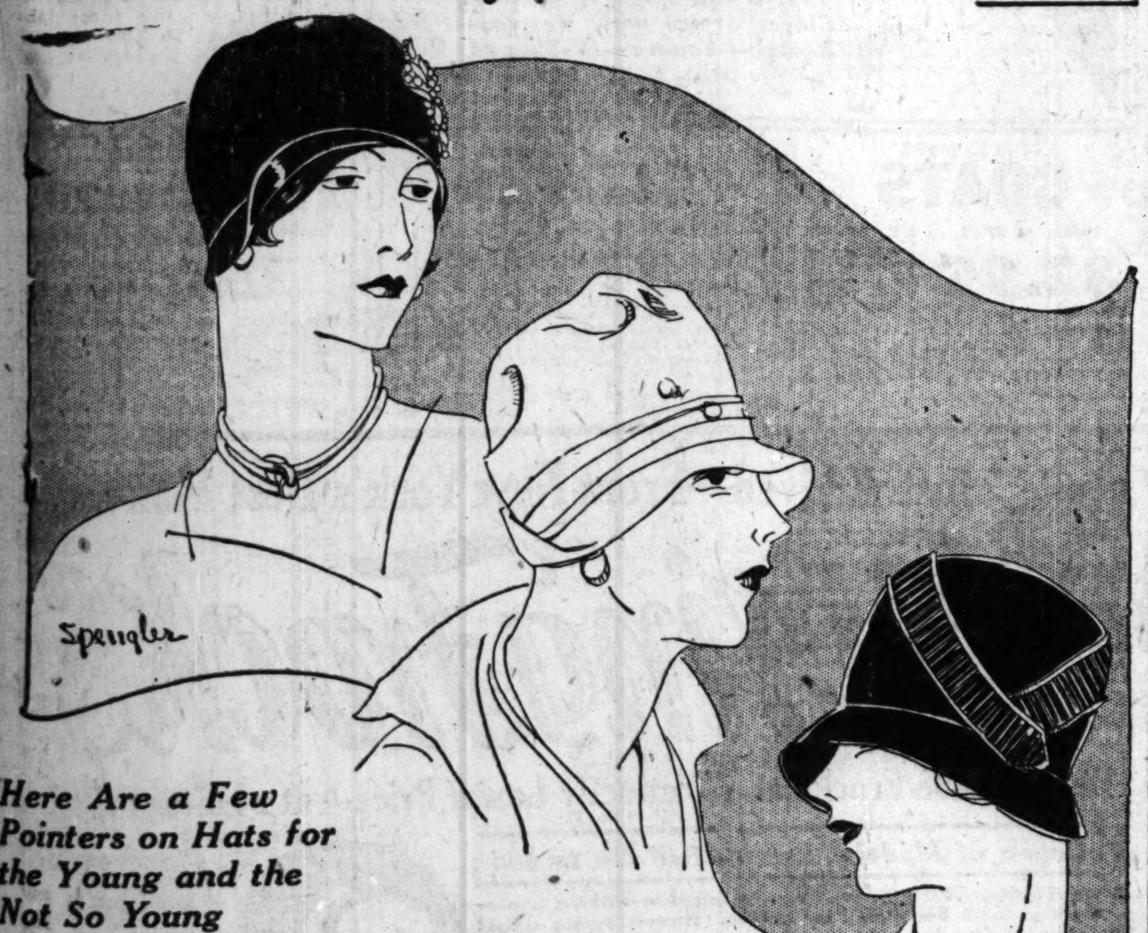
Practical and Fancy Needlework . . . By Clotilde



Here Are a Few Pointers on Hats for the Young and the Not So Young

> What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

THE hats that are being worn at this time of the season are either all satin or satin and bengaline combined. Heavy faille silk is also in great favor, in black and all the brilliant colors.

The debutante is wearing small, close fitting hats and the trimmings of those hats are the least of the designer's worry. Small flowers or a strap of the felt, just to give it a finish, are used, as it is quite the smart thing after purchasing the hat to remove the trimmings and substitute a diamond pin or pendant.

Matrons' hats have decidedly more brim these days. The crowns are higher, but draped into soft puffings and folds to give a soft line to the face. Pearls and brilliants in dart shapes, or bands of sequins or metallic cloth are used for trimming. A word about brims: a two inch brim with a slight mushroom across the face rolling to the back of the brim which is turned up so that it fits snugly to the back of the crown is typical of the form that goes with these soft crowns.

Mourning is standing in high favor for the first time in several years. It is worn by both young and old women. Heavy faille silk and georgette is the foundation for this. Bands made of tear crêpe and knife plaited georgette are used for trimmings. These bands are fitted to the crown, beginning down low on the right side and are brought up high across the crown in front and down again on the left side, and to the bottom of the crown in the back, finished off on the right side. They are two and one-half inches deep and are completed with a small cording of the same material all the way around the band.

Other attractive trimmings on mourning hats are ornaments made of all widths of black grosgrain or bengaline ribbon. No. 9 ribbon is the most popular width to use in making these.

WHAT'S NEW?

By Walter M. Schwimmer.

I've roamed about this hemisphere
And met some bimbos who are queer,
Yes, I've abhorred and oft been bored
by irritating pests;
But there's a mortifying gink
Who is so asinine I think
That he's a sap whom ev'ry chap quite
heartily detests.
For when by accident you meet
This nincompoop upon the street
He strains his vocal cords to bark
This masterful, inspired remark—
"What's new?"

Now, ev'ry time I see this chump
He gives my tender back a thump
And soon he'll slip a crushing grip that
dislocates my hand;
He wears a vapid grin on his
Insipid, idiotic phiz,
Then starts to whine the hackneyed line
he has at his command.
No erudite, sagacious speech
Does this dull ignoramus preach,
For when I greet this gawky guy
He makes this scatterbrained reply—
"What's new?"

I'd like to write the epitaphs
For all the human phonographs
Who still maintain this trite refrain and
ever ask, "What"s new?"
And here's a frank and fearful fact,
These imbeciles will make me cracked
Unless we balk this inane talk and have
it judged taboo.
Now, I am just a mild gazook,
I rarely censure or rebuke,
But, folks, some day I will conspire
To kill the ninnies who inquire—
"What's new?"

Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives

Station Signed Off.

John: This is funny tasting cake, Mary.

Mary: Well, that's as far as I got with the recipe when the station quit broadcasting. F. M. L.

An Awful Shock.

Slowly he opened the letter. As he read on, his face turned pale. His wife was looking at him with suspicious eyes. Then she burst out:

"I want to see that letter."

"What letter?" he asked innocently.

"The one you just opened. I can see the handwriting and I know it's from a woman. You also turned pale just now when you read it. Hand it here, sir."

"Here it is, dear," he answered meekly, "it's from your dressmaker." M. D.

Need for Expurgation.

Wifie—"I took the recipe for this cake out of the book."

Hubby—"You did right. It should never have been put in." M. R.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

YOU CAN MAKE WINTER FUN FOR YOUNGSTERS

THE joy of winter is in winter sports. When we can skate and go coasting January and February change from months of cold and hardship into months of robust outdoor exercise, that gives red cheeks, glowing health, and new vigor for everything.

This gives us our chance to do a world of good without trouble or expense. We know, of course, that poor children face winter without the means for enjoying it. To them it is often a season of hardship and sickness to be lived through as best they can—unless we give them the means to take advantage of all its health giving sports. And we can do it so easily!

Christmas has come and brought its harvest of new skates, new sleds, new clothing for the children, and meantime the old articles are lying around—outgrown, discarded by our own little ones, but still able to provide a world of fun for poor children who need all the outdoor exercise they can get. Why not get these articles together, and give them an entire new life of usefulness, serving children who will have nothing except as we think of them?

Warm clothing in particular is needed—suits, caps, dresses, mittens, mufflers, caps, and sound shoes. These are discarded by growing children while there's still lots of wear left in them. Almost every one of us can help. And we will, I know, when we realize how much good we can do!

Offers Morris Chair.

"I have a morris chair we are no longer using. I shall be glad to give it to any of your readers who would care to have it. MRS. M. P."

Here's a comfortable place to rest your weary bones at the end of a hard day. Write me if you'd like to have the chair.

Bathrobe Will Bring Comfort.

"I have a woman's bathrobe, size 36, which I no longer need. It is in good condition and any one who can use it may have it. MRS. L. F."

Cold, wintry mornings you'll find this wooly robe a great comfort. If this will fit you and you'd like to have it, let me know.

An Old Recipe to Darken Hair

By JANICE RANDALL

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

WANDERLUST.

Ship me somewhere east of
Tampa
Where they barbecue the wurst,
Where the maximum temptation,
Opportunely, meets your thirst;
Where quick cameras click coyly
At the orange laden trees,
And the naughty gulf winds
tamper
With some most exclusive knees.

On the sands of any bay
In expensive F L A
Lies a rotogravure heaven
Where plump golf bugs swarm to

On the coast of F L A
You can see if feet are clay.
And while gossips buzz like
thunder
There the tan goes all the way.

INDEPENDENCE.

MAMIE HICKEY LOOKS BACK.

[Mamie knows she is an A1 stenographer and a B1 chorus lady, but she can find no glass partitioned cozy corner in an affluent corporation. Clothes chosen to knock a booking agent off his swivel chair prevent her from getting by an office manager's outposts.]

How memory makes the dead
days dear!
I drop a salt and homesick tear
Recalling our old firm's cashier.

How could I ever think him crude
And kid him for the office prude,
When he, on pay day, would
intrude?

That weekly check! I scorned it
then,
And snubbed that dub for lesser
men.
Ah, could I meet him once again!
My clothes, designed to smite the eyes
Of hard boiled Broadway booking guys,
Aren't what a secretary buys.

No office manager who's sane
Would credit me with half a brain.
Each man believes his eyes, 'tis

THE YOUNGEST BOOK SHELF

By Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevans

In offering suggestions for the selecting of children's books, as I have been asked to do, it is necessary to make some sort of general grouping according to age. Of course, these lines drawn between ages can never be hard and fast ones, because some children develop more rapidly than others in their love and interest in books. Some times this is due to an innate love for them, some times to the influence of their parents.

However, there are certain underlying principles that can govern us in our choice of reading matter for the children, and there are certain facts that we have learned about the tastes of children at different ages.

Since, on the whole, books for the very little children are apt to be less thought about in the buying than those for any other age, we might begin by considering how we shall choose books for the littlest bookshelf.

From the time a baby is a toddler until he is, say, 5 years old, all his books must be chosen with two things in view—that he will look at the pictures, but the text will be read to him. So we must judge a book's suitability by its illustrations and its subject matter for reading aloud.

Forming His Taste.

In some ways, for the very young child's book the illustrations might be considered the more important, because the child sees the pictures but you can doctor up the text a little as you read. So what we want to look for in the way of pictures is not only something that will appeal to the child, but also something that will help to form his taste.

First, the pictures should be clear and full of action. They should be simple in technique and without too much detail. A mass of detail is very confusing to a child. Simplicity is a desirable thing. And it is a lack of this quality that we find in many illustrations that are so decorative that they overstep the mark as far as the children's interest is concerned.

In the second place, the pictures should measure up to some sort of artistic standard. By this I don't mean that they need be "arty" or of the over decorative type, but they should be well drawn or well painted. We don't want to place before our children's eyes the cheap and the garish, nor the frightening, nor the grotesque.

Reading Matter.

Now, as to the reading matter. In his very first books a child doesn't need much story—in fact, a long story or poem tires him. As he grows a little older he can stand more and more in quantity of text. Also, as a rule, he requires that a story be about pleasant things. Little children don't like ugly or unpleasant happenings, nor unhappy endings. My little boy couldn't stand Mr. McGregor in dear old "Peter Rabbitt," just because he put Peter's father into a meat pie! And I know of lots of other children who were made miserable by similar little things—and even asked their mothers to hide the books containing them.

Where all of the book is good except a page or a sentence it is better to skip the picture they don't like and delete parts of the story to suit their taste than to take the book away entirely. Because the time will come when they'll pass this tender hearted stage and not notice this part at all—when, in fact, they will enjoy all sorts of gory and melodramatic happenings. But not when they're at this youngest book age.

The subjects that the little children like their stories and poems to be about are pretty well defined. They adore animals, either as they naturally are or dressed up and doing half human things. They are interested in a story about all sorts of homey, familiar activities that come within their own experience, and they like to have read to them the adventures and doings of everyday children like themselves. Fairy tales really belong in a later period, being, after all, a more sophisticated type of story, though a few exceptions are to be found in some of the very simple folk tales that are being put out in charming book form today.

Two Periods.

It would be fascinating to have side by side, if it were possible, a collection of children's books of two periods—one representing those of today and the other the output of a time no longer ago than the childhood days of Kate Greenaway. Books for the children of even so recent a date were considered of such little importance that, illustrated, they were sold for a few pence a copy in England. What dreadful things they must have been! While today some of the finest artists of the world are lavishing their talent on the illustrating of books for children.

When it comes to buying books for the younger children, it is rather staggering to discover how much the fine ones cost. Many people feel it is a waste to spend money that way, thinking that little children are too destructive to own expensive books. They are really not so, if they have any sort of intelligent training. They can readily learn how to handle books, though their greatest difficulty when very tiny is in the turning of pages. Even a deft child has trouble with this at the beginning. So when he is learning, just don't give him books with brittle paper to practice on. But where it is feasible from the expense end, he should have some of the amusing and beautiful books of today given to him to use and to own.

But all the children's books need not be of this class. There are many inexpensive ones which are good and become dear to their hearts. These are books in which the illustrations may not measure up to the highest canons of art, but which are so quaint, so clear, so delightful that they deserve a place of their own in the littlest library.

List of Favorites.

A booklet is being prepared containing a selected list of the names and publishers of books for the littlest children, but a few are noted here for immediate use. This little list is made up of a few tried and true books—not books that look charming to the adult eye—but books little children really love to have read and re-read to them.

Women the World Over

The national bureau of economic research finds that the average wages of women are about three-quarters those of men.

Women in Russia are the freest in the world, according to members of the American investigation committee on Russian women.

Club women in London are making an earnest endeavor to break into the exclusive men's clubs there. So far they have been denied membership.

More than 60 per cent of all the women in Germany are now earning their own living and many of them are the sole support of whole families.

Mme. Paul Claudel, wife of the French ambassador to the United States, is a good cook and an excellent housekeeper.

A chain of 40 restaurants located in the principal cities of England is managed by a woman, Mrs. Hannah Mendelssohn.

It is estimated that from 19 to 24 per cent of the working girl's income must go toward being "well dressed and well groomed."

From paying teller to president is the record of Miss Hattie S. Bordewich, recently elected chief executive of the Oliva, Minn., State bank.

Following the footsteps of the younger women, the older women of Turkey are now beginning to have their hair bobbed as well as substituting modish hats for the silk scarfs of harem days.

In Tonga, the only independent nation in the south seas, a woman actually occupies the throne. Her majesty, Queen Salote, is absolute boss, not only over subjects, but over her prime minister as well.

Mrs. Leonard Wood, widow of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, first governor of Cuba, has been granted an annual pension of $6,000 by the Cuban congress.

The average wages of women are about three-quarters the amount paid to men, according to the National Bureau of Economic Research.

The chief occupation of the peasant women in soviet Russia is the weaving of rough cloth for husbands and children on hand spindles.

27 Germ Diseases
that hands may carry
—just from touching things
Compiled by LIFE EXTENSION INSTITUTE

"WHY CAN'T JOHNNY COME OUT TO PLAY?"

Sickness comes from germ-laden hands

Why risk family health when this purifying toilet soap removes germs as well as dirt?

ISN'T IT puzzling at times how children get sick?

Perfectly well one day—tearing around with their playmates—handling everything—pets, games, trash—just reveling in dirt and germs.

Then, perhaps, too long a wait before hands are washed—a chance for germs to enter the system—a little fatigue or exposure—and before you know it—sickness!

Germs—a constant menace

Children's hands, as well as grown-ups', are always in danger of disease germs, say health authorities. Hiding unseen on toys, books, pencils, money—and many other things we all must touch—these germs get on our hands and menace health. The Life Extension Institute lists 27 germ diseases hands may spread.

For health's sake, children in over 63,000 schools have been taught to use Lifebuoy—especially before eating. In millions of homes—for greater safety—everyone washes with Lifebuoy. Its antiseptic lather removes germs.

Note its clean scent

Children, men and women too, quickly learn to love Lifebuoy's clean scent—your proof that Lifebuoy purifies—yet which quickly evaporates after rinsing.

And the same gentle, antiseptic Lifebuoy lather that removes germs—purifies pores—keeps skins fresh, clear, healthy. Prevents embarrassing body odor, too.

Use Lifebuoy a week and you'll use it for life. Get some today.

Can You Believe It?
CONSTIPATION
of 40 Years Gone!

HERE IS, probably, the most remarkable statement ever made by anyone who has suffered from constipation and stomach trouble. But read for yourself what Mr. Allen says:

"I was troubled with chronic constipation for more than 40 years. Gas on the stomach often made me dizzy and bothered my heart. Nothing I used gave me more than temporary relief. I was told that there was nothing that would help much. But I tried Adlerika and am happy to say that my bowels are now very regular, and a slight case of piles is gone, too. Thanks to Adlerika I feel younger and happy again."—Geo. A. Allen, Westboro, Mass.

Quick Action Surprises

AS GENTLY and naturally as taking a drink of water, Adlerika acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowels, bringing immediate relief from gas bloating, intestinal stasis and chronic constipation.

The very FIRST dose of Adlerika often brings out astonishing amounts of old waste matter from the intestinal canal. This poisonous matter may have been in the intestines a long time, causing gas, headache, sleeplessness and many other symptoms. A treatment of a few weeks with Adlerika often corrects chronic constipation and intestinal stasis, so that just a small dose, now and then, keeps the intestines and stomach in a most satisfactory condition.

What Doctors Say

DR. H. LOUIS SHOUB, B. Sc., well-known New York pathologist, after laboratory tests on living subjects, states: "Adlerika very markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli. This feature increases the therapeutic value of Adlerika, because, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action, it inhibits the growth of these intestinal bacteria."

Dr. A. J. Lancaster, a physician of over a quarter century's active experience, makes this statement: "In the treatment of gastro-intestinal disorders, (where thorough evacuation is indicated), Adlerika has no equal."

Dr. Carl Weschcke, a graduate of the world-famous medical University of Heidelberg, Germany, in his private practice, first perfected the intestinal cleanser and carminative now known as Adlerika. It is a compound of a specially processed saline intestinal evacuant with buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other ingredients which expel gas and have detergent action.

Adlerika, unlike most other medicines, acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowels. It is recognized by many physicians as the one dependable remedy for gas, intestinal stasis and chronic constipation, or whenever real intestinal cleansing is needed.

Even if your bowels move every day, Adlerika may surprise you by bringing out poisonous, gas-forming matter which you would never believe was in your system.

In just a single month, over one thousand men and women wrote that they obtained wonderful relief from even a short treatment with Adlerika. Many of them said that now, after all other treatments and medicines had failed, they are at last rid of gas, indigestion, sour stomach, sleeplessness, nervousness or other trouble due in their cases to intestinal stasis. And now, these folks say, they are again able to eat and enjoy the foods they like.

No matter what you have tried for the bowels and stomach, Adlerika will surprise you.

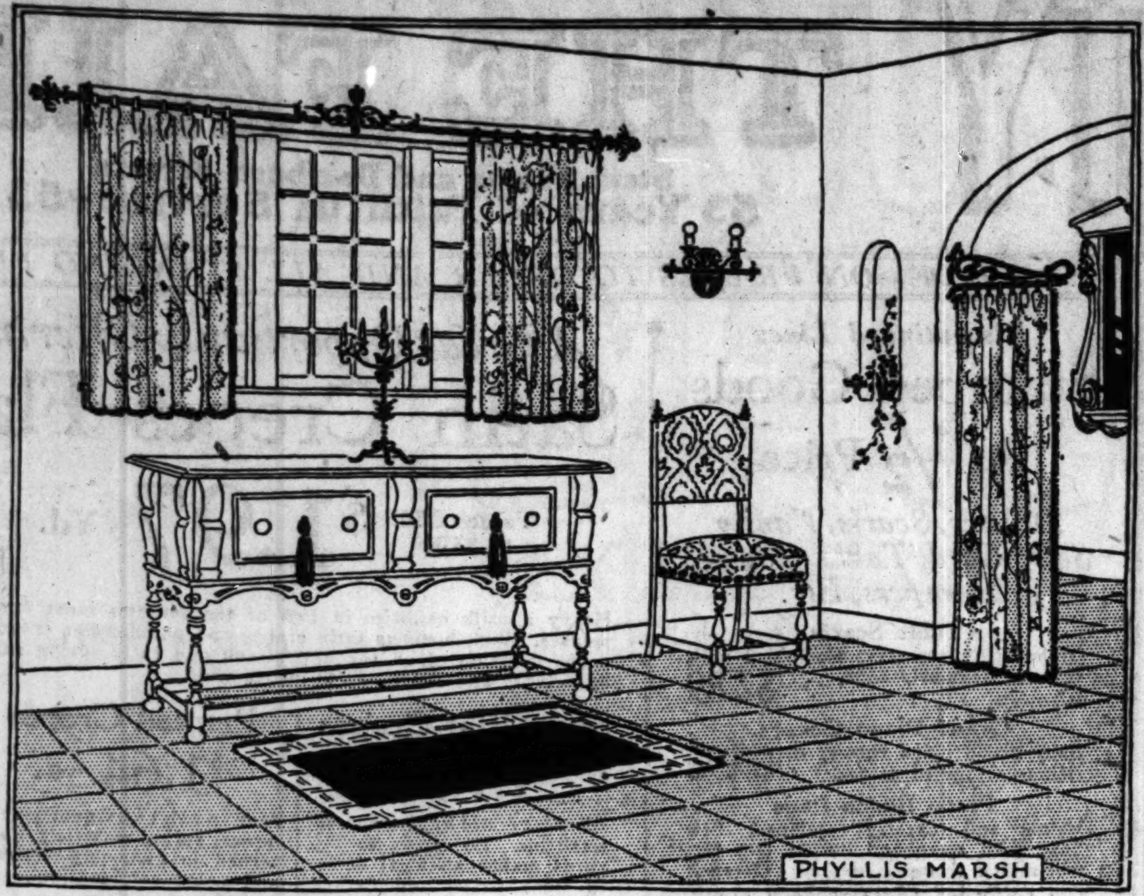
The HOME HARMONIOUS

The Furnishing of the Spanish House Is an Interesting and Worth While Task

By Phyllis Marsh



Interesting arrangement of Spanish furniture in a modern dining room.

AT the present time there is much interest in the home of Spanish architecture. The actual development of this type in this country took place in California and in Florida and has spread rapidly within the last few years.

From the standpoint of both climate and scenery these two states present an ideal setting for the Spanish home, with its colored exterior, patio, wrought iron grilled windows, and rambling dimensions. Nevertheless, this same architecture and its appropriate landscape gardening may be transplanted to almost any state today with most charming results. The modern architect, like the modern furniture designer, is gifted with a keen understanding of properly applied adaptation. It is to him that much credit is due.

Rough plastered walls, beamed ceilings, arched windows, luxuriant and colorful fabrics, heavily carved and rather massive furniture, intermingled with wrought iron, are characteristics of the Spanish interior. The floors of the Spanish home may be of decorative tile, wide oak flooring boards, tile effect in linoleum or rubber composition, etc. For this home in a northern environment the wood or linoleum floor is best and will be found much warmer in winter than a tiled one. The rugs used may be confined to those of oriental character, of rather bold geometric pattern, Spanish Alpujarras, which take their name from the district from whence they come, or other rugs of Spanish origin, as well as some of our own country's Navajo rugs.

Damask and silk velour play the principal rôle as drapery fabrics in the home of Spanish feeling. However, it is possible to use other suitable and decoratively effective fabrics, such as heavily embroidered Crewel panels, hand blocked linen in the heavy style of Jacobean pattern, wide, colorfully striped antique satins, brocatelles, machine made Sardinian embroideries, which are comparatively new, and materials of similar character.

The walls, which should be done in a rough plaster glaze finish, may be tinted in a neutral tone or may boast a tint of any color suitable to the exposure of the rooms. Walls of this type act as a sort of foil for the lovely, richly colored drapery fabrics and wall hangings of tapestry and other materials which may be used.

In various ways wrought iron plays an important part in achieving some of the decorative and characteristic charm of the modern Spanish home. For the side lights or wall sconces there are many suitable styles from which to make a choice. Then there are many styles of appropriate wrought iron drapery poles which can add so much to the distinction of a Spanish interior. For the arched in-swinging Spanish window or the arched doorway between rooms there is a new treatment being used in the form of wrought iron swinging curtain cranes. They are proving a wonderful boon to the perplexed home decorator who is so often at a loss to know just how to treat the in-swinging arched casement window and archways.

There are also separate table and floor lamps, as well as candle holders of various types to be considered. Some of these should be of wrought iron, while others should be of pottery of suitable contour, design and color, with parchment shades to correspond. If there is a fireplace [and we hope there is] wrought iron again enters into the decorative scheme of the Spanish interior, for andirons, fuel basket, and fire set must be of the same metal. Arched planked doors should be elaborately hinged with wrought iron, while an opening or two, between hall and living room, may display an attractively designed grille or wrought iron gate.

Last, but not least, comes the selection of furniture which may be of authentic or adapted reproduction. It should be chosen carefully, and should consist only of those pieces which are both useful as well as decoratve. If the room is not extremely large, it is always wisest to select a less elaborate or sumptuous style of Spanish furniture than that which one would choose for the room of large dimensions. However, in either case color must be introduced in characteristic style and to be typically Spanish must consist of bright reds, yellows and greens. These can be worked out in the draperies, wall hangings, rugs and upholstery and if carefully done will be capable of producing a room of unusual charm.

In selecting the furniture and in its placement, care must be exercised in order to achieve a certain amount of austerity and dignity which is characteristic of the Spanish interior. Much of this feeling can be relieved, however, by the use of colorful wall hangings, warm toned wall tapestries, and rugs, colorful draperies and upholstery fabrics. Often hanging wall-pockets for trailing ivy add a softening touch to the severity of the rough plastered interior of a Spanish dwelling. Small niches and recessed book shelves, gayly colored, contribute their share to the decorative scheme, with their colorful books and ornaments of various kinds.

The massive and elaborately carved construction and the sumptuousness of the upholstery of much of the Spanish furniture necessitates economy of use. For the average sized living room of modern Spanish adaptation, the following pieces of "period" style furniture will probably suffice for both comfort and a homelike attractiveness. An overstuffed davenport, upholstered in either a linen frisé, linen, ramie, or cotton velour or mohair, preferably in red, is the essential piece of furniture. Next, there should be two or three carved arm chairs of different designs, upholstered in silk or cotton velour, "cut" or brocaded velvet, or a small geometrically patterned linen frisé.

A couple of these chairs might be trimmed with heavy wool tassel fringe while the third one could be adorned with fancy antique finished large brass headed nails, and each chair upholstered in a different fabric. A side chair could be included to match one of the three chairs, which might be used for a cabinet desk when needed.

In like manner the dining room must, of necessity, be furnished in equally characteristic style. If more color is desired here the draperies should be of a colorfully patterned hand blocked linen in a bold design, possibly of Jacobean inspiration. Red and gold brocatelle, green and gold antique damask, plain tapestry, mohair, or any other fabric of similar character and texture suitable to the style of the furniture may be chosen for the chairs. The floor, whether covered in tiled linoleum, genuine tile, or in wood, may boast several small or one large Spanish or Oriental rug of suitable pattern and coloring.

The wrought iron wall sconces and the suspended central ceiling fixture should be fitted out with amber colored frosted bulbs to mellow the general tone of the room. Suitable buffet, serving table and between meal scarfs may be of brocade, velvet, damask, etc.

Massiveness and ornate carving are characteristic of the bedroom furniture of Spanish style. Therefore, let the selection of fabrics here be confined to those of proper color and texture. For a sumptuous effect damask lends itself best for both the draperies and the spread. If a less elaborate treatment is desired, let the hand blocked and printed fabrics of bold design and gay colorings substitute.

HAS FILIAL LOVE DISAPPEARED?

From the True Stories Recounted Today It Seems to Be a Very Rare Trait for the Modern Child to Possess

BY DORIS BLAKE.

A STORY was related to me of a couple who had reared two sons, each married now. Mr. and Mrs. Stone, we'll call them, had a lifelong dream. They lived on the east coast. Their dream was to spend a winter in California. Mrs. Stone had a sister living out there. Mr. Stone suffered periodically from rheumatism. He bore it with fortitude, smiling at Ma Stone when she'd say: "Never mind, daddy; when we get out to California you'll forget all about it."

For years, more than either could remember, when anything went wrong the panacea was: "Well, never mind; we'll go to California some day."

That thought cheered them. It cheered them through the measles and the chicken pox, croups, cold, flu, and through the afflictions common to the ordinary business of family rearing.

Mr. Stone was a moderate wage earner. Mrs. Stone, though not a native down east Yankee, had become inoculated with enough of the thrift germs to make every dollar account for its full value. No work was farmed out that her own willing hands would perform. The result was that there was a tidy little home free from mortgage and enough in the bank after the second son's marriage to permit of the long dreamed of trip to California.

They reckoned their "spree" would cut a considerable hole in the $2,000 they'd take along. But there was the insurance on which they'd met the payments with religious regularity. There were three other thousand dollars in the bank and Daddy Stone's lifelong employer dared him not to come back after his three months' leave.

The future optimistically bright, Mamma and Daddy Stone set about getting travel literature for the ideal route to their promised land. And Ma Stone set about getting her wardrobe. About a week later, she came home from the dressmaker's one evening. Her first born was sitting in the living room. His wife was with him. An untidy little fellow of 4 was dropped on Grandpa Stone's knee.

A Dishonest Son.

To make a painful séance as short as possible, the mission of the first born and his selfish wife was to get the lifetime savings out of the old couple. They wanted to go to California and set up in business out there. The son had heard of a great opening there for a fellow with a few thousand. Ma and pa were old. The son and his wife would go out and make the fortune and then send for them to come and live with them.

The little fellow had been primed for his part in the game. He begged grandma and grandpa to let him go to California, telling them with hugs and kisses how much he loved them.

The younger son, somehow, got wind of the transaction before the money was turned over. He went to his brother and among other things the older son emerged with after the combat was a couple of black eyes. The older son, he found out, was going in some wildcat gambling scheme and had no intention whatever of leaving California. The wife, it seems, was the inspiration behind the get rich plan and the threat of exposure of some early associations of hers was the final means of saving the old couple their savings and their trip to California.

A note was received a few days after the encounter of the brothers by the old folks, which read to the effect "that on further investigation of that California matter they found it inadvisable to consider it." So Mom and Daddy Stone set off in blissful ignorance of the real story of their regained fortune, and from recent postcards they are having the proverbial good time and wish we were all along.

That was a happier ending than the tales many parents might tell of sacrifices demanded of them by selfish children. Behind many a mother-in-law story in which she is related as the offensive and offending party is another tale that would quickly turn the tide of sympathy to her were she as ready to broadcast her wrongs.

Unjust Treatment.

One within my direct knowledge is the presence in the home of a mother-in-law who deeded over her house and her small savings on promise of being lovingly tended for the rest of her life. The money has long since been dissipated in an unsuccessful business venture, and the poor old woman is submitted to treatment no servant would stand for.

Another display of the injustice shown by children to their parents is that of a daughter and mother of three who bitterly resents the slightest intrusion of her parent in the conduct of her home. Yet that mother is constantly being subjected to innuendoes and on more than one occasion open criticism, because she goes along without asking her daughter's advice in the conduct of her life. This mother was upbraided by her daughter for not asking somebody's advice about what she should do with her money. If mother, on the other hand, had said that a dollar a week was too much pin money for the oldest of her daughter's three boys there would have been a bitter retort about whose business that was.

Children too often are given to thinking of their parents as inexhaustible sources of supply. Theirs is but to ask and they should receive. That parents are individuals with rights and preferences is a fact that should be more generally respected.

There are daughters who seem to think simply because their mothers have reached the grandmother age that pleasures of their own are almost expressions of indecency. They turn over their children for mother to look after while they lunch, dine, shop, or go on vacations. And a paid nursemaid would get more thanks for the duties performed, or less criticism, at least, if the instructions as to diet and clothes were not carried out to the letter.

There are other children who would take the last dollar from parents, caring little whether or not the old folks would like to look forward to the day when they might take things a bit easier. These, of course, are social outcasts, or should be branded as such in fiery letters.

Shirking Responsibility.

And there are children who run off and get married, bring home child, husband or wife, as the case may be, and expect their parents to assume their matrimonial burdens. And girls who find they can't, or won't get along with their husbands, run back home with their children, believing it is their divine right to be protected and provided for by mother and father, who may have all they can do to take care of themselves. That they may be eating up the old-age fund of their parents concerns them very little, if at all. They are the first to resent the burden of mother or father should the tables be turned later.

Parents, no doubt, will be mothers and fathers always—at least, the kind that are grafted on. They'll give their last dollar; they'll sacrifice their own desires, their own comforts, their well-deserved years of ease for parasitic sons and daughters. But if every grafting son and daughter would realize that they are parasites, and parasites of the lowest order, it might help them to see that after a couple has worked for, supported, and raised one family they are entitled to a few of the pleasures they have had to deny themselves throughout the years. Also, that they have rights entitling them and them only to the money they have managed to scrape together during their lifetime. Also, since it is their savings, they are entitled, as human beings, to spend those savings as they see fit.

And they are wise parents who make their children understand that they have rights to be respected. Parents who are not too sacrificial are in little danger of becoming burdens or of being burdened with the support of their children and their children's children.

Doris Blake's Answers TO LOVE PROBLEMS

> Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Do the Same Thing.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a girl dearly and I know she loves me, but every time I take her out she is always talking about another fellow. Do you think she is trying to make me jealous? BILL."

Don't let her get away with it, Bill. Make up a few fanciful yarns about some beautiful blonde who thinks you're pretty nice. She won't like it and it will open her eyes to her mistake.

Keep Her Busy.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am in love with a girl who loves me, but lately a friend of mine is interfering—flirting with her. Do you think I'll lose her? What can I do to keep her? J. D. K."

You needn't lose her if you're on the job, J. D. K. Make it a point to be more attentive than usual and keep her so dated up she won't have time for flirting with others. It's up to you.

Too Old for Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 17 and like a fellow who is 29. I believe he is too old for me. HOME GIRL."

You would have little in common with a man so much older. He is ready to settle down and you are just beginning to taste the good times of youth.

Parents Know Best.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 15 and am in high school. All the girls in my room go out with fellows. A fellow from my room asked me to go out with him but my parents disapprove. What shall I do? Is it correct for my parents to disapprove? He is a very nice boy. Please advise. CUTY."

If your parents disapprove, do not accept his invitation, Cuty. They feel you are still young and that it is for your best interests to wait awhile before going out with the boys, as it might interfere with your studies.

Taller than He.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am writing this for my girl friend. Her boy friend says if she gets any taller he won't go out with her because she is now a trifle taller than he is. ROSE."

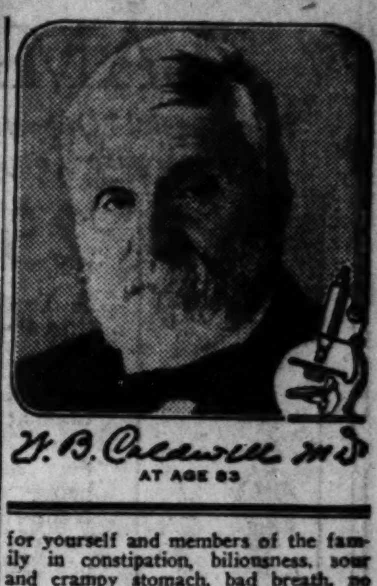
Boys like to feel they are strong and manly, that girls look up to them and depend upon them for protection. It's difficult for a boy to have this confidence in himself when he must look up to the girl, Rose.

Nice to His Friend.

"Dear Miss Blake: I introduced my girl to a friend of mine. Since then she does not seem to pay much attention to me. When I am alone with her she acts differently and does not seem to have changed. Please advise. "PUZZLED.""

Aren't you allowing jealousy to creep in, Puzzled? The young man is your friend and naturally she wants to be nice to him for your sake.

What Dr. Caldwell Learned in 47 Years Practice



W. B. Caldwell M.D.
AT AGE 83

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their systems. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Indoor and Outdoor Costumes for the Winter Resort are Now in the Limelight of Fashion.

By BETTINA BEDWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—This is the season of the year when fashions migrate. They begin their young lives in Paris, but the rigors of a rainy winter drive them to other climates for growth. The more hardy styles go to snowbound Switzerland for the midwinter sports and the ephemeral springtime clothes go south to the Cote d'Azur and Palm Beach.

At the moment Paris is being deserted. Everybody who is somebody is going to St. Moritz and the newest sartorial fancies of the Paris grand couture are going along. At St. Moritz the smart world goes in for strenucus sports of the kind that the high Alps encourage, skating, skiing, and so forth, for out of doors, and dancing every evening for indoors. Here all women are young, in pep and spirit at least, and there is little of the idling that passes the hours in the south. Clothes are correspondingly youthful, so that the styles that come out of St. Moritz are youthful sports fashions, whether they are created for the outside or the in.

Outdoor costumes are warm, simple, and essentially practical for wear anywhere that the snow falls in winter. For a number of seasons it has been smart, and a bit snobbish, to wear no fur on outdoor sports clothes designed for zero weather. Women bundled themselves up in all sorts of "woolies," as the English quaintly call them, but they would rather die from exposure than appear with an ounce of fur visible anywhere on their chic clothes.

This season sees a return to normalcy, for the smartest of winter sports outfits are at least fur trimmed, particularly the skating ensembles. Fur coats are not worn, but fur lined coats are permitted, and fur is of the simplest and most practical variety, being clipped rabbit, chevrette, and astrakhan, usually.

Very thick, lightweight woolens, usually the English types, are used to make the skating costume, of which our first sketch shows an excellent example. This ensemble from Drecoll makes walking or skating in the coldest weather a pleasure. It is designed to give the maximum of freedom with the greatest comfort.

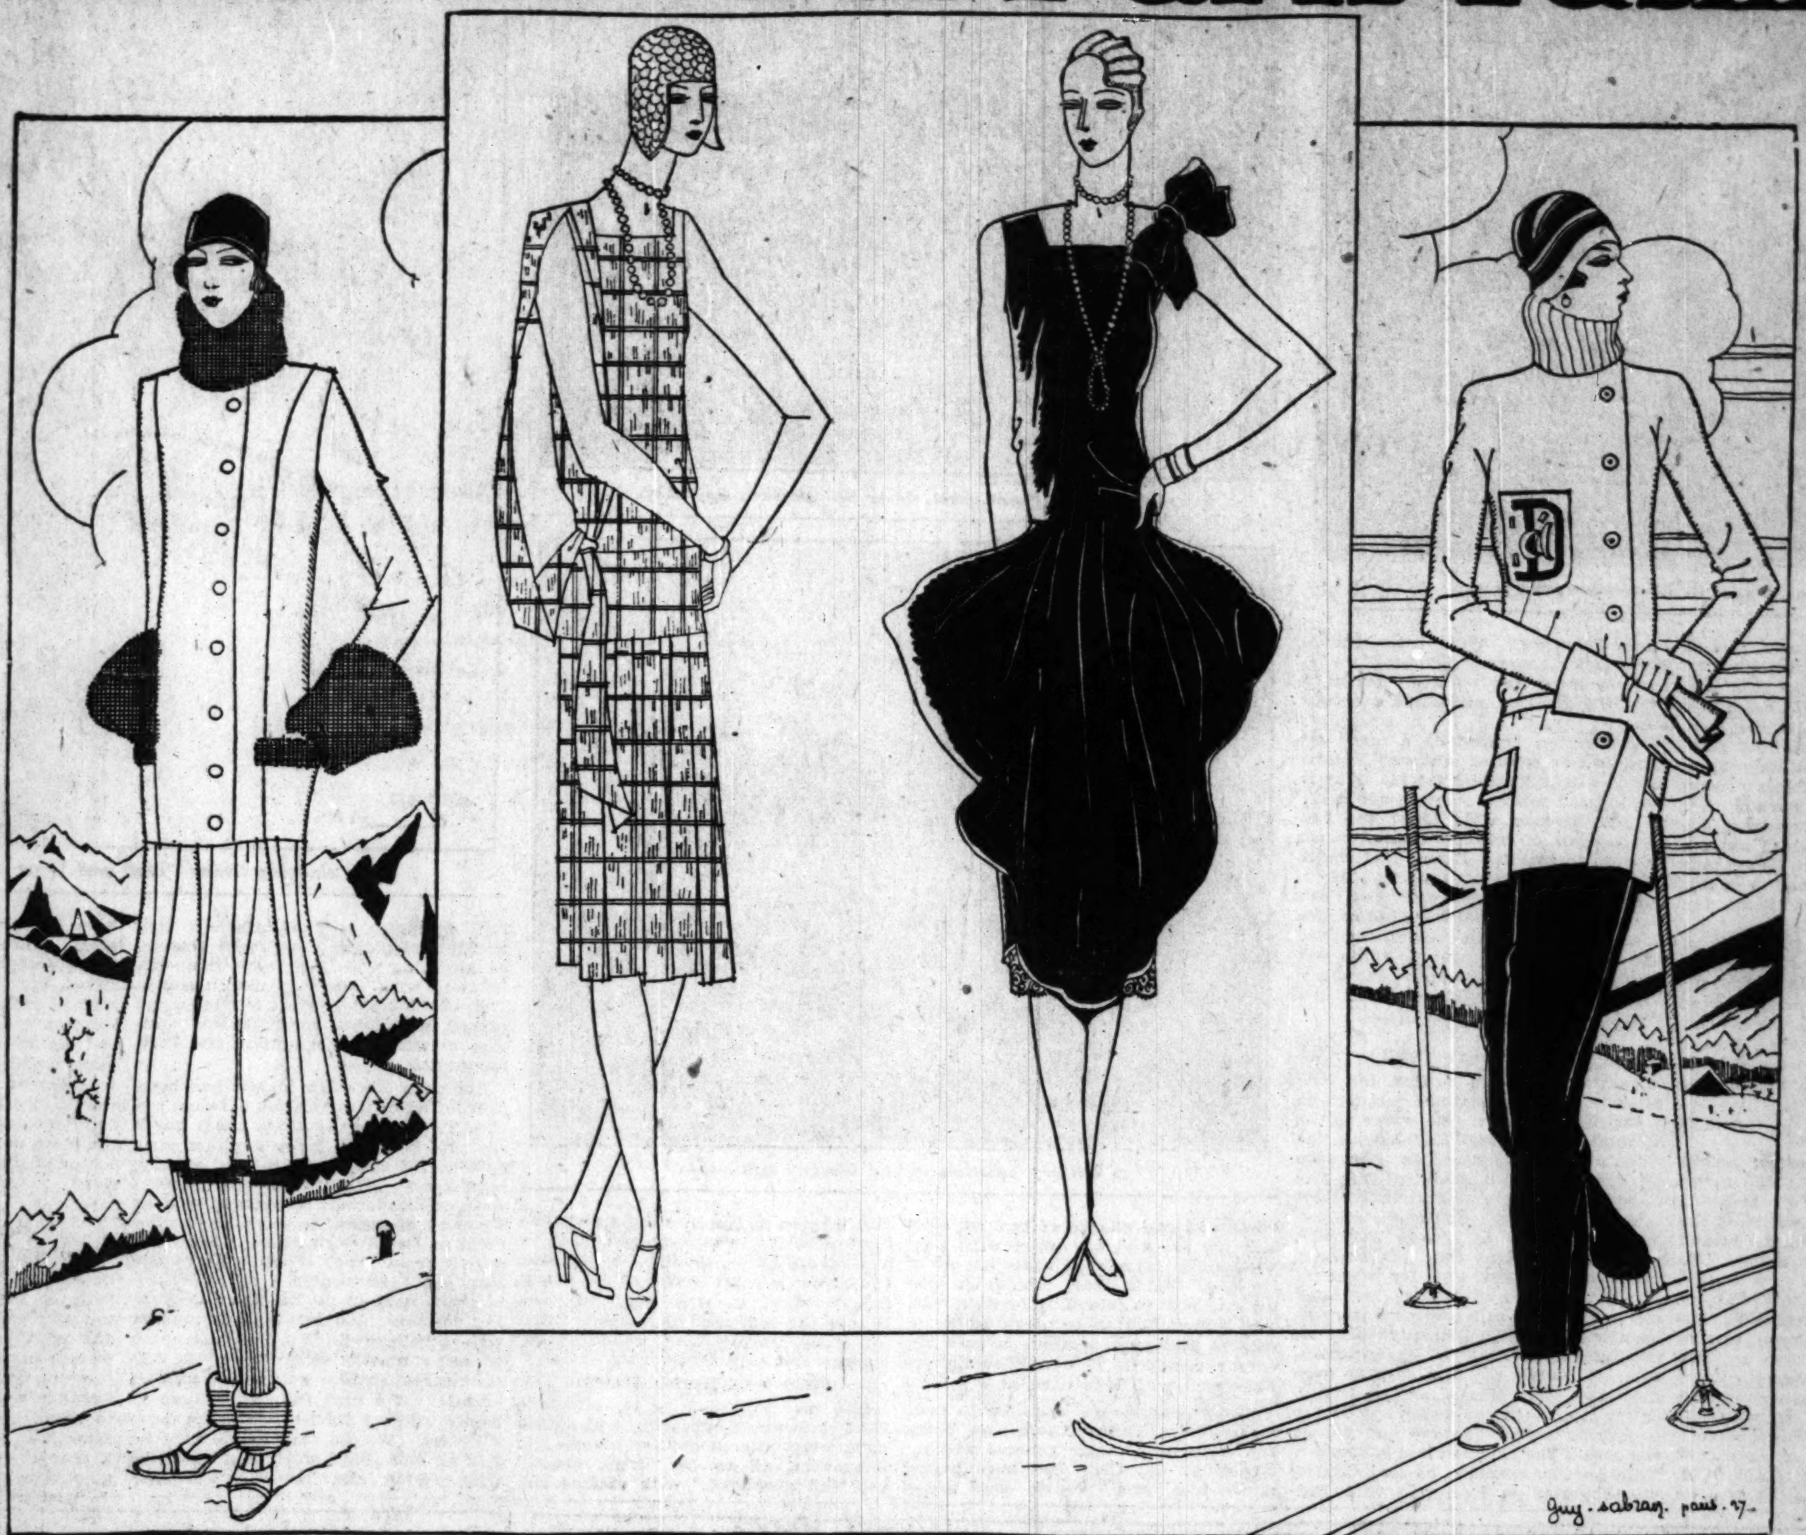
In color it is a dull blue, about the shade of the January sky, the horizon blue of the French poilu. The fabric is a lightweight woolen which is at the same time thick, being made entirely of angora. The jacket is very straight in line, buttoned up to the neck at the left side front, and fitted snugly at the hips and around the shoulders to keep out the cold. An enveloping collar of gray astrakhan and large flaring cuffs of the same fur make the jacket more chic and also more snug. Bands of this fur top the deep pockets which are roomy enough to give plenty of parking space to frosty hands.

The skirt is almost completely circular, made so by the circular godets that are placed all around it from hips to hemline. Under this skirt is worn a pair of knickers of the material of the costume, and under the jacket a heavy, coarsely knitted pull-over sweater, in tones of blue and gray.

A small hat of knitted wool, painted in the costume colors, accompanies it, and heavy ribbed stockings and half socks are worn with the skating or walking shoes of calfskin.

On the opposite side of our sketch is illustrated the skiing costume which is worn from morning to night by those women who go in for this most active sport. There is argument about, or place, for the skirt in this type of costume Long, loose trousers are invariably worn, and they are just as inevitably tucked into chaussettes knitted like a man's sports socks in heavy ribbed woolen.



Guy. sabran. paris. 27.

Fashion wears, 'mid snow and ice, the simple sports suit of blue gray woolen, collared and cuffed in gray astrakhan, and having a circular godeted skirt. Shown on the figure at the extreme left.

Red and beige plaid lame chiffon is the latest material for the dance dress. A spangled helmet covers entirely the close cropped hair. Second figure.

Third, the newest idea in the period frock is shown in this Martial et Armand model of black taffeta with panniers that decrease toward the hemline, and a petticoat of lace.

The skiing costume is made in two tones of green woolen, worn with an orange turtle necked sweater and gloves. The jacket is banded and embroidered in orange wool, and the cap is green and orange. Shown last.

This skiing suit is made of dull green overcoat woolen the trousers of darker tone than the jacket, which Drecoll leaves collarless so that the turtle necked sweater of orange wool may be seen. Three huge patch pockets of the material are placed on this jacket, outlined and embroidered with orange. The buttons are of orange colored leather, and the gauntlet gloves are of orange wool. The cap is made of orange and green wool knitted in stripes.

These are the costumes that are seen during the daytime, and for dancing in the evening the frocks worn also have a sports feeling, in most cases. One of the new style ideas for the dance frock, which comes from St. Moritz, is the dress of plaid chiffon, a sketch of which is shown on our second figure.

J. Suzanne Talbot, who created this model, makes it of red and beige plaid, with a thread of lamé to increase its brilliancy. The jumper blouse has a daytime, square decolletage, and is given charm and chic by the unusual drapery over the right arm, which ties in a knot at the waistline. There is a suggested bolero on this blouse, lifted in front to suggest a high waistline, and the very deep band below is tightly fitted over the hips.

With this blouse Talbot places a skirt of plaited plaid chiffon, and the smart helmet hat is also specially designed by her to accompany the toilette. The shape and the red spangled embroidery of this cap remind you of the armored helmets of olden days. A number of fashionable women are covering their bobbed heads with these decorative helmets when they go to dance or theater in the evening.

The taffeta dance dress shown on our third figure is one of the new models from Martial et Armand, and also one of the latest and most original of the new evening silhouettes Madame Vallet has given to this frock a panniered effect, in harmony with the trend of styles toward the romantic, and at the same time with real genius kept it entirely modern in feeling.

The fitted bodice has the novelty of wide shoulder straps, the left one tying in a stiff bow on the shoulder. The skirt is somewhat like an inverted maple leaf in outline, being very bouffant over the hips and descending to a narrow half circle at the hem in front and back. To leave this hem amply wide for dancing it is cut up at the sides and a finely plaited petticoat of lace is worn beneath, showing below the cut-out portions at the sides. This petticoat also furthers the period idea of the frock.

It is the frock or coat with some sort of past period inspiration which forecasts the trend of the mode of Paris. We have already observed that the Victorian and Spanish influences are at work to change the cut of our clothes, and now this idea of the panniered evening gown brings in still another.

Rid Yourself of Foot Ailments and Shoe Troubles for All Time

Perfect foot comfort is the world's great need. Most people do not realize that this comfort can be obtained from shoes that look well, at the same time fitting right and feeling good. Martin Larson & Son have discovered the secret that is ridding the world of foot suffering; they will gladly demonstrate their skill at any time—foot examination is FREE.

January Sale of Ready-to-Wear Shoes
(At State Street Store Only)

Every shoe in this shop has been made to Larson specifications. They are smart and marvelously comfortable; they give twice the wear of ordinary shoes. They are built to banish arch trouble—the arch at the ball of the foot as well as the long arch. They give instant relief for corns, calluses, and bunions. They permit constant use of the feet without any discomfort. We want every man and woman in Chicago to know the comfort these shoes afford. Hence, we want you to take advantage of these low prices! Complete range of styles and sizes—but they will not last long at these prices. Come tomorrow! Let Martin Larson demonstrate how good looking shoes can be, and yet be built for comfort.

My Dear Mr. Larson:

I find that my left shoe (Good Foot) has become somewhat worn, while the right shoe (Bad Foot) is in good condition and I would like you to make me a left shoe (Good Foot) and also the inner sole. Please use the same kind of leather. My reason for not ordering both shoes is that I expect to drive to Chicago in the spring and have you make a few changes of the shoes.

Suppose you have had a successful year and I hope a happy one, as I feel that you have made so many happy that I know it reacts to you.

Remember me to your wife and tell her my sisters and I are still watching the trains for that visit of hers.

Wishing you the greetings of the season, I am,
Yours very truly,
FRANK L. WARFIELD.
840 Munsey Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Mr. Martin Larson Sr.,
Chicago, Ill.
Dear Mr. Larson:

In my happiness at being able to walk after nine years of lameness and ill health, I want to express to you my sincere appreciation of your shoes, which brought about this change. With the ease and comfort these shoes afford, I feel confident to say this would not have been accomplished if it weren't for Larson's shoes.

I remain, sincerely,
MRS. MINNIE KREJCI,
1058 N. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

Martin Larson & Son,
Chicago, Ill.
Gentlemen:

Will you please make me up another pair of oxfords, tan finish, and send to address below. My home address is Macomb, Illinois, but will be here when delivery is made.

The other shoes received from you last Fall have proven very satisfactory, relieving all my previous foot troubles. Will appreciate your sending the new shoes to me as soon as possible. Yours very truly,
ALBERT E. BAILEY,
106 Beach Court, Biloxi, Miss.

Special Price Offer on Larson's Famous Sta-Right Shoes

These shoes are made from plaster casts of your own feet. Inwardly they tally line for line with your foot; outwardly they are as fashionable in appearance as more expensive custom-made shoes. Their scientific structure makes them unique—it is the only such method of shoe building in the country. Thousands of people—weary foot sufferers from all over the land—gladly testify to the blessed relief that Martin Larson gives them. Broken arches, pains in back and limbs, as well as headaches, mental depression and so-called rheumatic conditions all fade away as soon as you place your feet in Martin Larson's hands.

THE ROMAN wall of the American revolution was in the Hudson river Highlands. These mountains were the ramparts by which not only upper New York but also the New England states were defended, and upon which Washington based much of his strategy for operations in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware.

Possession of the Highlands was the condition upon which he campaigned. They held the line of communication with New England. The British regarded the American positions on the heights and in the passes as virtually untakable, at least after 1776, and therein lay for them the importance of Arnold's treason and proposal to sell West Point, the key position.

The Britishers' Lost Opportunity.

Very likely in 1777 Howe could have forced his way up the river from New York City and could have joined Burgoyne. Clinton, undertaking what Howe should have done, had reduced some of the forts, but Burgoyne could not hold out and the object of the relief was lost.

Howe had been lured away from the Hudson by an ambition to take Philadelphia, the continental capital. Washington had followed him and fought the battle of Brandywine and Germantown in an effort to keep the city. He failed, but he proved two things: that he had an army and that he had learned to command it in attack.

After the announcement of the French alliance, the British decided that Philadelphia must be given up and their forces united in New York. Clinton was in command then, and Washington followed him on his march to New York, offered him a fight, and had it at Monmouth.

In 1779 there was little action. In 1778 the British peace commission had come over with terms and negotiations had been refused in circumstances which were regarded in London as humiliating. Washington was at Middlebrook, N. J., in a strong position, with great freedom of movement. Patriot stores were at Easton, Pa. Clinton was instructed by his war office to draw the American into a position unfavorable to him, and in consequence he began feinting to accomplish this. If Washington made a false move Clinton would get the stores at Easton or he might get Washington himself. A water and land attack was made on the approaches to the Highlands and an American line of communication was broken.

The American Line.

It was the most convenient one between New England and Washington's position in New Jersey. It crossed the Hudson at King's ferry, from Verplanck's on the east side to Stony Point on the west. Both places were taken by the British and garrisoned. Washington had been apprised of the plan and he moved from Middlebrook toward West Point. The change of position had not bettered Clinton, and in another attempt to draw Washington into a false move an expedition was sent against the Connecticut coast and nearby towns. That was in the hope that the cries of defenseless New Englanders would attract a military blunder. The work was ruthlessly done and many towns were burned, but Washington did not move from his Roman wall. Clinton decided against further penetration of the Highlands and returned to New York with his main body, leaving Stony Point and Verplanck's strongly held.

This was opportunity for a bit of military drama which Washington apparently loved. He knew what the effect of it would be if successful even if material improvement seemed obscure or lacking. He decided to take Stony Point by storm. It would be of a piece with Trenton and the capture of the Hessians.

Stony Point.

Stony Point at its greatest height was about 150 feet above the river. It was a bold promontory reaching out a half mile into the river from the shore line, rocky and wooded. Inland its slopes ran down to a marsh. To the east, where there is now a government lighthouse, was a natural stone bastion, which the British had fortified. The inland slopes toward the swamps were protected by two lines of abattis. On the summit there were seven or eight batteries with communicating trenches. It was reasonably regarded as safe from assault, and to the Seventeenth regiment of British infantry, under Lieut. Col. Henry Johnson, it was known as Little Gibraltar. With artillerymen, a grenadier company of the Seventy-first regiment and some loyal Americans, the garrison numbered over 600 men.

Washington decided on a night attack, and he selected Anthony Wayne and the light infantry for it. Wayne was a great soldier. He was distinctly an assault man. He knew the full composition of infantry morale. He believed in smart uniforms and smart soldiers. He knew that a trim soldier polished, shaved, and powdered, had something in him that a ragged soldier missed. He knew that the Americans put too much reliance on rifles and marksmanship. He wanted bayonets. That was his greatest emphasis, and Washington agreed with him.

Von Steuben's Pupil.

Von Steuben had taught him the proper use of the bayonet, and he was a thorough convert. He wrote to the secretary of war in 1777: "I don't like rifles. I would almost as soon face an enemy with a good musket and bayonet as with ammunition without a bayonet, for although there are not many instances of bloody bayonets, yet I am confident that one bayonet keeps off another, and for want of which the Chief of Defeats we have met with ought in a great measure to be attributed. The Enemy knowing the defenseless state of our riflemen, rush on. They fly, mix with or pass thro' the other troops, and communicating fears that is ever incident to a retiring corps. This would not be the case if the riflemen had bayonets."

On another occasion he said that he would prefer to lead men with bayonets and one charge of powder than risk his life and his effort with men with forty rounds and no bayonets. He knew that military advantage was not complete in defending breastworks. The soldier had to be given some incentive and some weapon to gain the enemy position. It wasn't enough to fight well with legs covered.

Wayne had been a brigadier in command of the Pennsylvania line, doing the work of a major general without the rank. St. Clair had been placed above him, and Wayne had asked Washington for another command. The light infantry was being formed as a separate corps, destined to provide the chosen assault troops of the army, and Washington was glad to give Wayne the command as a soldier fitted for it by temperament, military philosophy and experience.

Plans for Surprise Attack.

The morning of July 14, 1779, the light infantry battalions with 1,350 men, were ordered out for parade and inspection, all to be "fresh shaved and well powdered," with rations and full equipment. The infantry was without suspicion that there was to be anything else, but inspection was followed with orders to march south. They went down to Fort Montgomery, turned west and went through the pass between Bear mountain and Torn mountain.

For days American scouts had been preventing communication between the countryside and the Stony Point garrison, intercepting farm supplies and cutting off opportunities for gaining intelligence. The march passed southwest of Donderberg mountain, and at 8 o'clock at night the corps was at the farm of David Springsteel, a mile and a half from Stony Point. There the men got their orders.

There were to be two main assaulting columns, and in them no musket was to be loaded. If a man attempted to load a musket or fired one, the officer nearest to him was to kill him instantly. If a man faltered or made a backward step, the nearest officer must kill him. Wayne said to his men he had no idea this punishment would be deserved in any instance, but such were the orders and must be understood. They would be enforced.

One detachment was to have ammunition, but this was only for the purpose of hiding the real attacks. Maj. Murfree commanded this small outfit, and as soon as the silent columns came under fire, not returning it, the detachment with loaded muskets should fire as rapidly as possible to deceive the garrison into thinking that the main danger was in the front and center of their works at the foot of the slope.

Other Commanders.

Col. Febiger, a Danish officer, attached to the patriot cause by sympathy at the beginning of the war, was to lead a column up from the southern end of the swamp, and Col. Butler was to attack from the north. Both columns were to have selected men in advance with tools for cutting a way through the abattis. All were to wear something white, paper, a cockade, or a feather in their hats, to be distinguishable in the dark, and the height was to be taken without firing a gun except as indicated; the firing was for deception and not for execution.

Washington had chosen midnight as the hour, on the assumption that the sentries and officers would be less on the alert then. The favorite time for a night attack was in the later morning darkness, and then a careful garrison took extra precautions. The tide had come in and the sandbars which had to be crossed required deeper wading than had been anticipated. A British sentry heard a splash in the water and opened fire. Murfree's men at that signal began to fire, bringing the British commander, Col. Johnson, down to the center as it was intended.

The Battle.

The garrison was bewildered, but sprang to the defense of earthworks and guns. The assault tore its way through the abattis and took the lower lines of works, plunging up in the dark under a fire to which the response was only with steel at close quarters. Wayne received a flesh wound in the head. Febiger had his nose seared by a bullet. Capt. Selden of Meigs' regiment was shot in the side. Capt. Phelps, Lieut. Palmer and Ensign Hall of the same regiment were wounded.

The two columns storming from opposite sides had timed the movement so well that they were only a few minutes apart in reaching the crest. A French officer, Lieut. Col. Fleury, was the first into the flag bastion and lowered the flag. The British were surrendering in squads. Johnson, returning up the slope, saw that his situation was hopeless and surrendered to Febiger. The Point was taken with a loss of fifteen killed and eighty-three wounded. The British had sixty-three killed and seventy wounded and 543 were prisoners. One man escaped, Lieut. Roberts of the artillery, who got away by swimming to the British ship Vulture in the river.

Yanks Lauded by Foes.

Later the British were freely complimentary, and they conceded that there had been an exceptional generosity in the quarter given when asked. The practice of war permitted a denial of mercy in such an assault, but the attack had been as conspicuous in humanity as it had been in courage. The marked effect which Washington sought had been produced, although Stony Point was not retained, and no attempt was made to hold it when Clinton came back up the river to retake it.

Wayne's report to Washington of the success said: "Our officers and men behaved like men determined to be free." He had led what he believed to be an attack in perfect conditions, the men without ammunition. Incidentally, the last attack of the war, that of the light infantry on the Yorktown redoubt, was executed likewise with unloaded muskets.

For the successful and celebrated soldier who commanded in the assault, Stony Point fixed a descriptive title. Thereafter he was Mad Anthony.

Pork Furnishes Fundamental Meat for Men of Every Fashion

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington

ONCE upon a time there was a "plum pudding pig." Needless to say, he was an English pig and not a Chinese pig (the Chinese are supposed to have learned how to roast pig so as to get a divine flavor, and they still use pig meat enormously), nor a Poland-China pig of the U. S. A. In fact, we do not know what kind of a pig he was from English denominations, whether a Yorkshire, Hampshire, Berkshire, or a Sussex, Dorset, Leicestershire, Northamptonshire, Oxfordshire, Cambridgeshire, Cumberland, Welsh, or Essex, or whether they imported him from Naples or brought him over from Germany.

All of which suggests, we guess, that there have been many varieties of pigs, yes, and styles, too, to suit localities, the manufacturing modes of the time, a country at large (suppose it is a pork packing country), and a change in customs, perhaps, the world around. In other words, styles in pigs and changes of styles in pigs have come about because of admirations for some special breed, and sometimes have come about because of belief in the greater utility of one breed as compared with another, and so forth, and so forth.

Great changes in styles have come about, as changes in other styles have come about, because of changes in styles of living among residents of town and country and because of such a change as that of the mild curing of bacon and ham, saving many a cut of pork from a continuous bath in salt brine. Terrible names have been given to salted pork, mainly, probably because terrible things have been done to it in the cooking. But think what it has been with beans, and men in the Arctic cold have eaten raw salt pork and thought it as sweet as sugar! Swines' meat, indeed, has been a principal food among most early peoples, and the acorns and beechnuts of the great primeval forests seem to have been largely a provision for the pigs' upkeep.

Pig as Food.

Pork is food. Pork has justified itself as a food for the races of men because it has been the means of securing, inexpensively, to impecunious people a food element (fat), without which they could not live with any degree of comfort and efficiency. The more wintry the climate, or farther toward the north or south pole anybody goes, the more indispensable does fat in the diet, and plenty of it, become. It is something that "sticks to the ribs." The process of digestion is slow but sure, like the burning of hard coal.

The old time idea that it was indigestible merely because it was slowly digested has lost its force. It is only when pork is wrongly cooked that it is indigestible, and any fat may easily be rendered indigestible by poor cookery. The fat of pork can be cooked so as to be appetizing and not the least bit coarse or greasy, when one chooses to do nice work with it.

Cuts of Pork.

No animal seems to yield meat in so great a variety as the pig. The differences between different cuts, enhanced by different treatment, is so great as to make them seem almost like unrelated meats. This fact is especially brought out with the curing of the meat, and the cured parts have a greater variety of names than most people notice.

The fresh cuts give primary meat dishes, like roasts and chops and sausages, while what are called the secondary parts, like pigs' feet, the head, tongue, lips, liver, heart, brain, and even the tail, are now handled with great expertness by the packing houses and presented in most undeniably attractive ways in wholesale quantities.

One may see pigs' feet, pigs' ears, pork pluck, and so forth, packed to look as uniform as dates in a box. More than this, these are labeled "fancy meats," and the packers have had recipes prepared for their cooking, some of which have labels that entitle them to be called epicurean.

If we go to the English practices, we can find names that seem most interesting for all these secondary parts and for small cuts of the main carcass of the pig. Some of these names have never been used in the United States.

Inexpensive Cuts of Meat.

Not only the spare ribs, but many other pieces of pork can be used for exceedingly inexpensive dishes of a good deal of worth and attractiveness. Even the neck bone of the pig has on it both fat and lean, though some butchers profess to have great scorn for this piece and will not sell it because they can buy a whole barrel of neck bones for $1, or have been able to do so in the past.

People who know how use scraps of pork in making chop suey or even the elegant soufflé. One dollar can be made to do the work of three by buying such parts. Almost everything now is cured, so that we have blades and cheeks and other parts in that condition and they would be just as well worth while cooked fresh.

Imitation Chicken.

For this dish one may use either an inexpensive piece of pork or the expensive loin. In the latter case you choose a pound of the best roast or buy what would be cut into chops, but do not have it separated, or, for the inexpensive cut, have the shoulder piece without the bone. It is likely to have more fat because today the loin is so closely trimmed. Besides that use one carrot, four or five cups of cold water, two onions sliced, some celery leaves, green pepper and any other seasoning to suit. Perhaps we should emphasize the fact that the loin is superior for this dish.

Make the piece of meat immaculate and put in with the prepared vegetables in the cold water, bring to a boil slowly, and then cook it gently for one hour, skimming at the start if necessary. Leave the pork in the liquid, but cool it rapidly. When cooked in this fashion it should be as tender as possible; in fact, no meat is more tender.

Pork Soufflé.

Put through the food chopper enough of the pork cooked in the imitation chicken style to make one cup. Strain the liquid in which the pork was boiled and take two cups of it for a gravy. There ought to be another cup which one can use with the soufflé that is made.

Thicken the two cups of liquid with four level tablespoons of flour, mixing them with two level tablespoons of butter, cooking them till smooth; then add the liquid and stir and cook until it thickens. With care one may add a cold liquid to the hot combination, but if inexperienced it is best to have the liquid hot, or cool the other.

Add the chopped meat to this cup of gravy with salt to taste, if the meat was not salted in the first cooking, as it may have been when it had been cooked till tender. Also add a few grains of cayenne pepper. Stir into this mixture one or two beaten egg yolks, then fold in two egg whites carefully, keeping the mixture as fluffy as possible.

Pour this mixture into a buttered earthen baking dish, sprinkle with bread crumbs, and bake until it puffs. Then serve immediately.

To vary this dish have in the baking dish an inch layer of cooked spaghetti, pour the soufflé mixture over it, cover with crumbs and a bit of grated cheese, and bake like the soufflé, and serve at once. This may be served with a gravy made of the liquid in which the pork was cooked first. This may also be baked in individual portions and it is not half bad when cool.

Creamed Pork.

Prepare the gravy as for the soufflé, but make it a little thicker and add a little cream to it when it has cooked up, till thick. Cut up the cooked pork in dice or slivers and heat it thoroughly in the gravy.

A little green pepper chopped fine and a little sweet pepper or pimento in slivers cooked first in butter, and even some mushrooms may be added to this to make it like chicken à la king.

Creamed Fresh Pork.

Cut one chop or one slice of pork into as thin slices as possible, leaving them the full length of the piece, or make them into just mouthful sized pieces. For one chop use two tablespoons of flour, with a level teaspoon of salt and a little pepper. Roll the thin slices thoroughly in this seasoned flour.

Melt two tablespoons of butter in the frying pan and when it is hot enough to brown, put in the pieces of pork and cook them about one minute to a side. Then stir in the left-over flour, let the whole partly cool, add a cup of milk or a cup of half milk and half cream; then put this over the fire and stir until it thickens, after which stew gently for twenty minutes. This must be cooked gently, because of the milk, which will easily boil up, get too thick and also have a little skin over it—three undesirable effects. To have it cook in the gentlest possible way it may be covered and stand where it barely simmers.

This may seem remarkably like fried chicken in a creamed gravy. It is something of our own devising and we have before now enlarged considerably upon its attractiveness. We think immaculate fat from a pork chop, when browned and seasoned and served in a cream gravy, a good rival for the delicate marrow of French cookery, while when it is not treated in the right way it is barely edible, and a large number of people will reject it in eating a chop. In gravy of one sort or another, or in a pork pie, one will not even recognize it as fat.

An inexpensive piece of lean fresh pork can be cut up and fried and furnish seasonings for the excellent cream gravy of this sort, and it has other possibilities.

Fried Spareribs.

In this dish we also used milk in making a gravy. Other nations than ours understand how milk with pork fat changes it into something dainty and quite different from what we ordinarily get in pork dishes. In this case use spareribs instead of chops for frying.

Make them immaculate, cut the bones apart—about four inch bones are best—roll them in seasoned flour, put them into a hot frying pan in which there is a little butter, cover the pan and let the spareribs cook gently twenty minutes to a side, take them up and add milk to the pan, stir until it thickens, then bake the spareribs and simmer for ten minutes.

You can gnaw these bones without getting the slightest odor of pork fat, and we recommend trying the gravy on crackers, because we tried this combination on someone and got "Yum, yum."

The wish to make this dish on my part was inspired because, in a rather nice place at a good price, I had pork tenderloin that was dry and distorted from being cooked with too much fire, which also made it greasy. No gravy was served with it and there was no complementary relief like fried apples or applesauce or greens, therefore I turned from this most expensive pork meat to see what I could do with less expensive.

Stuffed Spareribs.

Spareribs rolled, skewered so the piece will stand like a basket, then filled with sour stuffing over which slices of bacon may be skewered, will be deliciously flavored if baked, and some people will like the dressing while others will not. Pork, at any rate, yields some of the best flavors baked of any meat we have, and the tiny bit of meat on the sparerib is no exception.

The apples in the dressing may make it too wet, but because of the tiny bit of meat they need to be protected by wetness, though not too thoroughly, in which case they will not get the browning that makes them delicious.

Boiled Spareribs.

Boiled spareribs are salt spareribs and a man's dish when cooked. Wash off the salt thoroughly from both sides of the meat, then soak for about three hours. Put them on to cook in cold water and when this boils skim it if it is necessary.

Simmer for three hours. Prepare vegetables separately and serve on the same platter as the meat. To have them flavored like the meat, partly cook them, then add to them some of the cooking water around the spareribs. When the water cools in which the spareribs are boiled, skim off the goodly portion of fat which arises and use it as dressing.

Salt spareribs are among the most inexpensive of meats and are boiled with vegetables, but we do not recommend this because it spoils the vegetables, both from the flavor and nutriment standpoint. They lose their own good flavor and acquire one quite different when cooked with salt meats, and do not balance the objectionable side of the meat as they otherwise would.

Frying a Pork Chop.

First we recommend that you buy your chops from a butcher who knows how to cut them; otherwise get a board and cleaver and learn to cut them yourself, buying a block of loin. A careless butcher will give you one chop thick and one much thinner, sometimes a whole third thinner, which makes the cooking difficult. At any rate, pork chops need trimming at home in order to remove weathered edges of bone in particular, as well as to take off fat that has been handled and is far from immaculate.

A little of this fat, tried out, is best to have in the pan when frying the chops, but butter can be used. One tablespoon of fat is enough for six chops. Have it genuinely hot in the pan when the meat is put in, after which immediately lower the fire so that they may cook eight or ten minutes to a side, according to their thickness, without a sign of burning.

If they are in a shape to flatten they may be cooked in a shorter time. In addition to the fats there should be some seasonings like salt and pepper, and some people like to add a teaspoon of vinegar. When ready to turn the chops, turn up the fire for half a minute and then quickly down again. The fat will have been increased by what was cooked out from the chop and with seasoning is excellent with boiled potatoes or with greens, or it may be left in the pan and potatoes may be cooked in it. Pan fried potatoes in this fat are extra crisp and palatable.

Too much explaining can hardly be given in reference to the correct cooking of a pork chop. It is necessary to remember that the water in the lean part of the pork is not as well protected as in beef streaked with fat, so it can be easily dried out from a pork chop in about two minutes, in which case the chop necessarily shrinks, and after that, although more cooking is required, it cannot be well done. The juices must be kept in the meat and when you see them come out in the pan and harden to look almost like the white of egg, the chop is being cooked in the wrong fashion.

A DOLLAR FOR YOUR DREAMS

Friday night's dreams on Saturday told
Are sure to come true be they never so old.
—Old Saying.

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? We're not referring to the day dreams which build castles in the air; we're interested in the nocturnal variety which beguile or disrupt slumber. If you'll mail us an account of your prophetic dream we'll pay $1 for every letter published. Address Dreams, Chicago Tribune.

The Ruined Church.

Do dreams come true? Yes, I know they do, for several of mine have. One peculiar one occurred years ago. I was devoted to my church and wanted to go to the evening service, but did not.

The next morning my young nephew said to me, "Aunt Marion, your church burned last night."

I replied at once, "O, no, it was only damaged." I had dreamed that I went to the church, and as I was to enter the body of a tonsured priest was borne out of the door in an open casket, and it was turned on the side. Low, sad music was heard.

As soon as possible I went to the church and found its walls standing. The door was broken, but closed, and an officer was guarding it to keep out the curiosity seekers who wanted to get inside. I turned away and went into an alley to look in a window, climbing up on a pile of ashes to get there. As I did so I saw an envelope box, with a cover, on the dump, and, glancing into it, saw a Japanese doll, with tonsured head, lying on its side.

Here was my tonsured priest, of whom I had dreamed. Strange to say, the organ, an unusually fine one, had been battered to pieces, the fire having started in it. Here was the sad music of my dream. M. A.

A Strange Visitor.

In my dream I distinctly saw a man. Every detail of his face made an impression on my mind, and in the morning when I awoke, a sense of fear possessed me. I knew positively I was to see this man.

Two days later someone rapped at my back door. I started toward the door, but before I could reach it, it opened and, horrors! it was the man of my dream.

I was paralyzed with fear. When he walked past me and sat down at my kitchen table and said, "Lady, some food."

Needless to say, I hurried to do his bidding, as I was all alone in the house with my small boy. I put everything on the table that I could find in the pantry and made him a cup of hot tea, as it was a bitter cold day.

After eating, he moved back his chair, commenced to rise, while I felt as if my last hour had come.

When he got to his feet he made me a curtly bow and said, "Lady, I thank ye from the bottom of my heart," and quickly turned and went out, closing the door behind him.

Needless to say, after that episode my doors were always kept locked. A. J. B.

A Friend in Danger.

Many of my dreams have come true but recently I had a rather horrid one concerning a dear friend of mine. I saw her standing in her living room as though listening intently. She seemed to hear a noise and turned to find a man confronting her with a pistol. She screamed. He fired and fled through the window. She fell across a couch, her blood dyeing a Spanish shawl I had given her as a Christmas gift. The next day I warned her but she treated the whole matter as a huge joke, and would not take me at all seriously.

Exactly three weeks from that date, a burglar entered her home and my dream came true verbatim. The man was never caught, though my friend recovered and everything turned out well, except the shawl, which is ruined. K. K.

Care of Babies

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good. And it is so pleasant to take. Taste it yourself, and you'll know why "Children Cry for It."

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or when you even suspect the approach of constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. See how quickly all fretfulness or wakefulness will cease!

Only one word of warning: the above advice is true of genuine Castoria.* The kind called Fletcher's bearing Fletcher's signature is genuine—and does not contain opiates or any other drug that can harm your baby. Other preparations may be just as free from harm; the writer does not know as to that, but does know one family whose children will never make the experiment!

*SPECIAL NOTE: With every bottle of genuine Fletcher's Castoria is wrapped a book on "Care and Feeding of Babies" worth its weight in gold to every mother or prospective mother.

GOODBY TO EXTRA POUNDS

by Antoinette Donnelly

This Is the Third Week in the Reducing Program. Are You Growing Slimmer?

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—At dinner the other night the conversation turned on reducing, as it undoubtedly did where you dined the other night. Dinners sure do inspire that topic, don't they? I suppose because a woman can't escape her conscience for one single dinner hour any more. The cream soup gives it a jab [the conscience, I mean]. The scrumptious looking meat course with the creamed 'taters, creamed cauliflower gives it a few more jabs. The salad with the tasty mayonnaise dressing stabs it outright, so that when the baked Alaskan dessert comes in it's for crying out loud about how you can keep a figger respectable with meals like that!

At this dinner was a young woman worried, as a goodly number of us are, about a fat rash breaking out somewhere on her person. A bright young person, she, under ordinary circumstances. But there's something extraordinary about the gullibility of the most intelligent people on reducing cures. She backed me off in a corner after the meal to whisper the good news. It seems her sister-in-law's aunt's daughter had just heard about it. You mix castile soap and epsom salts and rub it on your stomach and lo! before the new moon is out you haven't got anything so vulgar as a stomach.

You might just as well rub the mixture of soap and epsom salts on the back porch for all the good it's going to do your figure. So I told the bright young woman, but her defiant glance convinced me she'd go home and try it once, anyway. It won't do her any harm. Soap never did anybody harm so far as I've been able to make out. But it certainly won't help her by half a pound to get into her last year's wedding dress.

And so it goes with all these magic potions for going to bed fat and waking up thin. I never mind people talking them. I just sit back and bide my time. I don't even say "I told you so." And I've seen and heard a lot of crazy suggestions tried and found wanting. Some of them are harmless, some of them not. Diets, like the tomato and egg diet, the lamb chop and pineapple, the skimmed milk and baked potato, and so on, continued over a long period, have undermined many a good constitution. Some of these freak menus, I will admit, reduce, and quickly, but there is not a sufficient number of calories, nor do they contain the mineral elements, vitamins, proteins and carbohydrates necessary for a healthy reducing program. They average about 600 calories, which is not sufficient for the day.

The Third Week.

This is the third week of our safe and sane reducing course.

Tell me, how are you getting along? Has anybody been telling you lately that you're looking better? Wait till you hear what they'll say when you get through with this course. That is, if you're playing it on the level. No cheating between meals, or at them! You're on your honor, as I told you!

Did you walk that hour, daily, every day last week? Did you follow the diet I carefully worked out for you? I did that to save you the trouble of counting up your calories, believing you would show your appreciation by sticking closely to the menus prescribed. Good things to eat they were, too, weren't they?

This week I'll work out another food program for you. And if there are any last minute applicants who want to get in on the class work, they can start right in. If they want to catch up, they can put themselves on a liquid diet for three days. Three days on liquid [nonalcoholic] is a good thing for the stomach. One day, in fact, of liquid and no food is recommended by physicians as a rest system for this vastly overworked organ. Some authorities think the three day liquid diet an excellent method of controlling the appetite for the regular reducing diet to follow.

It is also advised for its beneficial effect of ridding the system of poisons that have accumulated from excess food intake. A business woman I know puts herself on one of these three day liquid diets every time she feels she is putting weight on again. From Friday to Monday is the time she chooses, and she loses five pounds each time. Also, she reports a grand sense of general well being.

We wouldn't recommend it for a longer period because the weight loss would be too quick, and there aren't enough of the food elements needed to maintain health. It would be classified as one of the freak diets if continued indefinitely. But as a prelude to a reducing régime it is all right, or as a weight regulator, as with my business friend, orange juice is the preferred liquid.

More Exercise.

About exercise. The first week I let you off without any; the second with an hour's brisk walk daily. Now with this, the third week, I want you to do some trunk exercises and keep up the daily walks. Any games, outdoor or indoor, skating, swimming, basketball, and so on, that you can take advantage of—so much the better. Now that your reduced diet is shaking the fat loose, you need exercise to strengthen the flabby muscles, and to stimulate the blood so that it can wash out the tissues. Exercise helps break down the fat. So that you really need now, at the very least, ten minutes workout morning and night. It is better to take it in two ten minute sessions than one twenty. If there is great overweight, your doctor should be consulted. He may advise against exercise until the heart has been relieved of its fat burden.

1. Here is that good old timer—keeping the knees straight and touching the toes with the finger tips. Begin with the hands raised over the head.

2. Same exercise, practically. But touch the left toes with the right hand and the right toes with the left hand. Feet wide apart. Begin movement with the arms spread full length from the shoulders; not overhead.

3. Spread the feet wide. Hands clasped overhead, swing like a woodchopper down between the legs and bring the clasped hands back over the head, going back as far as you can comfortably. Do this same woodchopping movement with the hands clasped together over the right shoulder and swing down outside the left hip. Reverse and swing down over the right hip.

4. Lie on your back on the floor, hands at sides, feet together. Try to bring the feet up over your head. This you may practice in bed and bring the feet up to touch the head board. Don't strain on this exercise. Just come up as far as you can comfortably and let it go until another day. Tomorrow you'll do it a little better and easier.

5. Still in a prone position, keep the heels tight to the floor with the hands extended overhead. Pull yourself up at the waist and carry the upper body forward trying to touch the toes with your hands. Don't strain. Take it easy at first.

6. Now sit up on the floor. Cross your legs and draw them up fairly close to the body, but not too close. Grasp the ankles with the hands and rock the body forward and back.

Those are six exercises for you, morning and night. Go through them with each movement repeated ten times. If you find at first exercises 4 and 5 strain, do them no more than five times. Gradually increase.

Menus for the Week.

Now for this week's menus:

Monday — Breakfast: Grapefruit, poached egg on thin toast, coffee with half cup hot milk.

Luncheon: Celery and apple salad, bran muffin, a gelatin dessert, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Clear beef broth, roast lamb, stewed tomatoes or brussels sprouts, romaine salad with vinegar dressing, prune whip [no cream].

Tuesday—Breakfast: Stewed prunes, two strips broiled bacon, whole wheat bread [thin slice toasted], coffee with hot milk.

Luncheon: Small serving minced meat on slice unbuttered toast, vegetable salad, three crackers, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Vegetable soup, 1 serving lean meat, medium serving mashed potatoes with little milk but no butter, large helping carrots, raw fruit.

Wednesday — Breakfast: Orange juice, small serving oatmeal with a little milk, a hard roll thinly spread with butter, coffee.

Luncheon: Clam broth, asparagus on toast [unbuttered], baked apple, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Broiled lamb chop, spinach, large serving; medium baked potato with dash of butter, half grapefruit.

Thursday—Breakfast: Apple sauce, 1 piece toast lightly buttered, 1 slice crisp bacon, coffee with hot milk.

Luncheon: Scrambled egg on toast, whole wheat muffin, lettuce and tomato salad with salt and vinegar dressing, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Fruit cocktail, slice of liver and bacon, well done; boiled potato with salt only, turnips, small serving custard.

Friday—Breakfast: Orange juice, cereal with ¼ cup milk, toast and coffee with hot milk.

Luncheon: Cup of cream soup, large bowl lettuce salad, 1 slice bread, tea with lemon.

Dinner: Halibut, trout, or cod; baked potato, string beans, endive and watercress salad, tea.

Saturday—Breakfast: Grapefruit, 1 strip bacon, bran muffin, coffee.

Luncheon: Omelet [1 egg], slice toast, fruit cup.

Dinner: Vegetable soup, lean meat, cabbage, sliced tomatoes, canned peach or pineapple.

Sunday—Breakfast: Orange or other fruit, small serving cereal with ¼ cup milk, egg, slice toast, coffee.

Dinner: Medium serving roast beef, small browned potato, string beans, vegetable salad with vinegar dressing, fruit dessert.

Supper: Slice lean meat, sliced tomatoes with salt dressing, three graham wafers, and glass of milk.

Keep the menus, please, to guide you. Next week I shall tell you more about foods and let you try and work out your own menus afterward, as you must get familiar with their values.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

by Antoinette Donnelly

V. McG.: THE FINE LINES UNDER and around the eyes are due to the tissues being very soft. Discontinue massaging them with creams and apply compresses of cotton saturated in cold salt water. Do this morning and night, and, if possible, during the day.

D. F.: HERPES IS COMMONLY known as cold sore. Where cold sores appear frequently there may be digestive disturbance which should be corrected. Camphor ice may be applied. It is well to soften the lips with cold cream several times during the day.

J. S.: IF THE BIRTHMARK IS indistinct it may be disguised by the use of stage paint, getting the shade which blends with your skin. Birthmarks are treated by skin specialists.

R. H.: THE WAY TO TREAT whiteheads is to soften the skin with hot towels, then open each blemish with a sterilized needle and press out the contents. Daub on a little peroxide of hydrogen and gently massage with cold cream. Send a stamped addressed envelope for my booklet on the skin.

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

C. D.: YOU WISH EXERCISES for constipation? Try these: Jump rope, just as the children do, for five or ten minutes, morning and night. Stand with the feet together, hands on hips, bend forward as far as possible. Keep the knees straight. Return to erect position. For other exercises send a stamped addressed envelope.

CHERIE: IF YOUR HAIR IS TOO thick you may have it thinned out by a hairdresser, and brushing it every day for five minutes will make it glossy. When the hair is dry it is lusterless, but by brushing it the fat of the sebaceous glands is distributed, giving it a silky appearance.

I. B.: YOU MAY BLEACH THE under arms with a teaspoonfull of peroxide to which a drop of ammonia has been added.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

LEAP YEAR PROPOSALS

The year 1928 spells hope for the aggressive maiden who wants to change her name. Given the time, the place, and the man, all she needs is the courage to pop the question. Do you know of any girl who invited a man to leap into matrimony with her? Was her proposal met with eager acceptance or graceful refusal? What was the aftermath? If you'll send us a brief account of the affair we'll be glad to pay $1 if we print it. Address Leap Year Proposals, Chicago Tribune.

Blonde and Brunette.

It was in leap year when little colored ribbons accompanied by poetry was sent to a man by the girl who wished to propose to him that this proposal took place.

In our office there were two girls, a blonde and a brunette, who adored the same man, secretly.

One day the blonde said to me, "I believe I'll send Mr. Smith a leap year letter, signed 'Blonde,' and perhaps he'll find out who sent it."

A few days later Mr. Smith walked into our office and said, "You know, girls, I received a leap year letter and I don't know who is proposing to me."

Before one could say "Jack Robin" out walked the brunette from her files and said, "I sent the letter to you, Mr. Smith," just as though she were handing him a letter from her files.

He was stunned for a moment, but finding himself, quickly said, "Well, what ribbon would you prefer?"

Brazenly, "The white, of course," ["if you want me for your wife, send me back my bow of white"].

From that day friendship sprang up and within six months they were married. Mr. Smith seemed very happy and told the girls how his wife proposed and how glad he was she did it. M. C.

Accepted the Hint.

She was a pretty little first grade teacher and he, the father of one of her pupils, was a young and attractive widower. For some reason he had formed the habit of dropping in at the school to inquire about his daughter's progress.

One afternoon he remarked to the little teacher: "You have been very good to Helen Ann. I appreciate your interest in her."

The little teacher was fussed: "I think a great deal of Helen Ann," she said. "I wouldn't mind taking care of her always."

Then, realizing what a shocking admission she had made, she was overcome with confusion.

"We'll discuss that more some later time," he answered briefly. From his attitude she could not tell what he really was thinking. And, O, how much she wanted to know! A few weeks later she found out.

And we've lived happily ever since. C. S. A.

Surprise for Mother.

It was back in the good old days when a fraternity pin on a shirtwaist meant something.

He never knew how much guile there was in the loss of her collar pin. Quite innocently he suggested his fraternity pin as the only fastener in the emergency.

Imagine his consternation at her gleeful chuckle, "O won't mother be surprised," as she transferred the pin from his vest to her shirtwaist. C. B. T.

In Need of Help.

Four years ago my girl chum and I had a girl's bachelor apartment in Chicago. We always had our boy friends in for Sunday dinner.

My beau had always had his mother to look after his clothes until he came to Chicago, so naturally he wasn't very prompt in sewing buttons back on.

Every Sunday when he came I would sew on a button or maybe mend a pocket.

One day I was standing in front of him sewing buttons on his vest, when I said to him, "I think I will have to marry you and see that you are taken care of."

"Gee! will you?" was his surprised answer.

I did, and the outcome? It is too early to tell. We have only been married four years. F. A.

Preparedness.

I had been attentive to a young woman for several months and we were invited to a turkey dinner on New Year's day at her uncle's home. Her uncle was a preacher.

During the meal my sweetheart came upon the wishbone, so we each made a wish, and, in "turkey wishbone parlance," I got the major part of the bone and therefore I was to get my wish. I told her my wish was that she would marry me. To my utter astonishment she produced a marriage license and two wedding rings and our marriage immediately followed the dinner with the double ring service, her uncle performing the ceremony.

Our honeymoon was a five mile ride in a cutter. A. M. M.

The Strange Adventures of Young Robinson Grewso

By KEMBLE

His ma called him Robin; his dad called him son.
He grew like a weed and thought it great fun,
So—he called himself Robinson Grewso.

ONE sunny morning after the pirates had gone into the woods, Sweet Marie and Roy prepared for their escape. The bands around Roy's legs were soaked in water until they were loose enough to be removed and then the long swim began. The little mermaid led the way and continually warned Roy not to swim too fast or he would soon tire and that would be fatal.

"Take it easy, Roy," she urged, "and float every once in a while to rest yourself."

At Robin's camp the boys were getting the boat ready to go and rescue their pals.

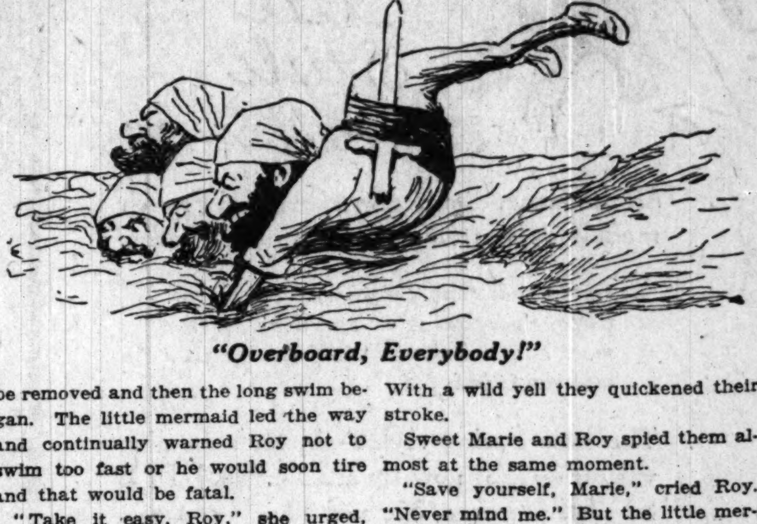
"I'll not wait a day longer," sputtered Robin. "We are nothing but a set of cowards to stick around here, waiting, just waiting for them to come back. I don't care what Sweet Marie's orders were. She would have been back long ago if Roy had been able to get away from those fat rascals. Come on, get your jab poles, pile in and let's get going!"

Away they sailed, a slight breeze helping them along, Chin Chin at the mast head shading his pop eyes with his stubby wing. Little did they know that Sweet Marie and Roy were swimming steadily toward them.

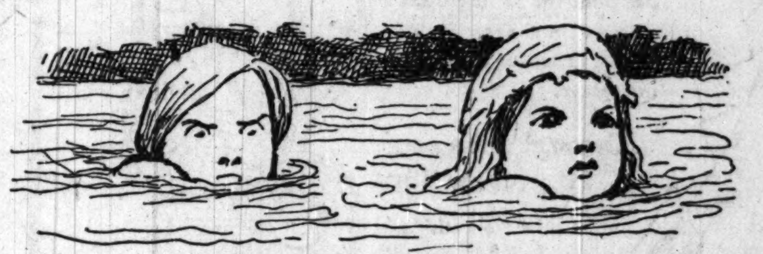
The pirates came marching through the woods at noontime shouting their song—

Hail, hail the gang's all here,
A bunch of little sinners,
We want our dinners, yes, we want
our dinners.

They stopped short when they reached the beach and found it deserted.



"Overboard, Everybody!"



Roy and Marie Escape

"Where are they?" screamed the pirate chief, and picking up Roy's leg bands, he fairly foamed at the mouth.

"Gone! Gone!" he howled. "Not a moment to lose. Overboard everybody!" Grabbing their swords they stuck them in their belts and plunged into the lake. They were fast swimmers, all of them, and clipping through the water at a great rate, they gained rapidly on Roy and Sweet Marie. Soon they saw the heads of the escaped prisoners but a short distance ahead. With a wild yell they quickened their stroke.

Sweet Marie and Roy spied them almost at the same moment.

"Save yourself, Marie," cried Roy. "Never mind me." But the little mermaid refused to leave the tiring swimmer. Roy gathered himself for a final dash. He would not give up, no matter how tired he was. Closer and closer came the pirates, their fat little bodies riding the waves with ease as their frog-like legs worked like machinery.

Just as Roy called to Marie that he could not hold out any longer, Robin and his pals hove into sight, Chin Chin screaming, "I see them, I see them!"

The pirates heard the bird's voice and turning, they beat it for home. Soon Roy and Sweet Marie were helped into the boat and the chase after the bandit crew commenced. Jab poles were made ready and just then a stiff breeze bulged the sail and with a triumphant cheer Robin and his pals bore down on the panic stricken outlaws.

"Poke them! Sink them! Shove them under," screamed Chin Chin.

The pirates slashed with their swords only to get jabbed as they kicked and plunged. Sputtering and howling, they begged for mercy.

"Not a bit of it," called out Roy. "We are going to drive you to our camp and put leg bands on you. We need a gang to do some work for us and you are just the ones to do it."

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the humble dandelion, hugging the earth, should turn out, upon examination, to be one of the most efficient of all living creatures and one that is constantly extending its domain while holding its own in old time haunts!

Whoever has a lawn is likely to know the dandelion. It has traveled around the world and established itself in every nook and cranny. Examining the plant on the lawn, one would find a rosette of sturdy leaves flat on the ground. The lawn mower runs over it and does no harm. Man or beast may trample it to no avail. Cut it off and it grows again. Come rain, come drought, it survives. Examine its roots and they are found to be big, strong, and deep. They are able to dispute possession of the soil with all comers.

The dandelion makes itself obnoxious to grazing animals, and so they do not eat it. Chop it off every month of the spring and summer and it grows again. Some time before frost it is likely to find a chance to burst into its yellow bloom and ripen seed.

And when its seeds appear it does not have to depend for planting as does the apple upon the fancy of the boy who throws away the core. It does not need to coax the squirrel to bury it, as does the acorn. The dandelion puts wings on its seeds and they ride away on the winds to new homes.

The white globe of dandelion seeds is little less beautiful against its background of green than the yellow flower itself. Many a child has plucked a stem bearing one of these globes, held it high, and exploded it with a puff of his breath. When he does so a hundred seeds have been released that will scatter far and each bear the chance of starting a new plant. The foot of a cow, hitting this globe, may start these seeds traveling. A mere puff of wind may do it. One way or another, the chance of their being planted is most excellent.

There is efficiency from cradle to the grave for the dandelion. "Dent de lion" was its name in the beginning, which means "tooth of the lion," a stern name but not a misfit when the real character of this plant is known.

Mother!

Look at Child's Tongue if Sick, Cross, Feverish

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! See if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhœa, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easily after giving this harmless, "fruity laxative" because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup"; then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Face Powder Satisfaction

Black and White Face Powder is the choice of beautiful women everywhere because it gives face powder satisfaction.

This flower-fragrant powder is made of the finest materials and bolted through silk to give it a soft, even texture. It comes in just the right tints to enhance the natural beauty of your skin.

"It is far superior in quality to others I have been using," says Miss Marie Hackett, of Brooklyn, N. Y., "and is most satisfactory in its effect on my skin. I am always recommending it to my friends."

Black and White Beauty Creations are of a quality acceptable to those who seek the best, at prices within the reach of all—25c and 50c.

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

Recently I received a letter from an old school friend, telling me she would be in the city on a certain date and would like to spend the evening at my home. I answered her letter immediately and urged her to to call, then I remembered that I had already set that evening aside for my son's scout club to have a party at our home.

I said to my son, "I think I will change my mind about your party and put it off for a week."

"You can't do that, mother, you can't do that," he cried in a panic. "You can't help changing your mind, but you musn't change your promise." M. T.

The children of a family brought a stray dog home with them and earnestly hoped for his adoption into the fold.

Discussions were usually held at the dinner table, and at this hour the poor creature stood forlornly on the porch just outside the dining room window. The older children of the family had presented their arguments in the dog's behalf, while Jamie, aged 4, silent thus far, very concernedly said: "You're talking louder and louder and pretty soon the doggie will hear everything you're saying about him." DRINK WATER IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

To help neutralize these irritating acids; to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

FOR the woman who desires something different and smart, pattern No. 3136 will be just the thing. It is an excellent design for travel, business or general daytime wear and can be made of one of the novelty silk crêpes, silk twill, crêpe satin, flat silk crêpe, printed sheer velvet, angora jersey or kasha.

The dress buttons the entire length of the front and opens at the top over a vest of a contrasting color and fabric. The full length sleeves are gathered into fitted bands at the wrists, made of the same material as the vest, and if you like, the collar across the back may be made of this same material. Two inserted pockets at the left side of the skirt with welts made of the vest material complete this good looking dress.

A good many buttons are finished with shanks, and if you use this kind on this dress punch the eyelets exactly opposite each button hole. After the hole is punched, take a very shallow over and over stitch having the stitches as close together as possible, all around the punched hole. Use a stiletto to keep the eyelet in shape.

Button holes in a dress of this kind should always be overcasted from the wrong side. Use button hole scissors, and try first on a piece of paper to see that the size is correct.

Pattern No. 3176 is a design any young girl will delight to have used for herself. It is suitable for the classroom, or for afternoon wear, depending largely on the materials used. The long waisted bodice is cut in two pieces and has set-in sleeves. The sleeve pattern is perforated for short ones and the full length sleeve is gathered at the wrist into fitted bands. A straight, two piece skirt is gathered at the top and set on to the bodice.

A dress of this kind is very easy to cut and make, and no trimming is needed other than the bows shown in the sketch. Be sure to allow a sufficient hem at the bottom of the skirt and then divide the upper edge into quarters before gathering. Put pins in the middle back and front of the bodice edge and pin the skirt at each of these places and at the side seams. Of course, you will have the skirt seams come at the side seams of the bodice, and the center of each piece will be pinned to the center front and back of the bodice.

Baste and stitch in a wrong side seam; or, if you choose, you may take a right side seam and cover this with a narrow bias strip, stitched close to each edge. If you prefer, the bottom of the skirt may be finished with a binding, and the neck should have the same finish.

For class room wear a tan wool jersey with brown velvet ribbon, navy blue wool crêpe with bright red velvet ribbon, or a novelty plaid cashmere will be serviceable and inexpensive. And if you wish something a little dressier, choose a printed velveteen, and make the shoulder and waistline bows of faille silk crêpe.

The diagonal treatment of the neck and waistline, with the circular skirt fullness in the front, is the latest and most important movement of fashion. You will enjoy making a dress by pattern No. 3134, and won't find it difficult. The back is cut in one piece and is plain and straight. It will be pretty to join the circular part to the bodice with a piping of a contrasting color and this same material should be used to bind the bottom of the skirt and the neck.

The attractively shaped cascading jabot at the left side of the bodice is another smart feature of this dress and may be made of the dress material. Printed silk crêpe, crêpe Roma, crêpe de chine, chiffon, georgette crêpe, and crêpe satin or crepella are all effective materials for this design.

The full length sleeve is gathered into a narrow band at the wrist. Always transfer all notches, perforations and all other marks to your material when cutting out, and in setting the sleeves into the dress be sure that the notches front and back, as well as the perforations for the shoulder, come where they should. All the seams of any of the crêpes can be made French seams, even setting the sleeves in; but if kasha or other wool fabrics are used, press the seams open and finish with binding ribbon.

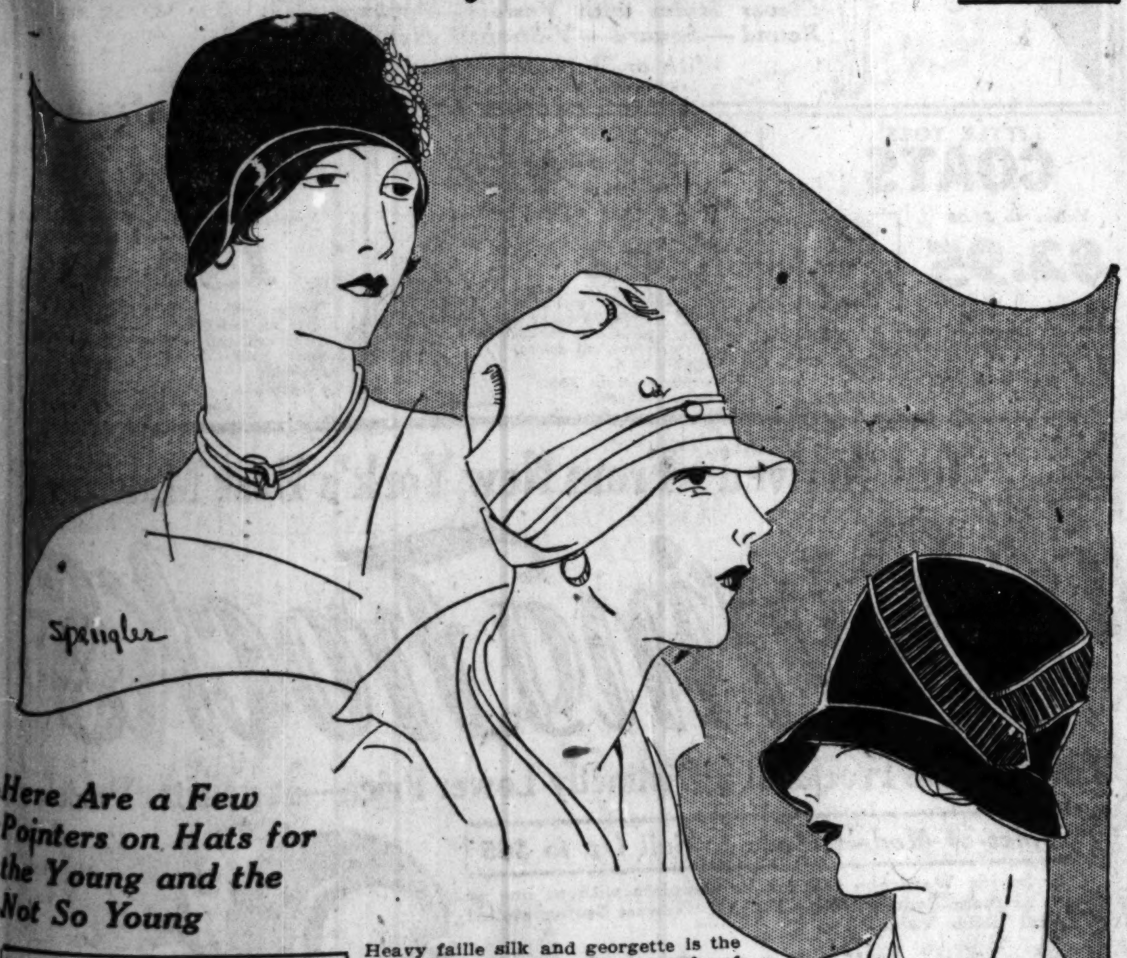
Practical and Fancy Needlework . . . By Clotilde



Here Are a Few Pointers on Hats for the Young and the Not So Young

> What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

THE hats that are being worn at this time of the season are either all satin or satin and bengaline combined. Heavy faille silk is also in great favor, in black and all the brilliant colors.

The debutante is wearing small, close fitting hats and the trimmings of these hats are the least of the designer's worry. Small flowers or a strap of the felt, just to give it a finish, are used, as it is quite the smart thing after purchasing the hat to remove the trimmings and substitute a diamond pin or pendant.

Matrons' hats have decidedly more brim these days. The crowns are higher, but draped into soft puffings and folds to give a soft line to the face. Pearls and brilliants in dart shapes, or bands of sequins or metallic cloth are used for trimming. A word about brims: a two inch brim with a slight mushroom across the face rolling to the back of the brim which is turned up so that it fits snugly to the back of the crown is typical of the form that goes with these soft crowns.

Mourning is standing in high favor for the first time in several years. It is worn by both young and old women.

Heavy faille silk and georgette is the foundation for this. Bands made of tear crêpe and knife plaited georgette are used for trimmings. These bands are fitted to the crown, beginning down low on the right side and are brought up high across the crown in front and down again on the left side, and to the bottom of the crown in the back, finished off on the right side. They are two and one-half inches deep and are completed with a small cording of the same material all the way around the band.

Other attractive trimmings on mourning hats are ornaments made of all widths of black grosgrain or bengaline ribbon. No. 9 ribbon is the most popular width to use in making these.

WHAT'S NEW?

By Walter M. Schwimmer.

I've roamed about this hemisphere
And met some bimbos who are queer,
Yes, I've abhorred and oft been bored
by irritating pests;
But there's a mortifying gink
Who is so asinine I think
That he's a sap whom ev'ry chap quite
heartily detests.
For when by accident you meet
This nincompoop upon the street
He strains his vocal cords to bark
This masterful, inspired remark—
"What's new?"

Now, ev'ry time I see this chump
He gives my tender back a thump
And soon he'll slip a crushing grip that
dislocates my hand;
He wears a vapid grin on his
Insipid, idiotic phiz,
Then starts to whine the hackneyed line
he has at his command.
No erudite, sagacious speech
Does this dull ignoramus preach,
For when I greet this gawky guy
He makes this scatterbrained reply—
"What's new?"

I'd like to write the epitaphs
For all the human phonographs
Who still maintain this trite refrain and
ever ask, "What''s new?"
And here's a frank and fearful fact,
These imbeciles will make me cracked
Unless we balk this inane talk and have
it judged taboo.
Now, I am just a mild gazook,
I rarely censure or rebuke,
But, folks, some day I will conspire
To kill the ninnies who inquire—
"What's new?"

An Awful Shock.

Slowly he opened the letter. As he read on, his face turned pale. His wife was looking at him with suspicious eyes. Then she burst out:

"I want to see that letter."

"What letter?" he asked innocently.

"The one you just opened. I can see the handwriting and I know it's from a woman. You also turned pale just now when you read it. Hand it here, sir."

"Here it is, dear," he answered meekly, "it's from your dressmaker."

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

YOU CAN MAKE WINTER FUN FOR YOUNGSTERS

THE joy of winter is in winter sports. When we can skate and go coasting January and February change from months of cold and hardship into months of robust outdoor exercise, that gives red cheeks, glowing health, and new vigor for everything.

This gives us our chance to do a world of good without trouble or expense. We know, of course, that poor children face winter without the means for enjoying it. To them it is often a season of hardship and sickness to be lived through as best they can—unless we give them the means to take advantage of all its health giving sports. And we can do it so easily!

Christmas has come and brought its harvest of new skates, new sleds, new clothing for the children, and meantime the old articles are lying around—outgrown, discarded by our own little ones, but still able to provide a world of fun for poor children who need all the outdoor exercise they can get. Why not get these articles together, and give them an entire new life of usefulness, serving children who will have nothing except as we think of them?

Warm clothing in particular is needed—suits, caps, dresses, mittens, mufflers, caps, and sound shoes. These are discarded by growing children while there's still lots of wear left in them. Almost every one of us can help. And we will, I know, when we realize how much good we can do!

Bathrobe Will Bring Comfort.

"I have a woman's bathrobe, size 36, which I no longer need. It is in good condition and any one who can use it may have it. MRS. L. F."

Cold, wintry mornings you'll find this wooly robe a great comfort. If this will fit you and you'd like to have it, let me know.

An Old Recipe to Darken Hair
By JANICE RANDALL

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

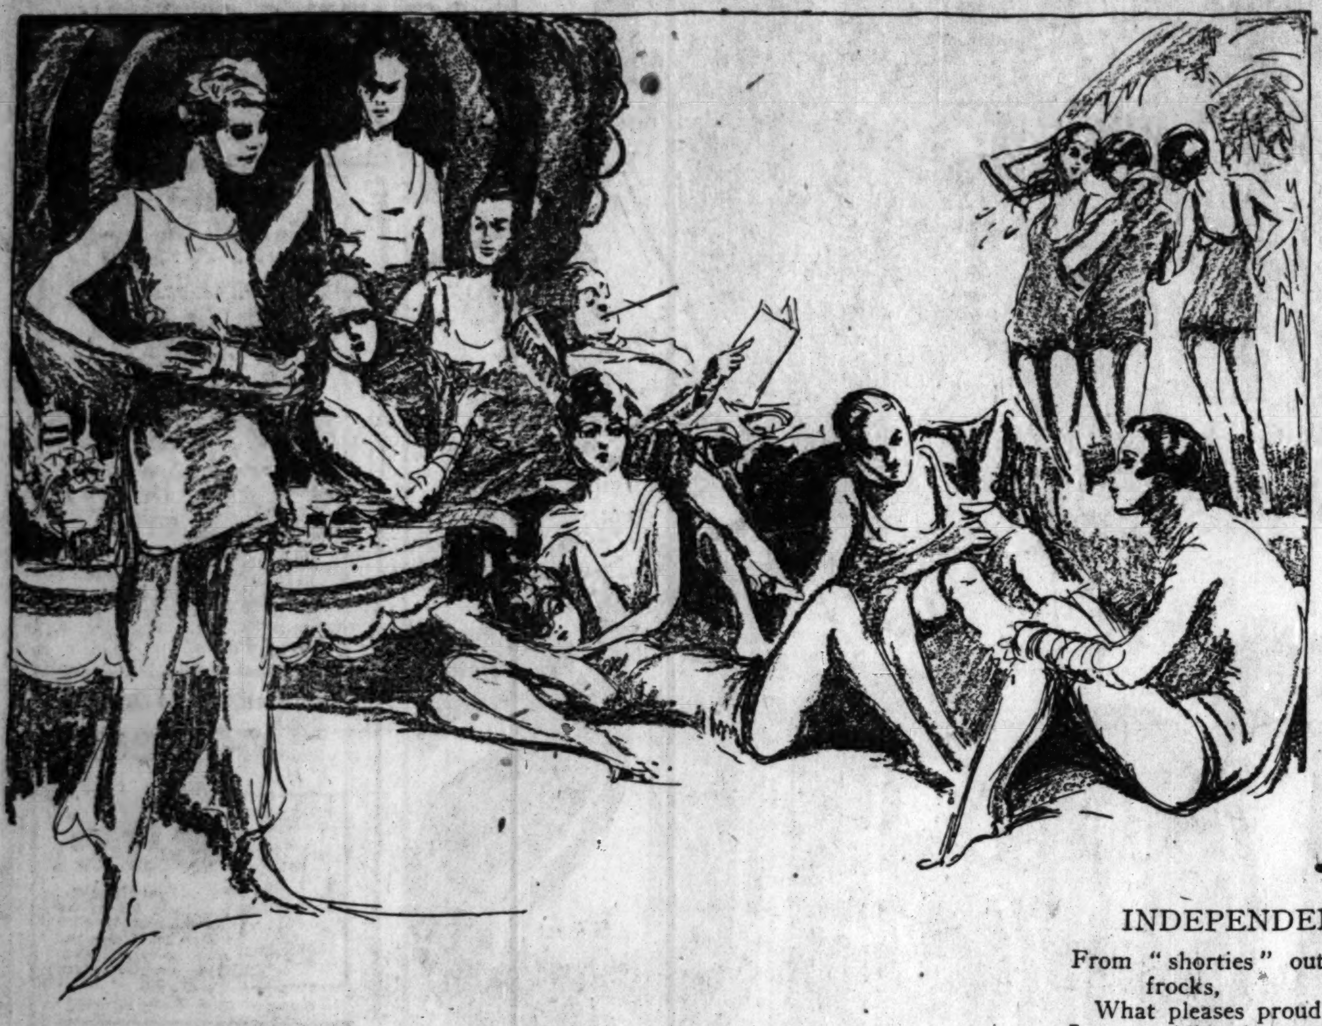
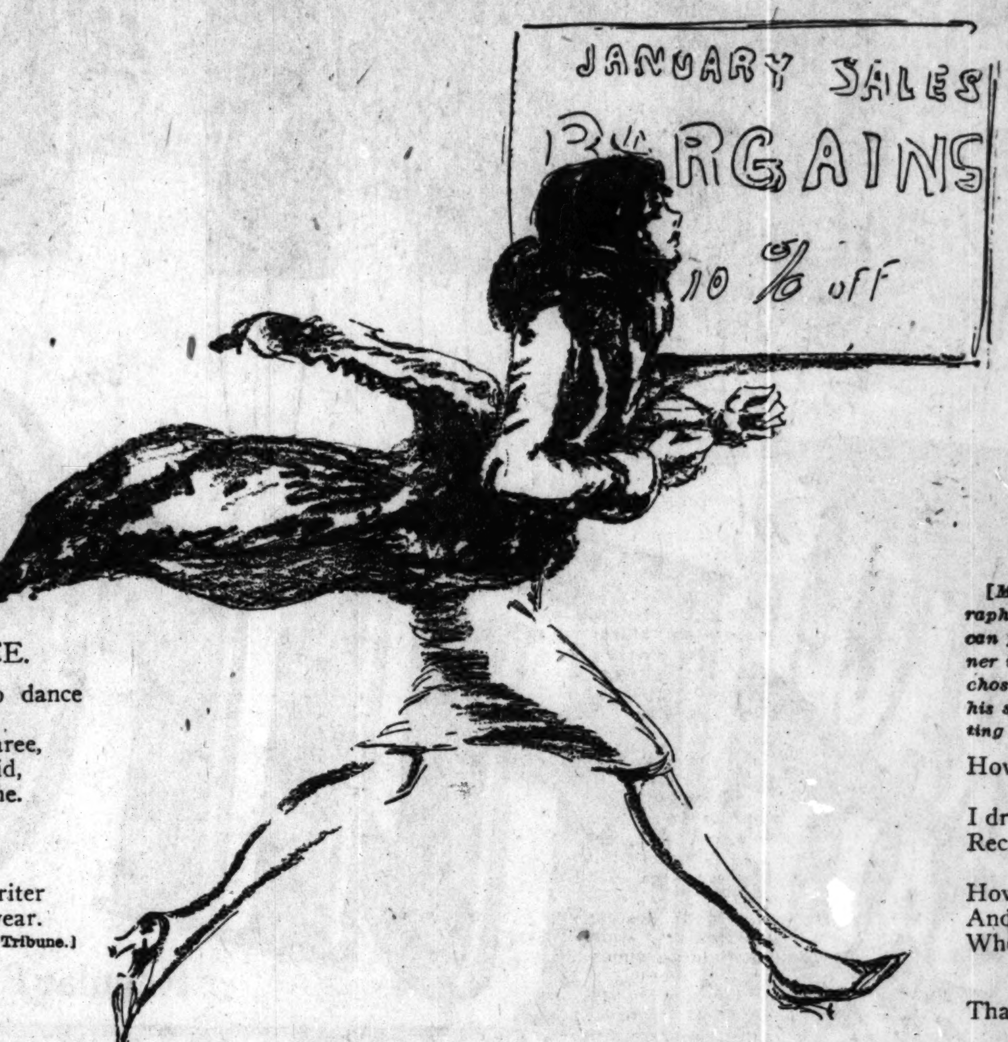
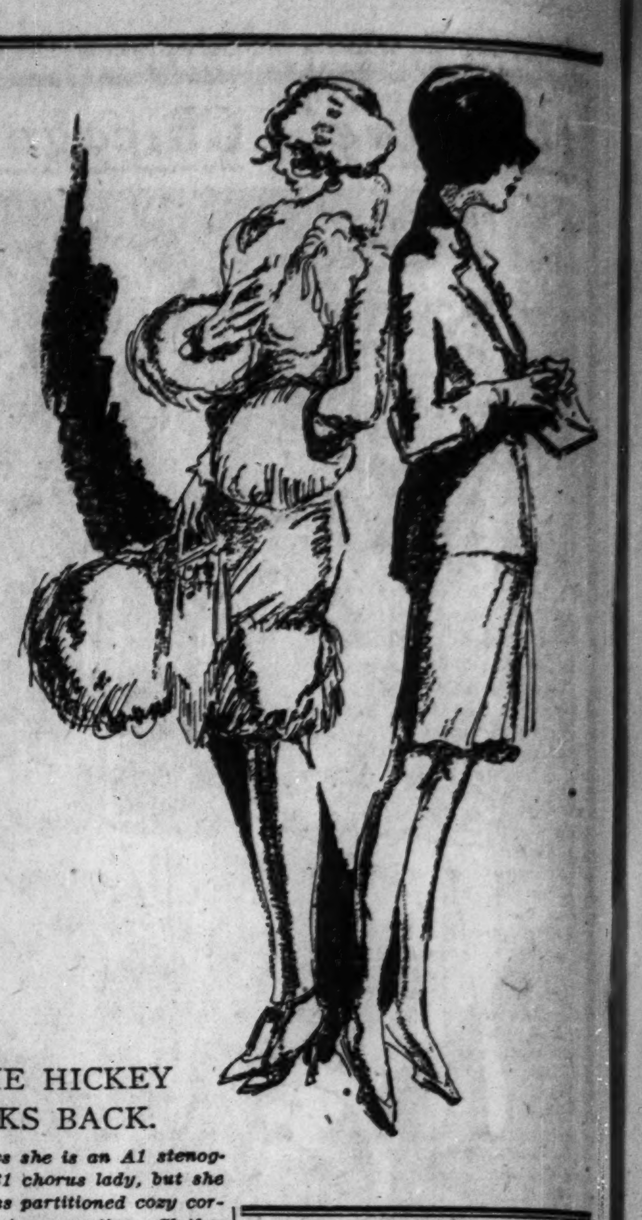
MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

by Sara Moore.







WANDERLUST.

Ship me somewhere east of Tampa
Where they barbecue the wurst,
Where the maximum temptation,
Opportunely, meets your thirst;
Where quick cameras click coyly
At the orange laden trees,
And the naughty gulf winds tamper
With some most exclusive knees.

On the sands of any bay
In expensive F L A
Lies a rotogravure heaven
Where plump golf bugs swarm to—pay.
On the coast of F L A
You can see if feet are clay.
And while gossips buzz like thunder
There the tan goes all the way.

INDEPENDENCE.

From "shorties" out to dance frocks,
What pleases proud Paree,
I wear. All styles are rigid,
For dubs—the like of me.

But on the up an up, bo,
Atop the social stair,
No "ham and" fashion writer
Could tell me what to wear.

MAMIE HICKEY LOOKS BACK.

[Mamie knows she is an A1 stenographer and a B1 chorus lady, but she can find no glass partitioned cozy corner in an affluent corporation. Clothes chosen to knock a booking agent off his swivel chair prevent her from getting by an office manager's outposts.]

How memory makes the dead days dear!
I drop a salt and homesick tear
Recalling our old firm's cashier.

How could I ever think him crude
And kid him for the office prude,
When he, on pay day, would intrude?

That weekly check! I scorned it then,
And snubbed that dub for lesser men.
Ah, could I meet him once again!
My clothes, designed to smite the eyes
Of hard boiled Broadway booking guys,
Aren't what a secretary buys.

No office manager who's sane
Would credit me with half a brain.
Each man believes his eyes, 'tis plain.

But if in tasteful office guise
I sought a job with those called "wise,"
I'd meet as sceptical surprise.

To break her luck a girl despairs
When she is judged by what she wears.

THE YOUNGEST BOOK SHELF

by Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevins

In offering suggestions for the selecting of children's books, as I have been asked to do, it is necessary to make some sort of general grouping according to age. Of course, these lines drawn between ages can never be hard and fast ones, because some children develop more rapidly than others in their love and interest in books. Some times this is due to an innate love for them, some times to the influence of their parents.

However, there are certain underlying principles that can govern us in our choice of reading matter for the children, and there are certain facts that we have learned about the tastes of children at different ages.

Since, on the whole, books for the very little children are apt to be less thought about in the buying than those for any other age, we might begin by considering how we shall choose books for the littlest bookshelf.

From the time a baby is a toddler until he is, say, 5 years old, all his books must be chosen with two things in view—that he will look at the pictures, but the text will be read to him. So we must judge a book's suitability by its illustrations and its subject matter for reading aloud.

Forming His Taste.

In some ways, for the very young child's book the illustrations might be considered the more important, because the child sees the pictures but you can doctor up the text a little as you read. So what we want to look for in the way of pictures is not only something that will appeal to the child, but also something that will help to form his taste.

First, the pictures should be clear and full of action. They should be simple in technique and without too much detail. A mass of detail is very confusing to a child. Simplicity is a desirable thing. And it is a lack of this quality that we find in many illustrations that are so decorative that they overstep the mark as far as the children's interest is concerned.

In the second place, the pictures should measure up to some sort of artistic standard. By this I don't mean that they need be "arty" or of the over decorative type, but they should be well drawn or well painted. We don't want to place before our children's eyes the cheap and the garish, nor the frightening, nor the grotesque.

Reading Matter.

Now, as to the reading matter. In his very first books a child doesn't need much story—in fact, a long story or poem tires him. As he grows a little older he can stand more and more in quantity of text. Also, as a rule, he requires that a story be about pleasant things. Little children don't like ugly or unpleasant happenings, nor unhappy endings. My little boy couldn't stand Mr. McGregor in dear old "Peter Rabbitt," just because he put Peter's father into a meat pie! And I know of lots of other children who were made miserable by similar little things—and even asked their mothers to hide the books containing them.

Where all of the book is good except a page or a sentence it is better to skip the picture they don't like and delete parts of the story to suit their taste than to take the book away entirely. Because the time will come when they'll pass this tender hearted stage and not notice this part at all—when, in fact, they will enjoy all sorts of gory and melodramatic happenings. But not when they're at this youngest book age.

The subjects that the little children like their stories and poems to be about are pretty well defined. They adore animals, either as they naturally are or dressed up and doing half human things. They are interested in a story about all sorts of homey, familiar activities that come within their own experience, and they like to have read to them the adventures and doings of everyday children like themselves. Fairy tales really belong in a later period, being, after all, a more sophisticated type of story, though a few exceptions are to be found in some of the very simple folk tales that are being put out in charming book form today.

Two Periods.

It would be fascinating to have side by side, if it were possible, a collection of children's books of two periods—one representing those of today and the other the output of a time no longer ago than the childhood days of Kate Greenaway. Books for the children of even so recent a date were considered of such little importance that, illustrated, they were sold for a few pence a copy in England. What dreadful things they must have been! While today some of the finest artists of the world are lavishing their talent on the illustrating of books for children.

When it comes to buying books for the younger children, it is rather staggering to discover how much the fine ones cost. Many people feel it is a waste to spend money that way, thinking that little children are too destructive to own expensive books. They are really not so, if they have any sort of intelligent training. They can readily learn how to handle books, though their greatest difficulty when very tiny is in the turning of pages. Even a deft child has trouble with this at the beginning. So when he is learning, just don't give him books with brittle paper to practice on. But where it is feasible from the expense end, he should have some of the amusing and beautiful books of today given to him to use and to own.

But all the children's books need not be of this class. There are many inexpensive ones which are good and become dear to their hearts. These are books in which the illustrations may not measure up to the highest canons of art, but which are so quaint, so clear, so delightful that they deserve a place of their own in the littlest library.

List of Favorites.

A booklet is being prepared containing a selected list of the names and publishers of books for the littlest children, but a few are noted here for immediate use. This little list is made up of a few tried and true books—not books that look charming to the adult eye—but books little children really love to have read and re-read to them.

Women the World Over

The national bureau of economic research finds that the average wages of women are about three-quarters those of men.

Women in Russia are the freest in the world, according to members of the American investigation committee on Russian women.

Club women in London are making an earnest endeavor to break into the exclusive men's clubs there. So far they have been denied membership.

More than 60 per cent of all the women in Germany are now earning their own living and many of them are the sole support of whole families.

Mme. Paul Claudel, wife of the French ambassador to the United States, is a good cook and an excellent housekeeper.

A chain of 40 restaurants located in the principal cities of England is managed by a woman, Mrs. Hannah Mendelssohn.

It is estimated that from 19 to 24 per cent of the working girl's income must go toward being "well dressed and well groomed."

From paying teller to president is the record of Miss Hattie S. Bordewich, recently elected chief executive of the Oliva, Minn., State bank.

Following the footsteps of the younger women, the older women of Turkey are now beginning to have their hair bobbed as well as substituting modish hats for the silk scarfs of harem days.

In Tonga, the only independent nation in the south seas, a woman actually occupies the throne. Her majesty, Queen Salote, is absolute boss, not only over subjects, but over her prime minister as well.

Mrs. Leonard Wood, widow of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, first governor of Cuba, has been granted an annual pension of $6,000 by the Cuban congress.

The average wages of women are about three-quarters the amount paid to men, according to the National Bureau of Economic Research.

The chief occupation of the peasant women in soviet Russia is the weaving of rough cloth for husbands and children on hand spindles.

Best Way to Loosen Stubborn Cough

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, throat tickle, bronchial asthma, or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love it.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Can You Believe It?
CONSTIPATION
of 40 Years Gone!

HERE IS, probably, the most remarkable statement ever made by anyone who has suffered from constipation and stomach trouble. But read for yourself what Mr. Allen says:

"I was troubled with chronic constipation for more than 40 years. Gas on the stomach often made me dizzy and bothered my heart. Nothing I used gave me more than temporary relief. I was told that there was nothing that would help much. But I tried Adlerika and am happy to say that my bowels are now very regular, and a slight case of piles is gone, too. Thanks to Adlerika I feel younger and happy again."—Geo. A. Allen, Westboro, Mass.

Quick Action Surprises

AS GENTLY and naturally as taking a drink of water, Adlerika acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowels, bringing immediate relief from gas bloating, intestinal stasis and chronic constipation.

The very FIRST dose of Adlerika often brings out astonishing amounts of old waste matter from the intestinal canal. This poisonous matter may have been in the intestines a long time, causing gas, headache, sleeplessness and many other symptoms. A treatment of a few weeks with Adlerika often corrects chronic constipation and intestinal stasis, so that just a small dose, now and then, keeps the intestines and stomach in a most satisfactory condition.

What Doctors Say

DR. H. LOUIS SHOUB, B. Sc., well-known New York pathologist, after laboratory tests on living subjects, states: "Adlerika very markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli. This feature increases the therapeutic value of Adlerika, because, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action, it inhibits the growth of these intestinal bacteria."

Dr. A. J. Lancaster, a physician of over a quarter century's active experience, makes this statement: "In the treatment of gastro-intestinal disorders, (where thorough evacuation is indicated), Adlerika has no equal."

Dr. Carl Weschcke, a graduate of the world-famous medical University of Heidelberg, Germany, in his private practice, first perfected the intestinal cleanser and carminative now known as Adlerika. It is a compound of a specially processed saline intestinal evacuant with buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other ingredients which expel gas and have detergent action.

Adlerika, unlike most other medicines, acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowels. It is recognized by many physicians as the one dependable remedy for gas, intestinal stasis and chronic constipation, or whenever real intestinal cleansing is needed.

Even if your bowels move every day, Adlerika may surprise you by bringing out poisonous, gas-forming matter which you would never believe was in your system.

In just a single month, over one thousand men and women wrote that they obtained wonderful relief from even a short treatment with Adlerika. Many of them said that now, after all other treatments and medicines had failed, they are at last rid of gas, indigestion, sour stomach, sleeplessness, nervousness or other trouble due in their cases to intestinal stasis. And now, these folks say, they are again able to eat and enjoy the foods they like.

No matter what you have tried for the bowels and stomach, Adlerika will surprise you.

"WHY CAN'T JOHNNY COME OUT TO PLAY?"

Sickness comes from germ-laden hands

Why risk family health when this purifying toilet soap removes germs as well as dirt?

ISN'T IT puzzling at times how children get sick?

Perfectly well one day—tearing around with their playmates—handling everything—pets, games, trash—just reveling in dirt and germs.

Then, perhaps, too long a wait before hands are washed—a chance for germs to enter the system—a little fatigue or exposure—and before you know it—sickness!

Germs—a constant menace

Children's hands, as well as grown-ups', are always in danger of disease germs, say health authorities. Hiding unseen on toys, books, pencils, money—and many other things we all must touch—these germs get on our hands and menace health. The Life Extension Institute lists 27 germ diseases hands may spread.

For health's sake, children in over 63,000 schools have been taught to use Lifebuoy—especially before eating. In millions of homes—for greater safety—everyone washes with Lifebuoy. Its antiseptic lather removes germs.

Note its clean scent

Children, men and women too, quickly learn to love Lifebuoy's clean scent—your proof that Lifebuoy purifies—yet which quickly evaporates after rinsing.

And the same gentle, antiseptic Lifebuoy lather that removes germs—purifies pores—keeps skins fresh, clear, healthy. Prevents embarrassing body odor, too.

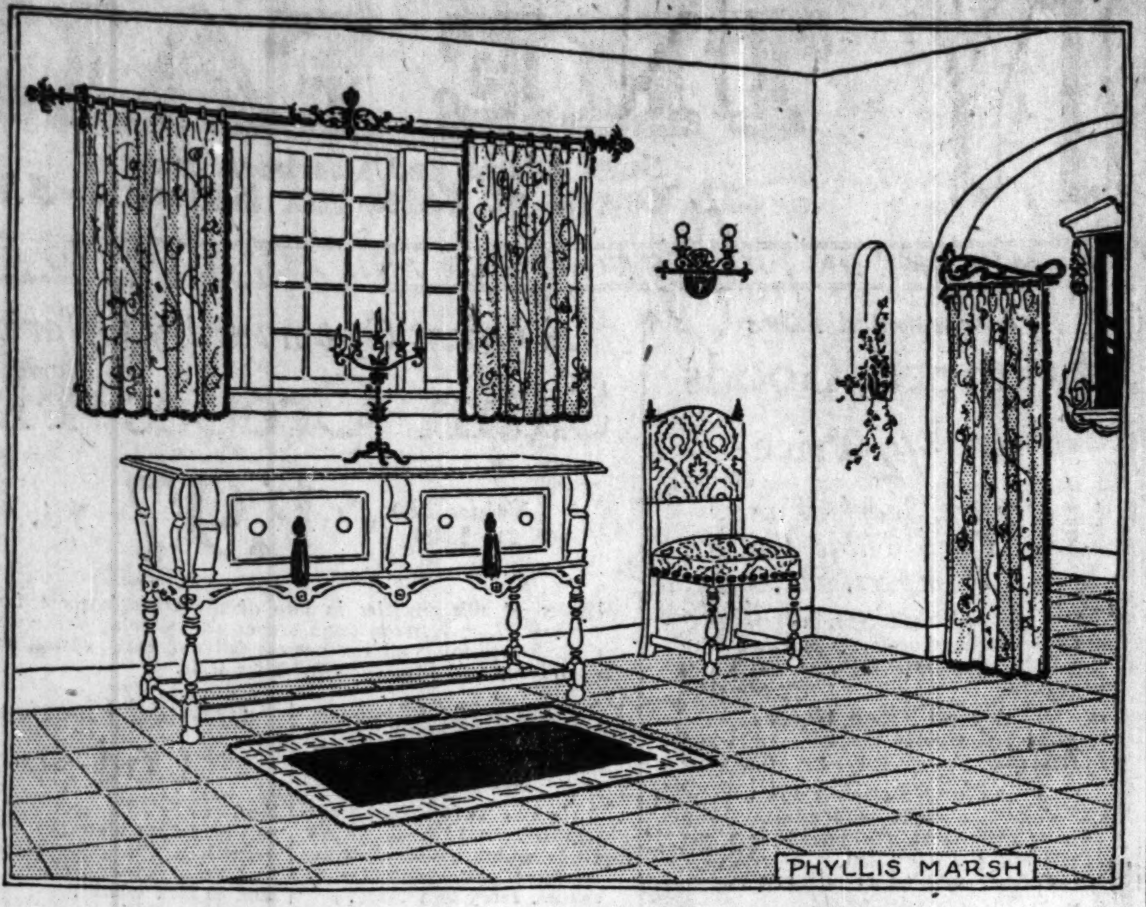
The HOME HARMONIOUS

The Furnishing of the Spanish House Is an Interesting and Worth While Task

By Phyllis Marsh



Interesting arrangement of Spanish furniture in a modern dining room.

AT the present time there is much interest in the home of Spanish architecture. The actual development of this type in this country took place in California and in Florida and has spread rapidly within the last few years.

From the standpoint of both climate and scenery these two states present an ideal setting for the Spanish home with its colored exterior, patio, wrought iron grilled windows, and rambling dimensions. Nevertheless, this same architecture and its appropriate landscape gardening may be transplanted to almost any state today with most charming results. The modern architect, like the modern furniture designer, is gifted with a keen understanding of properly applied adaptation. It is to him that much credit is due.

Rough plastered walls, beamed ceilings, arched windows, luxuriant and colorful fabrics, heavily carved and rather massive furniture, intermingled with wrought iron, are characteristics of the Spanish interior. The floors of the Spanish home may be of decorative tile, wide oak flooring boards, tile effect in linoleum or rubber composition, etc. For this home in a northern environment the wood or linoleum floor is best and will be found much warmer in winter than a tiled one. The rugs used may be confined to those of oriental character, of rather bold geometric pattern, Spanish Alpujarras, which take their name from the district from whence they come, or other rugs of Spanish origin, as well as some of our own country's Navajo rugs.

Damask and silk velour play the principal rôle as drapery fabrics in the home of Spanish feeling. However, it is possible to use other suitable and decoratively effective fabrics, such as heavily embroidered Crewel panels, hand blocked linen in the heavy style of Jacobean pattern, wide, colorfully striped antique satins, brocatelles, machine made Sardinian embroideries, which are comparatively new, and materials of similar character.

The walls, which should be done in a rough plaster glaze finish, may be tinted in a neutral tone or may boast a tint of any color suitable to the exposure of the rooms. Walls of this type act as a sort of foil for the lovely, richly colored drapery fabrics and wall hangings of tapestry and other materials which may be used.

In various ways wrought iron plays an important part in achieving some of the decorative and characteristic charm of the modern Spanish home. For the side lights or wall sconces there are many suitable styles from which to make a choice. Then there are many styles of appropriate wrought iron drapery poles which can add so much to the distinction of a Spanish interior. For the arched in-swinging Spanish window or the arched doorway between rooms there is a new treatment being used in the form of wrought iron swinging curtain cranes. They are proving a wonderful boon to the perplexed home decorator who is so often at a loss to know just how to treat the in-swinging arched casement window and archways.

There are also separate table and floor lamps, as well as candle holders of various types to be considered. Some of these should be of wrought iron, while others should be of pottery of suitable contour, design and color, with parchment shades to correspond. If there is a fireplace [and we hope there is] wrought iron again enters into the decorative scheme of the Spanish interior, for andirons, fuel basket, and fire set must be of the same metal. Arched planked doors should be elaborately hinged with wrought iron, while an opening or two, between hall and living room, may display an attractively designed grille or wrought iron gate.

Last, but not least, comes the selection of furniture which may be of authentic or adapted reproduction. It should be chosen carefully, and should consist only of those pieces which are both useful as well as decoratve. If the room is not extremely large, it is always wisest to select a less elaborate or sumptuous style of Spanish furniture than that which one would choose for the room of large dimensions. However, in either case color must be introduced in characteristic style and to be typically Spanish must consist of bright reds, yellows and greens. These can be worked out in the draperies, wall hangings, rugs and upholstery and if carefully done will be capable of producing a room of unusual charm.

In selecting the furniture and in its placement, care must be exercised in order to achieve a certain amount of austerity and dignity which is characteristic of the Spanish interior. Much of this feeling can be relieved, however, by the use of colorful wall hangings, warm toned wall tapestries, and rugs, colorful draperies and upholstery fabrics. Often hanging wall-pockets for trailing ivy add a softening touch to the severity of the rough plastered interior of a Spanish dwelling. Small niches and recessed book shelves, gayly colored, contribute their share to the decorative scheme, with their colorful books and ornaments of various kinds.

The massive and elaborately carved construction and the sumptuousness of the upholstery of much of the Spanish furniture necessitates economy of use. For the average sized living room of modern Spanish adaptation, the following pieces of "period" style furniture will probably suffice for both comfort and a homelike attractiveness. An overstuffed davenport, upholstered in either a linen frisé, linen, ramie, or cotton velour or mohair, preferably in red, is the essential piece of furniture. Next, there should be two or three carved arm chairs of different designs, upholstered in silk or cotton velour, "cut" or brocaded velvet, or a small geometrically patterned linen frisé.

A couple of these chairs might be trimmed with heavy wool tassel fringe while the third one could be adorned with fancy antique finished large brass headed nails, and each chair upholstered in a different fabric. A side chair could be included to match one of the three chairs, which might be used for a cabinet desk when needed.

In like manner the dining room must, of necessity, be furnished in equally characteristic style. If more color is desired here the draperies should be of a colorfully patterned hand blocked linen in a bold design, possibly of Jacobean inspiration. Red and gold brocatelle, green and gold antique damask, plain tapestry, mohair, or any other fabric of similar character and texture suitable to the style of the furniture may be chosen for the chairs. The floor, whether covered in tiled linoleum, genuine tile, or in wood, may boast several small or one large Spanish or Oriental rug of suitable pattern and coloring.

The wrought iron wall sconces and the suspended central ceiling fixture should be fitted out with amber colored frosted bulbs to mellow the general tone of the room. Suitable buffet, serving table and between meal scarfs may be of brocade, velvet, damask, etc.

Massiveness and ornate carving are characteristic of the bedroom furniture of Spanish style. Therefore, let the selection of fabrics here be confined to those of proper color and texture. For a sumptuous effect damask leads itself best for both the draperies and the spread. If a less elaborate treatment is desired, let the hand blocked and printed fabrics of bold design and gay colorings substitute.

HAS FILIAL LOVE DISAPPEARED?

From the True Stories Recounted Today It Seems to Be a Very Rare Trait for the Modern Child to Possess

BY DORIS BLAKE.

A STORY was related to me of a couple who had reared two sons, each married now. Mr. and Mrs. Stone, we'll call them, had a lifelong dream. They lived on the east coast. Their dream was to spend a winter in California. Mrs. Stone had a sister living out there. Mr. Stone suffered periodically from rheumatism. He bore it with fortitude, smiling at Ma Stone when she'd say: "Never mind, daddy; when we get out to California you'll forget all about it."

For years, more than either could remember, when anything went wrong the panacea was: "Well, never mind; we'll go to California some day."

That thought cheered them. It cheered them through the measles and the chicken pox, croups, cold, flu, and through the afflictions common to the ordinary business of family rearing.

Mr. Stone was a moderate wage earner. Mrs. Stone, though not a native down east Yankee, had become inoculated with enough of the thrift germs to make every dollar account for its full value. No work was farmed out that her own willing hands could perform. The result was that there was a tidy little home free from mortgage and enough in the bank after the second son's marriage to permit of the long dreamed of trip to California.

They reckoned their "spree" would eat a considerable hole in the $2,000 they'd take along. But there was the insurance on which they'd met the payments with religious regularity. There were three other thousand dollars in the bank and Daddy Stone's lifelong employer dared him not to come back after his three months' leave.

The future optimistically bright, Mamma and Daddy Stone set about getting travel literature for the ideal route to their promised land. And Ma Stone set about getting her wardrobe. About a week later, she came home from the dressmaker's one evening. Her first born was sitting in the living room. His wife was with him. An untidy little fellow of 4 was propped on Grandpa Stone's knee.

A Dishonest Son.

To make a painful séance as short as possible, the mission of the first born and his selfish wife was to get the lifetime savings out of the old couple. They wanted to go to California and set up in business out there. The son had heard of a great opening there for a fellow with a few thousand. Ma and pa were old. The son and his wife would go out and make the fortune and then send for them to come and live with them.

The little fellow had been primed for his part in the game. He begged grandma and grandpa to let him go to California, telling them with hugs and kisses how much he loved them.

The younger son, somehow, got wind of the transaction before the money was turned over. He went to his brother and among other things the older son emerged with after the combat was a couple of black eyes. The older son, he found out, was going in on some wildcat gambling scheme and had no intention whatever of leaving for California. The wife, it seems, was the inspiration behind the get rich plan and the threat of exposure of some early associations of hers was the final means of saving the old couple their savings and their trip to California.

A note was received a few days after the encounter of the brothers by the old folks, which read to the effect "that on further investigation of that California matter they found it inadvisable to consider it." So Mom and Daddy Stone set off in blissful ignorance of the real story of their regained fortune, and from recent postcards they are having the proverbial good time and wish we were all along.

That was a happier ending than the tales many parents might tell of sacrifices demanded of them by selfish children. Behind many a mother-in-law story in which she is related as the offensive and offending party is another tale that would quickly turn the tide of sympathy to her were she as ready to broadcast her wrongs.

Unjust Treatment.

One within my direct knowledge is the presence in the home of a mother-in-law who deeded over her house and her small savings on promise of being lovingly tended for the rest of her life. The money has long since been dissipated in an unsuccessful business venture, and the poor old woman is submitted to treatment no servant would stand for.

Another display of the injustice shown by children to their parents is that of a daughter and mother of three who bitterly resents the slightest intrusion of her parent in the conduct of her home. Yet that mother is constantly being subjected to innuendoes and on more than one occasion open criticism, because she goes along without asking her daughter's advice in the conduct of her life. This mother was upbraided by her daughter for not asking somebody's advice about what she should do with her money. If mother, on the other hand, had said that a dollar a week was too much pin money for the oldest of her daughter's three boys there would have been a bitter retort about whose business that was.

Children too often are given to thinking of their parents as inexhaustible sources of supply. Theirs is but to ask and they should receive. That parents are individuals with rights and preferences is a fact that should be more generally respected.

There are daughters who seem to think simply because their mothers have reached the grandmother age that pleasures of their own are almost expressions of indecency. They turn over their children for mother to look after while they lunch, dine, shop, or go on vacations. And a paid nursemaid would get more thanks for the duties performed, or less criticism, at least, if the instructions as to diet and clothes were not carried out to the letter.

There are other children who would take the last dollar from parents, caring little whether or not the old folks would like to look forward to the day when they might take things a bit easier. These, of course, are social outcasts, or should be branded as such in fiery letters.

Shirking Responsibility.

And there are children who run off and get married, bring home child, husband or wife, as the case may be, and expect their parents to assume their matrimonial burdens. And girls who find they can't, or won't get along with their husbands, run back home with their children, believing it is their divine right to be protected and provided for by mother and father, who may have all they can do to take care of themselves. That they may be eating up the old-age fund of their parents concerns them very little, if at all. They are the first to resent the burden of mother or father should the tables be turned later.

Parents, no doubt, will be mothers and fathers always—at least, the kind that are grafted on. They'll give their last dollar; they'll sacrifice their own desires, their own comforts, their well-deserved years of ease for parasitic sons and daughters. But if every grafting son and daughter would realize that they are parasites, and parasites of the lowest order, it might help them to see that after a couple has worked for, supported, and raised one family they are entitled to a few of the pleasures they have had to deny themselves throughout the years. Also, that they have rights entitling them and them only to the money they have managed to scrape together during their lifetime. Also, since it is their savings, they are entitled, as human beings, to spend those savings as they see fit.

And they are wise parents who make their children understand that they have rights to be respected. Parents who are not too sacrificial are in little danger of becoming burdens or of being burdened with the support of their children and their children's children.

Doris Blake's Answers TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Do the Same Thing.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a girl dearly and I know she loves me, but every time I take her out she is always talking about another fellow. Do you think she is trying to make me jealous? BILL."

Don't let her get away with it, Bill. Make up a few fanciful yarns about some beautiful blonde who thinks you're pretty nice. She won't like it and it will open her eyes to her mistake.

Keep Her Busy.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am in love with a girl who loves me, but lately a friend of mine is interfering—flirting with her. Do you think I'll lose her? What can I do to keep her? J. D. K."

You needn't lose her if you're on the job, J. D. K. Make it a point to be more attentive than usual and keep her so dated up she won't have time for flirting with others. It's up to you.

Too Old for Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 17 and like a fellow who is 29. I believe he is too old for me. HOME GIRL."

You would have little in common with a man so much older. He is ready to settle down and you are just beginning to taste the good times of youth.

Parents Know Best.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 15 and am in high school. All the girls in my room go out with fellows. A fellow from my room asked me to go out with him but my parents disapprove. What shall I do? Is it correct for my parents to disapprove? He is a very nice boy. Please advise. CUTY."

If your parents disapprove, do not accept his invitation, Cuty. They feel you are still young and that it is for your best interests to wait awhile before going out with the boys, as it might interfere with your studies.

Taller than He.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am writing this for my girl friend. Her boy friend says if she gets any taller he won't go out with her because she is now a trifle taller than he is. ROSE."

Boys like to feel they are strong and manly, that girls look up to them and depend upon them for protection. It's difficult for a boy to have this confidence in himself when he must look up to the girl, Rose.

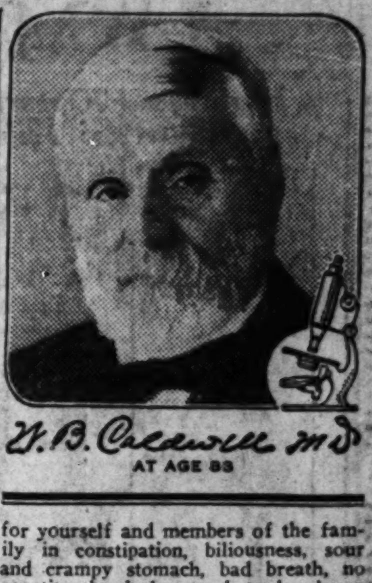
Nice to His Friend.

"Dear Miss Blake: I introduced my girl to a friend of mine. Since then she does not seem to pay much attention to me. When I am alone with her she acts differently and does not seem to have changed. Please advise. "PUZZLED."

Aren't you allowing jealousy to creep in, Puzzled? The young man is your friend and naturally she wants to be nice to him for your sake.

What Dr. Caldwell Learned in 47 Years Practice



W. B. Caldwell, M.D.
AT AGE 83

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their systems. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It robs you strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

Pianos and Players.

B-A-R-G-A-I-N-S USED PIANOS.

No one need be without a good upright piano or player when you can have access to such wonderful bargains as are listed here. These most unusual prices sound almost too good to be true, but if you will investigate you will find that we have many more splendid bargains that may be shown here in addition to those listed below. You will find an almost bewildering assortment of used upright pianos and players in addition to those listed. Four floors of used instruments. It is well worth the trip just to see them.

Steindel Upright, mahogany	$ 25
Schultz Upright, mahogany	35
Purcell Upright, mahogany	40
Ellington Upright, walnut	50
Meister Upright, walnut	50
Schumann Upright, mahogany	65
Weber Upright, rose	75
Cable Upright, mahogany	75
Weiler Player [88 note], oak	150
Harrington Player [88 note], mahogany	250
Bruce Player [88 note], mahogany	250
Washburn Player [88 note], mahogany	270

ACT QUICKLY FOR THEY ARE OFFERED AT THESE PRICES SUBJECT TO PREVIOUS SALE.

All these instruments are sold "as is" or repaired. In fact, some are all ready now for delivery to your home. Others need to be tuned, polished and regulated. We will be glad to furnish estimates on all necessary repairs and our prices are extremely moderate.

IF YOU THINK THESE PRICES ARE IMPOSSIBLE, INVESTIGATE. SEEING IS BELIEVING.

These are not all the bargains we have at our factory warerooms. Ask the salesmen to show you others. They will be delighted to do so.

At least look these instruments over. You owe it to yourself to do so.

CABLE PIANO FACTORY OFFICE, 2214 S. PAULINA-ST. CHICAGO.

SPECIAL SALE OF EXCHANGED GRANDS.

Among them such makes as BUSH & GERTZ, DE KOVEN, CONOVER, HARRINGTON, and many others.

If you want a splendid Grand Piano at an EXCEPTIONAL bargain here is, indeed, a wonderful opportunity if you act quickly, as they are offered subject to previous sale; you will be surprised at the low prices asked for these instruments.

Remember, they are offered on easy payments, and a small deposit will secure one of these splendid instruments. They are guaranteed to be wonderful bargains in the truest sense of the word.

DO NOT FAIL TO SEE THEM, AND REMEMBER, WE ARE OPEN EVENINGS.

AN INVITATION!!

This week for a free private master voice lesson in which the superb method, "Cantare sul fiato," used by Galli-Curci and McCormack will be taught you by Mme. La Capria, personally, concert, opera singer, protege of Schumann-Heink, world famous voice specialist, whose training is sought by discriminating artists and students. Innes, renowned bandmaster, states: "I consider her the greatest vocal teacher in America." Formichi of Chicago Civic Opera says: "I highly recommend her perfect voice placement and marvelous method of the true Italian 'Bel Canto,' acquired from Lombardi, Italy's most celebrated singing master, teacher of Caruso and myself, who indorses her." Artist-pupils: Winona Fitzgerald recently secored brilliant success at Orchestra Hall in concert. Guillermo of Chicago Civic Opera says, "Since studying with you, my voice is not tired after long rehearsals." Grayhack of Metropolitan Opera, New York writes: "The first day I studied with you was the most fortunate day of my life!" Trava of San Carlo Grand Opera writes: "My wonderful high tones are due to you. The great regret is I did not come to you sooner." Others in musical comedy, moving picture houses, vaudeville, at salaries from $125 to $750 a week. Studios: 4818 Sheridan-rd. Phone Bittersweet 0081.

Executives and Managers.

HERE'S THE BIG MONEY FOR 1928

TO SOUTH SIDE REAL ESTATE SALES MANAGERS

This concern is now going out on the most extensive selling program of its many years in business. With fast selling property as its stock in trade, with $200,000 for advertising, spacious offices, wonderful compensation contract, and a ready-made market in which there are fortunes for salesmen and sales managers, we are prepared to give good men a splendid opportunity to make money from the start, with no strings attached.

We want real fellows—not floaters. We want managers who don't need weeks of training—sales executives who know how to work and how to train their forces to "hit the ball" hard to follow a rapid-fire real estate sales campaign. We want to talk to men who are tired of batting around among concerns where commission checks come only with the new moon, and we will show you how to get a weekly check that will look like a July automobile license.

1928 in the district where our properties are located is to be a year of big events. We are going to make fortunes for our customers and for your customers, and we can show you just HOW that will be done. Sewer, water, and electricity in and paid for—buildings going up all around—some on our property. Public improvements and great industrial development are under way. When you get the picture you will want to invest right here yourself, but you can't because we allow no salesmen to buy property from us while employed by us. No education necessary to show you the big profits coming to our patrons.

This is a big, honest, profitable real estate campaign, and we have a place for a few sales managers and their sales forces. In dealing with us, everything will be held confidential. Look this proposition over, tear it to pieces if you can, think it over, and then join us—for we know you've never had an opportunity like this.

Set yourself in the big money for 1928 and bring your friends in as salesmen. Great gold bonus contest opens in February and you'll want your share.

A REAL CONNECTION FOR A REAL MAN.

This announcement is rather unusual. There is nothing secretive about our business and we have nothing to conceal. You perhaps have noticed the ads which we have inserted in this paper from time to time. There is a big reason behind the running of a number of ads. We have grown in the past two years from an organization of fifteen men to more than three hundred of the highest type salesmen in the country.

We have recently promoted six men to positions in which their earnings will approximate $40,000 to $50,000 per year each. Our business is big enough to attract the best selling minds in the United States. We have a number of men with us at the present time who are Nationally and Internationally known for their accomplishments.

Our books and auditor's statements show over 1,000% increase in business in 1927 over 1926. We are constantly putting out new services, which means that it is necessary for us to build an entirely new selling organization on each new unit. 1,000% increase means that one hundred more people bought our service this year than bought it last year, which proves conclusively that whatever we have for sale is salable, which naturally means that our men are making some real money.

We are in the Service Business. We have an Industrial Service which is sold to many thousands of the leading corporations in the United States for the purpose of developing constructive thinking among their employes. The majority of our clients renew year after year.

We have a Sales Service which is sold to Executives for increasing their sales.

We have a School Service which is sold to schools for visualized education through posters for school children.

We have a Management Service which is sold to executives for the development of their junior officers and department heads.

We are not so much interested in salesmen as we are in potential executives—men who can learn our business and then qualify for promotion. In order for a salesman to qualify to join our organization he should have a record of earning $6,000 per year or better. He should be between the ages of 25 and 45 and he should have the reputation of honesty, reliability, and integrity. We have men averaging $75 per week and we have men averaging $500 per week. A good man can pick his own niche in this business and earn any amount of money he is capable of earning.

Unless you feel that you are above the average and that you can qualify for an unusual position do not waste our time or yours.

Our organization is the Parker-Holladay Company, Inc., an Illinois corporation which has been operating for eight years. Our telephone number is Superior 0835. You may phone the undersigned for an appointment and should you be able to qualify over the phone we will be glad to give you a personal interview, or address M T 511, Tribune.

A1 SALESMEN. SOMETHING UNUSUAL.

I am interested in securing about 20 young men of good character who can furnish good references. Should be between ages of 25 and 35 and preferably married. If you have the above qualifications I shall train you for 2 full days in our salesroom, teaching you our methods of selling our products. After this training, provided you are accepted, you will then be placed in the field with experienced men and with an assured income. At the present time our company maintains 26 offices in the country, doing the same thing for our organization. Program for the year is to establish offices all over the country. We are at the present time successfully operating throughout 45 countries of the world, therefore claim the largest, wealthiest company of its kind in the world today. We shall be able to place the successful applicants in real executive positions in as short a time as possible. The above is an honest advertisement for good, reputable men, and I am prepared to back it up. Even though you may be employed at a satisfactory salary, I have the courage to have you give it up for a real selling position with a future. See Personnel Manager, 2107 Transportation Bldg., 608 S. Dearborn, 9-12 a. m.

A $9,000,000 YEAR JUST CLOSED

creates this new opportunity for a few ambitious men. As Chicago's largest real estate operators we have succeeded in making the largest volume of subdivision sales in the middle west, over $9,000,000 for 1927.

We are planning for a bigger year in '28 and will employ a few salesmen, with or without experience. Must be over 25 years old, ambitious, and have good references. This means a chance to become a success with the most successful firm.

If you are experienced you can start earning at once. If you have no experience but are willing to start learning the Bartlett way we will give you an interview. Permanent position, year around employment and the backing of our name and 29 years of proven service makes our salesmen make money. Salary and commission to those who meet our qualifications as to integrity, sincerity and willingness to work. Apply in person only.

A MENTALLY BIG MAN.

A manufacturer, rated AAA1, operating nationally, has an opening for a man of successful selling experience. Prefer one who has met and sold chief executives, although in the final analysis personality will be the determining factor.

We are not so much interested in a salesman as we are in a man with potential executive ability—one who can learn our business and then qualify to direct others. For such a man there is a brilliant future.

This is not stocks, bonds, real estate, insurance, or books—nor is it posters.

Do not investigate unless you feel confident that your services are worth $8,000 per year or more.

We can use a man immediately in each of the following territories: Detroit, Cleveland, Kansas City, Milwaukee, and one in Chicago.

We will grant you a personal interview if you are able to interest us over the telephone. Phone Mr. C. C. Below on Monday for appointment. Randolph 4745, or if you prefer, address M C 422, Tribune.

Do You Want to Make at Least $10,000 in 1928? Ten of Our Men Made Better Than $10,000 in 1927.

MAKE 1928 YOUR BANNER YEAR.

Fifteen reasons why you can do it with us:

1. Big advertising campaign.
2. Red hot bona fide leads.
3. Four million dollars' worth of A-1 real estate, all within the city limits of Chicago.
4. Two miles of business frontage, most of it on full section line streets, for example 79th-st.
5. Fast transportation to the loop.
6. Sewers in and paid for.
7. Sewers, water, gas, electricity, and sidewalks included in purchase price.
8. Restricted apartment house property, $40 to $54 per front foot inside.
9. One-half million dollars' worth of building now under contract. Construction starts as soon as weather permits.
10. A-1 literature to back up your sales talk.
11. Sales contract that has no equal, guarantees development of the property which insures profit to your customers.
12. Thirty-two flat buildings to sell.
13. Sales resistance cut to minimum, 100% co-operation from men who sold $2,000,000 worth of adjacent property in 1927.
14. Highest rate of commission.
15. We furnish transportation.

I don't care whether you have ever sold real estate or not; you will make good here if you follow instructions. See MR. ABNEY, director of sales, Monday.

WANTED—MALE HELP.
Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

ATTENTION! SALES MANAGERS, REAL ESTATE SALESMEN OF CHICAGO.

HERE IS THE RAINBOW OF HOPE FOR REAL ESTATE MEN—THE END OF ALL YOUR TROUBLES AND FINANCIAL WORRIES—THE KIND OF DEAL YOU HAVE HOPED FOR, WISHED FOR, AND PERHAPS PRAYED FOR DURING THE LAST TWO YEARS. IF YOU WANT MONEY—NEED MONEY—WILL WORK FOR MONEY—IF YOU ARE INTERESTED—READ ON! READ ON!

YOU NEED THIS.

A brand new field of operation—the choicest boom spot in America—not Chicago, either. Backed up with millions. Rich—big, with glittering possibilities and ripe and ready this moment for quick and easy selling here IN CHICAGO. You are interested now, of course—if you are a real estate man you certainly are.

YOU NEED A BOOM SPOT.

You need a boom spot now for subdivision selling, and Chicago isn't it. There are only two great cities in America that are not oversold at present. I have one of them. I have the money, too. And I'm nationally known as a man who spends big money to do big things. I have rented one of the largest and finest real estate offices in Chicago. I mean business, and am going to make some real estate salesmen of Chicago very rich—watch me and see. I have made millions for myself and for men around me by being in on the KNOW FIRST. I'm in the Know First again, and I am going to take some good men in with me. First come, first served, too, with the best I have to offer.

TEN MILLION EYES ARE WATCHING.

The public announcement of my enterprise in this new boom spot will come like a thunderbolt to millions. It will echo throughout America. The public is waiting—watching—expecting something to happen. The greatest financiers in the world are counting the minutes until announcements of gigantic enterprise are made that will astound the nation. No picture will do it justice. When you see it with your own eyes and hear my story you will experience the most alluring sensation of your entire selling career. Your enthusiasm will know no bounds and will be equal only to your desire to break loose the chains that now bind you to a tough, hard selling proposition—a proposition as hard as nails. You know it.

I'M READY FOR YOU
(Next Monday Evening.)

I'm ready for details if you are. Come to see me next Monday evening, January 16th, at 8:00 o'clock. Get here on time. Come with the expectation of hearing something you have never heard before. Shake off that discouraged spirit—get out of the rut and listen to a new way—a new deal—a new spot where, if you are a worker, you will win something big and worth while. The men who follow me now will make as much money as my old men did—and no man in my line in America has paid more real hard cash money to real estate men than I have. I am ready to pay more. Gentlemen, will you be here promptly at the appointed hour?

MEN WHO WILL WORK and Want to Make Money.

Men who wish to earn $5,000 to $8,000 a year and up to $10,000 a year. Men with families, 28 years of age up to 45 years of age. Men with ambition and fire who really are making money. Men who have had sales experience, although sales experience is not necessary. Our company is a very large company, with a $3,500,000 paid in capital. We are rated at a $1,000,000 high in Dun and Bradstreet. We have hundreds of men who are making from $100 to $200 a week. If you can do what the average man is doing in this business we would like to have you come in for an interview.

We are looking for men who want steady employment, men who can give good references.

We have the fastest selling specialty in this country today, and our business is growing each day.

Would like to get in touch with a man like this:

A man who has been in the automobile business, who can show a successful record for a period of time.

Or a man who has worked in a factory as a factory superintendent or foreman. A man who has been a successful accountant.

We are interested in any man who has a family, who wants to educate his children, wishes to buy a new home, or a better one than he has now. Will not waste your time. Do not wish you to waste ours. Come in Monday between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., Room 204, Terminal Bldg., 537 S. Dearborn-st. Inquire for MR. WRIGHT.

Miscellaneous

PART TIME WORKERS AND OTHERS.

A very large Chicago Concern using a new idea to introduce their commodity in certain sections of the city requires the services of a great many men and women now employed in other lines to talk to their associates and arouse interest in the product we have to offer.

This is not a sales position, but it does offer dignified employment for numerous Chicago people who will be well compensated for their work and is something quite different from anything we have ever done before.

Write, giving us the nature of your present work and an evening appointment will be made for you at which time all information relative to this special work will be at hand. Address P D 219, Tribune.

DO YOU WANT TO BE HAPPY and PROSPEROUS?

If you want to know how to earn real money in either your full time or spare hours, come in and talk it over with me.

LILA FARRELL,

Here is the opportunity of a lifetime. It does not matter if you are employed or if your duties are many. If you need or want an additional income, to be independent, to own your own car, and have a real vacation, you can quickly earn the necesary money and more by following Miss Farrell's advice.

It costs you nothing to talk it over and it may do you a great deal of good.

LILA FARRELL,
ROOM 1213,
77 W. WASHINGTON-ST.

Saleswomen.

A $9,000,000 YEAR JUST CLOSED

creates this new opportunity for a few ambitious women. As Chicago's largest real estate operators we have succeeded in making the largest volume of subdivision sales in the middle west, over $9,000,000 for 1927.

We are planning for a bigger year in '28 and will employ a few saleswomen, with or without experience. Must be over 25 years old, ambitious, and have good references. This means a chance to become a success with the most successful firm.

If you are experienced you can start earning at once. If you have no experience but are willing to start learning the Bartlett way we will give you an interview. Permanent position, year round employment and the backing of our name and 29 years of proven service makes our saleswomen make money. Salary and commission to those who meet our qualifications as to integrity, sincerity and willingness to work. Apply in person only.

AMBITIOUS HOUSEWIVES.

Are you wondering how you can earn extra money?

A twenty minute conversation with me may solve just the question that is bothering you most.

Less than 3 years ago I was struggling in a department store on $18 a week. I was discouraged and unhappy until a friendly tip put me in touch with the people I now represent. I am happy and enjoy a splendid income—all because I found a New Wonderful Field for Women.

I am now engaged in selecting other women for this profitable, interesting work.

Experience is unnecessary—housewives qualify as well as business women. Your earnings will surprise you and the hours will not interfere with some home duties.

My help and co-operation are free. Call for a personal interview.

Monday 10 a. m. to 9 p. m.

WOMEN FOR FULL OR SPARE TIME WORK.

We are offering a few high class saleswomen a new deal for the coming year. If you are willing to work steady, if you will follow up leads regularly, if you will stick on a good proposition, we will give you a real contract calling for big commissions and a 10% yearly bonus. Our sales force is filling rapidly. Come in now.

AT LAST A CAB COMPANY FOR WOMEN DRIVERS.

THE BLUE BIRD CAB CO.

is now being formed by a former employee of a cab company of this city who has 13 years of experience, both as a driver and manager, who will teach you the business. This is something new for Chicago, and will be a great success. Philadelphia has a big cab company of women drivers and they have proven very successful, for they found that women drivers make better cab drivers than men. Will take you with or without cars. Apply between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m. daily at Wainer's Garage, 3727 Broadway. Broadway's Lightest Garage.

WOMEN!

Is your ability and personality buried in your pay envelope you get once a week?

Are you satisfied to go on day by day on a meager salary?

I have made many women successful in this special line of work. I can also make you.

Come in and talk it over. Meet other successful women who will help you in a line of work so well suited to women. You can work full or part-time.

Apply Monday or Tuesday between 10 a. m. and 4 p. m. or 6 p. m. and 9 p. m.

M. A. CLEARY,
ROOM 319
111 W. WASHINGTON-ST.

GOOD PAY FOR PERSONALITY-PLUS.

To complete our 1928 expansion program we need a competent, substantial, educated woman, not over 45, of pleasing personality and the poise which reflects assurance and begets the confidence and co-operation of associate executives and subordinates and resultful contact with clients. This old established firm, serving thousands here and abroad, can also place four women who qualify to travel. Salary, transportation, expense, etc., discussed only in personal interview. See Mrs. Heegstra, between 9 and 12:30 at 1506 Bell Building, N. Michigan-av. and S. Water.

WOMEN

over 25, who have seldom had to look at a want ad. To teach them a business that will pay them well while learning. Hours 10:30 a. m. until 12:30 p. m. Room 1202, 6 N. Michigan.

PART TIME WORKERS AND OTHERS.

A very large Chicago concern using a new idea to introduce their commodity in certain sections of the city requires the services of a great many men and women now employed in other lines to talk to their associates and arouse interest in the product we have to offer.

This is not a sales position, but it does offer dignified employment for numerous Chicago people who will be well compensated for their work and is something quite different from anything we have ever done before.

Write, giving us the nature of your present work and an evening appointment will be made for you at which time all information relative to this special work will be at hand. Address P D 220, Tribune.

INDIVIDUAL HOMES OF
4, 5, 6, 8 TO 12 ROOMS
2440 LAKE VIEW-AV.
GROUPED IN A BEAUTIFUL 19 STORY BUILDING ACROSS THE STREET FROM LINCOLN PARK AND OVERLOOKING LAKE MICHIGAN.

Many prominent families are already housed in 2440 Lake View-av.

Outstanding because of its luxurious comforts, distinguished by its prominent occupants and distinctly unique in appointments.

All outside spacious rooms; more than ample closet and cabinet space; cedar closets; six door porcelain electric refrigerator; inlaid linoleum kitchen and butler's pantry floors; intercommunicating private telephones; servants' bell system; white porcelain 6 burner stoves; canvased walls; grained gallery ceilings. In short, all the possible convenience you would want in your own home at prices usually asked for inferior accommodations.

Apartment homes may be either rented or purchased on our attractive co-operative plan.

"WHITE HOMES"

Are Not for Rent, but Yours for Rent.
A NEW YEAR is before you.
WHAT are YOU going to do with it?

You can make it just another year of following the old rut by continuing to be a rent slave.

OR

you can make it a milestone in your life, the beginning of your real independence, by achieving your lifelong ambition and owning YOUR home.

We have made it surprisingly easy for hundreds of others and can do the same for you. We are making a special New Year offer during January which you cannot afford to pass without investigation. Address L T 570, Tribune.

REAL ESTATE LOANS.

FIRST RATE SECOND MORTGAGE LOANS

Second mortgage loans are cut to order, so to speak, just like a suit of clothes. They may be first rate, second rate, or tenth rate.

The rate applied by The Chicago Morris Plan Bank as Agent is first rate, because it is the lowest rate.

And it is the only rate which we apply to any second mortgage loan which is made by this institution.

If you do not get this distinction, make a few inquiries as to just what a second mortgage loan will cost you and see how they compare with our rate of 6% interest and commissions as follows:

3½% for 1 year.
6½% for 2 years.
9% for 3 years.

OFFERING

These fine cars were taken in trade. They have been driven carefully at moderate speed, over city streets. Their mild use has left them as good as new mechanically. Their appearance carries prestige.

Our mechanics have gone over them, and we offer them to you in first class condition.

MINERVA COLLAPSIBLE COUPE.

Le Baron body. It has just been repainted—blue body and fenders, black wire wheels, upholstered in black leather; 4 wheel brakes; driven 17,000 miles; cost $13,750 new; $6,000 now.

ROLLS-ROYCE LIMOUSINE.

Newly painted dark maroon. Upholstery in excellent condition. English chassis; 6 new tires; only driven 16,000 miles; cost $21,000 new; now $5,500.

LINCOLN 1926 5 PASS. SEDAN.

Built for the show; Judkins body. Partition to separate driver's seat; beautiful blue upholstering, blue trimmed in black, wire wheels, 2 extra, new Vogue tires; mounted in fenders. Cost $7,800 new; $2,750 now.

PIERCE-ARROW FRENCH TOWN CAR.

Series 33, maroon paint job, black crown fenders; very roomy; looks new. Has had good attention at all times; wonderful livery car; now $1,250.

ISOTTA FRASCHINI TOWN CABRIOLET.

Good condition mechanically; tires good; cost $14,000 new; sacrifice at $1,750.

Rolls-Royce

ISOTTA FRASCHINI SPECIAL 4 PASS. SPORT of the latest type. The body is designed so that when the top is up, side glass wings give the effect of a sedan. It is extremely low and smart in appearance. Painted a canary yellow with black fenders. This car has been used very little and has the appearance and performance of new. Price $7,500.

EXCELSIOR ENCLOSED DRIVE SEDAN. One of Europe's finest motor cars. Cost $14,000 only 11,000 miles ago. Price $5,500.

STEVENS DURYEA SEDAN with new balloon tires. Just reconditioned. Priced very low. Only $950.

LINCOLN 4 PASS. JUDKINS SEDAN. In excellent shape. Many extras. Priced quite reasonable at $2,250.

LINCOLN BRUNN TOWN BRGHM. Shows very little sign of wear. An exceptionally fine value; only $2,650.

ROLLS-ROYCE ROADSTER. Painted a beautiful cream color with Burbank top, 6 new tires and in excellent mechanical condition. An unusual bargain at $6,500.

We have other types of coach work on Rolls-Royce chassis available at attractive prices.

JEWETT DE LUXE TOURING. Here's a big value. Snappy de luxe type with spare tire mounted left side; excellent mechanically; equipped with glassmobile side curtains; excellent tires, auto. w. s. cleaner, etc.; paint good. First person who sees and rides in it will buy it quickly. $175.

PAIGE BROUGHAM, 6-70. Large and luxurious 2 door type; heater, slip covers, spotlight, auto. w. s. cleaner, mirror, tires all good, spare mounted left; winter front, body bars, trunk carrier, carrying space in rear decking, motometer and lock. Paint and mechanical condition excellent. $375.

PONTIAC COACH. In perfect condition. So good looks like refinished. Has slip covers, good tires, radiator shutter, 2 bumpers, etc. Has had our careful checking mechanically and pronounced 100% by our experts. $450.

PAIGE BROUGHAM MODEL 6-72. A guaranteed car. If there is any question in your mind as to the appearance, quality, or performance of a Bird-Sykes guaranteed car, dismiss it. Never before this model at this price. Everything 100% condition. Has inner control spotlight, shock absorbers, motometer, mirror, auto. w. s. cleaner, etc. Better try to see it early. $675.

BUICK 5 PASS. SEDAN. First class condition mechanically. Interior O. K. Finish good. Tires almost new condition; winter front, spotlight, 2 bumpers, sidelights, auto. w. s. cleaner. Guaranteed. Rides and handles easily and operates smoothly and quietly. $575.

JEWETT SEDAN, 5 PASS., 6-55. Nearly every car advertised by us today has 4 wheel brakes; this one has, so you will note it is scarcely mentioned. Another guaranteed car. Full 4 doors, roomy and luxurious. Finish and upholstery perfect. Spotlight, auto. w. s. cleaner, mirror, motometer, and lock, etc. It's a late one priced at only $675.

PAIGE 4 DOOR BROUGHAM 6-70 MODEL. A stylish, low hung custom style Paige with leather back, carriage bows, oval rear quarter windows and one affording more than average comfort. Finish, nickel work and interior like new. Guaranteed mechanically. Has trunk, disc wheels, tires in almost new condition, motometer and lock, bumpers, mirror, etc. $695.

JEWETT SEDAN, 5 PASS. Given a price, a lot of people guess at year and condition. Would it surprise you to know that for the price this car offers you all late features, such as 1 piece windshield, balloon tires, hydraulic brakes, 2 tone Duco finish, bumpers, full equipment, and guaranteed mechanically? Sound and substantial, and only $450.

HUDSON 4 DOOR BROUGHAM. The very desirable leather back type, with bows, trunk carrier, step and kick plates, bumpers, and good balloon tires. Interior and finish A1. It is ready for thousands of miles of continuous uninterrupted service. A car of this one in this condition has never been offered at anywhere near our price of $750.

PAIGE SEDAN, MODEL 6-72. The second "72" sedan we have had in ten days. This particular car we defy any one to distinguish from new. It is the last word in appearance and comfort, and the equipment is very complete; in fact, it has almost new tires, spare complete, trunk, bumpers, etc. Guaranteed mechanically. Come in and look what $775 buys.

CHANDLER SEDAN. A late one. Usually cars of this type come into our hands with twice the mileage that this one has had, and it is in such superb condition we cannot fully describe it in a way to do it justice. Has 1 piece windshield, good tires, shock absorbers, 4 wheel brakes, and guaranteed. $750.

STRAIGHT 8 PAIGE SEDAN, MODEL 8-85. This is our current series model, with 4 speed transmission and is without a doubt the best looking car you have ever seen. Mechanically it offers you a motoring sensation the equal of which is not approached by any other car. This low mileage Paige is fully equipped, guaranteed, and reasonably priced.

Distributors—Managers.

National company wants responsible men to handle distribution of new specialties and patented devices that have unusual earning possibilities, in Chicago, Springfield, Peoria, Decatur, Aurora, Elgin, Danville, Rockford, and other principal cities in Illinois and Western Indiana.

Our proposition to distributors offers unusual possibilities and a permanent connection with a continuous supply of new and fast selling articles for distribution. A distributor who can organize salesmen needs $300 to $500 to successfully handle our franchise, covering entire ownership. A salesman needs no capital.

If your are looking for a profitable business of your own we invite your investigation and references will be exchanged. Address B O 429, Tribune.

P. S.: Lack of investigation sometimes causes a man to lose a real opportunity.

THAT DOOR TO THE VAULT WEIGHS EIGHTEEN TONS— IT IS CONTROLLED BY A TIME CLOCK— THE COMBINATION IS SET FOR NINE O'CLOCK— UNTIL THE CLOCK STRIKES NINE NO POWER ON EARTH CAN OPEN THAT DOOR— BUT AT NINE O'CLOCK ALL YOU HAVE TO DO IS TURN THE HANDLE AND THE DOOR SWINGS OPEN— IT'S 8:59 NOW—
THERE YOU SEE HOW IT WORKS— IF I WERE TO CLOSE THAT DOOR— I'D HAVE TO WAIT UNTIL NINE O'CLOCK TOMORROW TO OPEN IT AGAIN—
I GUESS A ROBBER WOULD HAVE A HARD TIME BREAKING INTO THAT SAFE—
THAT SAFE IS ABSOLUTELY BURGLAR PROOF— FIRE— ACID— DYNAMITE— NOTHING CAN OPEN THAT SAFE WHEN THE TIME LOCK IS SET UNTIL THE PROPER HOUR—
A MILLION DOLLARS IS ONLY A SAMPLE— THAT VAULT CONTAINS EXACTLY —— IT'S FUNNY I CANNOT REMEMBER THE GRAND TOTAL OF DOLLARS—
I'LL BET YOU HAVE OVER A MILLION DOLLARS LOCKED UP IN THE VAULT RIGHT NOW—
STAY AWAY FROM THAT VAULT DOOR— AND I'LL GET MY ACCOUNT BOOK— AND I'LL LET YOU KNOW EXACTLY HOW MANY NICKELS— DIMES AND DOLLARS YOUR PAPA HAS IN THAT VAULT—
I'LL JUST READ HIM A FEW PAGES— AND LET HIM KNOW JUST HOW MUCH MONEY I REALLY HAVE— THEN I'LL BET HE'LL GO OUT TELLING ALL HIS LITTLE FRIENDS WHAT A GREAT MAN HIS DADDY IS—
GREAT HEAVENS! THE KID IS LOCKED IN THE VAULT— AND THE TIME CLOCK IS SET FOR NINE O'CLOCK TOMORROW MORNING—
OUR CHILD— CHESTER— HE'S LOCKED IN THE VAULT— HE'LL SMOTHER TO DEATH— OR DIE OF FRIGHT—
WHAT!!
SEND THE POLICE— CALL OUT THE FIRE DEPARTMENT— HURRY! IT'S A CASE OF LIFE OR DEATH— BRING THE PULMOTOR—
OH DO SOMETHING! DO IT QUICK!
CAN YOU HEAR ME, CHESTER? ARE YOU ALIVE?
OH— MY DARLING CHILD— DYING WITHOUT A HAND RAISED TO HELP HIM—
DID YOU SEE THAT CAT THAT CAME IN HERE? GEE— IT HAD THE PINKEST EYES— A GREAT BIG WHITE ONE— I CHASED IT OVER A MILE HE GOT AWAY
CHESTER— MY BOY SAFE!

AW, POP' DON'T BE A WET BLANKET—I JUST GOT'TA HAVE THAT BOX OF CHOCOLATES FOR TONIGHT!
YOU'VE RUN YOUR BILL UP TO $1.90 THIS WEEK—WILL Y'SQUARE UP SOON AS Y'GET YOUR ALLOWANCE?
DOGGONE BEEZIE! WHEN HE USED TO CALL ON TH' QUEEN HE ALWAYS FETCHED SOME SWEETS—NOW I GOTTA FOLL'A SUIT OR BE A PIKER!
NOPE! MY ROOM WOULD BE TH' FIRST PLACE THAT NOSEY LIL' SNIP WOULD LOOK FOR IT!
AH! AT'S USIN' TH' OL' BEAN FOR SOMEP'N ELSE BESIDES A HAT RACK—I STUCK IT IN TH' BOX WHERE DAD KEEPS HIS PANAMA—NOBODY WILL LOOK THERE TILL NEXT SUMMER!
MMM! MUMM!
WELL! WELL! WHAT ARE YOU HIDING OUT THERE WITH, JOSIE—A BOX OF CANDY?
TOO MUCH CANDY ISN'T GOOD FOR LITTLE GIRLS—MMM! THESE CHOCOLATES ARE FINE—WHO GAVE THEM TO YOU, JOSIE?
HUH? ER—I JES FOUND 'EM!
THOMAS! WHERE IN TH' WORLD DID YOU GET THAT CANDY?
JOSIE HAD IT! THESE CHOCOLATES ARE GREAT—HAVE ONE BEFORE THEY'RE ALL GONE?
NOW TELL ME JOSIE—JUST WHY YOU TOOK HAROLD'S CANDY!
I WAS JUST GONNA TAKE ONE LITTLE PIECE, WHEN DADDY ET TH' WHOLE BOX!
THAT BOY WILL BE FURIOUS—I'LL MAKE UP SOME DELICIOUS DIVINITY FUDGE, HURRIEDLY!
I HOPE SONNY DOESN'T DETECT THE SUBSTITUTION!
LATER
OH! HAROLD—I COULD JUST LOVE YOU FOR THIS GORGEOUS FUDGE—I'LL BET YOUR DARLING MOTHER MADE IT FOR ME!

"ONE PUNCH" MEYER- HUH- FOR A DIME I'D KNOCK THAT RUMMY FOR A GOOL!
WELL, JUDGING FROM THE CONDITION OF YOUR BACK BOARD-BILL I'D SAY A DIME WOULD LOOK LIKE A BIG PURSE TO YOU.
MISS SCHMALTZ, THIS IS MY FRIEND- 'ONE PUNCH' MEYER- HE IS LOOKING FOR A NICE QUIET PLACE TO LIVE AND I RECOMMENDED YOUR BOARDING HOUSE
WHY, MR. CRAW ANY FRIEND OF YOURS IS MORE THAN WELCOME, PROVIDED THEY PAY THEIR RENT IN ADVANCE- YES INDEED.
RIGHT WHEN MY LUCK COMMENCED BREAKIN' GOOD THEOBALD'S OLD LADY HAD TO GO AND BUST UP THE GAME JUST BECAUSE I DUMPED A FEW CIGAR BUTTS IN TH' PIANY PHOOEY! SUCH A WOMAN!
GIT OFF MY STUMMICK!
WELL WOT IN TH—?
WHOP!
OH, MOONSHINE- I DIDN'T THINK YOU WOULD BE HOME TONIGHT SO I PUT A NEW BOARDER IN YOUR ROOM.
WELL, IF HE AIN'T OUT OF IT BEFORE I COUNT TEN HE'S GONNA GET CHUCKED OUT ON HIS EAR, EMMY.
POO-POOH! WELL, MAYBE YOU WON'T TALK SO BIG WHEN I TELL YOU THAT THE GENTLEMAN OCCUPYING YOUR ROOM IS MR. "ONE PUNCH" MEYER HIMSELF.
OH WELL, I'LL TALK TO THAT BABY IN THE MORNIN'
I JUST WAN'T TO BORRY A PILLOW, OSCAR.
TURN OUT THAT LIGHT AND GIT OUTTA HERE, YOU IDIOT!
OH WHAT A NIGHT- WHAT A NIGHT! I WONDER IF I CAN SLIP INTO MY ROOM AND SNEAK A CLEAN COLLAR WITHOUT WAKIN' THAT HYENA UP.
HELLO "ONE PUNCH"! I DIDN'T KNOW WHO YOU WAS WHEN I DONE ALL THAT HOLLERIN' LAST NIGHT. IT JUST GOES TO SHOW, YOU CAN'T TELL A PRIZE FIGHTER WHEN YOU SEE ONE NOW DAYS.
A PRIZE FIGHTER? WHAT EVER MADE YOU THINK I WAS A PRIZE FIGHTER?
EMMY SAID YOU WAS "ONE PUNCH" MEYER.
OH YES, YES INDEED. THEY CALL ME "ONE PUNCH" BECAUSE I'M THE GUY THAT WINS SO MANY PRIZES ON THE PUNCH BOARDS WITH ONE PUNCH.
FOR PITY SAKES! IF IT ISN'T MR. MEYER.

GEE, THOSE BIG GUYS FROM TH' PAPER SURE WERE NICE TO ME- GOT ME A LICENSE AN' CHASED THOSE HOODLUMS OFF MY CORNER AN' FIXED IT SO I CAN MAKE SOME REAL DOUGH NOW-
UGH! LET'S NOT STOP HERE, STEVE- THE WALK IS SO DIRTY-
WELL, JUST AS YOU SAY- I ONLY WANTED TO BUY A PAPER- BUT THERE'LL BE A STAND AT THE NEXT CORNER-
GEE- 'MAGINE THAT? THERE I LOSE A CUSTOMER JUST 'CAUSE TH' SIDE-WALK'S A LITTLE DIRTY- I'M NOT TH' STREET-SWEEPER- STILL TH' WALK IS A MESS AN' THAT HURTS BUSINESS-
OH, WELL- WHEN YER IN BUSINESS YUH CAN'T 'FORD TO BE LAZY- AN' I NEVER DID MIND A LITTLE WORK-
WHAT'S DE IDEA CLEANIN' OFF DE WALK- T'INK DAT'LL GET YUH ANYTHING?
C'MON! GET OFF THIS CORNER WITH THOSE PAPERS 'FORE I BANG YUH ONE ON TH' EAR-
NIX! NIX!
I'LL TEACH THOSE STIFFS TO COME SNOOPIN' AROUND MY CORNER, SOON AS I GET IT ALL CLEANED UP-
OH, HELLO, MR. BRESLIN- I SEE IN TH' PAPER WHERE YER BROTHER, JACK, TOOK THAT BIG FURRINER IN TH' FOURTH ROUND LAST NIGHT-
HELLO, ANNIE- HOW'S BUSINESS?
SAY, FRANK- HERE'S SOME APPLES I'VE BEEN SAVIN' FOR YUH- GOT MORE'N I CAN USE- TAKE 'EM HOME TO TH' KIDS-
AH- YOUR KINDNESS SHALL NEVER BE FORGOTTEN-
HERE- MAYBE YUH'D LIKE TO LOOK OVER TH' MORNIN' PAPER- LOTS O' NEWS TO-DAY- TAKE IT ALONG- GLAD TO GIVE IT TO YOU-
THANKS, ANNIE-
PLEASE HELP THE POOR
THERE, NOW! ALL SET TO GO TO WORK- PRETTY NEAR TIME FOR TH' RUSH TO START, TOO- LOTS MORE TO RUNNIN' A BUSINESS 'N JUST TAKIN' IN TH' DOUGH- YUH'VE GOT TO HAVE REAL FRIENDS IF YER GOIN' TO GET VERY FAR-
PAPA- BUY ME THE FUNNIES

THE GUY THAT WROTE "THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME" SAID A MOUTHFUL
TEXAS SLIM
"THINKS HE HAS A SOFT BERTH"
A MR. AKERS AND HIS DAUGHTER WERE JUST HERE LOOKING AT A SUITE IN THE HOTEL, MR. HART.
YOU DON'T MEAN MR. AKERS, THE MILLIONAIRE COWMAN FROM WYOMING DO YOU, FOLEY
TEXAS, PAPA AND I ARE GOING TO GIVE UP OUR APARTMENT AND MOVE TO THE ST. CLARE HOTEL
GEE WHIZ THAT'S A SWELL PLACE, JESSIE.
I COULDN'T NEVER AFFORD TO LIVE THERE - IF I ONLY COULD FIGURE OUT SOME SCHEME TO BE AROUND SO I COULD SEE JESSIE OFTEN - BY GOLLY- I'VE GOT IT.
ARE YOU THE MANAGER, MISTER
I AM AND I HAVE BEEN EXPECTING TO SEE YOU, SIR - HART IS MY NAME AND I WILL BE PROUD TO HAVE YOU WITH US.
I WANT YOU TO BE COMFORTABLE, SIR - HERE, SMOKE THIS CIGAR WHILE I SHOW YOU AROUND.
THANKS!
I AM SURE YOU WILL BE COMFORTABLE IN THIS SUITE.
I REALLY DIDN'T EXPECT ANYTHING LIKE THIS.
AND WHAT ABOUT THE MEALS.
WE HAVE THE VERY BEST CHEF IN TOWN IT IS ABOUT DINNER TIME - I WILL HAVE HIM PREPARE US SOME FOOD.
YOUR CHEF CERTAINLY DID HIMSELF PROUD ON THIS MEAL MISTER MANAGER - I THINK I'LL STAY
LET US TALK BUSINESS LATER. I HAVE THREE THEATER TICKETS FOR TO-NIGHT I AM SURE YOU AND YOUR DAUGHTER WILL ENJOY THE SHOW.
MY DAUGHTER? WHAT ARE YOU TRYING TO DO - KID ME?
WHY I THOUGHT I UNDERSTOOD THAT YOU HAD A DAUGHTER AND THAT SHE EXPECTED TO LIVE HERE WITH YOU.
I SHOULD SAY NOT - MY NAME'S SLIM, AND I CAME TO GET A JOB AS A BELL HOP.
OH - I SEE!
HELLO, TEXAS - HOW DO YOU LIKE THE HOTEL.
NOT SO GOOD. NOT SO GOOD!

GOLLY, THAT SHADOW LOOKS HUGE. IT JUST SEEMS TO HANG AROUND TO REMIND ME I'M TOO FAT.
WELL THE SCALES SAY THE SAME THING. HOWEVER I DON'T FEEL FAT— I ONLY LOOK FAT.
YES'M. MIS WALLET IS IN. STEP IN.
MISS OBOE, I WANT TO PRESENT MY HUSBAND, MR. WALLET.
YOU LOOK JUST LIKE I EXPECTED. I'VE HAD YOU DESCRIBED TO ME.
YES I KNOW JUST WHAT THEY SAID - BIG AND FAT! IT'S ALMOST ENOUGH TO DRIVE ANYBODY TO CARROTS.
EVEN IN THE MAIL! A CLASS IN REDUCING AND AN AD FOR A RIDING SCHOOL— TAKE OFF FLESH PLEASANTLY. BAH!
THIS SHIRT WAS SPLIT DOWN THE BACK, MISTA WALT, BEFORE I EVAH TOUCHED IT. YOU FILLIN' 'EM OUT TOO WELL NOWADAYS-
IF PEOPLE DON'T REMIND ME OF IT INANIMATE OBJECTS DO. THIS CHAIR IS GETTING TOO SNUG-UNCA WALT, I HAD THE NOSEBLEED.
THAT'S TOUGH LUCK, SKEEZIX, BUT THANK GOODNESS THAT'S ONE SUBJECT THAT HAS NOTHING TO DO WITH MY BEING FAT
BUT IT DOES. THAT'S WHY I GOT THE NOSEBLEED.
GREAT SCOTT! I DON'T SEE HOW MY FLESH COULD HAVE ANYTHING TO DO WITH THAT.
WELL EMIL SCHWARTZ PUNCHED ME IN THE NOSE AND THAT WAS THE REASON.
THAT COULDN'T BE. I DON'T SEE THE CONNECTION.
HE HIT ME BECAUSE I SAID HIS FATHER WAS BOWLEGGED AN' HAD WHISKERS LIKE PAL.
THAT CERTAINLY WASN'T AT ALL NICE. WHY DID YOU SAY SUCH A THING AS THAT?
BECAUSE HE SAID MY UNCA WALT WAS MADE OUT O' BLUBBER.

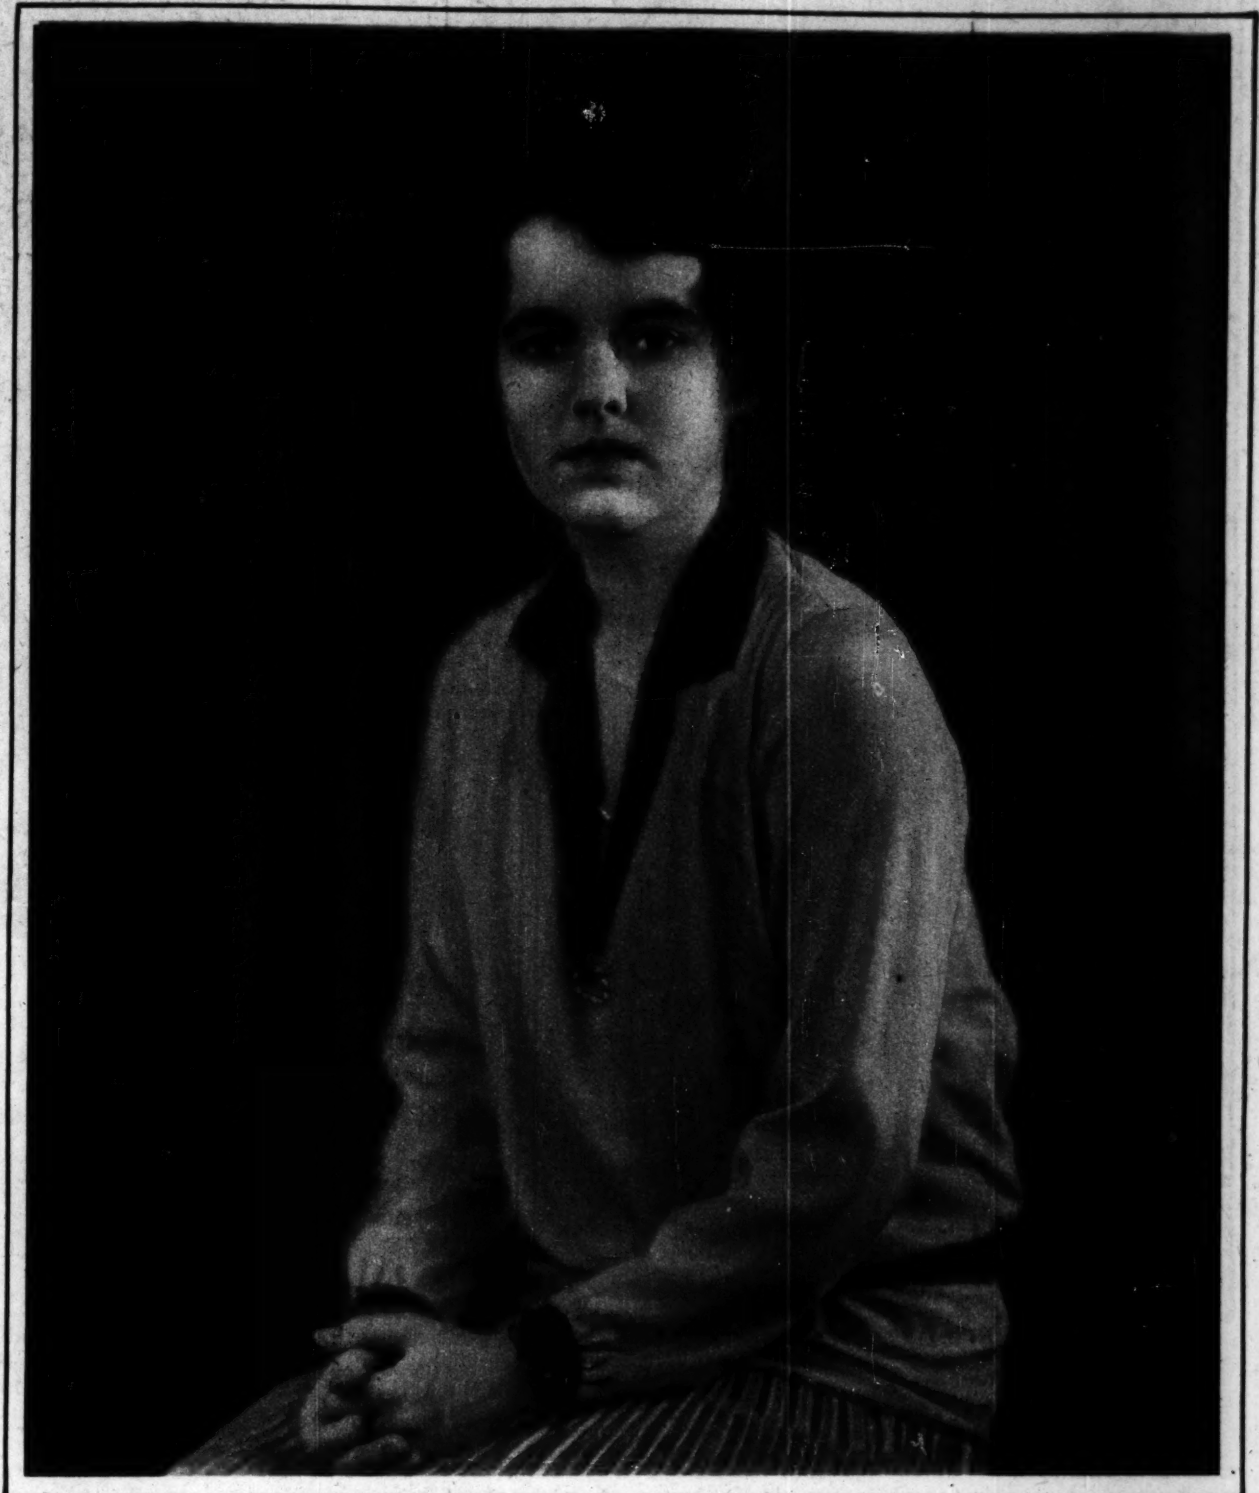
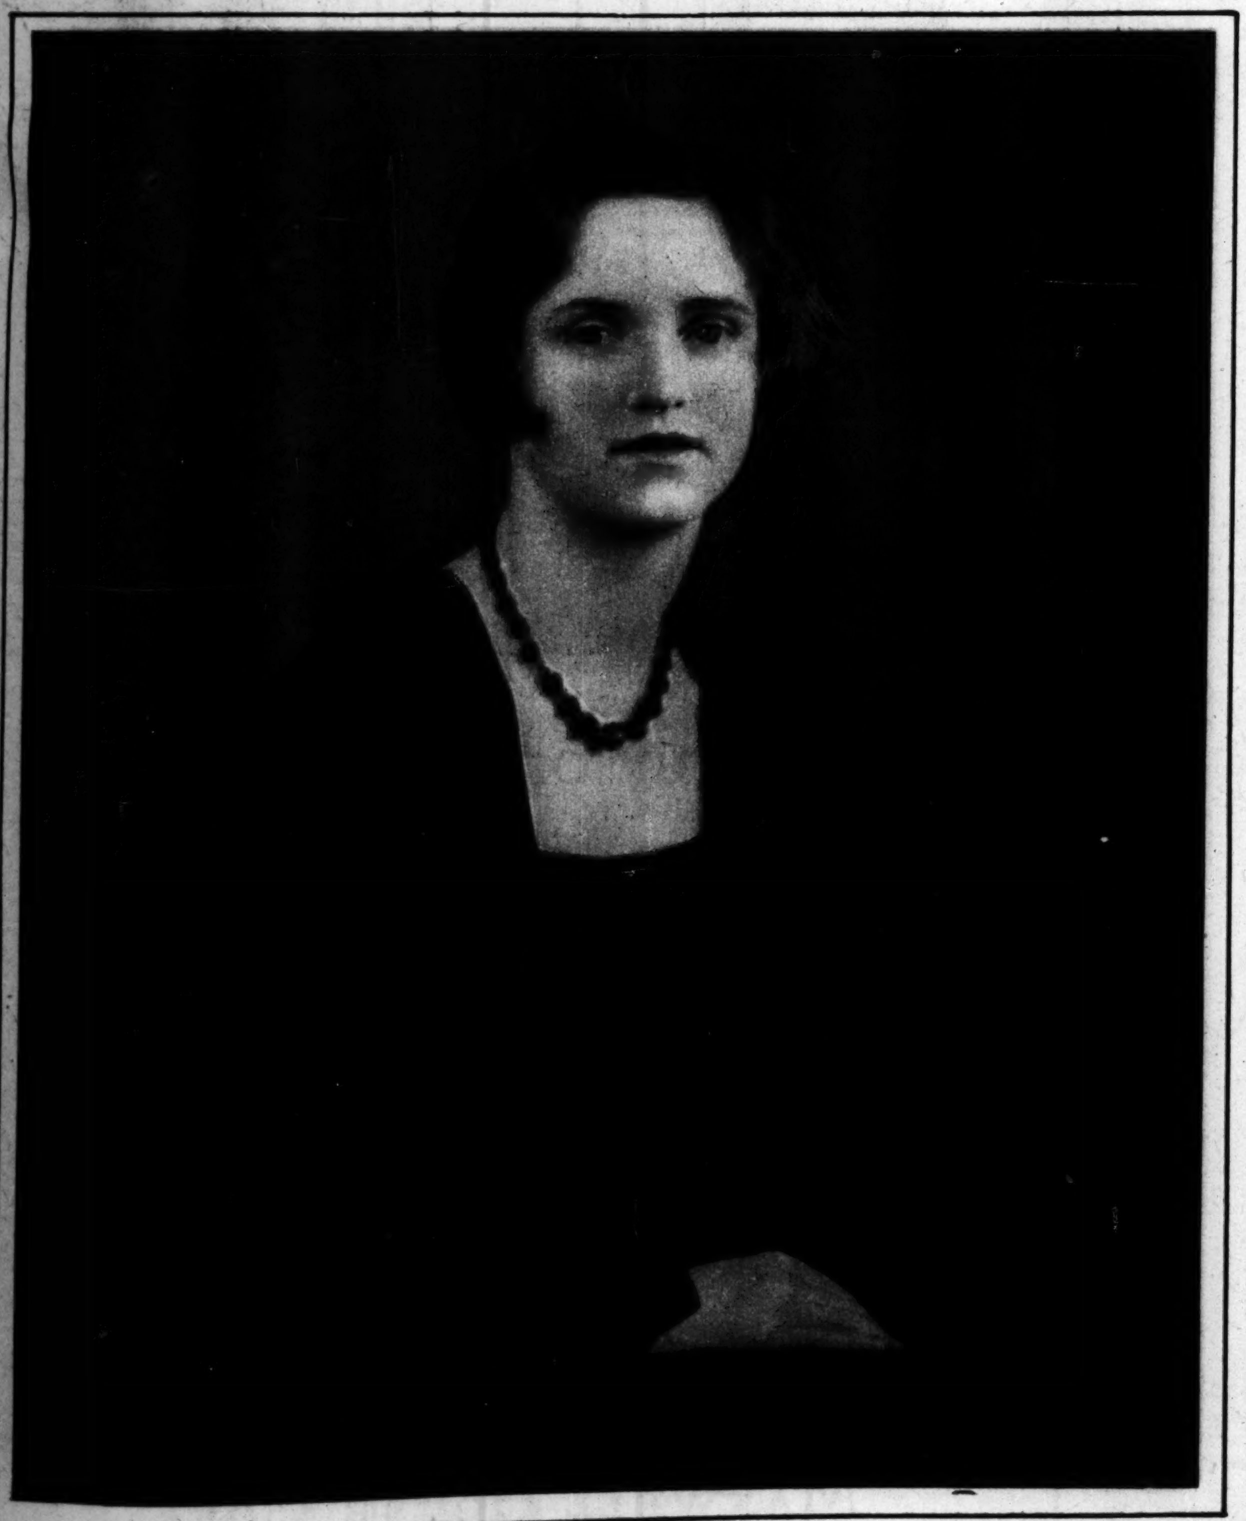
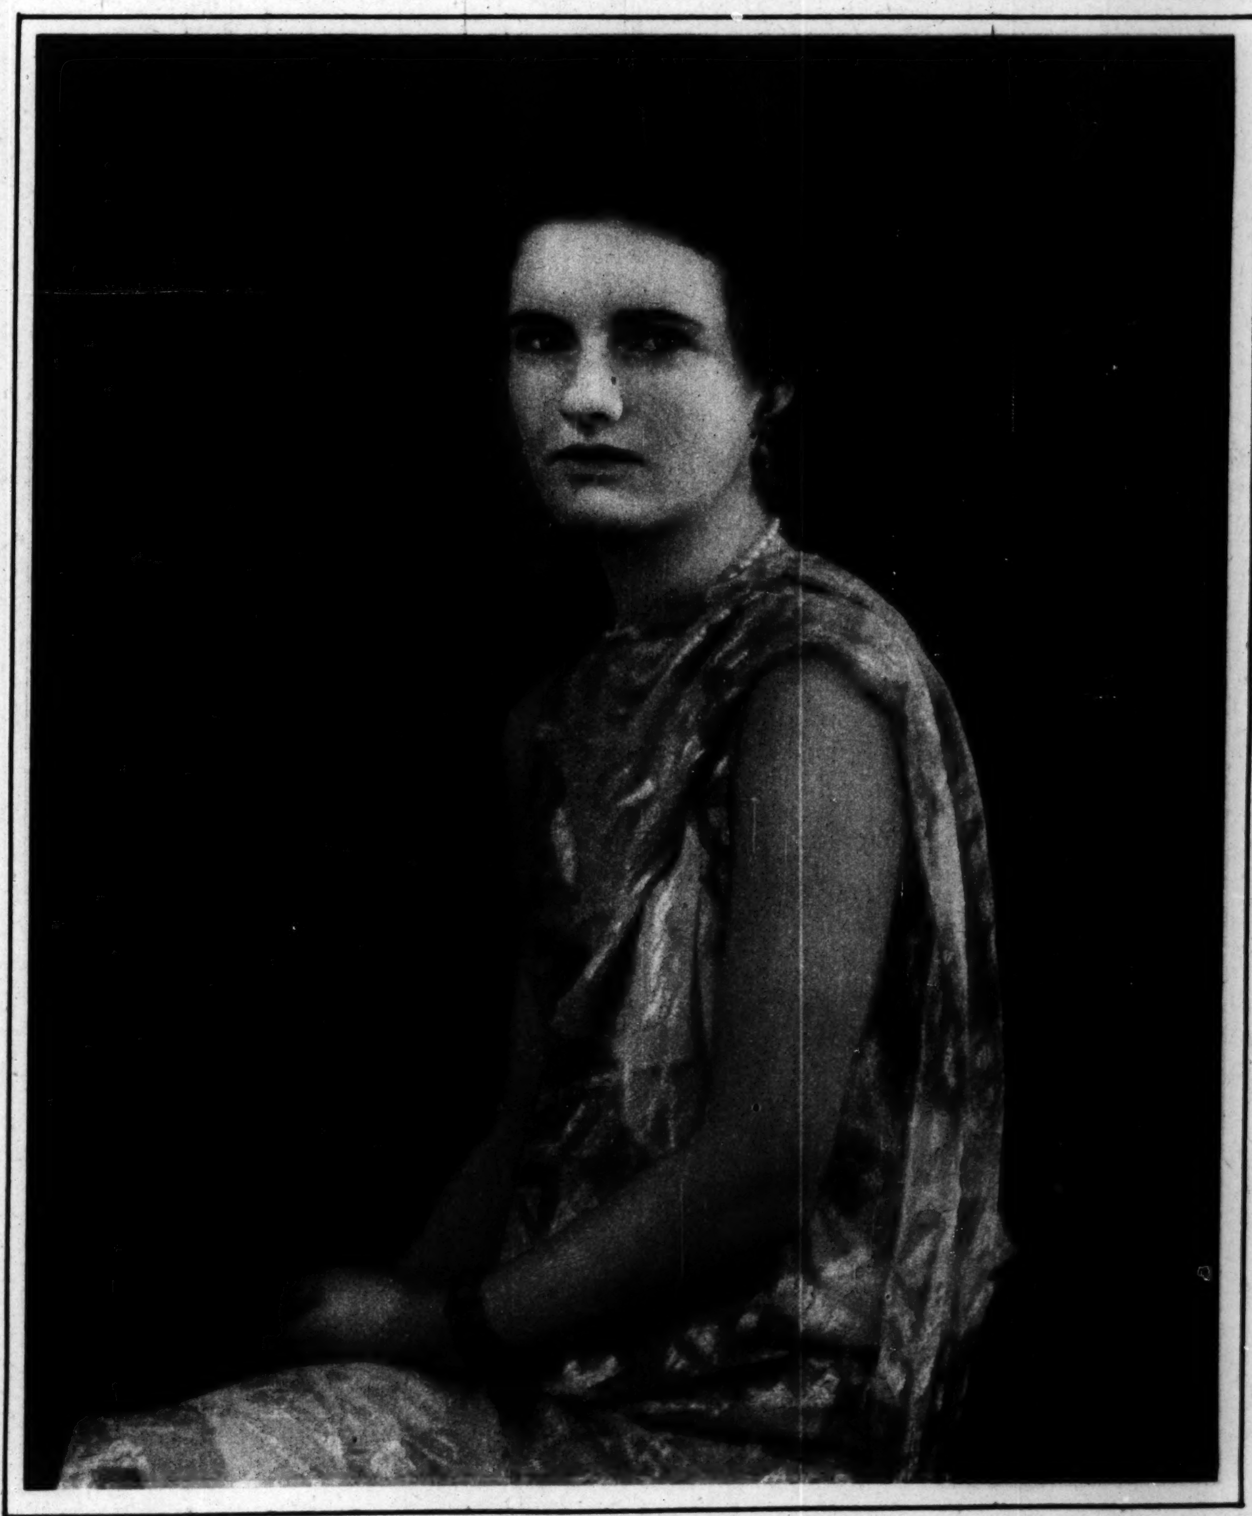
MISS VIRGINIA WALLACE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Wallace of Winnetka, was one of the first debutantes of the season to bow at a tea early last fall. Many parties have been given for her during her first season out.



MISS JESSIE HOSMER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip B. Hosmer of the Seneca hotel, made her debut at a dinner dance at the Fortnightly on Dec. 3.



MISS ELIZABETH LINN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Weber Linn of 1357 East Fifty-sixth street, is the unfortunate debutante who was unable to attend her own debut reception because of an attack of the flu. She recovered in time to have a good time at a dance given for her several weeks later.



MISS KATHARINE KALES, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Davis Kales of 1356 North State street, was having such a good time abroad that she almost didn't arrive in Chicago to make her scheduled debut. Dr. and Mrs. Kales presented her at a tea at the Fortnightly on December 20.

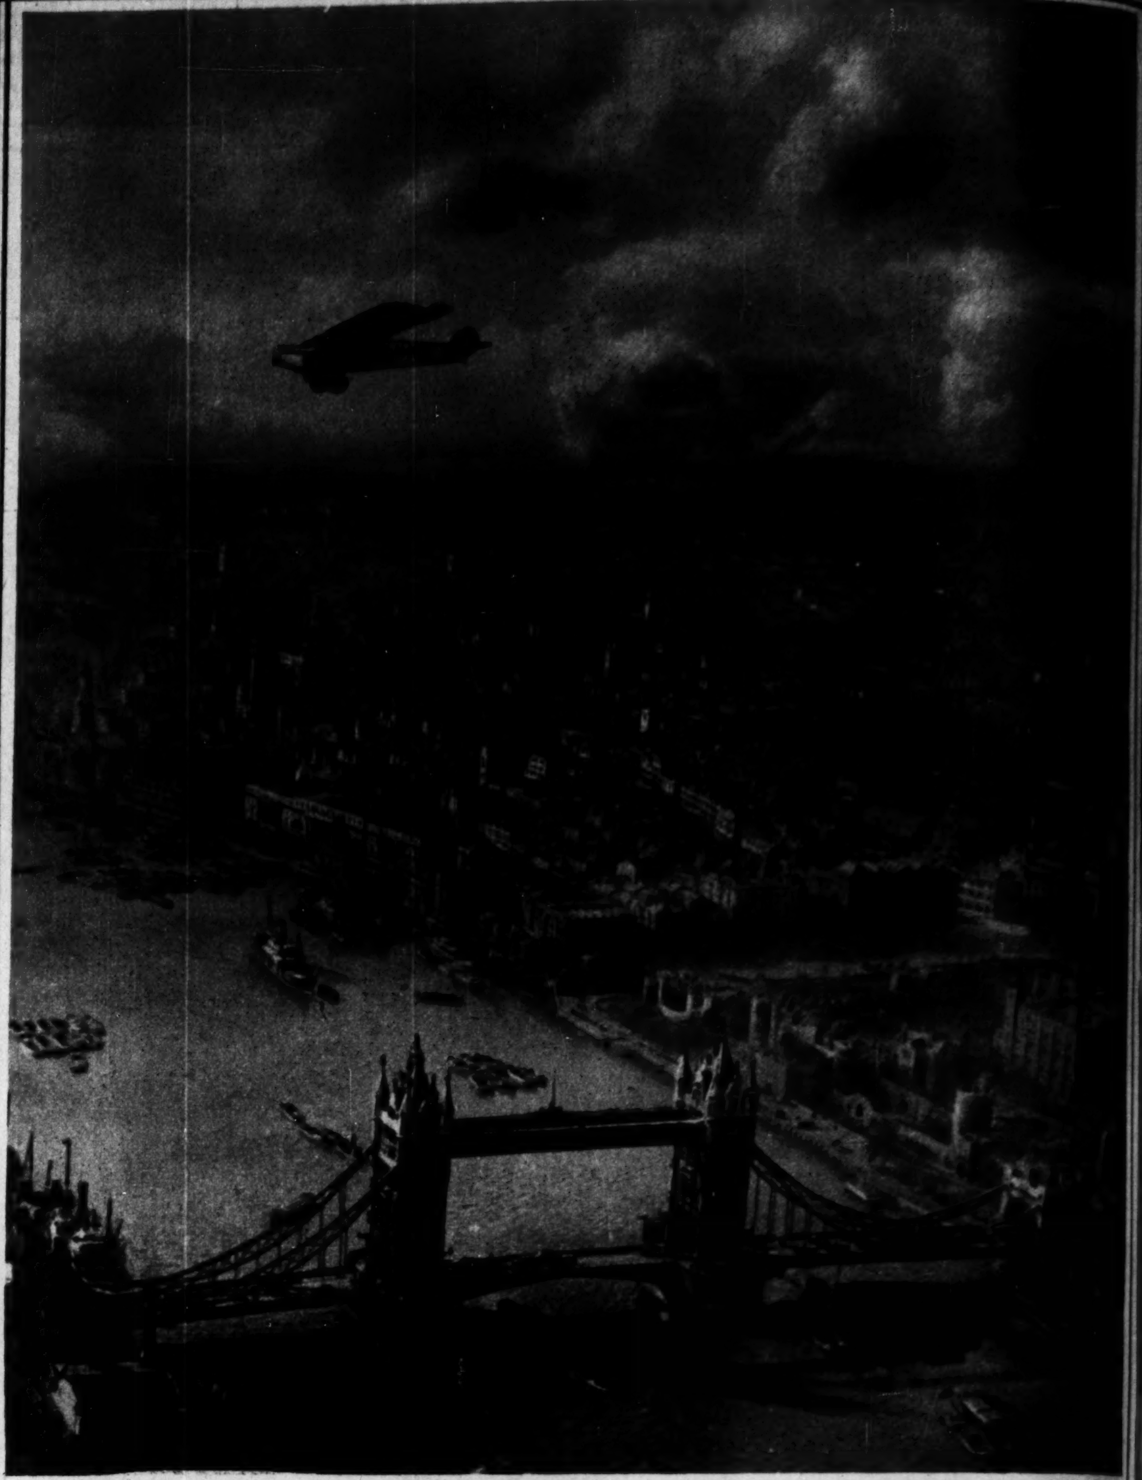
AN ICE NYMPH—If the wood nymphs and water nymphs of our fairy tale days had a sister known as Miss Ice Nymph, she must have resembled Beatrix Loughran, international figure skating champion, pictured here at Lake Placid, N. Y. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

$250,000 LEGS; at least that's the value placed upon them by their owner, Eleanor Ambrose Maurice, widow of the great ballroom dancer. Eleanor has had them insured at $125,000 each against the perils of catch-as-catch-can dancing. (Photograph from Wide World.)



LONDON HAD A FOGLESS DAY, a rare occurrence at this time of the year, and an aviator took advantage of it to catch this view from the upper regions. London Bridge of song and story is in the foreground, while back of it loom the Tower of London and nearly every church spire to be found in the great city.

"Good to the last drop"

FROM steel blue to olive green—from straw yellow to mahogany! Before they are roasted, they look as different as they taste: the countless kinds and grades of coffee beans brought to this country for our breakfast cup.

Hundreds of shapes and sizes and colors—myriad different coffee flavors from the tropical fields of four continents.

Yet the first real nation-wide fame has come to no single coffee grown—but to a skillful mingling of many flavors. To a blend created years ago by a southerner of the old South.

That special touch of blended richness in Maxwell House Coffee has now swiftly made it by far the largest selling coffee in the entire United States.

An adventure awaits you and your family in the rich, mellow liquor of Maxwell House Coffee.

THE WAVES RULE BRITANNIA for a change as blizzard is followed by flood and flood by tide, with a consequent trail of destruction, suffering, and death. Here is the submerged Bath road in Maidenhead, an English riverside town hard hit after long immunity from flood. The overflowing Thames flooded many historic spots in London and caused perhaps a score of deaths.

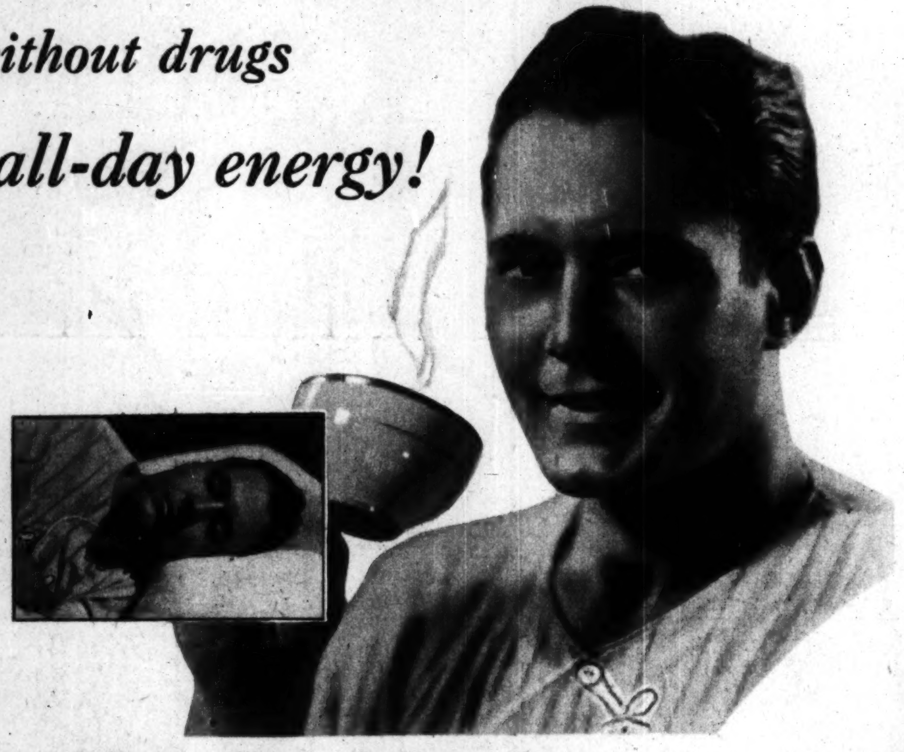
Instant Sleep

without drugs

—and all-day energy!



Make This 3-Day Test!

From tonight on, you can be sure of getting instant, deep sleep—without the use of drugs. You will awaken each morning fairly tingling with healthy vigor.

No drug can ever refresh you in that way. For, while drugs may put you to sleep, they always leave you "logy" and befuddled when you awaken.

But science has developed a wonderful food-beverage that brings sound, restful sleep in a natural way. It is called Ovaltine. It puts you to sleep instantly. And as you sleep, its special food properties restore your tired mind and body—building up new vitality and energy.

Morning finds you a new man. Fresh, clear-eyed, buoyant. You have the energy to carry you right through the day and into the evening.

The 3-day test we offer here will prove all we claim. Note, most carefully, how good you feel when you get up in the morning.

Why Ovaltine brings restoring sleep

Authorities agree that digestive unrest is the main cause of sleeplessness. Ovaltine overcomes this condition in two ways:

FIRST—It digests very quickly itself. Even in cases of impaired digestion.

SECOND—It has the unusual power of digesting 4 to 5 times its weight of other foods you eat. Hence, it aids your digestion which goes on speedily and efficiently. Frayed nerves are soothed. Sound sleep follows.

And as you sleep, the special food properties of Ovaltine also help to restore your tired mind and body. (One cup of Ovaltine has actually more food value than 12 cups of beef extract, 7 cups of cocoa, or 3 eggs.) That is why, after drinking a cup of hot Ovaltine at night, you awaken in the morning so completely refreshed—abounding with new-found vitality and tireless energy. Note the unsolicited testimonials below.

Hospitals and Doctors recommend it

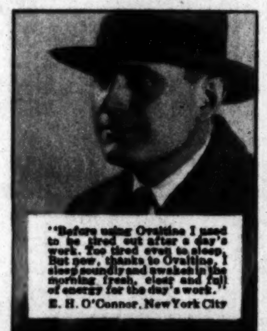
Ovaltine has been in use in Switzerland for over 30 years. Now in universal use in England and her colonies. During the great war it was served as a standard ration to invalid soldiers.

A few years ago Ovaltine was introduced into this country. Today hundreds of hospitals use it. More than 20,000 doctors recommend it. Not only for sleeplessness, but because of its special dietetic properties, they also recommend it for nerve-strain, malnutrition, underweight and delicate children, nursing mothers and the aged.

Make this 3-day test

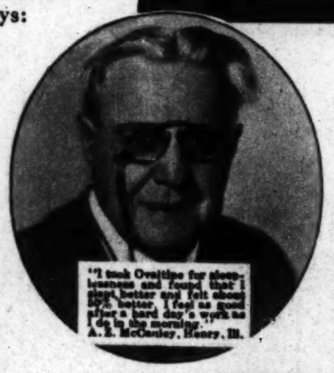
Just make a 3-day test of Ovaltine. Note the difference, not only in your sleep, but in your next day's energy. You tackle your work with greater vigor. You "carry through" for the whole day. You aren't too tired to go out for the evening. There's a new zest to your work; to all your daily activities. It's truly a "pick-up" drink—for any time of the day.

All druggists and grocers sell Ovaltine in 4 sizes for home use. Or get it at the soda fountain. But to let you try it, we will send a 3-day introductory package for 10c to cover cost of packing and mailing. Just send in coupon with 10c.



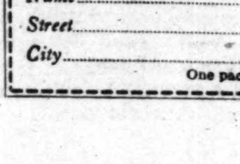
"Before using Ovaltine I used to be tired out after a day's work. Too tired even to sleep. But now, thanks to Ovaltine, I sleep soundly and awaken in the morning fresh, clear and full of energy for the day's work."

E. H. O'Connor, New York City



"I took Ovaltine for sleeplessness and found that I slept better and felt about 50% better. I feel as good after a hard day's work as I do in the morning."

A. E. McCauley, Henry, Ill.



THE WANDER COMPANY, Dept. N-301
180 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

I enclose 10 cents to cover cost of packing and mailing. Send me your 3-day test package of Ovaltine.

"Where is that hypodermic needle?" demanded Dr. Sartorius, his face crimson with rage.

Esther stared at him in amazement. "Why, doctor, I've misplaced it. Is it of so much importance?" began the nurse. But the doctor had flung himself out of the room . . .

Then, before Esther had time to discover the reason of Dr. Sartorius' anger, came word that her patient, Sir Charles, was dying.

A thrilling story of dramatic love and baffling mystery, laid in Cannes, France. Esther Rowe, Canadian nurse, becomes entangled in a network of intrigue, treachery and villainy, out of which finally emerges justice—and romance!

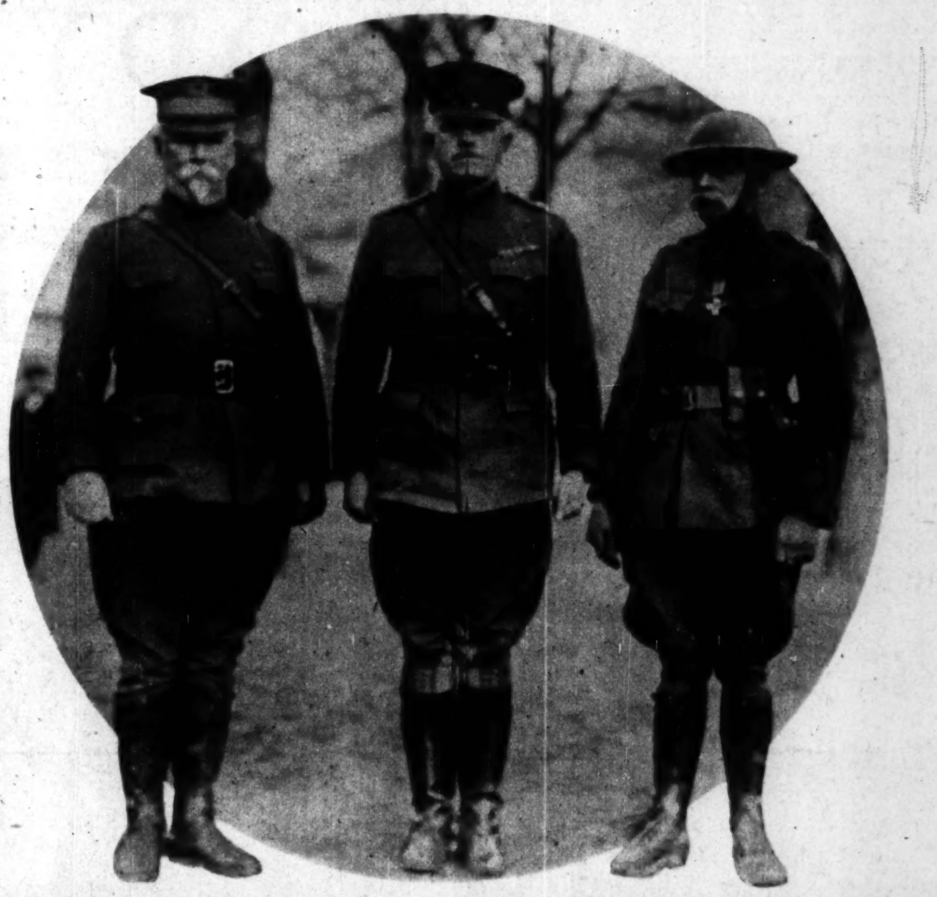
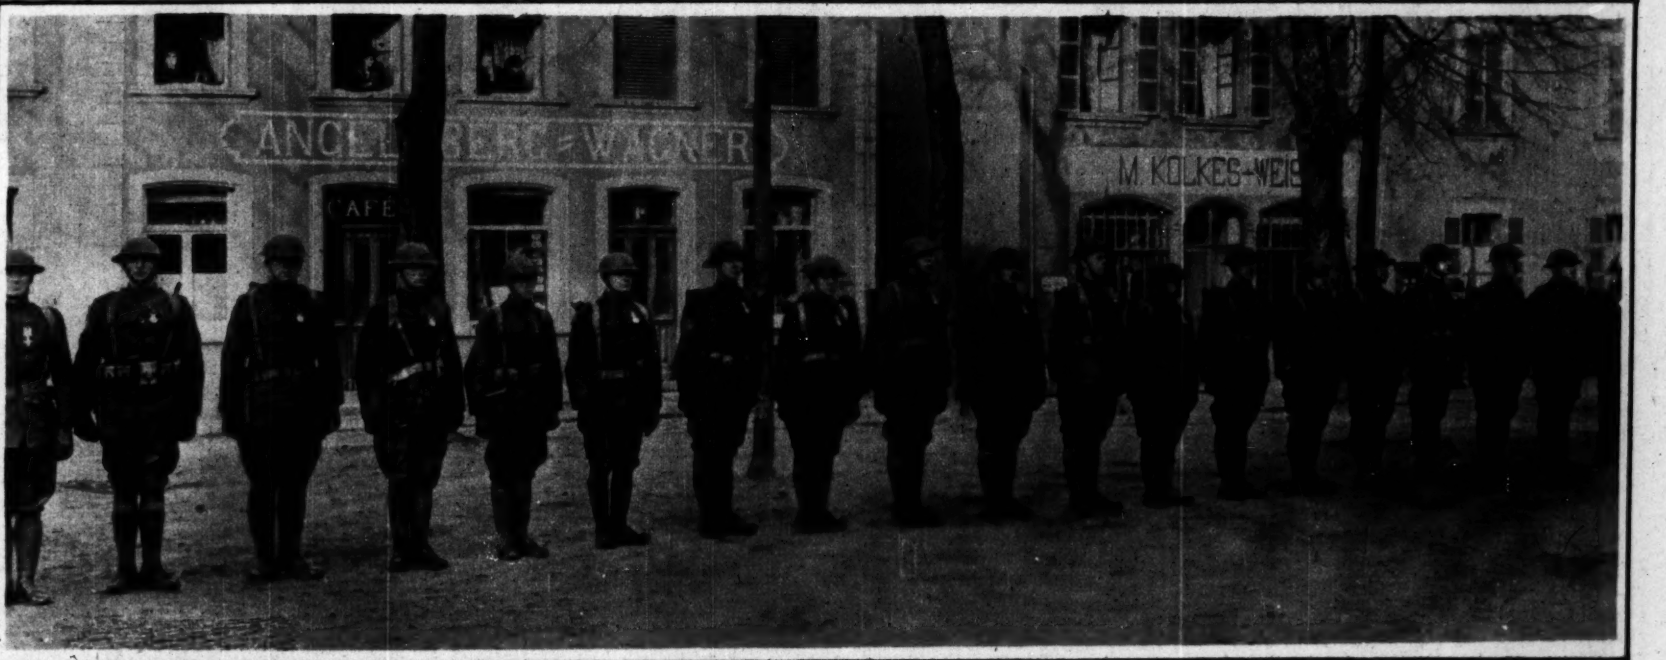
A SOUTHPAW DOUGHBOY warms up for hurling those cute little hand grenades at whomsoever among the Germans happens to be nearest. "There was nothing downhearted about their mood, as you saw by their faces," wrote Lieut. Col. Palmer of the men of the First division on the day they went into the trenches in the Ansauville sector. That was Jan. 19, 1918—ten years ago next Thursday.

TEN YEARS AGO next Friday—on Jan. 20, 1918—the officers and enlisted men of the Eighteenth infantry, First division, had reached the front line trenches in the Ansauville sector. And here we find a few of them taking a preliminary squint at Jerry, over on the other side of No Man's land.

"AND THE CAISSONS GO ROLLING ALONG"—Cannoneers of the Sixth artillery, A. E. F., taking a breathing spell on their way to the front in the Toul sector. A signal corps photographer caught them in this informal pose on Jan. 18, 1918.



THREE HEROES OF THE PRAIRIE DIVISION, the late Maj. Gen. George Bell Jr., commanding; Brig. Gen. Paul A. Wolf, commanding the 66th brigade, and Col. Joseph B. Sanborn of Chicago, commanding the 131st infantry regiment. They were snapped thus at Larochette, Luxembourg, on Jan. 20, 1919, just after Col. Sanborn had received the D. S. C. from the British government.



HONORED BY THE BRITISH—Buck privates, noncoms, and a second lieutenant, all from the Prairie division, lined up to be decorated for heroic work done at Chippilly Ridge, Somme, France. This division, which included seven units from Chicago, also won renown at St. Mihiel and in the Meuse-Argonne. Its reunion was held in Chicago last November. Reading from the left, pictured here are: 2nd Lieut. George W. Sherwood, Sergts. Jake Alex, Paul A. Hobscheid, Stephen H. Mance, George Gurley, Sydney McGuire, W. N. Larson, Frank Mills, and Walter G. Peabody, Mechanic Anton J. Watkum, Pvt. W. A. Anderson, Corp. Charles C. Bark, Pvt. William Curr, Pvt. Christopher C. Dunne, Pvt. Ragnar Liljeberg, Corp. Charles W. Michaellis, Sergt. Matthew Thorneycroft, Corp. Dickson A. Woodard, and Sergt. Gordon Wickham.

NINE YEARS AGO THIS WEEK trench mortar gunners of the Thirty-third (Prairie) divisional training school were making use of a snow-covered hillside near Vianden, in the grand duchy of Luxembourg, for target practice with a Stokes. One of the shells burst just as the camera clicked.

TRENCH MORTARS which laid out the "bracket fire" in the world war. The scene was Vianden, Luxembourg, the men were students and instructors of the Thirty-third division, and the time was Jan. 18, 1919. The Thirty-third was the only division to serve successively in combat under three flags—French, British, and American.

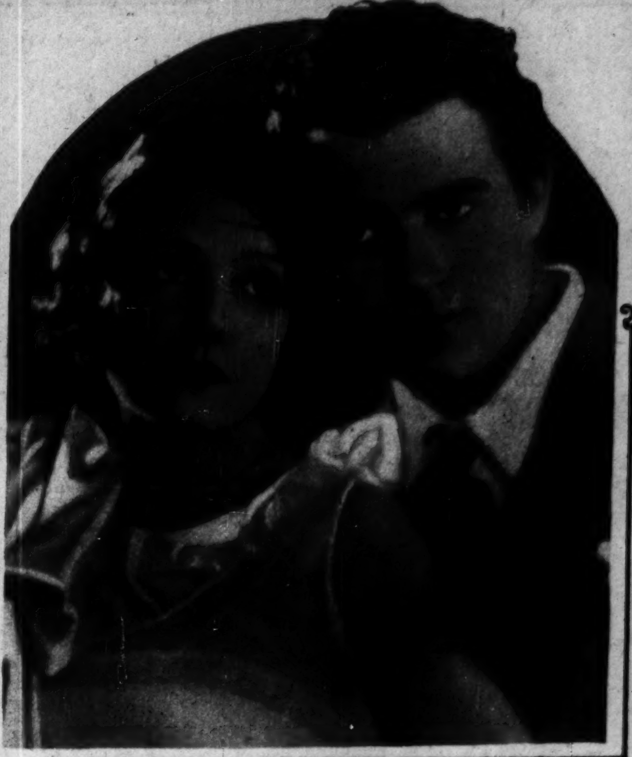
GRETA GARBO and JOHN GILBERT are the glamorous (overworked word, but it fits) couple here portrayed. They're co-starring at present in " Love," you know.

INJUN, WHITE MAN, PEACE PIPE. Isn't this a beautiful camera study? It was made during the filming of " The Law of the Range," in which Chief Big Tree, to the left, and Col. Tim McCoy, to the right, are featured.



NORMA TALMADGE and GILBERT ROLAND, who play together in "The Dove," had this charming picture made while the photoplay was being filmed. We thought you'd be interested in it for your albums.

Golden Hours of Music

Finest appreciation of music comes to those, young or old, who play or hear the Haddorff. Its voice in the home is an abiding inspiration of happiness.

The resources of the Haddorff are endless. First, perhaps, comes the revelation of its delightful resonance. Then an ever-growing appreciation of the even power of its complete range. And always some new beauty in the treble, in the bass, and in each individual note!

HADDORFF
A True Piano

For the Haddorff piano is an artistic achievement, artistic in the conception of its original and beautiful tone, artistic in the design and construction of the mechanism which produces that tone, artistic in its daily performance.

You must see and hear the Haddorff before you choose your piano. There's a little booklet which tells The Story of the Haddorff, which we know you would like to read. Send for it.

MOON MULLINS
In The Tribune Every Day

"Arthur, if you go away I think I shall kill myself—"

ESTHER heard the sobbing words from the beautiful French woman in spite of her preoccupation with the gay scene. The situation gave her an eery feeling. Here she was alone in Cannes—and here was stark tragedy before her at a nearby tea table. The handsome Englishman with the sobbing woman looked a little bored, irritated. . . . Little did Esther imagine that within a few days her lot would be cast with this attractive couple . . . with a dying baron and his young son . . .

A serial of mystery, murder, treachery, romance. You will enjoy every word of this fast-moving, well written story.

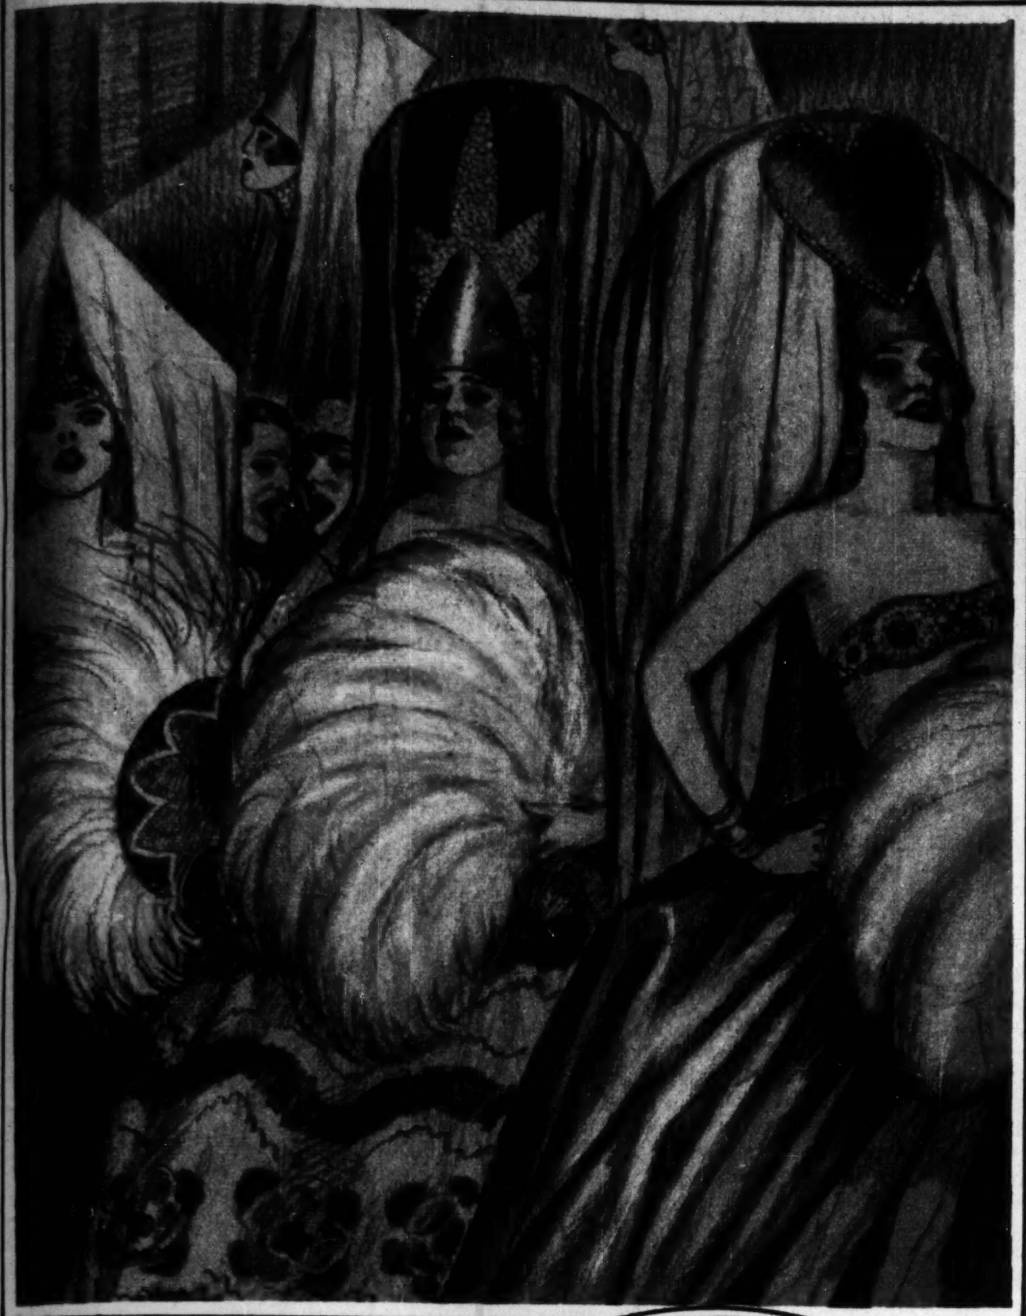
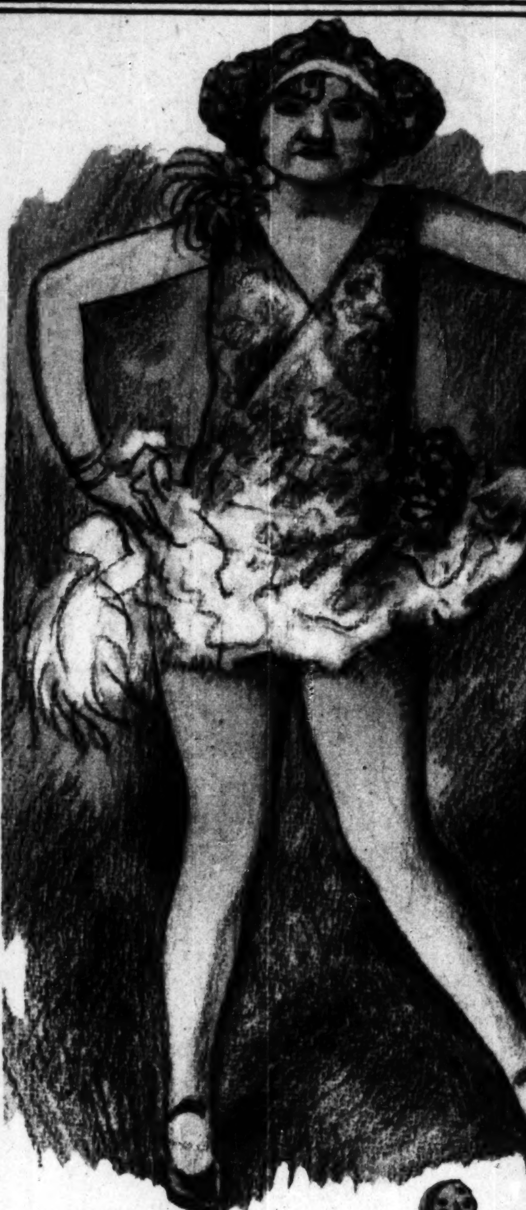
The Prima Donna

By W. E. Hill

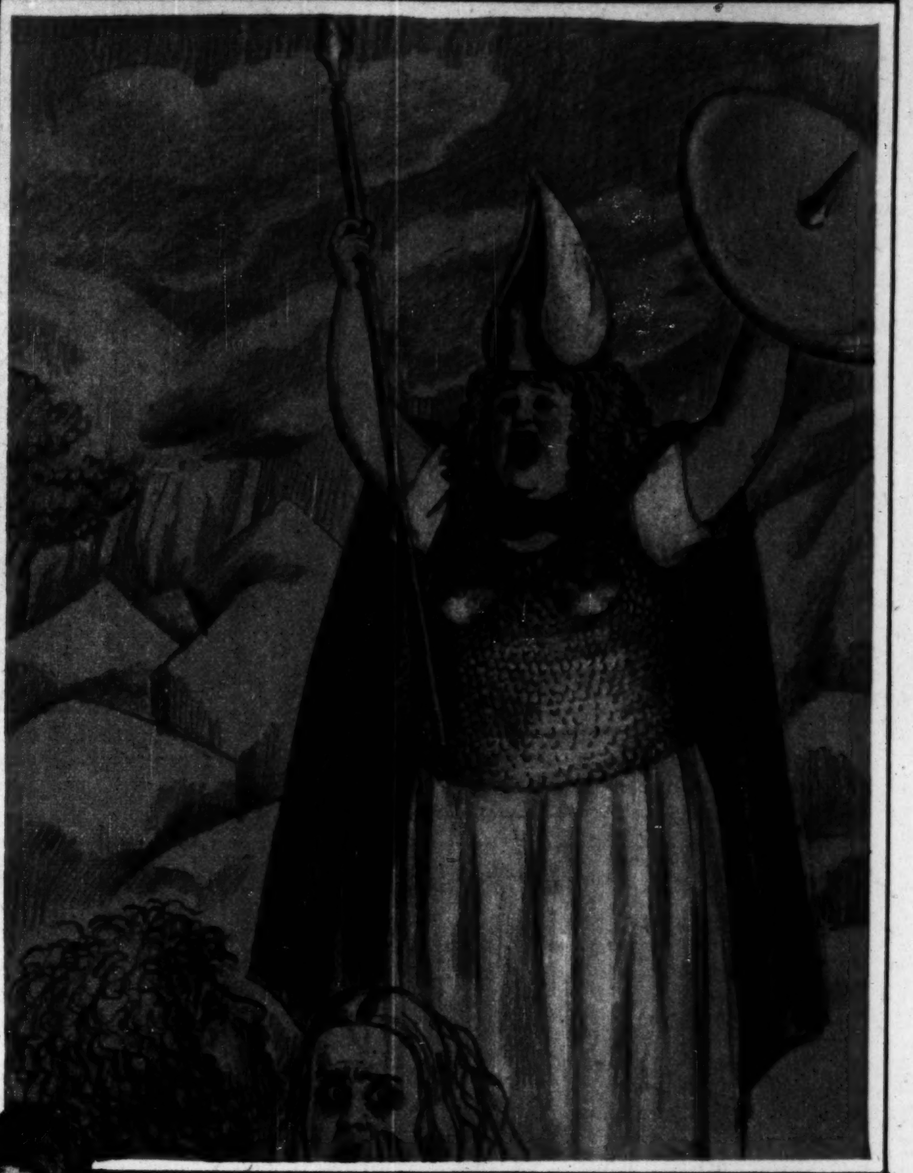
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]



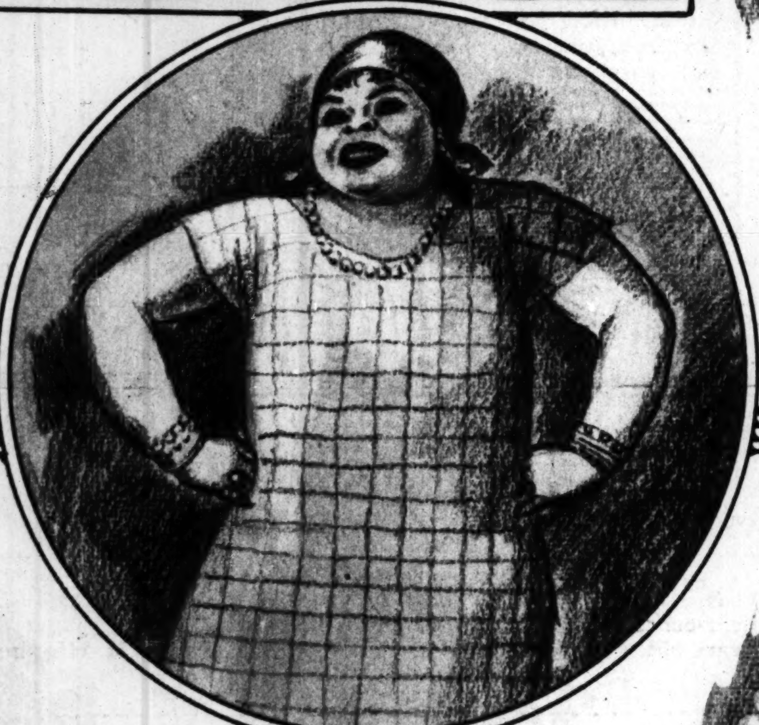
The Revue. Revue prima donnas have a terrible time. Even the most lyric soprano is all but snowed under when the picked beauties start parading around. This number is called "Rosetime in Old Madrid," showing the prima donna and the tenor being jostled about by the senoritas.



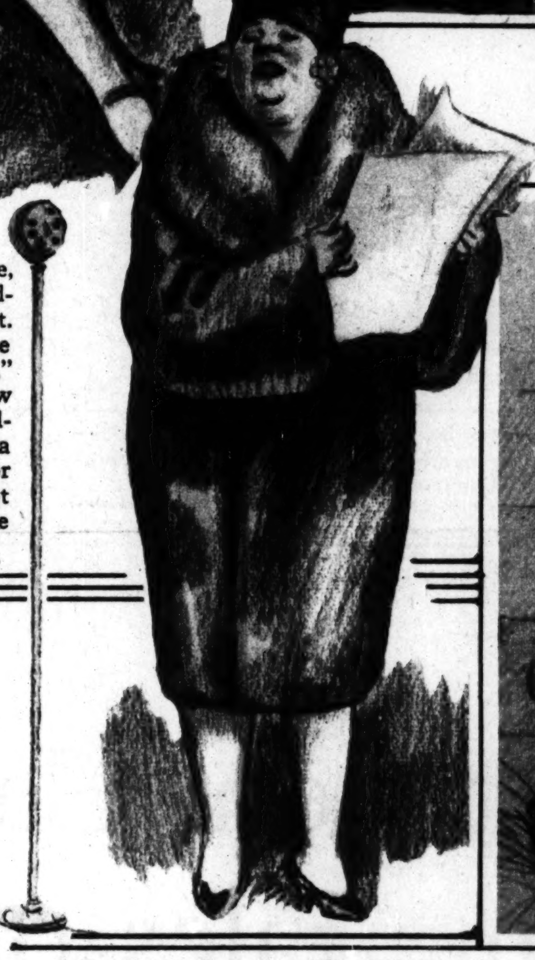
Burlesque. As Fifi La Nude, from gay Paree, Sadie is handing it big to the boys out front. Sadie is prima donna soubrette of the "Hotsey Totsey Babies," and to hear her sass the Jew comic and the Irish ditto, followed by a couple of Oo La Las, is to learn once and for all that the movies have not stolen all the talent from the spoken drama.



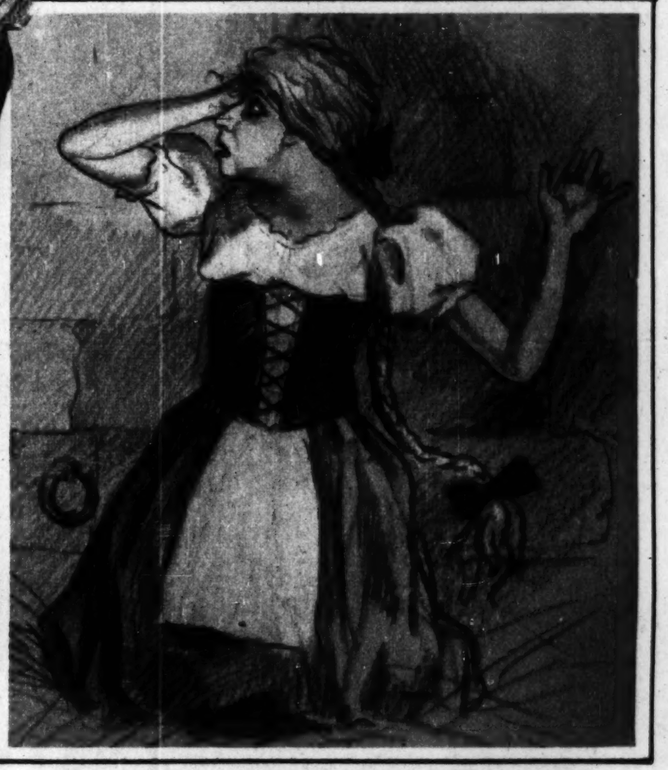
Meet Fraulein Greta von Hochspell, who, as Brunhilda in Mr. Wagner's music drama, is letting loose perfect oceans of sound on her big entrance. More flamboyant than subtle, perhaps, but in this opus by Mr. Wagner, gentlemen seem to prefer 'em that way.



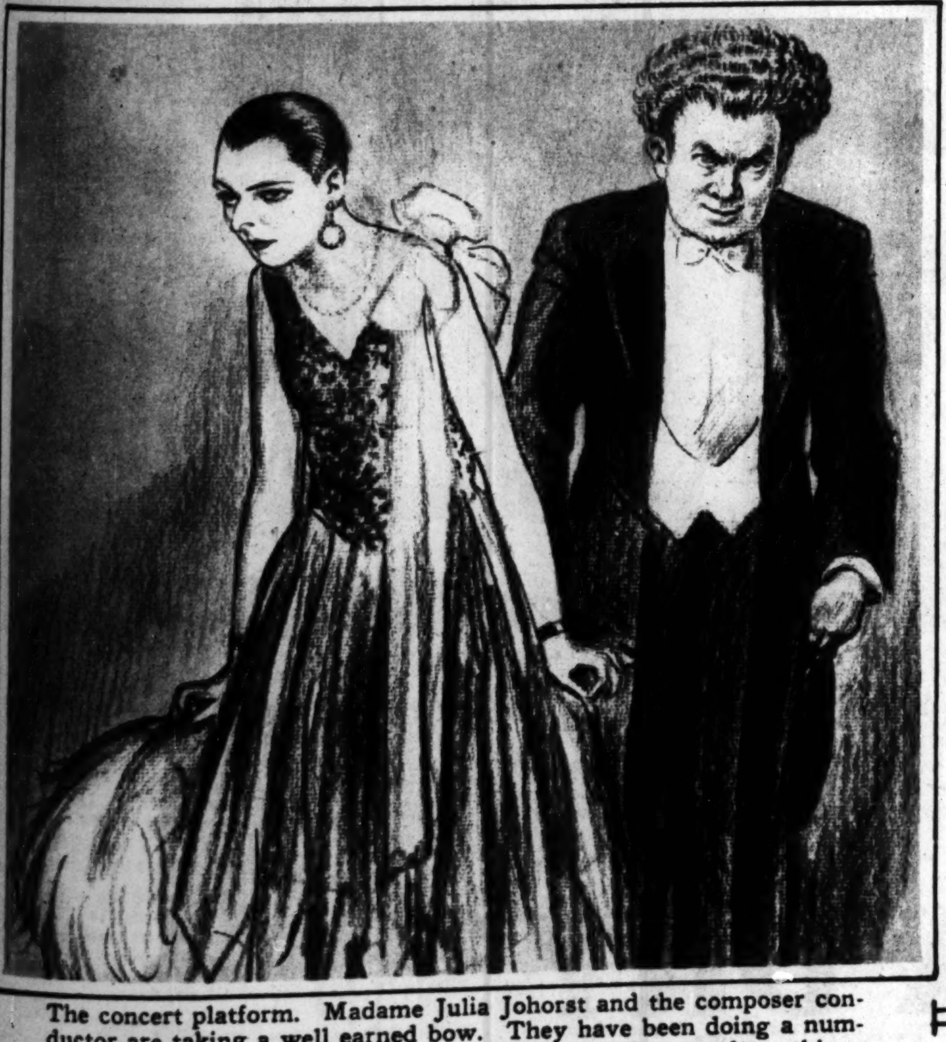
The Dark Town Follies. Lilly is swaying to and fro singing about the cotton fields and the bandanas and the sugar cane, till you can almost shut your eyes and see the streets of Harlem!



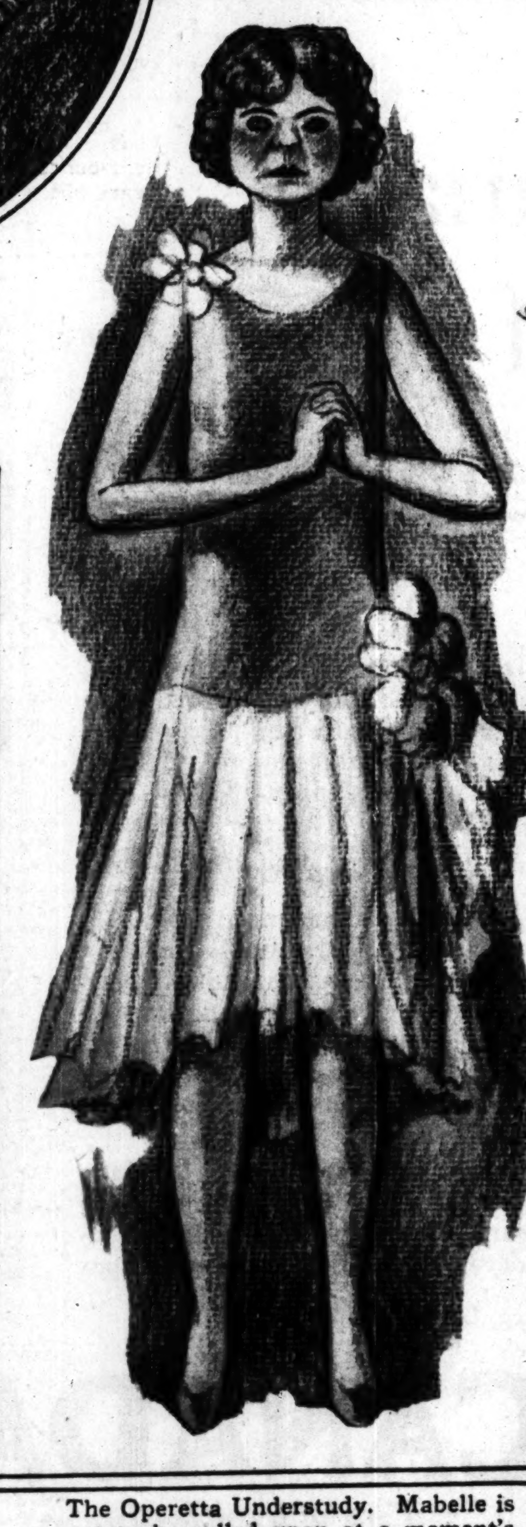
The Radio Soprano. Miss Ethel Tooker Tobey sings for the radio and is very temperamental withal. "I don't think I'll ever get over stage fright in front of the microphone. My throat seems to close right up on me!" says Miss Tobey.



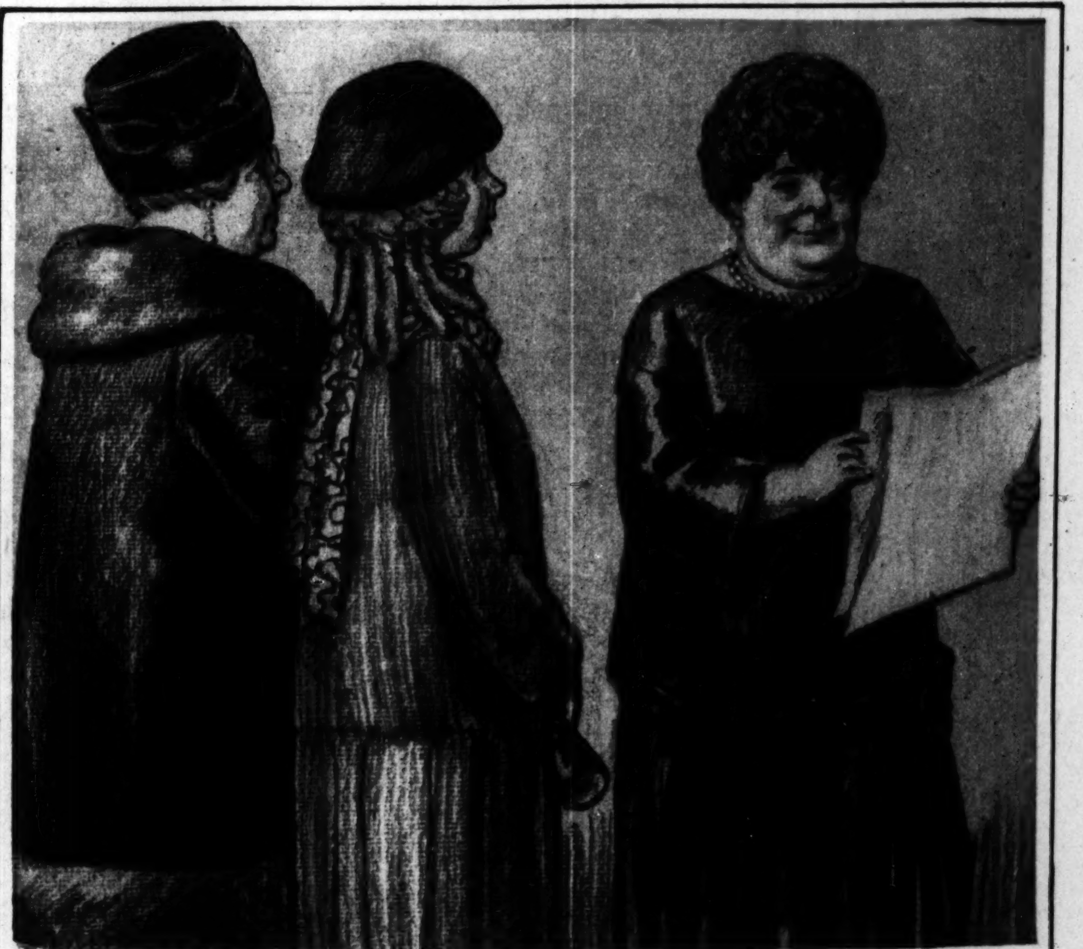
The Traveling Grand Opera. Mme. Lois Lewys is prima donna soprano of the Gonfatitti Opera troupe. They do "Traviata," "Lucia," "Carmen" and all the favorites—with change of bill nightly. Lois hops from one heroine to another at the drop of a hat. She makes up in tenacity whatever she lacks in the upper register.



The concert platform. Madame Julia Johorst and the composer conductor are taking a well earned bow. They have been doing a number called "Machine Exhaust," one of those ultra modern things written for five clarinets, seven drums and a steam whistle, with voice accompaniment. Mme. Johorst does only modern compositions. Some say she is ruining her voice, while others aver that it doesn't matter anyway, seeing that Julia never could stay on the key. Be that as it may, her shriek to the accompaniment of the steam whistle has caused a mild sensation.



The Operetta Understudy. Mabelle is apt to be called upon at a moment's notice to serve as prima donna whenever the leading lady of the operetta is indisposed, as sometimes happens. If there is one thing Mabelle abhors, it is a big, healthy prima donna.



The Past and the Future. Mme. Guilio Glucose sang all the coloratura roles when Verdi was a boy, or maybe a little later, and now she is carrying on nobly at twenty-five per lesson as a voice builder. "Even now you have a range two octaves beyond Farrar in her prime," Mme. Glucose is saying to a new pupil, "and in two years you ought to be singing every role at the Metropolitan!"

MOSCOW'S CONGRESS OF WOMEN brought together this unique gathering of feminist leaders not only from the soviet republics, but also from many other countries of Europe. Among them were women from all walks of life, from stern leaders of the Russian peasant class to richly clad, dainty aristocrats from noncommunistic nations.

A GODSEND TO LOST WAYFARERS IN THE ALPS is the St. Bernard hospice, pictured above. It is 8,000 feet above sea level, on a pass between Switzerland and Italy. Countless itinerants have been saved from death through the heroic work of the monks here, locked in the land of eternal snow. Down from Canada came tales of a wonderful beverage

FOR years and years, visitors to Canada had come back with tales of a wonderful ginger ale. They described its exquisite flavor—they told of drinking it in the Houses of Parliament in Ottawa and in the residence of the Governor-General.

Friends would listen and smack their lips and ask if there wasn't some way to purchase it in this country. And the answer was always "No."

Finally, however, the demand became so insistent that it was decided to open a branch in this country, and in 1921 "Canada Dry," for the first time, was officially brought to the United States.

An Amazing Story of Success

Today "Canada Dry" is known the wide world over and its phenomenal growth in public favor is one of the most inspiring stories of success in the history of American business. The reason is simply that "Canada Dry" is a real ginger ale, made from real Jamaica ginger.

That is an important point to remember when you are selecting a beverage for your home. For many so-called ginger ales are not ginger ales at all, but get that strong, biting taste artificially from the use of capsicum, or plain, every-day red pepper. There is no capsicum in "Canada Dry."

Matchless flavor and purity

Because it is real ginger ale, and is made from real Jamaica ginger and other absolutely pure ingredients, "Canada Dry" blends delightfully with other beverages—it will not bite the tongue or burn the lips—it leaves no "brassy" after-effect or recurring "kick back," as some people call it—it is friendly to the stomach. And "Canada Dry" is so pure that it is served in the leading hospitals of this country.

Truly it has been said that until you try "Canada Dry" you have no idea how good ginger ale ought to be. In quality, in purity, in the witchery of its matchless flavor it is, indeed, "The Champagne of Ginger Ales."

Regarding Imitations

For your own protection, remember that not every ginger ale sold in a green bottle is "Canada Dry." Always look for the name "Canada Dry" on the bottle cap. It pays to be particular.

TIME'S WHIRLIGIG and THEODORA

by Anne O'Hagan

Theo Let Another Woman Come Between Her and Her Husband, Only to Find Out, Too Late, That Perhaps She Herself Was to Blame.

BY the time Theodora, driving rapidly, had reached the region of granite buildings, in one of which her husband's offices were housed, she was possessed by a desperation of hurry most alien to her easy going habit. Her hope that she was not going to miss George took on the urgency of prayer. It must be quite five. Still, George had been staying after hours such a lot lately!

A look at her wristwatch showed her the time registered as eight-twelve. "Damn!" said Theodora's thoughts, fervently. She had forgotten to wind the thing again. Her hurried footsteps rang along a tesselated corridor; she was at a door bearing the words, "George Wandley's Sons & Sons, China and East India Agents." She paused to catch her breath and to arrange her features.

The office lobby was empty. The boy who usually sat behind the rail at a little table was gone. Was she, then, too late? But the entrance door had been unlocked—a scrubwoman, at least, was still here! She opened the gate and went on. She hurried through the big reception room that always seemed to smell faintly of sandalwood and amber; she hurried past its reticent hints of the east—a single porcelain dragon, a single red lacquer chest, a teakwood stand. Then she was in a narrow corridor giving upon a row of lettered doors. She rapped lightly on the one which bore the name, "George Wandley, President."

She was not too late. For at her knock there was the sound of a chair pushed back, and the shadow of a man's advancing figure darkened the ground glass door. It swung open, and George himself stood before her. In the room behind him, seated at his desk opposite his revolving chair, was the slim, erect figure of his office manager, Irene Liggett.

Then came Theodora's second of breathless illumination, the explanation of the premonitions she had been calling absurd as she had driven in. For George's flash of astonishment at sight of her had not been swift enough to sponge from his face a look of light and laughter such as she had not seen there in a long time. And across the space of China rugged floor and of impalpable air she caught—she knew it, she could have sworn it, her heart swooned to see it—a brilliancy of assurance, of gayety, perhaps of love itself, upon Irene's carven features.

It was all gone in less than the time of a pulse beat, and George was greeting his wife with a surprise not unjustifiable—she had not been to the office for three or four years; she never came except by arrangement. There was nothing in his "Why, hello, Theo; what brings you here?" at which she could take umbrage. There was nothing technically out of the ordinary in Irene's "O, how do you do, Mrs. Wandley," and her gathering up of her papers preparatory to departure.

But in spite of the adipose tissue with which maternity and comfort and easygoingness had obliterated her girlhood figure, Theodora was not dull, and only a dull woman, coming into that room, could have failed to realize herself an interloper in an atmosphere of intimacy and attraction. Only a dull woman could have failed to realize that here was playing, unconsciously perhaps, innocently it might be, the man and woman game.

Theodora was not dull. Her perceptions brought her awkwardly to halt a foot or two from the threshold. She looked from one to the other of them, blushing and stammering. She was sharply and ashamedly aware of half a dozen things of which she usually took no account—of a button missing from the coat of her lavender linen suit, of the strawberry stain Janey's exuberant hug at luncheon had left on her blouse, of the disorder of her chestnut bronze hair, of the mismatchedness of her chamois gloves, caught up on leaving home.

Irene, at the close of a hot day in the office, was so utterly perfect! Theodora saw herself not as her friendly mirror daily showed her to her accustomed eyes, but as Irene saw her—with her pretty clothes uncared for, with the beauty that her young body had once possessed neglected, lost; with the liveliness of her mind, the play of her fancy, the fires of her heart, all quenched in years, in the sluggish habit of a taken-for-granted happiness. And she thought she saw, too, that the younger woman envied her angrily as the heir of riches envies the doddering cumberer of the earth who keeps him from their enjoyment.

She turned, unhappily, from Irene—she could not bear that dark, brilliant, antagonistic gaze. But to her sudden sensitiveness there was no reassurance in her husband's eyes. It seemed to her that he, too, was appraising her, that he was staring at her as if he had not seen her for years; as if it had required this unexpected juxtaposition with a woman younger, slenderer, prettier, better kept, to make him aware how she had deteriorated. She saw herself as though with his suddenly disillusioned eyes, a graceless, slovenly thing intruding her dumpishness into the stimulating atmosphere where he kept himself young, alert. George was looking at her like that! George was contrasting her with this charming, hateful, hating woman.

What they were all saying, of course, was what was conventional in the situation. Theodora was explaining, too profusely, how she had driven in to town on an errand and then had happily bethought her of finding George at his office ready to drive out to Fair Oaks with her. And Miss Liggett was saying, metallically, that it was a lovely afternoon for a drive. Her manner seemed to add: "If one has leisure and a car."

"How she hates me!" Theodora thought, half wildly. "How she hates me for the things I have and she wants. George, too—she wants George! And he—does he want——" Sudden anger estopped her thoughts.

SOMEHOW they separated. She and George were in the car headed for Fair Oaks. A silence had fallen between them as soon as they had left the office, with its hollow wordiness of leavetaking. In Theodora's heart there were contending voices. There was easy going, plump Theodora, saying, "But this is all nonsense. Nothing has happened; nothing has happened. Everything is just as it was this morning. Nothing is changed at all. Janey's teeth—strawberry shortcake for dessert—everything just as it was."

And there was another strange, vehement Theodora, a Theodora who had been comfortably asleep all the happy years since first George had told her that he loved her and wanted her; and this strange Theodora was a woman jealous, clamorous of possession of rights, a woman furiously proud, never to be placated for an injury, for a slight. And there was a frightened girl saying to this lord of her heart beside her, "I know I am not what I was. I know I am lazy, uninspiring, mind and body. But, O, my dear one, say that you still love me."

Ridiculous, all of it!

"You've got machine grease all over your skirt; did you know it?"

George's voice, none too suave, cut in upon the confusion of voices in her mind. She was instantly and unreasonably enraged. She spoke out of her rage.

"I admit that I am not as spotless as that Miss Phoebe Snow in your office," she said. "A woman who is busy with children and a house and a car cannot hope to compete in immaculateness with her."

"Busy with a house!" George laughed. He had, perhaps, his own subconscious urgencies for desiring to put Theodora in the wrong. "Really, Theodora, that's funny. Considering what I pay out each month for service, that's very funny!"

"I suppose you think the house runs itself," she answered. "The only place that takes running, I suppose you think, is an office. The only thing you regard as work, I dare say, is what an office manager does."

"For heaven's sake, why keep dragging in Miss Liggett? What has she to do with it?"

Perhaps it was Theodora's new born, full grown jealousy that supplied the note of insincerity in his voice. To her ears there was no conviction in it, in him. Yet she was amazed to find herself saying, "She has everything to do with it, and you know it."

She knew she ought not to have said that—joining battle before she had planned a campaign! She knew she ought to think things out before she talked at all. Even if all her excited reading of their looks had been right, even if George's recent habit of staying late at the office was explained by Irene Liggett, she knew she was making a mistake to force the issue now. She needed time, she needed quiet, calm. But something more primitive than caution, than reason, rushed her on. She accused him, cross-examined him.

Yes, George had admitted furiously, he admired Miss Liggett very much. Yes, of course, he had often taken her to dinner when they were both detained by office business. Why not? And why should he have made mention of it? Did he report when he and Perkins, he and Overton, dined together? Was he a grammar school boy, to render an account of his every hour? Good heavens, what sort of mind, what sort of standards, had she, that she should question such an obvious, ordinary happening? From what movie did she get her ideas about the human relations of men and women associated in business? Couldn't a man admire a girl, enjoy a girl, without planning treachery to his wife, debasement to his home?

They were still in the region of mean streets that lay between downtown Drayton and its stretch of graceful suburbs when their quarrel had progressed to this point. Theodora was unwontedly aware of the scene, of all its ugliness. How could people stand living like that? Her eyes took note of a policeman who led a staggering hulk of a man and a hatless, bruised wisp of a woman toward a precinct station. A queue of children tailed noisily, curiously, after. How horrible! And yet—queerly, unbelievably, there came to her, to the happy, sheltered Theodora, the thought that one could forgive a drunken blow if only the drunkard, sober, could stammer that he loved—he loved—that he would not have hurt.

But what her lips were saying, as if on their own initiative, was, "Do you dance, you and Miss Liggett, when this—this pressure of business—forces you to dine together at the Housman?"

"Sometimes," George replied, laconically and unapologetically.

Theodora's hands grew cold like ice, and her heart was a burning lump in her bosom. If he had shouted at her, "Yes, I have been unfaithful to you; yes, I mean to go on being unfaithful to you," she could not have felt the situation more desperately final. For, beneath the placidity of a happiness habitual, never before menaced, she still loved George girlishly, with a love that had expected no rivalry and would brook none, however trivial. For twelve years she had accepted her marriage as a miraculous island in a turbulent sea—other people went to wreck there, not George and Theodora Wandley, who loved each other!

They turned into their drive. It was unbelievable that everything looked the same—that the ramblers still arched over the long path of her hardy garden, that her mother and George's Uncle Ira Payne were still lingering over their tea out under the gay peasant umbrella near the rhododendrons. Theodora felt a wave of hatred for them.

It was Mrs. Breese who had sent her in to town this afternoon. Her mother, on her annual visits to Fair Oaks, was always goading her to things easier to leave undone—to diet, to exercise, to discipline the children "before it is too late," to put a stop to the cook's percentage basis arrangement with the green grocer and the butcher before George was bankrupt.

It was her mother who, last week, had forced her actually to stand in front of a long mirror and actually to look at herself; and had thereby threatened her indolent faith in the permanence of agreeable things. Theodora had been a remarkably pretty girl at the time of her marriage, twelve years before; she had the habit of taking it for granted that she was still a remarkably pretty girl. The session in front of the mirror had been so disconcerting to that belief that she had firmly held out against her mother's insistence that she should weigh herself.

If only she had as firmly resisted Mrs. Breese's suggestion this afternoon about driving in for George. Why couldn't her mother have left her alone? Such a cool, crisp, competent woman—Theodora hated all cool, crisp, competent women—her mother, Irene Liggett, all of them!

And Uncle Ira—fatuous old man! He was looking at the well preserved Mrs. Breese with an admiring eye; he always looked at every woman with an admiring eye. Senile! An old bachelor beau of sixty-eight—could anything be more nauseating? He and his compliments and his offerings and his antique witticisms!

"Get out here," said George, slowing down opposite the tea table. "I'll put up the car." Theodora got out and walked with a set smile toward the bright umbrella.

"So you got to George's office in time," remarked Mrs. Breese, idly.

"Hardly," said Theodora. At that cryptic utterance they both stared at her.

"O, you mean 'barely,'" amended her mother.

"Do I? Perhaps I do."

BUT it proved otherwise. Into the house where, for so many smoothly sliding years, ease and laughter and the habit of affection had dwelt in lazy accord, there were dark intruders—on Theodora's side, corroding jealousy and a sense of inferiority quite as corroding; on George's, a critical impatience and a feeling of disloyalty not the less destructive because he could still call himself a technically loyal husband.

They had shared no discipline of sorrow together—they had never had even a frightened night at the bedside of one of their children. They had shared no discipline of effort; George had inherited a profitable business, Theodora had stepped from a life of comfort into one of greater comfort. So they brought to this trial of the durability of their marriage no seasoned tenderness, no tested philosophy. They had not even any humor of cynicism with which to meet it. They hadn't been cynical; they had never "gone in" for intellectual criticism of things as they are or as they seem to be. The affair might have happened the week after their engagement, so young and hard, so final, were their judgments.

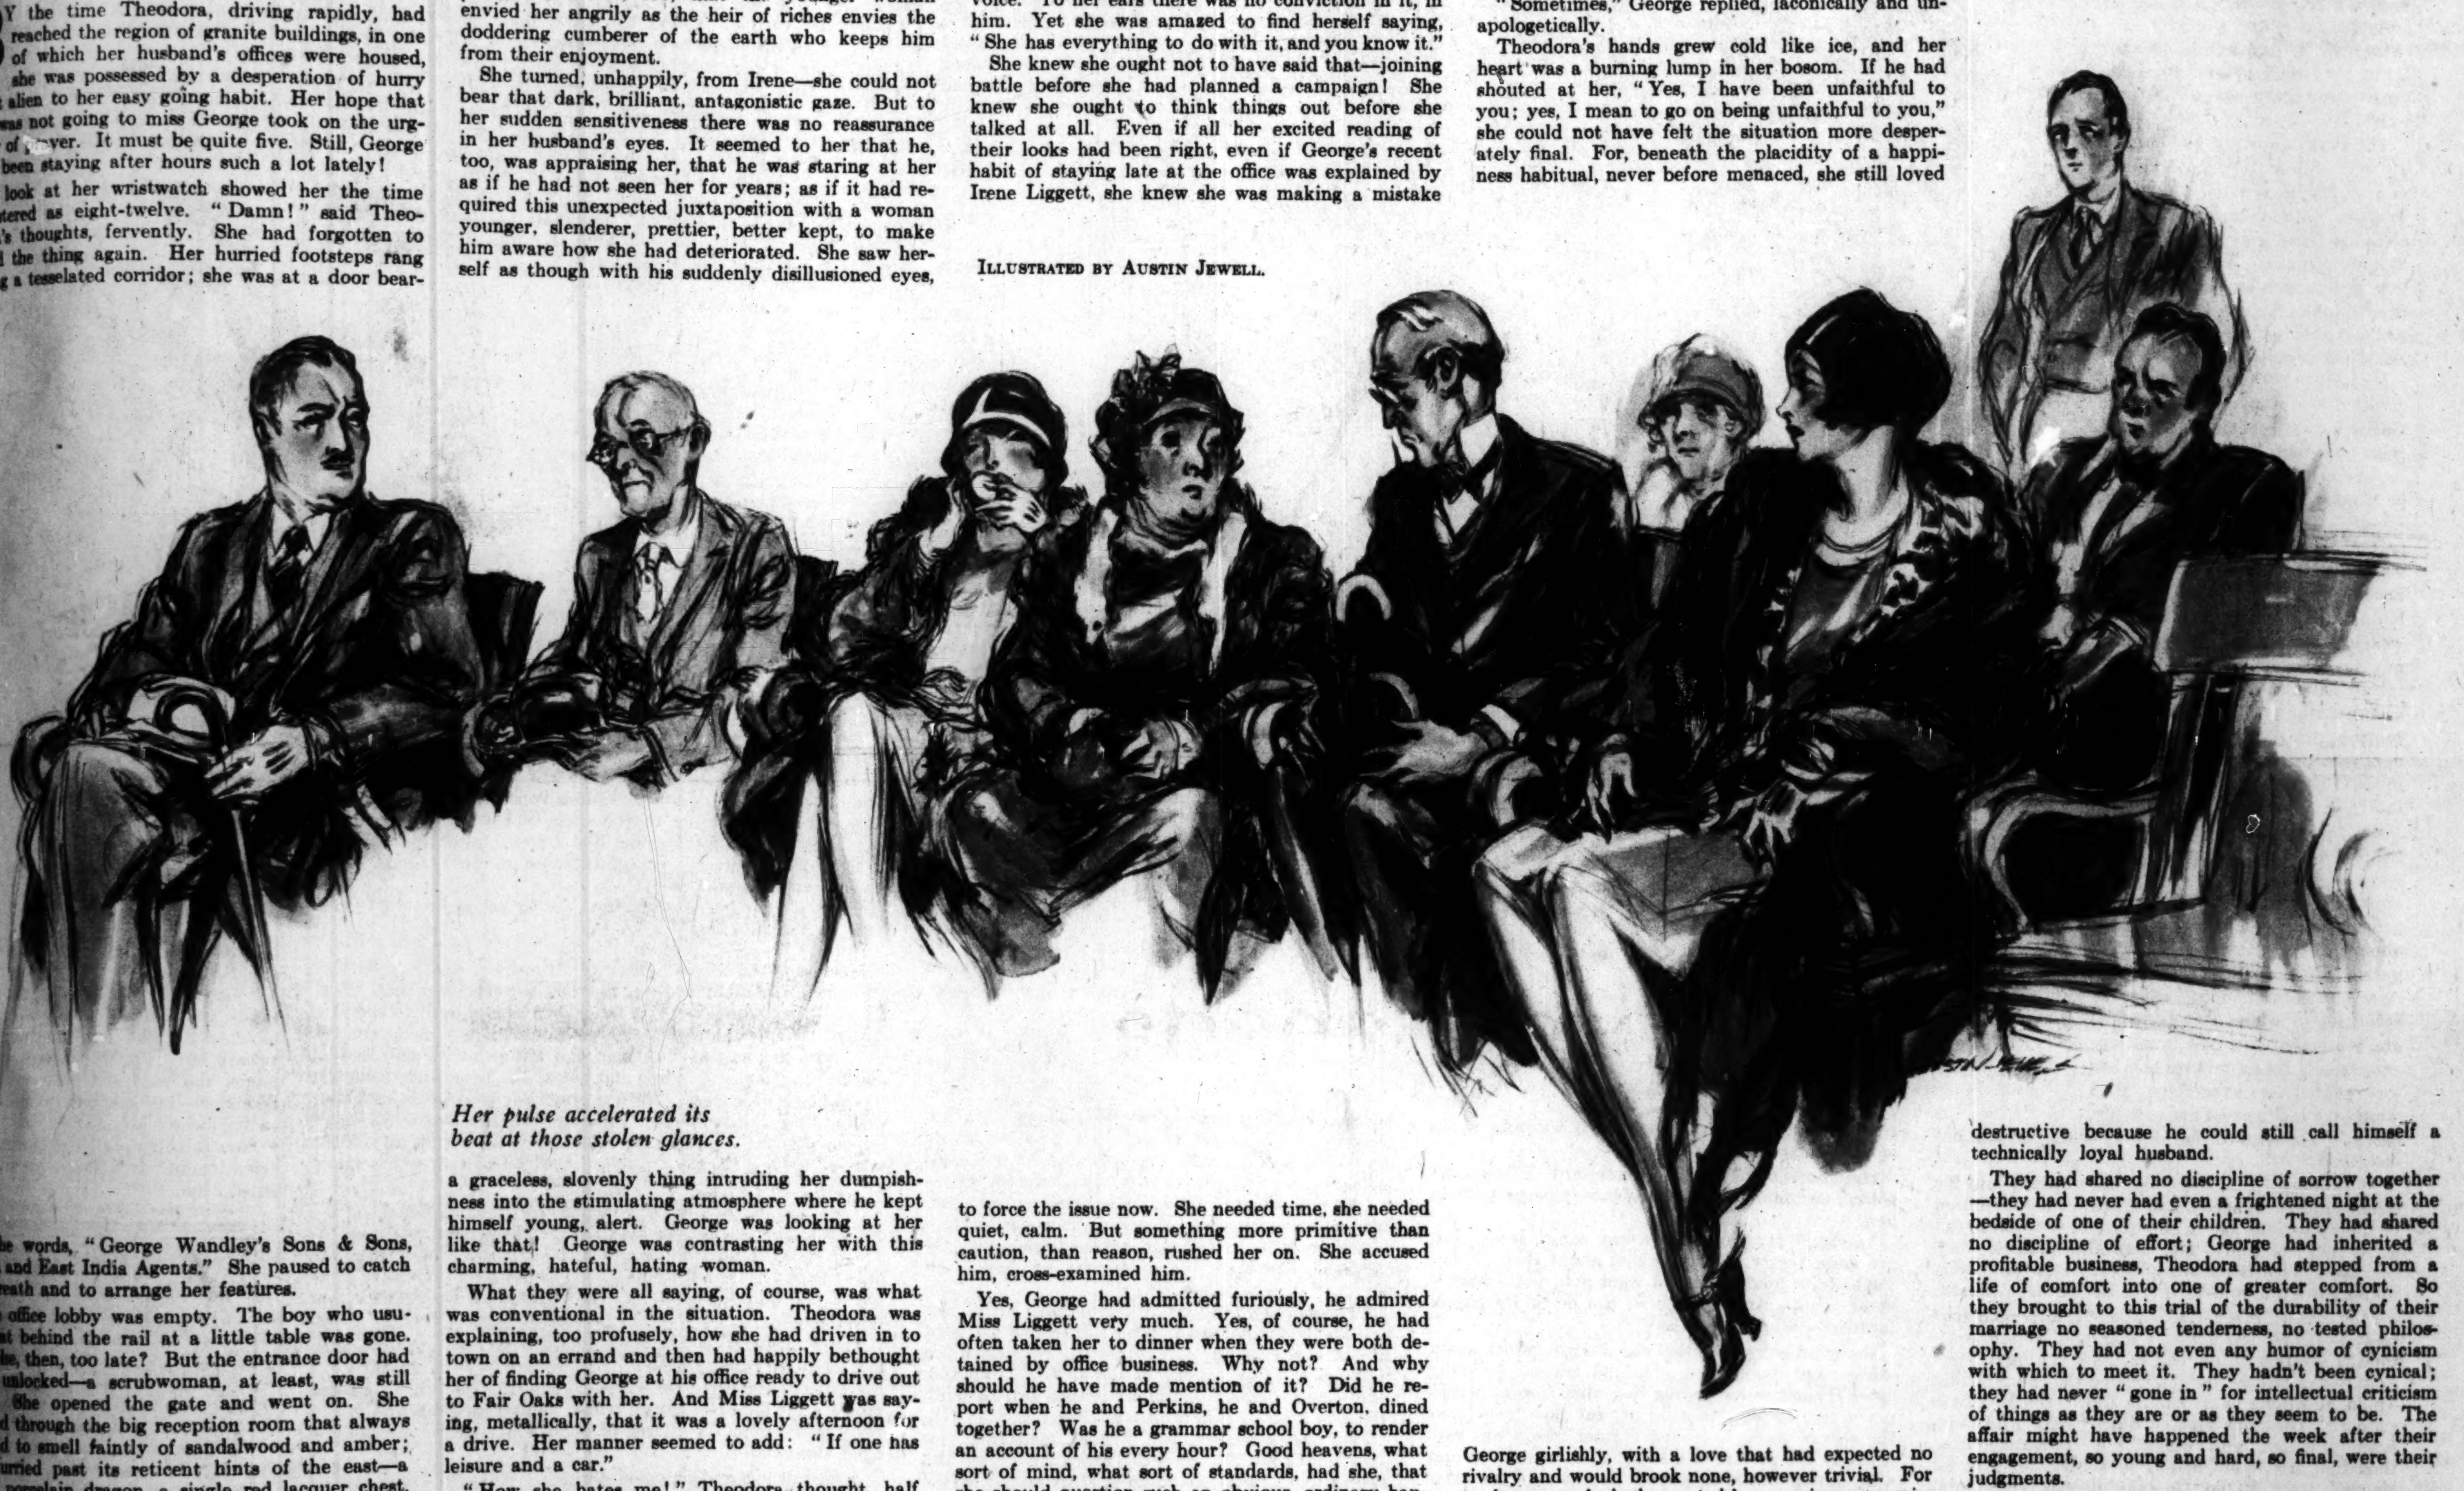
When Theodora finally made it a condition of her returning to Drayton from her Christmas visit home that Irene should be dismissed from George Wandley's Sons & Sons, she was herself aware of the ugliness of the demand; indeed, of its futility. But she told herself two things—first, that she would give up any one, anything, if George required it of her as a proof of love; and, second, that, provided he agreed, she would withdraw the demand. But George furiously declined to do anything of the sort. He had had a hideous six months with Theodora—she had been outrageous! He had no notion of allowing her to interfere in his conduct of his business! He wouldn't insult a valued, valuable employé for the jealous whims of a spoiled wife!

And he did not for an instant believe that Theodora meant it when she replied to his ultimatum, "Then I shan't come back."

BUT she did mean it, and another year saw them divorced. They were both a little dazed at the situation into which they had precipitated themselves. Perhaps it was bewilderment and not magnanimity which prevented George's contesting his wife's claim to the custody of the three children. Perhaps it was bewilderment that made her unable to value that act as it deserved, and, indeed, to view it as further proof of his domination by Irene.

Throughout the whole ugly business she displayed, as her mother could not forbear telling her, an almost incredible capacity for unreason. Nowhere was it more marked than in her insistence upon a lump money settlement in lieu of yearly payments of alimony. To be obliged to receive money from George at all humiliated and enraged her, and, but for the children, she would have refused it, taking back only the little fortune she had brought to the joint enterprise of their marriage—a matter of some thirty thousand dollars from her father's estate. But, on account of the children, she must accept alimony. George wanted to be generous—over-generous, furiously generous. Angered as he was, he still wanted to do the handsome thing.

"Let him make a lump sum and be done with it!" Theodora cried to the advisers and interme-



Her pulse accelerated its beat at those stolen glances.

Vanity of Vanities

Dornford Yates spins another whimsical yarn of present-day England.

diaries. "I don't want to be getting a letter from his bank or his lawyers every month or every quarter. I want to end the thing, end it, end it! How much was he going to allow—four hundred a month? That means forty-eight hundred a year—eighty thousand dollars, or something like that, isn't it? Well, let him raise it now; let him raise seventy—sixty—and make the settlement once and for all! I won't have dealings with him—I never want to hear of him or of Drayton again."

They told her how ill-convenient it might be for her husband to arrange for a single settlement in full of alimony claims. She smiled bitterly.

"He will be quite as anxious as I to have the thing over for good and all," she said.

She proved right. George proclaimed himself as eager as she to close negotiations forever. He intimated he would have sold his business, had it been necessary, rather than keep her waiting one hour.

"NED," said Mrs. Breese to her bachelor son, over whose quarters in New York she efficiently presided, "they're still in love with each other. No two people who weren't could possibly be so angry with each other."

"'For to be wroth with one we love doth work like madness,'" quoted Ned Breese, smiling. "I doubt it about George, though. It would take a super-lover to stand the racket Theodora has been putting up the last year. And I always thought her the most happy-go-lucky girl in the world!"

"So did I," agreed the mother acidly. "I shall never hazard another guess about her as long as I live."

Theodora, aware of the critical attitude of her relatives, chose to arrange her life without much consultation with them, although she accepted their judgment that she should return to New York and live near enough her family to give the children a sense of family ties. About her investments she neither asked nor accepted advice.

It had been George who had invested her dowry; it had been George's judgment, she knew, that governed the investment of her divorce settlement fund. Even so tenuous a bond with him she resented. Besides, she felt somberly that to prove herself a brilliant woman of affairs would in some measure even the score between her and Irene Liggett. The war was in progress and this country on the verge of entrance into it; the air glittered with tales of financial opportunity. Occasionally she heard ethical talk against fortunes derived from war conditions, but in her new hardness of heart she felt no sympathy with it. What did she care about the suffering of the rest of the world? There was no tenderness, no devotion, anywhere—why, in consistency's name, should there be quixotism about investments? So about a year after her divorce she withdrew most of her money from the securities in which it was lodged and reinvested in a new munitions enterprise. In six months she had lost practically everything with which she had started her new life, except the amount of her dowry, which she had not disturbed.

Ned offered to take her and the children into his establishment. Theodora declined. Three children in the uproarious age in the quiet of that house run so entirely for him! Her managing mother, fond, doubtless, but disapproving! No, thank you! She would get a job and maintain the children herself.

Mrs. Breese, in a tactless moment, intimated that George was far too liberal a man and far too affectionate a father to be held to the strict legal interpretation of his duties, and opined that he probably would be willing to contribute still to the children's support. Theodora frightened her by the white violence of anger with which she repudiated the thought. She found herself promising never to let George, never to let George's people, know anything about her daughter's new life. Drayton was to be as dead as Pompeii to all the Breeses.

"It was either that or a stroke for Theodora," said Mrs. Breese to Ned, recounting the failure of her diplomacy. "She terrified me."

Dating life anew from the time of her arrival in New York, Theodora took a six months' course at a secretarial school and through sheer persistence and determination shortly afterwards got a job in a bank. She would—she would!—understand those mysteries ignorance of which had cost her and her children so dear. She would—perhaps unadmittedly even by herself—rival Irene Liggett in her own field! She worked as she had never worked before in her life. Every day, every night, for months, for a year, for two years, was like the old three-days-before-examinations that she had known in the abbreviated college course from which her marriage had removed her.

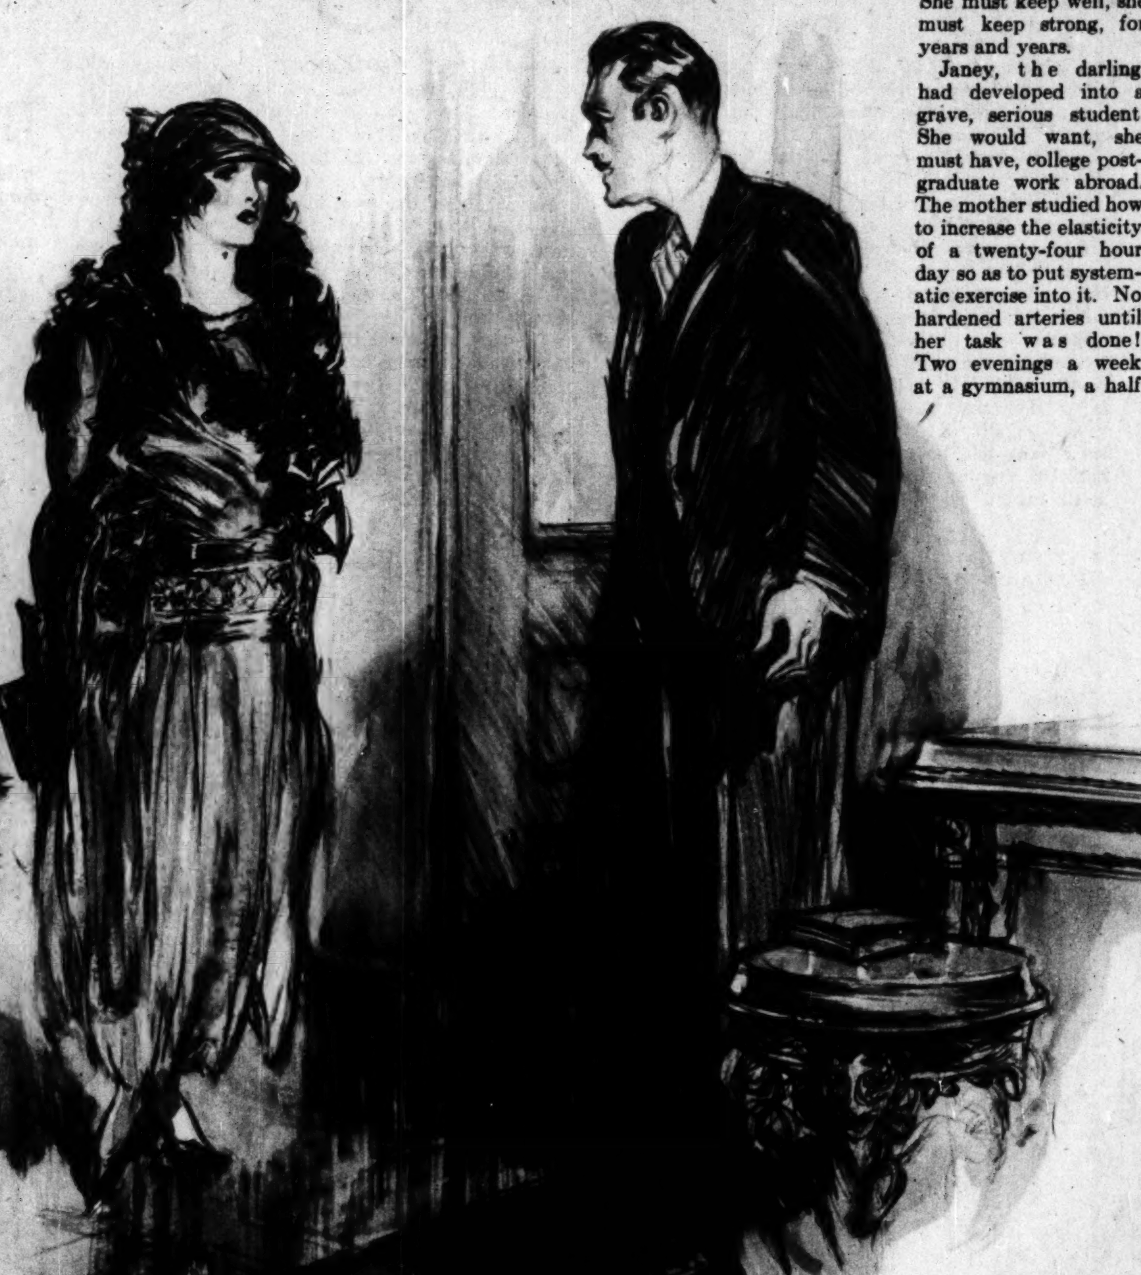
With an acquaintance of that former period, Miss Lansing, a middle aged spinster of domestic tastes and a small income, she took an apartment more commodious than either of them could have afforded alone. It was not far from St. Agatha's, where Janey was at school. Theodora delivered her there each morning as she made her way to work, and Miss Lansing collected her in the afternoon. The two boys were big enough to go to school unattended. For her work as housekeeper and house-mother Miss Lansing received a salary from Theodora, and their living expenses they divided proportionately.

By one of those coincidences that do occur in life, though they are banned from literature as "too easy," it was on the very day that Theodora began her new life as a working woman that George married Irene Liggett. George had not meant to marry Irene—that would have been to admit that Theodora had had some reason for her insane jealousy. And George had been, for the time, far more preoccupied with his combat with Theodora than with any loverlike inclinations toward other women. He had not meant to marry any one.

To begin with, he was not in love—love! He laughed like the villain in the play at the thought of love. He wanted no more to do with women. If Theodora, with whom he had lived so long in comfortable familiarity, believing that he knew every convolution of her brain—if Theodora could act like this, could become a fury overnight, a mad woman, certainly he would never be tempted to risk his future with a strange female!

But he had reckoned without the domestic habit, without time, and especially without Irene. Irene had been more than a little in love with him before Theodora's violence had cleared the way for her to become blamelessly more in love with him. And Theodora had been right, too, in her intuition of the younger woman's heart. Irene had envied the affluently placed wife her ease, her little luxuries. At twenty-four Irene, for all her efficiency, was sick of work.

After the divorce she had been discreetly unobtrusive. She waited, denying herself greatly, until the first soreness of George's mood had passed, before thrusting upon him again her feminine attractiveness. She had the sense to see that a man suffering a surfeit of sex in one of its multifarious disguises is not the man to yield to it willingly in its more seductive manifestation.



She knew it, she could have sworn it, her heart swooned to see it.

Her intelligence had its due reward. Theodora's George became hers—at any rate, George became hers.

"I shan't ever love like a boy again, Irene; I'm not going to try to deceive you about that. But—I'm awfully fond of you. I want you, and I want a home again. And I think we can be pretty happy together. What do you say?"

Irene did not say all that she thought, which again showed her intelligence. She did not say how she hated Theodora for having had what George would never give to her. She did not say how bone tired she was of work, or how her inner vision was ravished by the picture of a smart little motor car, and a charming breakfast-in-bed tray, and a gardener working about delectable lawns, and a dinner table with a black velvet cover throwing crystal and gilt into a bright relief, like the one she had read about in last week's La Mode du Monde. Perhaps she didn't herself know how all these furnished the aura in which George loomed, a highly desirable man. She only said, in a voice that sounded sincere and passionate: "I can be heavenly happy, George, if you'll only love me as you are. I don't want boy's love."

THE news reached Theodora on the morning of her third day's employment in her bank. She was seated at the breakfast table with the children and Miss Lansing. There were three newspapers among her letters. She opened one. It was the Drayton Morning Sun. Across the top there was written in blue crayon "See page 3." She saw page 3, her hands shaking as she turned the sheet. A blue arrow pointed to the paragraph announcing her former husband's new marriage. She had a sensation of dizziness, of collapse. She had expected it—she had brought it about by her fear of it, by her fury over its possibility. But, now that it had arrived, now that it struck her between the eyes, in the heart, she found she had never really expected it at all. What she had expected was a fairy tale—forces once set in motion magically reversed, words once said magically unspoken.

It seemed to her, as she kept her eyes fixed upon the paragraph, that the floor of the room, the earth beneath the house, the solid foundations of the world, were sinking, sinking.

"I am afraid you will have to hurry a little," said Miss Lansing's gentle voice from behind the coffee tray. "It's five minutes beyond starting time, Theodora."

Theodora looked up. She pulled herself together. It was, perhaps, the first time in her life that an overmastering emotion had not been permitted to overmaster her. She swallowed some coffee and twisted her lips into a smile.

"Ready, Janey?" she said.

It was the beginning of her mature life.

The discoveries she made in the business world were many and disconcerting. Duty was not agreeably arranged to fall in with desire. An occasional headache, an occasional cold—Theodora had been a healthy young woman and her ailments negligible, but they had always received their due share of consideration. These were not even allowed recognition. The extra half hour's sleep in the morning disappeared from her list of indulgences. She dared not allow it to herself even on Sunday, for it only made the brisk start on Monday the harder.

She learned, perforce, a new fastidiousness about dress. She always had had good taste, but now she had to add to it something hitherto unknown—good care. After a year there were never any missing fasteners on Theodora's wraps, there were always nets in the dressing table drawer, always mated gloves, always an orderly array of handkerchiefs, scarfs, stockings.

She found, as time went on, that not only must she give up the harmless coddling of herself into which she had drifted during her married life, but that she even had to discipline herself. One day, all of a sudden, out of the blue, she was 36. She read something about arteriosclerosis and shuddered. She must keep well, she must keep strong, for years and years.

Janey, the darling, had developed into a grave, serious student. She would want, she must have, college post-graduate work abroad. The mother studied how to increase the elasticity of a twenty-four hour day so as to put systematic exercise into it. No hardened arteries until her task was done! Two evenings a week at a gymnasium, a half hour's swim in a pool on her way home from her bank twice a week—these were added to her schedule. Theodora's girlish figure began to reëmerge through the soft folds of flesh, like a statue emerging from inchoate marble. Her cheeks grew pink. She had her crinkling, glistening hair cut to give herself more time for work and exercise and the children. She shed five years with her locks, ten with her adipose tissue.

"Theodora's getting to be a humdinger for looks," her mildly astonished brother mentioned to Mrs. Breese after a family dinner that had celebrated the thirty-eighth anniversary of his sister's birth and, incidentally, Janey's youthful entrance into Barnard. The two boys already were at college.

The next afternoon Mr. Arnold, managing vice president of the 72d street branch of the Textile and Fabrics bank, was moved to say something of the same general import to Theodora, head of the women's division, and, conditions of privacy being favorable, he reinforced his remarks with a sudden hand upon her shoulder, a sudden kiss upon her cheek. He always had seemed to Theodora a charming person, slightly thwarted despite his success; he had a wistful look about a mouth that was too sensitive for a banker's, and a lonely look in gray eyes beneath his early gray hair. He had an elusive humor, too, and he had a large wife whose interests in life had narrowed to a passion for trying out new sanitoria. Theodora had liked him, had been aware of his liking for her, had taken a natural pleasure in it.

Nevertheless, what she did now was to act like a crude, bucolic schoolgirl. She slapped his face. Yet it was not Theodora Wandley slapping Carter Arnold's face; it was all the upright Theodora Wandleys of the world demonstrating to all its Irene Liggetts how honorable women met the advances of their married bosses. She was furious, but it was not with Carter Arnold. It was with George Wandley, who, perhaps, eight years ago had thus kissed Irene Liggett. . . .

She had the grace, after a tossing, sleepless night, to explain as much to Arnold when she apologized to him for the gaucherie of her rebuke. For the years had disciplined her into the ability to analyze and criticize herself.

"It was ridiculous," she admitted, "my behaving like Outraged Virtue of the School for Scandal period. And of course I don't feel like that. I am ashamed of myself. You ought not to have done it, of course, but I know you didn't—it didn't—mean anything."

"I wouldn't be too sure of that," said Carter Arnold. But Theodora went on:

"It was an impulse, a nothing-at-all. And my—my reaction wasn't merely to that moment. It was to something that happened years ago. I—I think I felt as if I were slapping my husband's face——"

"I've a great feeling of sex solidarity," said Arnold. "I'm willing to have taken his blow vicariously. I've always believed, though, that he was either a supreme fool or a supreme knave."

"No," said Theodora thoughtfully. "No. Supremely human, I dare say."

"Well, will you forgive my essay into—supreme humanness?"

"If you'll forgive my acting like an incensed cook teaching the grocer's boy his place," she answered.

"I'm inclined to think that the incensed cook may have the right technique."

SHE went to lunch alone that day, rather soberly. Men in offices, even gentlemen in offices, had their temptations, even when they were not the sort that went gunning for temptation. Wives were up against a fearful competition in the new order. George——

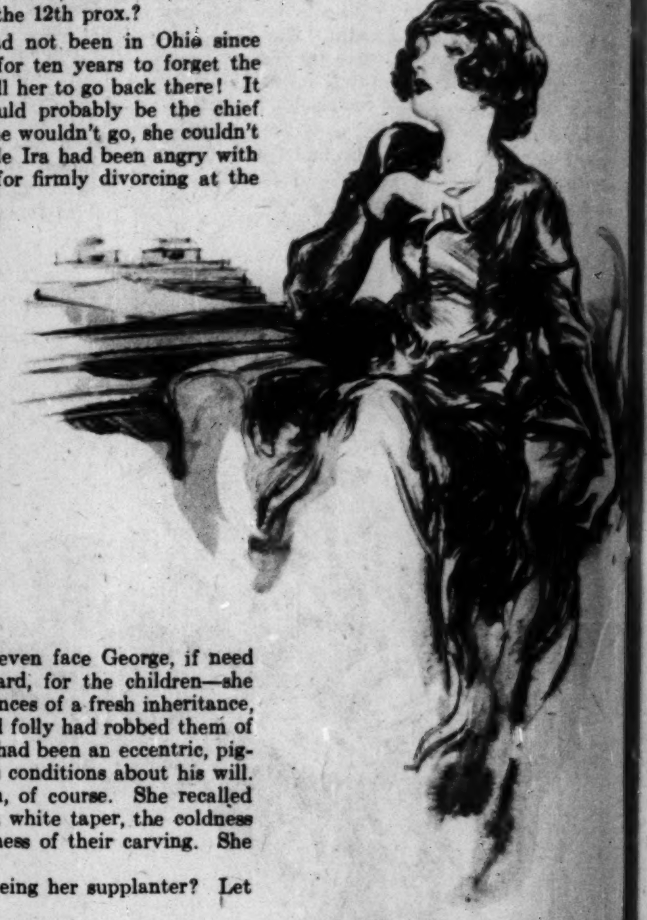
But the old hot surge of bitterness rose when she thought of George. Philosophy, reason disappeared from Theodora's newly trained mind. Years dropped from her, from her heart and her spirit. She was young again, hurt again, unreasonable again. She and George had been different; their love had been different. And he had been false, false to that love. Again she was torn at by the vultures, by the old bewilderment, the old pain.

But by and by she proceeded to have a facial massage, from which her features reappeared clear and a trifle hard. If wives were up against a fearful competition in the world's new order, so were the actual women of that order! It would be no slouch of a job for her to hold her own for another ten, another fifteen years against the stream of younger women who each year came flooding the professional world. And she would want to hold her own even after the boys and Janey were established, were doing well, were married and begging her to retire. For what would there be for her in the barren fifties if her work were taken from her?

Those barren fifties!

And then one day George's Uncle Ira Payne, by dying, took a hand in the situation. His lawyers wrote to certain persons related to him by blood or collateral ties and mentioned that Mr. Payne particularly had stipulated that they should all assemble in person for hearing his will read as soon after his funeral as possible. Could Mrs. Theodora Breese Wandley comply with this request by appearing in the offices of Grimshaw, Rigby & Grimshaw, Sherman block, South Main street, Drayton, Ohio, at three o'clock on the 12th prox.?

A chill seized Theodora. She had not been in Ohio since before her divorce. She had tried for ten years to forget the very name of Drayton. It would kill her to go back there! It would mean seeing George—he would probably be the chief beneficiary of the old man's will. She wouldn't go, she couldn't go. Why was she summoned? Uncle Ira had been angry with her, not for divorcing George, but for firmly divorcing at the same time all of George's family, all the associations of her life with George. His will could mean nothing to her—O, it might to the children, though.



She couldn't go! It would mean seeing the rich, fertile countryside again. It would mean seeing roses blooming as she had not seen them in ten years. She had a sharp recollection of the ramblers arching down the long path of her hardy garden. Had Irene kept it up? Did they still live there in her dear house, her home? She wouldn't go!

How ridiculous she was! Of course she could go. She could even face George, if need be. She had lived hard, worked hard, for the children—she certainly would not imperil their chances of a fresh inheritance, after her own stubborn ignorance and folly had robbed them of one fortune, even if Uncle Ira Payne had been an eccentric, pig-headed old man who made ridiculous conditions about his will.

It would mean seeing that woman, of course. She recalled Irene, slim and bright, burning like a white taper, the coldness of her features lost in the exquisiteness of their carving. She couldn't stand seeing her.

But why should she shrink from seeing her supplanter? Let Irene do the shrinking!

SHE appeared in the offices of Grimshaw, Rigby & Grimshaw a few minutes late. She had not intended that. But she had planned her trip so as not to be obliged to spend a night in Drayton, and the combination of a late train, central time, and daylight saving time, had left her with only a few minutes to change her dress and hat at the hotel and to snatch a clean pair of gloves. The dress and hat had been bought—created—for this occasion. Nothing, not the loss of Croesus' fortune for the children, would have induced her to forego wearing them. They were utterly perfect in their extravagant simplicity.

So she walked in, under the younger Grimshaw's flattering, accented guidance, after the other interested persons were seated. There were twelve or fifteen of them. She saw Uncle Ira's four old servants before she saw anyone else. She saw Mr. Huxton of the children's home, in which Uncle Ira always had been interested.

Then, as she took her place, she saw George—George, who had been so young, so alert. He was staring, fascinatedly, at her out of surprised eyes. He had grown a bit heavy; he had grown a bit flabby—George, whose vanity ten years ago it had been to keep in the flower of condition. He looked middle aged, tired.

A heat of indignation enveloped her. What did Irene Liggett mean by not taking better care of George, by not keeping him forever young and happy? Self-forgetful in her wrath, she looked about for Irene.

She was there, though not beside George. She was a little apart—some accident of arrival, Theodora supposed. She was beautifully dressed, and there were pearls on her throat and in her ears that made Theodora's heart contract with envy. George Wandley's Sons & Sons must have been doing awfully well!

But, though Irene hadn't "let herself go" as Theodora in the old, idle time had done, she had lost the clear outlines of her beauty. Luxury that she had not been stoic enough to resist, luxury that she had longed for and envied and embraced, had set its heavy hand upon her. The Tangara outlines of ten years ago were lost; the flame of beauty was quenched. A handsome woman still, but——

"Why, she looks like a prominent clubwoman," thought Theodora, with a singing sense of triumph.

She settled herself to listen to the elder Grimshaw's exposition of his late client's wishes. But her mind was inattentive. She didn't hear why Uncle Ira had wanted them all present in person. She felt George's eyes stealing toward her from time to time, and her pulse accelerated its beat at those stolen glances. She was worth looking at today—she was better worth looking at than Irene! The years had dealt with her more kindly than with the girl he had put in her place.

The years, yes, and the discipline of work, the discipline of purpose, the discipline of love. It had been cruel to take the children so completely from George. But she had supposed that of course he and Irene—yet she ought to have known that children would be no part of Irene's program. Again indignation surged up in her. Pig, not to have given George everything! Pig, not to have kept him eternally glad and gay!

Then there droned into her consciousness a clause about a legacy of money and jewelry to Theodora Breese Wandley, "former wife of my nephew, George Payne Wandley"; and another one about a similar legacy to Irene Liggett Roscoe, "former wife of my nephew, George Payne Wandley."

It needed flying fingers to her lips to keep a startled exclamation from gaining utterance. And nothing could keep her wide, questioning eyes from George.

He met her look fully, triumphantly. He grinned faintly, evanescently, at her. He grew younger with that grin.

Then she caught up with the reading again, to learn that she and the Drayton Trust company were trustees of a fund for her children until the youngest should be twenty-one years old. And the residue of Ira Pay estate was bequeathed to his be nephew, George Payne Wandley.

STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS

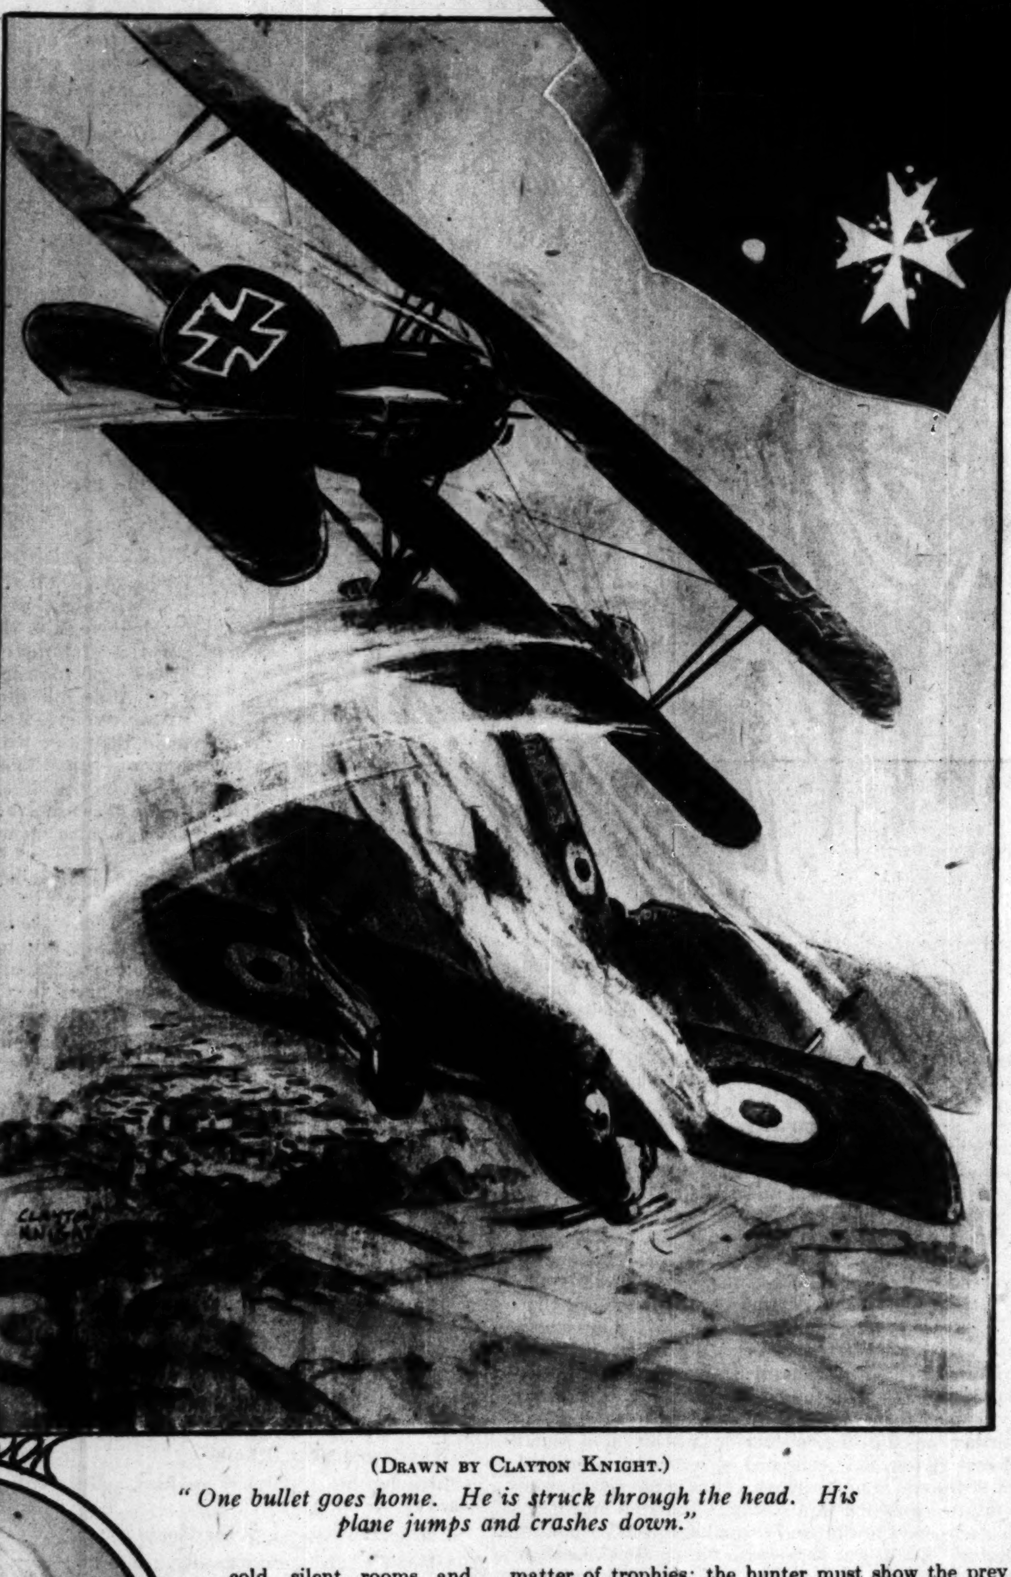
The RED KNIGHT of GERMANY

By FLOYD GIBBONS

(This is the story of the man the Germans regarded as their greatest war hero and the allies as their most dangerous single enemy. Before he was killed he shot down eighty adversaries. His life before the war, his battles in the air, his dramatic death, make a thrilling narrative. The man who tells it, Floyd Gibbons, was the famous war correspondent for THE TRIBUNE. He was severely wounded and won decorations while advancing with the American infantry at the battle of Chateau-Thierry. He spent more than six months collecting the material for this story. From Richthofen's private records, from the German official reports, from the lips of men who fought Richthofen and survived, from the relatives of men he killed, Mr. Gibbons has written what is probably the most remarkable story of a fighting man ever published.)

Baron Manfred von Richthofen just after his twentieth air victory. The cross he wears was the highest military recognition for valor within the kaiser's gift.

(P. & A. PHOTO.)



(DRAWN BY CLAYTON KNIGHT.)

"One bullet goes home. He is struck through the head. His plane jumps and crashes down."

INSTALLMENT I.

The Kaiser's Deadliest Ace.

TO kill, and kill, and kill, was the cry. To burn, to destroy, to devastate, to lay waste. Men heard the madness and knew it for madness and embraced it, some with fear and some with joy. Kill or be killed. Survive or perish. But——

Kill, kill, kill!

It was the march beat of tramping feet. It was the staccato of steel shod hoofs. It was the whir and growl of speeding motors. It was the shriek and roar of trooptrains frontward bound.

* *

His mother had not raised him to be a soldier. She had made him wear curls and dressed him in white pretties. He had looked like a girl and had hated it.

Then came killing time—war.

He killed a hundred men in individual combat—shot them, burned them, crushed them, hurled their bodies down to earth.

He shot down eighty fighting planes. He matched his life against that of any man. He fought not with hate, but with love for fighting. It was his joy, his sport, his passion. To him, to dare and to die was to live.

He had the courage to kill and be killed, and war was his hunting license. On home leave from man killing at the front, he hunted and killed deer, elk, boar, bison, and birds, and brought their heads to his mother's home.

He was young and blonde, shy and handsome, proud and serious. Girls by the thousands worshiped his picture and sent him letters by the sackful. One of them he loved. He wanted to make her his wife, but not his widow. He knew he was going to be killed.

In one of the greatest air battles in history he went down, still fighting, killing. He died a national hero at the head of his fighting men in the service of his country. He was buried by his enemies with respect and military honors in unstinted recognition of his great courage, his sportsmanship, and his tireless, relentless spirit—his indomitable will to kill, kill, kill.

Richthofen at the age of five years.

(P. & A. PHOTO.)

His name was Manfred von Richthofen.

His life and death, his victories and his defeat, his loves, hopes, fears, bring a new record to the halls of that same Valhalla in which rest the spirits of Guynemer, Hawker, Ball, McCudden, Immelmann, Lufbery, Quentin Roosevelt, and others who fought aloft and died below with hearts that held emotions other than hate.

How many did he kill? The list is long and appalling. It is a string of victories, a chaplet in which the beads of glory and tragedy succeed one another to defeat and the grave.

This list of his officially confirmed victories begins when he brought down a Vickers two seater on Sept. 17, 1916. It ends with the crash of a Sopwith Camel of the allies on April 20, 1918.

And the next day—April 21, 1918—Richthofen was killed as he dived to drive to death the British flyer selected for his eighty-first victim. Strapped to the pilot's seat, his body traversed with lead, the uhlan of the sky came down between the blazing lines before Amiens. He was 25 years old.

To his country and the cause it was soon to lose, the loss of Richthofen was a great one. Ludendorff, when he heard the news, said: "He was worth as much to us as three divisions." His mother had not raised him to be a soldier, but in the military estimate of his fighting worth he was placed in the balance against 30,000 bayonets.

That mother lives today in the little town of Schweidnitz, in German Silesia—lives in the large, cold, silent rooms and halls of the big white house that once reëchoed to the shouts of the boy that wore curls and looked like a girl.

Dearer to this sad faced, gray haired woman than Ludendorff's high valuation of her son, dearer than the rows of ribbons and decorations and the acknowledgments of comrades and former foes, are three golden ringlets of fine-spun hair in a plain white pasteboard box, and a mother's memories of the cherubic head that bore them.

Although Prussian junkers from a fighting stock that won its title of baron in the seventeenth century, the Richthofen family took little part in subsequent wars. They were land owners, squires of country seats, who worked their estates with thrift and efficiency and found their sports in hunting and riding.

From this line of modern primitives came Manfred von Richthofen, born May 2, 1892, in Breslau. Organization, reputed to be the great forte of his country, was not inborn with him. He was an individualist. The spirit of the hunter, the stalker, was strong within him, and with it ran pride of conquest, the natural outgrowth of strong competitive and combative instincts.

He felt strongly the same urge that drives the city bred man to the wilds for relief from the pressure of organized life, to feel once more the discipline of nature, instead of the steel and asphalt of traffic regulations. The hunt was his life and the trophy was his prize. Richthofen was like his father, and no doubt like all his forebears in the matter of trophies: the hunter must show the prey he ran to earth.

The boyhood bedroom of Richthofen in Schweidnitz remains today, with the exception of its owner's portraits, just as the victorious ace arranged and decorated it on his last trip home.

Its walls are covered with the linen scalps of fallen foes. They are the gayly painted red, white, and blue numbers and symbols cut from fighting planes that went down in defeat under the guns of Richthofen's red Fokker.

The table is made from parts of broken propeller blades of all kinds. The night lamp on the bed table is formed from the metal hub of an airplane's undercarriage wheel. The centerpiece on the table is a flying compass, and the wall table under the large portrait is loaded with silver cups commemorating battles in the sky.

AMONG all these grewsome trophies, each representing a death struggle in midair, one holds a position of honor over the bedroom door. It is the machine gun from an English plane that sent many German flyers to their death. It is the weapon of the first English ace, Maj. Lanoe G. Hawker.

Hawker was one of the best flyers in the allied ranks. He had received the Victoria Cross and many other decorations, and had a long string of air victories to his credit. Richthofen himself had been decorated and had brought down ten enemy planes. It was a meeting of champions of the air. It was a battle of eagles, each determined upon the other's death, and it took place high over the lines between Bapaume and Albert, in full view of thousands of mud grimed soldiers.

Richthofen wrote this account of that fight for publication in Germany during the war:

"He opens fire with his machine gun. Five shots rip out, and I change my course quickly by a sharp turn to the left. He follows, and the mad circle starts. He is trying to get behind me, and I am trying to get behind him. Round and round we go in circles, like two madmen playing ring-around-o'-rosies almost two miles above the earth.

"But in the circling fight both of us had lost height. We must have come down at least 6,000 feet, because now we were little more than 3,000 feet above the ground. The wind was in my favor. Throughout the fight, at the same time we kept getting lower, the wind was gradually drifting us back across the German lines.

"The battle is now close to the ground. He is not a hundred yards above the earth. Our speed is terrific. He starts back for his front. He knows I am right behind him and close on his tail.

"Now I am within thirty yards of him. He must fall. The gun pours out its stream of lead. Then it jams. Then it reopens fire. That jam almost saved his life. One bullet goes home. He is struck through the back of the head. His plane jumps and crashes down. It strikes the ground just as I swoop over. His machine gun rams itself into the earth, and now it decorates the entrance over my door. He was a brave man, a sportsman, and a fighter."

Young Richthofen had no special inclination toward the life of a soldier. Concerning the decision that sent him away to a cadet school and marked him for a military career he once wrote: "I was not particularly fond of being a cadet, but my father desired it, and so I wasn't asked about it."

ON the morning of Aug. 3, 1914, the inhabitants of the little Russian village of Kielce, a few miles east of the German frontier, awoke to find a troop of uhlans patrolling the main street and occupying the points of vantage leading in and out of the village.

A 22 year old second lieutenant swung from his horse in front of a low building of weather stained clapboards. His hair was blond, his cheeks were pink, his uniform was natty. With the handle of his riding crop he rapped on a wooden door, which was opened by the village priest, a tall man in black robes, whose pallid face was all but covered by a full red beard.

"Father," said the boy officer, with heels together as though on parade, "it is my painful duty to inform you that war has been declared between Germany and your country, and that your village is now occupied and surrounded by my men. I must notify you that you are my prisoner. My name is Manfred von Richthofen, second lieutenant of the First regiment of uhlans."

The cleric received the formal speech with a smile and folded hands. What nonsense was the boy talking? War? Troops? Prisoner?

To make the villagers realize that they were prisoners young Richthofen wrapped himself in sternness and locked the priest in the tower of the church.

In five days Richthofen's patrol had dwindled to himself and two men, the rest having been sent off as dispatch carriers. It was quiet in the captured village—so quiet that the lieutenant released the priest.

Richthofen went to sleep on the fifth night and was awakened shortly after midnight by a tug at his shoulder. It was the sentry.

"The Cossacks are here," the latter whispered in a husky voice.

Jumping from his blankets, Richthofen became the hunter—or the quarry; he knew not which. Senses alert and keen, he stepped out into the night. There was a fine mist of rain falling, and the darkness was complete. Under this covering he and his men led their three horses through a break in the churchyard wall and into an open field.

Trailing a carbine beside him, Richthofen returned through the churchyard and, keeping under cover of the wall, came to the village street. It was filled with men and horses. He recognized them as Cossacks—about thirty.

He crossed the churchyard, leaped the opposite wall, and joined his two men with the horses in the field. They took to the shelter of the nearby woods. In the gray early morning they saw the Cossacks ride out of the village, but they did not return to their old quarters, realizing that an outpost had been left to receive them.

Unshaven, mud splashed, clothes wrinkled from a week's wear, the trio returned to the garrison town on the seventh day after their departure, and were received as ghosts. Richthofen had been reported dead in a brush with Cossacks, and his mother had received condolences from friends far and near.

His "return from the dead" netted him an ovation in the little garrison town. This hero worship was short-lived, because within twenty-four hours the regiment had entrained and was off for a destination unknown, but guessed—France. Day and night the troop train sped westward across Silesia and Saxony in the general direction of Metz.

Richthofen and four young second lieutenants, with all of their bags and equipment, were quartered in one second class compartment. They had a table between them, and it was loaded with bottles that were replenished at every stop.

ONE of the decisive battles of the war is going on. Thousands of men are being killed. But Richthofen is on the side lines and not in it. The war is quite unsatisfactory to him.

He demanded action. On his hurried frontline visits he would borrow a rifle and take a pot shot now and then at the opposing trenches.

His hunter instincts could not be denied.

Moonlight nights, with the light snow of late fall, came to his assistance, and he followed the tracks of wild pigs through the dark forest of La Chaussee. With much effort he and an orderly built a shelter seat in a tree, and there he waited night after night for his quarry.

One night there came a sow which swam the little woodland lake in the bright moonlight and broke into a potato field on the other side. Several miles away the guns of Verdun boomed and their flashes sometimes sent flickers of light across the night sky. From his tree nest Richthofen sent a bullet into the sow's body as she swam back across the lake from her midnight foraging. She was only wounded, and the hunter, descending from the tree, plunged into the cold water, bringing his victim out by the hind leg, and finishing her with a trench knife.

At last the iron cross came—his first decoration, awarded in recognition of his repeated trips along the front line under heavy fire.

In October he was almost killed. Death passed him by a hair's breadth. He was riding back of the front. A French shell came crashing through the trees and landed ten yards in front of him. With the explosion the air was filled with earth, stones, pieces of wood, and shell splinters. One sliver of steel struck the saddle on which he was seated. His horse dropped beneath him with another splinter through the brain. Three other horses were killed, but the only harm to Richthofen was a hole in his overcoat.

With the new year he was appointed ordnance officer of an infantry brigade, but the endless inspections and unending paper work brought to him the deeper realization that war was by no means what he thought it was going to be, and with this growing disappointment came disgust.

Toward the first of May he received instructions to prepare himself for another duty in the service of supply still farther back from the front lines. Strong as army discipline was in him, he exploded, and the day after that the commanding general of his division received one of the shocks of his life when he read the following unmilitary communication from the restless Uhlan:

"My Dear Excellency: I have not gone to war in order to collect cheese and eggs, but for another purpose."

The rest of the letter was an official application for his transfer to the flying service. His uncivil letter gained his end. At the end of May, 1915, he was transferred to the flying service and sent to Cologne for training.

It was upon his cavalry training, if not experience, that he depended to fit himself for an aerial observer. But his cavalry training failed him the morning in June, 1915, when he went up into the air for the first time. His sense of direction left him, and in his new world of three dimensions he was completely lost.

In a dash across the flying field he gripped the sides of his seat and tightened his muscles at every jolt. The machine finally left the ground, slid into the air like a knife blade, wheeled first to the right and then to the left, and then straightened out on a level course 800 feet above the ground. The future ace of all German flying men clutched the sides of the fuselage and peered over and downward. He wrote later that he was much surprised to find he was lost over his own airdrome.

Richthofen was drunk with enthusiasm when he landed. In the long glide to the landing field he had been impressed by the deep silence that followed the heavy noise when the motor slowed down and the plane skimmed over the ground at express train speed.

HE won his brevet and, after two weeks' daily flights, was sent to the Russian front, where Mackensen was hammering his way through the Russian lines. His pleasure was complete. Action at last!

The uplifting effect of actually seeing carnage reflected itself in his first letters to his mother. He wrote:

"Liebe Mama:

"July 20. 1915. Twenty kilometers south of Cholm.

"I hope you are receiving the letters I am sending. I am here with the Mackensen army and am attached to the sixth Austrian corps. Now we are again in the full war of movement. Nearly every day I fly over the enemy and report. I reported the retreat of the Russians three days ago.

"I am so pleased that I can help here just at the most important sector of the front. In all probability matters will come to a decision here shortly. I have been flying here now for a fortnight. The period of training lasted only four weeks. Of my fellow students I was the first to be sent to a field flying formation."

Richthofen's first pilot was Zeumer—little Zeumer, the "lunger." Zeumer was a first lieutenant and one of Germany's first pilots. He was considered one of the aces of the 69th squadron, and his daring was a thing that officers and men alike talked about when out of the little fellow's hearing.

Zeumer did not like them to talk about it in his presence. He thought they suspected the reason for his daring. For Zeumer was dying. Beneath his shrunken chest slow death gnawed.

But the race was long. Death in the air evaded him, and the "bugs" gained daily. A year later he was shot down near Verdun by a French flyer. He arose from the crash with only a few flesh wounds from glancing bullets.

Three days later, with his growing weakness, he fell from the pilot's seat of a new machine while it was in the hangar and went into the hospital with a broken thigh. But the dying man's determination knit the bone with the heat of desperation. A month later he limped out a cripple, but went aloft again, trying to catch up his lost laps on the "bugs."

Another year, and it was June again in France. The story was simple—several lines in a letter from Richthofen to his mother. They read:

"Yesterday Zeumer was killed in air combat. It was the best that could have happened to him. He knew he had not much longer to live. Such an excellent and noble fellow! How he would have hated to drag himself on toward the inevitable end! For him it would have been tragic. As it is, he died a heroic death before the enemy."

Little Zeumer had won his race. Richthofen's was still to be decided.

(Richthofen's first air flight with Zeumer at the "stick," his first time in the air alone, his debut as a pilot, his bombing raids in Russia, and how he shot down his first Englishman will be told in next Sunday's installment.)

HIGH CHIVALRY

by ACHMED ABDULLAH

THE STORY SO FAR:

LORD CARMYON, penniless, is living in Paris after the war. He meets the lovely Sultana Evelyn, whose reign in Kivastan, a small principality of Asia, is threatened by a rival sultan. Mustaffa Bek, son of this rival, at his father's instance proposes to Evelyn and is greatly relieved when she refuses him. Carmyon and his world war buddies, Prince Tamerlanoff and Hector Aristide L'Hommedieu, offer the sultana their services, but she has no money. At Mustaffa's suggestion the three kidnap him, obtain a heavy ransom, and split it with him. He marries Delphine, a cabaret dancer, and refuses his father's orders to come home. Evelyn leaves for Kivastan by one route and the Musketeers by another. The Musketeers are arrested as they leave the ship at Calcutta. They engage in a terrific battle with the police. Carmyon escapes; the other two are thrown into jail. Carmyon finds Evelyn at the home of a friend of her father. Through the mysterious work of this friend, the jail is set on fire, and Hector and Tamerlanoff escape. It is announced that both they and Carmyon have perished. Disguised, the three set out with Evelyn for Kivastan.

INSTALLMENT VIII.

The Flight.

SEVEN of Shukri Ali's people were accompanying the young sultana.

For he had said:

"You are traveling as a rich maharanee and must have a retinue in keeping with your wealth. Besides, these men may be useful beyond the Himalayas. I chose them carefully. For they are seven rogues, seven scoundrels, and—I am afraid—seven assassins. They would cut anybody's throat for the sake of a chipped silver rupee—and a good many throats, even, for the sake of the sport. But"—with a thin smile—"you can trust them implicitly."

"Why?" she had laughed.

"Because I have given an order. Because they know me. Because they fear me."

And, to the seven:

"Am I not right?"

"Give salaam, O Hoozoor!" had come their rumbling chorus. "Jo hookum, yah Khodawund—listen is obey, O my lord!"

Four of the seven—Yar Mohammed, Pir Mohammed, Rahm Mohammed, and Dost Mohammed—were brothers belonging to the Afridi tribe of border Afghans: red haired, hook nosed ruffians, crooked mouthed and crooked brained, brawny to the ankles, braggart in their speech, blood staining their hands and souls, but brave after the reckless, vain manner of their breed and stag sure when it came to finding a way high up through the rugged basalt ridges and slippery timber falls of the Himalayas. The fifth, nicknamed Bootot, or the Strangler, was a copper faced Kalmuck from High Tartary, who prayed to a pig snouted idol which he hid in his belt between his big dagger and his small dagger, who had nowhere his equal in purse snatching or cattle stealing, and of whom the telling went that once, attacked by a snow tiger on the plains of Outer Mongolia, he had killed the brute with no more weapons than his two daggers and his bare fists. The sixth, Bayazid Ansari, had been in his youth a fine, silken gentleman at the amir's court in Bokhara, whence they had driven him forth for reasons too shameful to mention with words, and was still the man to show a handsome leg in stepping the measure of a hill dance, to roll out bits of flowery Persian quotations, to ingratiate himself with the women and, by the same token, to help himself to their jewels between kisses. And the seventh, whose name was Toor Gar Khan, was a Siberian Tartar from the far Abakan steppes, who wore earrings like a woman and a mustache like a tomcat, who could sing a song to make you cry or laugh—just as he wished—and who could split a stout tree or a stout head with a tossed ax from a distance of fifty feet.

Thus all seven were northern men.

All seven—since in the whole world there is no homesickness as bitter and blighting as northern homesickness—had been longing for the north, the bleakness of the north, the sharp, pure winds and snows of the north; had been happy to accompany Sultana Evelyn across the border; had salaamed before her with throaty, riotous greetings:

"Khoosh amoodé, O sultana katoon!"
"Murhuban, O haukamut!"
"Salaam numha, O dokhtera shah!"

"Splendid nucleus for our army," Prince Tamerlanoff had whispered to Lord Carmyon, who, with a wink, had inquired:

"How about passports, Shukri Ali, to get them out of the country?"

"Passports?" Toor Gar Khan had echoed. "Doubtless the British governor is three devils—and a pig," he had sneered. "But we of the north . . ."

"You are seven pukka devils—without as much as the pig's smell!" Gul-dur-Burram, the sultana's old Tartar nurse, had interrupted. "What better passports do you need except your honest faces and your clean souls?"

Which obvious irony had greatly pleased the man from the Abakan steppes.

For—with Evelyn looking on, smiling, very much with the satisfied air of a hostess who has introduced two congenial people to each other—he had hugged the old woman to his broad chest and cried:

"Good—by the teeth of Allah! You are a woman after my own heart. A twister of words! A turner of neat phrases! I would marry you, O rejoicer of souls, O small and sweet smelling sprig of sassafras, were you not old enough to have suckled my grandmother's great-grandmother!"

"And I would marry you, O wearer of a verminous turban, had I not the good taste to prefer a mangy dog for husband!"

Laughter. Hugs. O, yes: two congenial souls—admiring each other.

. . . .

Again they admired each other the next morning, inside the railway station, as they squabbled with the Hindu and Eurasian porters and guards and ticket punchers over baggage and ice and bedding and water pipes and baskets of food and goglets of water and a number of mysterious, strongly scented packages which—to quote a Bengali clerk—could under no circumstances be stowed away in the 'te-rain, the valuable property of the honorable saheb-log's railway company—no, no, no—under no conditions whateffer!" while Toor Gar Khan swore by all the blessed saints of Islam and by a variety of rather more worldly oaths that, come what may, everything would be stowed away where they could see it.

"For," he opined, "we know well you thieving, lousy southern piglings! Baggage car, you say? Allah! Would I put meat on trust with a jackal? Do not bother me, O swine fed infidel!"

"Infidel? I?" The other trembled with rage. "I am a Brahmin—a gentleman . . ."

"Khamoosh—silence, O stinking grandson of a wart!" And, to a porter: "Put the baggage where I told you! Do not listen to this grandfather of excessively objectionable odors!"

"I insist!" shrieked the Bengali. "I insist . . ."

"Away, O cockroach!" interrupted Gul-dur-Burram, while Toor Gar Khan pointed at her proudly as if to say: By the death prophet, what a woman! "Away, O spawn of leprous gutter rats! O pig, most indelicate, especially unbeautiful, and lacking in refinement!"

"But . . ."

"Away!" And Gul-dur-Burram's small, hard fist hit him neatly on the point of the chin. "This is a maharanee traveling in state with her own people. A pukka princess, not a sniveling, unimportant Be-ritish mem-saheb, a pig eater from Belaiti, from London! Away! To your home—and watch your wife kiss her seventeen base born lovers!"

"It cannot be done!" declared another Bengali clerk, brown faced, agate eyed, very fat and oily, and clad in white gauze, which, considering his fantastic bodily contours, gave him a grotesque and not at all decent appearance. "It is against regulation seventy-nine, paragraph eight. Regulation says that . . ."

And he was promptly and vituperatively told by the old nurse what to do with the regulation, with the book that contained it, the saheb who had written it; and when, in a magnificent flight of oriental imagination, the Bengali swore by Shiva and Vishnu and Brahm that the viceroy himself insisted on this particular rule in regard to baggage being carried out to the letter, Toor Gar Khan informed him in a stage whisper:

"You may tell the viceroy that the very next time I come to Calcutta I shall call on him. You may tell him—wah! by my honor!—that I shall pull his swollen nose and spit in his beard."

"Treachery!" exclaimed the Bengali. "Treachery against the viceroy—the raj—the British government—"

"What are the British to me? I am a free man from the north. The British? Wah!—may they eat dirt!"

"Pardon me a moment," said Lord Carmyon to the young sultana. "I'll have to stop this incipient racial war if we intend to take the train."

He gave a few rapid, incisive orders in Hindustani to both the railway officials and the servants. Triumphantly the latter piled all the baggage—including a screeching, mangy parrot in a rickety bamboo cage which Arslan Khan had bought the last moment from a grinning, splay footed, jungly Bhil—into a first class compartment, very much to the disgust of its occupant, a majestic Anglo-Indian lady with a Wellingtonian beak and a rose-madder complexion.

She announced to all the world that here was another proof how the empire was going to the dogs; that she would write to the Times about it; that it was all the fault of the Americans with their silly ideas about democracy and equality and . . . "O, you shocking beast!" she exclaimed as the parrot put its head on one side, winked a flat, stony eye, and croaked a falsetto:

"Wot-oh, 'Arriet! Kiss me quick!"

"Station master!" the Anglo-Indian lady called out. "Station master! I protest . . ."

But the baggage remained where it was in spite of her protests, and presently everybody was aboard: Evelyn in one compartment with Gul-dur-Burram, who, since the former was traveling as an Indian maharanee, pulled down the grass woven window shutters tightly so as to respect the proper customs of purdah and zenana, of veil and woman's seclusion; the Three Musketeers in a second compartment; and Arslan Khan and the seven rogues in a third, where, disregarding the seats, they squatted on the floor, chewed finely cut pan, and spat to their hearts' content and burst into a rolling, rollicking song of the north:

"Pevadala pea, to myn ne pea,
Phir kisee ko kya . . ."
("Today I got drunk on red wine.
Well—whose business is it, except mine . . . ?")

Fifteen minutes earlier the Eurasian station master had shouted himself hoarse with:

"All aboard the te-rain—for Lahore, Rawalpindi, and Peshawar!"

Fifteen times he had blown his shiny, shrill, official silver whistle.

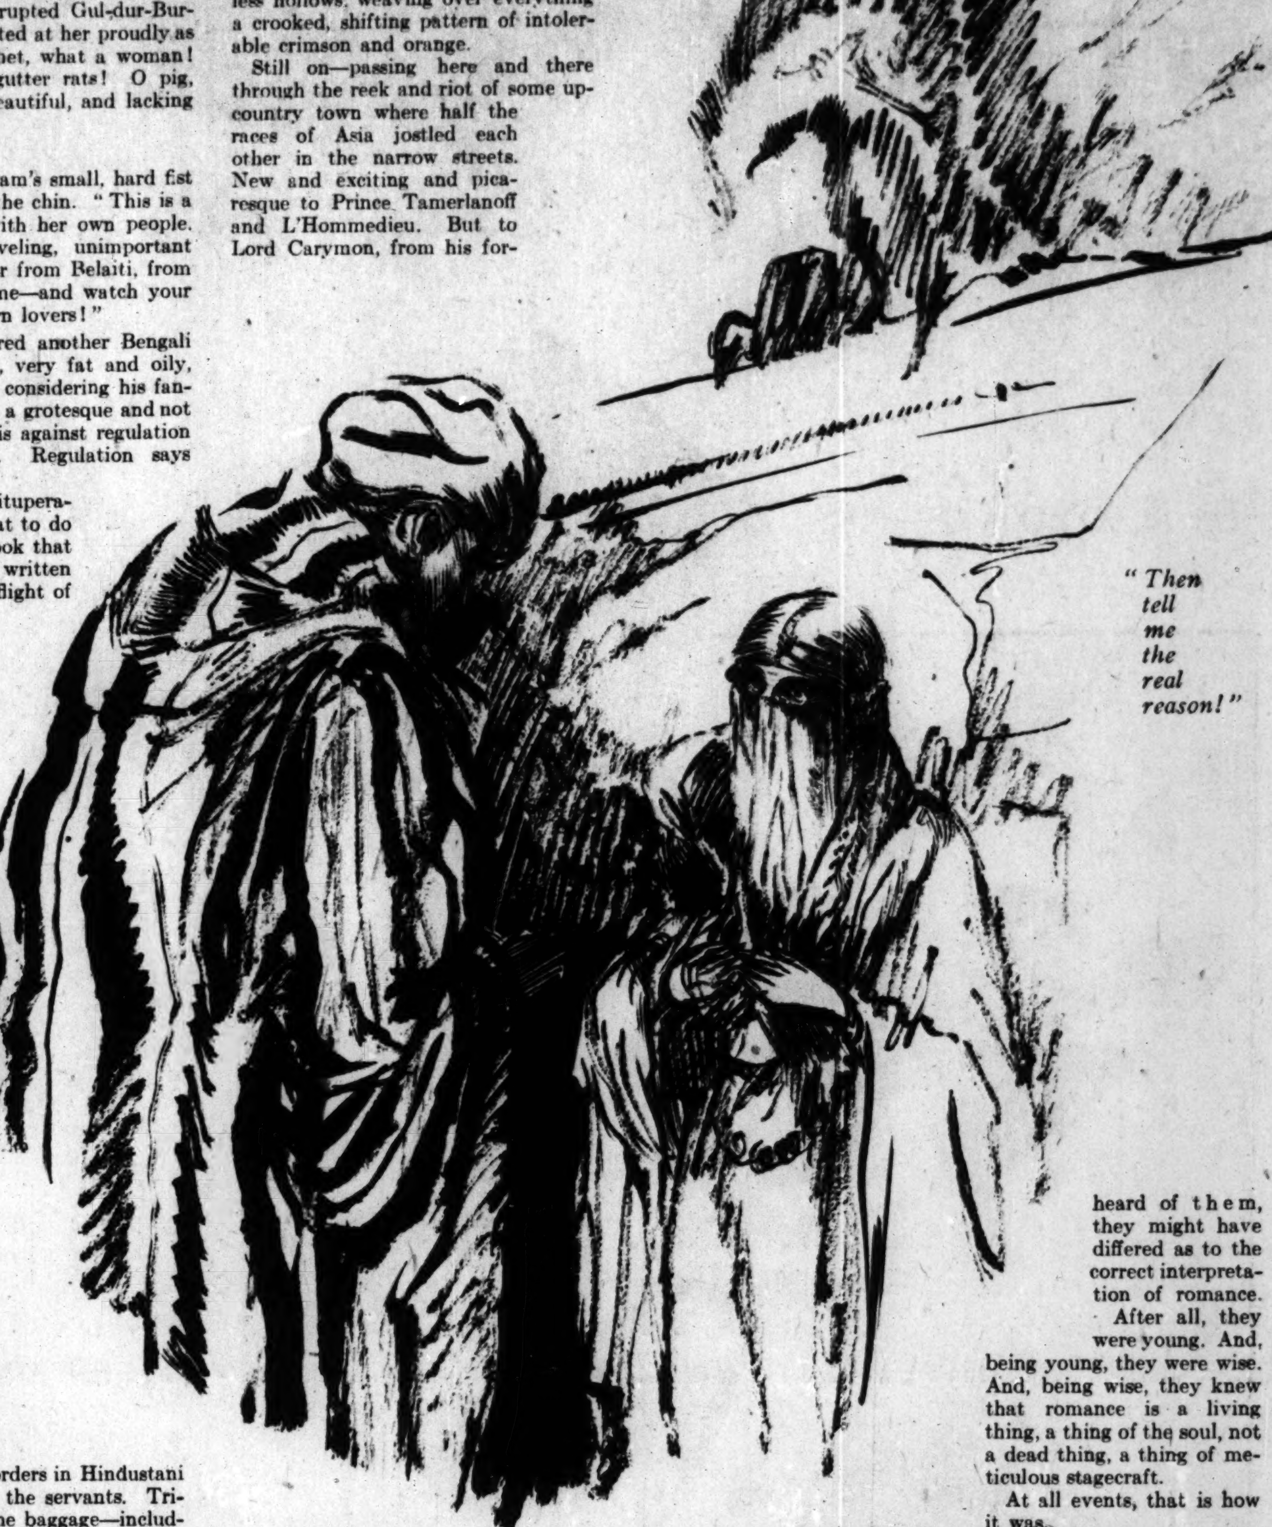
Fifteen minutes it had taken to solve the quarrel between the railway people and the young sultana's retinue; fifteen more to rescue some of the former from the hands of a party of ruffianly, drunk Rajputs whom they had tried to overcharge; and yet another fifteen minutes elapsed before the train finally got under way with a wheezy, pessimistic cough. For this was India, this was the orient, to which all time, including railway time tables and also including the eternities, is only a matter of a yawn, a stretch, and a shrug, and to which hurry and punctuality are the ungentlemanly and rather disagreeable qualities of western barbarians.

Off, though, at last!

On—to the north!

On through the neat, checkerboard fields of Bengal, with fleeting glimpses of half naked natives tilling the ground and patient buffaloes turning the water wheels and once in a while a bulbous, shimmering temple dome seen vaguely through the delicate tracery of the tamarisk trees. On through a day and a night and again a day and a night, the train rolling between silvery, rush tipped hillocks and fantastic, red granite mountains tearing the far horizon with twisted peaks; through a motley land, a bewildering land of too much color, of impossible splendor, of sudden, useless beauty—and sudden, useless ugliness; through the central Indian plateau that was yellow and sad with a great, brittle heat, with a sharp edged disk of a sun that painted the plains in exaggeratedly contrasting shades, touching the tortured branches of the dwarf acacias and the fantastic spires of temples and mosques with points of dazzling gold, steeping the bases of the rocks with inky black splotches that seemed like bottomless hollows, weaving over everything a crooked, shifting pattern of intolerable crimson and orange.

Still on—passing here and there through the reek and riot of some up-country town where half the races of Asia jostled each other in the narrow streets. New and exciting and picaresque to Prince Tamerlanoff and L'Hommedieu. But to Lord Carymon, from his former residence in India, a twice-told tale and one not very interesting . . . he knew it all, yawned at it all: from the sudden rush of flaming splendor to the thick, stinking layer of cruelty and superstition and ignorance that stews and oozes beneath the colorful surface; from the Rajput gentleman's stately widow who mounts the blazing funeral pyre in spite of British laws to the meanest half caste money lender who devils the souls and depletes the purses of sporting subalterns amid the flowering peepul trees; from the most westernized oriental sinning the sins of London and Paris to the most easternized occidental sinning those of Bombay and Hyderabad.



"Then tell me the real reason!"

SO Lord Carmyon was slightly bored while the train puffed on; skirting a wedge of jungle that lay across the land like a carelessly flung scarf; rolling over a stretch of ochre loam covered with billows of chalk rock mantled by a filmlike spray of sand which twisted and twirled in the fiery wind . . . and then, on the third day, due to an accident farther up the line, a four hour wait at a small desert station that consisted of a chaotic whirlwind of stabbing, minute quartz grains, nine red necked vultures squatting in a row on a low wall and making unseemly noises, and a tumble down Vishnavite shrine. And it was here—with the sand making their eyes water and their throats rasp, with the vultures cawing stridently in their ears, the smell of dust and refuse and soft coal in their nostrils, and a few feet away the fakir in charge of the shrine diligently scratching his naked, hairy, dirt caked hide—it was here that Lord Carmyon and the young sultana told each other how dear she was to him and he to her.

Can you picture it?

The drifting, biting sand grains.

The nine red necked vultures—though ordinary vultures without red necks would have been bad enough.

The dirty fakir, half mad, mumbling his fanatical incantation to incredible gods:

"Ram! Ram! Kali! Kali! Kajar kaloti ujdar dhoti! Pani de, pani de! Ram! Ram! Kali . . ."

The dust.

The refuse.

The choking black coal smoke.

Can you imagine a less romantic, a more discouraging milieu for a love scene?

Neither David Belasco nor D. W. Griffith would have permitted such a milieu for any of their heroes or heroines. They would have insisted on some delightful stage setting: month of May, of course, or just possibly June; baby pink clouds in baby blue sky; a slice of sentimental moon regardless of the time of day; background of rare flowers piled up in an exquisite though rather intemperate design . . . and take away those cawing vultures, that mumbling fakir, and have the orchestra play a soft, dreamy waltz.

Hey, there, professor, let's hear that new Viennese tune!

And say, Bill, let's have a bit more moon!

Romance, if you please, and lots of it!

Right!

Let's go!

But then it is a debatable point if Lord Carmyon and Sultana Evelyn had ever heard of David Belasco or D. W. Griffith. Too, even supposing they had heard of them, they might have differed as to the correct interpretation of romance.

After all, they were young. And, being young, they were wise. And, being wise, they knew that romance is a living thing, a thing of the soul, not a dead thing, a thing of meticulous stagecraft.

At all events, that is how it was.

Lord Carmyon had had no chance since leaving Calcutta of speaking to Evelyn. Now he saw her standing on the station platform, alone for a moment, since Gul-dur-Burram had returned to the railway compartment for some pillows.

He walked up to her. She was such a charming little figure in her rose red Hindu dress embroidered with seed pearls and bordered with purple and gold and her small face blurred by the thin meshed veil with only the eyes showing above it . . . and first they talked about the weather.

"Beastly hot, isn't it?"

"O, yes. Frightfully hot."

"Think it'll rain?"

"O, I don't know."

"I wish it would."

"So do I."

"Much hotter here than in Calcutta."

"You think so?"

"O, yes. Although I don't mind the heat as much as the humidity."

"That's just what I think."

"Regular heat. Grown up heat. Heat with a beard on it."

A remark which made her laugh.

A laugh which, quite logically, made him say:

"I like the way you laugh."

"Do you really?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Because—O, it's so jolly—it ripples so and"—no logical sequence here at all—"it encourages me."

"To do what?" she asked.

"To beg you to forgive me."

"For what?"

"The other day—at Shukri Ali's—you were so angry at me."

"O, no!"

"You were . . . you told me that . . ."

"I don't even remember," she interrupted. "So I must have forgiven you long ago."

"That's because you are generous—and fine . . ."

"So are you."

"O, please . . ." embarrassedly.

"You are, Freddie." Then, seeing the light eddying up in his eyes as for the first time she used his Christian name, she added: "Why don't you call me Evelyn?"

"May I—really?"

"You ought to, Freddie!"

Silently, to herself, she commented:

"Such a perversely shy young man! Here I have to do all the ice breaking, which isn't proper for a girl. But—you wait, Freddie! I'll make you tell me that you love me if I have to shake the words out of you one by one."

She repeated:

"Yes. You ought to. Don't you want to?"

"Well, you are a sultana——"

"Not right now. Right now I'm supposed to be the Maharanee of Bundalpore—and you're supposed to be my cousin—at least according to the passports Shukri Ali got for us . . . and cousins shouldn't be so formal, should they?"

"That's right," he admitted.

"That's right—who? Smith—am I? Or perhaps Brown? Or . . . ?"

"Evelyn. I must get used to your first name."

"That's a fib," she thought. "I wager you think of me by my first name . . . and I wager, too, you think of me a whole lot. You're just stubborn."

Aloud she went on:

"Yes. You were so generous and fine and splendid—so—O, how shall I say it?—mediæval, I fancy—the first time we met, at the British embassy in Paris, when you noticed I was worried and unhappy, before you had an idea who I was and what it was all about . . . you spoke to me of high chivalry. You offered—weren't those your words?—yes, you offered to tilt a lance for my sake, to do grand and glittering deeds of valor. Tell me, Freddie dear—why were you willing to do all those glorious things for a girl whose very name was unknown to you?"

"Because——" He slurred; was silent.

"Go on!" she insisted.

"Because—O——"

Again he was silent; again she insisted:

"Go on; go on!" And, maliciously, she added: "Of course, if it's a habit of yours to talk like that to every young girl the very first time you meet her . . ."

"Nothing of the sort!" he interrupted.

"Then tell me the real reason!"

And she smiled triumphantly as, the words coming helter-skelter, he exclaimed roughly:

"Damn it all—if you must know—I love you. I fell in love with you the moment I saw you."

"I suppose I ought to reply, 'How absurd! Love at first sight doesn't exist!' But I know better, Freddie. For I, too, loved you—the moment I saw you."

THEN a very queer thing happened to them. They stared at each other. They were silent. And, as silently they stared, it seemed to them as if suddenly they were quite alone in the world.

There was no desert. There was no puffing, waiting train; no cawing, red necked vultures; no mumbling, naked, fanatical fakir. There was no sky. There was no sun. There were only he and she. Only a man and a woman. And there was God.

Then, so lightly, her hand brushed his and a shiver ran through his veins like a network, immensely delicate and immensely strong, of a million feathery touches. And when finally she spoke—just two words, "O, Freddie!"—that haunting, small voice of hers dived straight to the core of his life, and then he heard his own voice speaking words that were tremendously, fantastically un-English:

"There is a song for you in my heart, dear. I know the verses, but I cannot speak them. My soul is lilting the very tune, but I cannot sing it. My love is so great that it chokes me."

She gave a little laugh.

"Freddie," she whispered, "I used to think of you as a bold, swashbuckling soldier. And now I'm afraid you're a poet."

"Can't I be both? Did not the troubadours fight as well as rhyme? A lute in my left hand—a sword in my right——"

"Never mind the sword, dear. Tell me how much you love me!"

So they walked up and down the station platform, talking, talking, talking; and the consequence was that, an hour or two later when the train was again on its way, Lord Carmyon lied shamelessly in answer to Tamerlanoff's and L'Hommedieu's rather ironic questions what on earth he and the young sultana had been gossiping about so intensely and secretively.

"O," he replied, "mostly military things, dealing with our coming campaign in Kivastan—also some financial matters——" and he improvised superbly.

Perhaps they believed him; perhaps not.

But there is no doubt that Gul-dur-Burram, having received a similar explanation to a similar query, did not believe her mistress at all. She did not say so in so many words. But suddenly, for no evident reason, she exclaimed:

"Once I, too, loved and was loved. Hai—tall he was, and very strong, and as handsome as the moon on the fourteenth day. A warrior he was—a Tartar of Tartars—ah! so cruel!—but never cruel to me. And sing he could to charm the birds from the trees. . . . Ah, listen, heart of my heart—here is the song he used to sing to me—when he was young and I was young, and never a hurt in my soul."

And quite sweetly, for all her age cracked voice, she trilled an ancient Tartar melody:

"In the pagoda of exquisite purity
I hear each day the tinkle-tinkle
Of my lost love's jade girdle gems.
Looking from the carved, broad window
Of the pagoda of exquisite purity,
I see the unsullied waters of my grief
Flow on in bleak undulation.
I see a stray cloud of my Mongol home land
Above the spire of the pagoda of exquisite purity,
And the wild geese of Tartary
Flying over the river dunes.
In the pagoda of exquisite purity
My heart sighs—sighs for the white jade moon

A day and a half later they arrived at Peshawar, just as morning came out of the east with the young sun gilding the carved struts of Kabul Gate, spiking a crimson diadem across the snowy face of the lower Himalayas, shooting a glimmering, yellow wedge of light down the length of the Khybar pass, straight into the stony entrails of Afghanistan.

At the station they were met by an elderly Rajput who introduced himself as Mohindar Singh, Shukri Ali's confidential agent. He told them that Sir Richard Warburton, governor of the northwest frontier province and warden of the Khybar, would sign tomorrow their permits to cross the pass into the north. For the Khybar pass is the only way from India to Afghanistan. It is jealously watched by the British, whose soldiers, men of the Khybar rifles and diminutive, red faced Goorkhas in bottle green uniforms, squat on every hilltop and behind every rock and tree, rifles always cocked, fingers always on triggers, shoot first and inquire afterward, and nobody allowed to set foot on the pass without permit duly signed and countersigned and sharply scrutinized by British officers a dozen or more times during the few miles from the entrance of the Khybar to the Afghan frontier. To both sides of the pass tower the Himalayas—tower dizzily, enormously, overwhelmingly—with sheer, wind swept granite walls that give no footholds to beast or man.

The Khybar pass receives much less publicity than the Prince of Wales. Yet it is considerably more important to Great Britain than his royal highness. Indeed, should the English be forced to choose between the two they would not hesitate.

They would say:

"Help yourself to the prince. Take Australia and

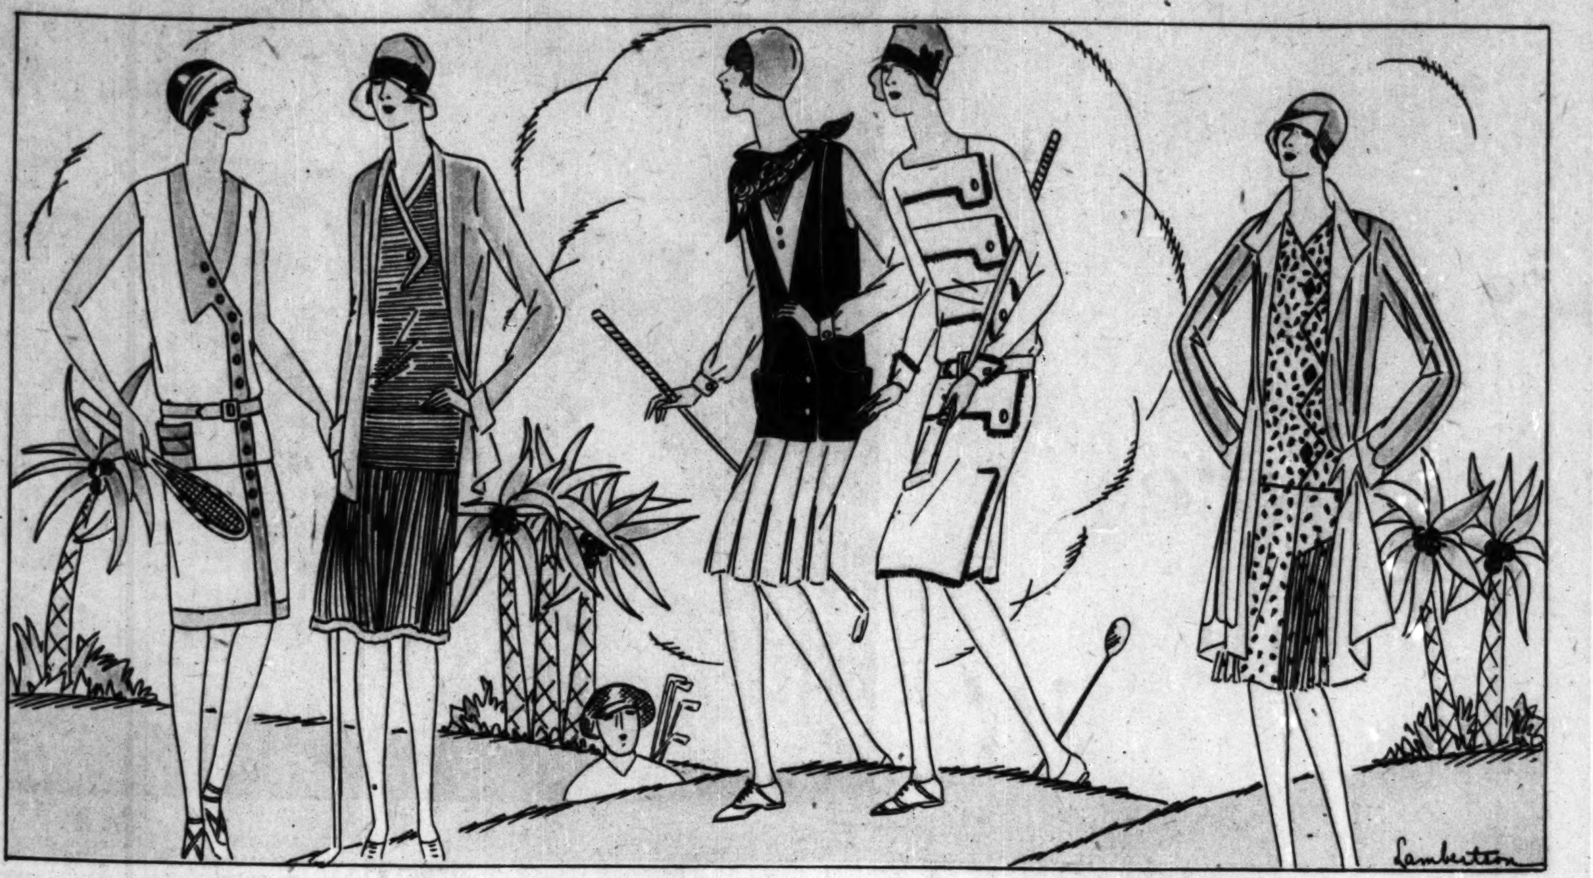
THE SOUTHBOUND WARDROBE

by Corinne Lowe



Most striking of net gains—this tennis frock at the left, which borders white crepe de chine in rose color and makes the wrap around skirt open on the same line with the jumper.

Next, these two important resort colors—green and yellow—are allied in an ensemble topping a plaited skirt of green crepe de chine with a jacket and sweater of kasha jersey. The latter is striped in green and bound with the skirt material.

Either white crepe or white jersey may be used for the gown of our central sketch, but the velveteen jacket is most smart in either plum or purple, both shades emphasized by Paris at the present time.

Fourth, a one piece frock of soft blue homespun with manipulation of bands and of the popular fringe.

Last, an ensemble which poses a coat of green crepella treated to fine pick-up tucks terminating in scallops over a frock of green and white printed silk.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—A certain very wealthy woman of my acquaintance always says, "As soon as anything becomes stylish it's no longer good style and I'm through with it."

Unfortunately, most of us are not privileged to do this. We are doomed to keep on wearing our clothes long after they've passed the danger mark of becoming "stylish" and the result is that we often feel we're just about as outstanding a figure as a single clover in a clover field.

There is no doubt about it. For some seasons there has been a crushing monotony of silhouette and of fabric. Only by minor differentiations of the mode and by the selection of some material beyond the possibilities of the average purse can a woman of today avert the fate of being hopelessly stylish. Even then it will take more time than the majority of us care to spend on clothes to win that loftiest of encomiums, "a wearer of exclusive modes."

In no other province of dress is this fact more apparent than in that of the resort sports outfit. Looking about among the ensembles, sports frocks, and wraps presented to us on the eve of departure for southern climes we are apt to be discouraged by the standardization of themes. And if a native buoyancy of spirit takes us beyond this mood we are certainly obliged to entertain some qualms on the subject of price.

Take the matter of the sweater, for example. The sweater is still the basis of the sports wardrobe, whether that wardrobe be destined for north or south. We wear this classic garment as a complement to our tailored suit and to our sports suit. It is most frequently the finish to the jacket ensemble of sports wear and on the links the separate skirt and sweater are still preferred by many golfers to any fresher suggestions.

Yet woe to the man whose wife or daughter starts what one might call a sweater album! For, though one can get sweaters in comparatively cheap versions, an impressive outlay of money is required for those exclusive designs and that beauty of weave which the other woman is always so prompt to recognize.

So on it goes through the hats, shoes, stockings, bags, jewelry, and other accessories of a southern port wardrobe. The only way in which the woman of limited income can possibly afford those exalted patterns and weaves that defy cheap duplications is to reduce her wardrobe to a minimum—to invest in two sports costumes of good style rather than in a dozen ones which are only "stylish."

As I have remarked, some good sweaters are an ideal nucleus for the southern sports wardrobe. Worked out in different color combinations to be reconciled with several different costumes, these will give the effect of an ensemble without involving one in the extravagance represented by that composite garment. And it is really wonderful what an illusion of an extensive wardrobe may be achieved if we carry to the resort with us five or six sweaters differing not only in color and pattern but in weave. Several of the fine soft imported jerseys, one of the lacy weave and one of the homespun weave—these will touch with a magic wand a very Cinderella of a wardrobe.

Second from the left on this page is an example of a sports ensemble which points to a different and more extravagant policy, for in this case the sweater is committed eternally to the coat and skirt with which it is worn. The band of the skirt material that finishes that original neck line makes it impossible to think of this striped sweater as betraying its original playmates for separate skirt or suit.

Leaving this consideration aside, the ensemble is developed in two tones that are now having a tremendous vogue—yellow and green. The skirt is of plaited crêpe de chine in soft green and the jacket as well as the sweater is of fine kasha jersey in yellow. The stripes of the sweater, however, occur in the skirt color and, as I have remarked, the affinity is still further stressed by that finish of the green crêpe de chine at the throat.

Here is a sort of classic formula for the ensemble and there is no legislation regarding its fabric selection. If, for example, you make both the skirt and jacket of flannel to contrast with a jersey sweater you are not only well within the limits of style prerogative, you are keeping up with the best thought on the subject.

For flannel is good—O, awfully, awfully good. It is used for the separate skirt, which, completed by a sweater and perhaps a smart kerchief, is ideal upon the resort links. It fashions many a separate coat for the south. It is used for whole ensembles and for the wrap fulfilling some frock of silk crêpe. And in this medium one still finds quite a few of last year's devastating cardigan outfits.

Well, perhaps we can't call it the trump cardigan, nowadays—that familiar jacket ensemble of last year—yet even now it is taking a few fashion tricks. And in flannel these cardigan outfits are especially good. One has in mind a gray flannel skirt and cardigan jacket completed by a gray sweater decked with grouped stripings in black. And, by the way, gray is a meritorious tint for any flannel to assume, these days. Thus we find separate skirts of gray flannel being substituted by the smart for the more hackneyed one of white flannel.

Now, if one makes the jacket and skirt of this costume in flannel, or perhaps all in crêpe, to wear with a sweater, uncompromised by any touch of the suit trimming and related to it only by harmony of color, one gets a result as smart as that pictured and a much greater mileage out of the sweater.

It would seem that many of our best bred migratory wardrobes have a suit or two tucked away, for the suit is good both at the resort and in the city and is growing constantly better. A tweed suit is, of course, an excellent suggestion for the woman of limited income, for this garment offers us doglike devotion on so many different occasions. Travel, city wear, the cloudy and cold day that sometimes afflicts even southern climes—all these and many others are served by the tweed suit. And by enlivening this garment with different types of sweaters, hat, and accessories it assumes sufficient glamor for the gayest of winter resorts.

The tweed suit in the serviceable neutral tones and the pastel colorings is being booked south. But it has many fellow travelers. Novelty woolens of most exquisite weave are being used widely in this connection by the French coutouriers. And here one finds the traditional preference for pin checked effects. In these same pin checked materials gray again is frequently emphasized and it is perhaps at its best when combined with some soft tone of blue.

Along with the tweeds and novelty woolens notable emphasis is being laid on the wool crêpes—especially jersey—on cashmere broadcloth, fine worsted, and a number of silk crêpes. All of these suits, as prepared for the south and for early spring wear, are developed with the feminine caprice of detail that has supplanted the grim tailoring of previous years. Details of pocket and collar, finesse of plaiting and of seams, vagaries of belt and neck line—all these make for infinite individuality, as they go hand in hand with the freedom of choice as to fabric media.

The one piece frock has sustained a vogue unthreatened by the everlasting jumper, and some of the most exclusive of our southern sports modes follow their inspiration. Wool jersey, light weight kashas, flannel, and homespun are all used for new smart little frocks of this genre, and they are all relieved by some adroit touch of trimming or clever handling of plaits and seams. Both the U and the V motifs are stressed in the seaming developments of such one piece models. Thus, one of the most striking of resort frocks occurring in green crepella has the U seams of its bodice echoed in inverted fashion upon its skirt. This points to one of the important new theories regarding the one piece frock. It is that the skirt should echo the manipulation of the bodice.

We illustrate this policy in the second sketch from the right. Here is a soft blue homespun trimmed with unusual bands, each of which is fringed out at the ends. The fringe is repeated on the cuffs and on the skirt and the final touch consists of crystal buttons accenting each band. A belt of darker blue suede is also fringed at the ends.

As a last word, we may say that the fringed effect which Chanel sponsored in the autumn is being utilized in many of our southern wardrobes. For example, a white crêpe frock worn under a plum colored velveteen coat is completed with a tiered side drapery, each tier of which is self fringed.

HIGH CHIVALRY - By Achmed Abdullah

Queen Mary for good measure, and the London tower and . . . you care for half a dozen first class battle cruisers? Very well. Take them, too. But leave us the Khybar."

For those few rugged, bleak miles are a pistol aimed straight at the heart of India; a pistol that means safety to the British as long as it is in their hands and catastrophe were they to relinquish it for a single moment: with Russia squatting up there in the north, beyond the Himalayas—the same old Russia, be it czarist or bolshevist—immense, grim, sardonically sure of its ultimate destiny—waiting for the day when its armed hordes, Slavs and Tartars, Kirgis and Turkomans, shall pour through the Khybar to the conquest of India.

And England without India—what would it be?

No longer a proud empire. But just a tight little parochial island, occupied with cricket and football and the small beer of local politics and interdenominational quarrels. . . .

"THE Khybar tomorrow," said Mohindar Singh to the young sultana as he led her to a waiting carriage. "Everything is ready—horses, camels, guides, servants, tents. In the meantime my humble house is yours."

So they drove through the turbulent border town; through the whirling, choking dust that rose in clouds from the dirty streets; past crowds of ruffianly, swaggering, fur capped border Pathans; to Mohindar Singh's house, which was on the outskirts of Peshawar, not far from Fort Jamrud.

There, in a large pavilion in their host's garden, tiffin was served—the coarse, unappetizing food of the north: stringy, tough mutton stewed in honey and seasoned with asafoetida, leathery slabs of bread, sticky sweetmeats, muddy coffee, unripe melons; food that made L'Hommedieu homesick for the sauces and condiments of his native land, but that was thoroughly relished by the Asiatics, chiefly by the seven rogues, who squatted on the ground, sleeves rolled up, hands dipped wrist deep into the stew pots, ejaculating grateful, heartfelt Bismillahs and Allah ke Quoodruts, eating and drinking with loud, smacking, gargling noises after the primitive, unmannerly habit of their breed.

"Mon Dieu!" commented the Gascon. "They eat mostly in d-flat. Here!" offering a mutton bone to one of the four Afridi brothers and speaking in French, which, perhaps luckily for him, the other did not understand. "Play the 'Marseillaise' on this, my little assassin!"

Lord Carmyon—for such is the way of romantic young men who are in love—hardly knew what he was eating. He only knew that there was a great happiness in his heart . . . and the garden was lovely: with a pleasant, soft rumor of spring and sappy, green shoots thrusting through the mellingtonia bushes that fringed it toward the road, and a brook cutting across it with the sobbing lilt that is in a man's dreams when he is far from home, and gold dusting the willows . . . peace and spring . . .

He interrupted his thoughts.

Peace not for long—he said to himself.

The Khybar tomorrow. Afghanistan. The north. Central Asia. Kivastan.

Then war.

War not of trenches and gas and stinking chemicals. But war of Asia. War almost medieval. War of glittering, naked blades, and galloping horses, and the hollow, nasal beat of Tartar kettledrums . . .

War for the sake of a queen's narrow hands!

Such a pretty queen . . .

He looked at her.

His eyes said:

"I love you!"

Her eyes replied:

"And I love you!"

He rose; walked in back of her under pretext of filling her coffee cup; whispered:

"I am jealous, dear—jealous of all the years when I did not know you."

She whispered back:

"I've always known you—in this life—and in all my past lives."

And heaven knows what sentimental foolishness he was going to murmur in answer when just then trouble came with a bearded Uzbek's peaked black turban showing above the bushes, and his voice exclaiming shrilly:

"Mohindar Singh! Wah—pumah-i-Khoda! Mohindar Singh-jee!"

The Rajput approached the newcomer.

"What is it, Fazil Khan?" he demanded; and then, when the other had delivered his message in guttural undertones, he threw up his hands and appealed excitedly, despairingly to the deities: "Ai Bhugwan! Ai Narayoon! Ai Sitaram!"

He returned to the pavilion and explained what had happened:

"The maharanee arrives here in the morning."

"Maharanee?" echoed Prince Tamerlanoff. "Which maharanee?"

"The Maharanee of Bundalpore."

"O," cried Evelyn, "you mean . . . ?"

"Yes. The real Maharanee of Bundalpore, the one in whose name your passport was forged—in whose name we have applied for a permit to cross the Khybar. She telegraphed to Warburton saheb, the governor here . . . telegraphed from Quetta—must have left there already."

"How did you find out?" interrupted Lord Carmyon.

"Fazil Khan is the chief operator at the local telegraph office. He is—O"—hesitating a little—"one of Shukri Ali's friends."

"Another thugee, I wager," commented the Englishman in his thoughts as he remembered the statue of Doorga in Shukri Ali's house and the man's grim, cryptic warning. "Another devotee of the six armed goddess."

Aloud, he said:

"The governor has not yet seen the telegram?"

"No."

"When will it be delivered?"

"Very late tonight. His excellency is at Fort Ali Musjid, dining with the colonel saheb there. He will not be back until midnight."

"Why don't you tell Fazil Khan to wait with the delivery of the telegram until tomorrow—after we'll have left, Mohandar Singh?"

"What good would that do, saheb? The maharanee's train arrives very early in the morning—hours before the Khybar pass is open for travelers—and the news of her arrival will be all over town."

The situation seemed hopeless.

By tomorrow the cat would be out of the bag. If they remained in Peshawar, or anywhere in India, for that matter, they would be arrested. Forged passports. A dangerous offense. Besides, the whole story was certain to be discovered . . . and then an end to their dreams of high chivalry; and, by the same token, an end, doubtless, to the House of Colin Mor Macdonnell, Sultan of Kivastan.

"The Khybar!" said Lord Carmyon. "We must go through the Khybar tonight!"

"Saheb," sighed Mohindar Singh, "not a mouse can cross the Khybar without a permit."

There was silence.

The seven rogues had not taken part in the discussion; had been conferring in whispers.

Now Toor Gar Khan rose and salaamed.

"Cheel ke ghur men, mas ka dher"—he quoted the ancient Indian proverb—"there is always meat in a kite's nest."

"Meaning what?" asked Lord Carmyon.

"Meaning that the Khybar is not the only way to the north—meaning that there is a second way, a way no saheb has ever trod—yet a way three sahebs will tread tonight, if their hearts be strong and their souls tough, as well as one small mem-saheb! Nor shall we show the way because of Shukri Ali's orders, but"—staring boldly at Evelyn—"because of your eyes, O young sultana!"

And the seven rogues salaamed before her deeply and, with fist on hilt, gave the throaty yell which is to the warriors of Central Asia what "hurrah!" is to those of Europe:

"Hai! Shumshere aloom! Hai! Shumshere bu dust. Ho! Swords out! Ho! Swords in hand!"

"Between you, you will share my fortune—upon condition that you use and maintain your homes."

That fantastic clause, found in the will of their great-uncle, promised to spell all manner of trouble for Jonathan Baldric and Natalie Edgecumb. For Jonathan wanted the home given Natalie, and Natalie craved the one given Jonathan.

How they solved the perplexity will be told in

TEMPTING MENUS FOR THE WEEK

By Jane Eddington

Pig Phenomena.

LOOKING at a pig China-to-Peru-wise, the phenomena we may glimpse are of intense significance and ancient symbolism. Surveying a pig near at hand, we are likely to get a sense of intimacy with him, because, really, he is an intimate and familiar animal, perhaps because of his loquacities. But if we look at the pig as he was among the early peoples of the world—the wild pig is the sort there are most records concerning—the picture is rather a grim one, full of desperations among both men and beasts. And there are other surveys not a few that we may take.

Of history the pig offers a perfect compendium of rather incredible volume. As we go back and then farther back yet for our view, we may see those very Assyrians noted for coming down like a wolf on the fold, with their kings and nobles stepping aside to enjoy the royal sport of boar hunting—probably the tragic Sennacharib himself. It is supposed to be common knowledge that on the tablets of the palace of Nineveh were depicted the kings of Assyria in the royal pastime of hunting wild pigs with spears which the animal might crush with his teeth.

In the middle ages there were boar hunts, too, as in Germany and Austria even in the twentieth century, yet the tame pig was a major feature in the landscape, with swineherds in attendance. Read "Ivanhoe" for that sort of picture. But a gilt resemblance of the head of the wild pig in those days went on the crests of the noblest families of the realm, and when a real boar's head was served on a silver platter it was borne by some one of great importance, with flourishes and various marks of distinction, its service being for the palate—perhaps with a red sauce and gay ruffles of white fat.
